Field School Uncovers Artifacts

Tracy Kilby, Ka-Le Pettus, John Tipton, Kim Diggs and Dr. Jordan look for finds.

By JAMIE HAMPTON

What do most students like to do with their summer vacation besides spend every day out in the sun catching rays? This past summer eighty-three students participated in Longwood's Archeology Field School, under the direction of Dr. James W. Jordan, Professor of Anthropology at Longwood College and director of the Archeology Field School, spending everyday, except the first and last days of each session, acquiring a golden tan, not to mention bee stings, chigger bites, and poison ivy. They travelled almost everyday to the Morris Field Site, along the Appomattox River in Buckingham County, named for Mr. Morris whose land the prehistoric Indian site, 44BK212, is on. Completing the third year of work at the Morris Site, Dr. Jordan and his students observed, preserved and recovered archeological sources, making a major contribution to the understanding of archeology in Virginia.

Longwood's largest field school yet, discovered 1608 separate artifacts this summer. Based on these finds, Dr. Jordan and his students believe this site 44BK212 has been more or less occupied from 9000 to 10,000 years before the present. Most of the artifacts found (lithic, or stone, tools; projectile points; pipe stem; bowl pieces; and pottery) dated back to somewhere between 3000 and 8000 years before the present.

This summer, work has continued on a trash pit which is believed to be 1700 years old. Pottery shards were found, most of Prince George Roughened pottery which was primarily made between 250 and 320 A.D. The trash pit is located about 600 ft. from the Appomattox River near an area called the "flat," where the primary activity areas are believed to have been. In May and June excavation was done primarily in and around the flat. In July and August, work moved to the outskirts of the flat. As Dr. Jordan says, "When you're digging in the field, you can't know where you're going — you have to test. In a dark room, you grope in the darkness, first one way, then another, until you find the light." Next summer, Dr. Jordan is planning to return to working primarily in the flat.

One of the big finds of the summer was an atlatl weight, never before found at the Morris Site, dating 6000 to 8000 years before the present. Atlatls were used by archaic Indians as an extension of a spear-thrower, or arm, to give more velocity to the spear; and the atlatl weight was used to accomplish this. The oldest find of the summer was a Hardaway Dalton projectile point, probably used 10,000 years before the present.

Dr. Jordan and his students had 712 visitors this summer, ranging from parents of students to 111 first graders from Cumberland Elementary School to Mr. Charles R. Hawkins, a member of the Virginia House of Delegates, and his wife. All signify a growing interest in Virginia's pre-history, and Mr. Hawkins has even shown an interest in becoming a patron to the field school.

Dr. Jordan and his students also worked at several other sites this summer. At Locust Grove, former home of Revolutionary War hero Peter Francisco, what is believed to have been an ice house cellar hole was explored. Also studied was a legend that has it that Peter Francisco carried a rock from Willis Mountain to cover a spring on his property for his wife. Dr. Larry Ferguson visited Locust Grove and determined the rock not to be from that area and likely to have come from Willis Mountain. At site 44BK213, located between Willis Mountain and the Morris site, students looked at rock mounds and a part-stone, part-dirt wall.

This semester, Adreanne Memmoli will be doing an independent study analyzing the pottery shards and lithic tools found at the Morris site over the summer. Eric Sanders, Justin Patton, and Dennis Fenton and Mike Plum will also be doing independent studies this semester, continuing work at site 44BK213. Without Dr. Jordan and his students "to search for the best archeological pieces of our past puzzle, our future would be in jeopardy," as Mr. Hawkins said to Dr. Jordan.

Editorial

I know that I am not the editor this semester, but the new editor is sick — so — here I am. I really don't have much to say. Nothing really controversial has happened yet. I just want to emphasize that there is no reason whatsoever for Longwood to be dubbed "A Suitcase College." There are numerous clubs to join here at Longwood, anything from major clubs to Greek Associations. There is something here for everyone. Don't waste your college years.

Seniors! I want to stress the importance of utilizing the Office of Career Planning and Placement located on Third Floor Tabb. The main objective for college is to get a decent paying job. It is to give you an edge. OCPP is not just for seniors, but can be utilized as early as the freshman year. The number of recent graduates without jobs is astounding. Prepare yourself. Anyway, I just want to wish everyone a great year. Keep reading the ROTUNDA!!

To The Editor

The Soviet Unior issued a barrage of reports accusing Radio Free Europe, the Voice of America, the British Broadcasting Corp., and Radio Vatican of inciting large rallies of the non-Russian peoples planned on August 23rd which marked the 48th anniversary of the non-aggression pact between two gangsters, mass murderers and war criminals, Stalin and Hitler. This pact included a secret clause which provided for the Soviet takeover of the Baltic States—Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia.

The Soviet authorities claim that this is an interference in the home affairs of another country. It should be strongly emphasized that the Lithuanian, Latvians and Estonians are not Russians; they have nothing in common with the slavic peoples at all. Lithuania, Latvia, and Estonia have constituted the outposts of Western civilization against the barbarism of Russia. The young men of the three Baltic peoples, who were born in exile and have obtained their education in the best academic institutions of the U.S., Western Europe, Canada and Austraiia have moved into international forums with their gloves off. They despise the Russians, and they will never tolerate to see the Baltic countries to be rules by a people with a far lower civilization. They have galvanized the liberty movement of other captive peoples.

It should be likewise noted that the mass murders of the Afghans, including women and children, have reached the climax under the dictatorship of Gorbachev, murdering or exiling a third of the population of Afghanistan. Thus, the war criminal, Gorbachev, has demonstrated his barbarian mentality.

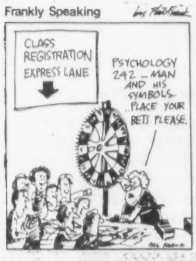
Letter to the Editor



I was an Orientation Leader for Preview '87 this summer. All of the students who served as leaders worked very hard to make this program the BEST I have ever seen in my three years as a leader. And the groundwork laid by Student Development Educator Karen Clifford her secretary Sherry Garrett, and student Barbara McCormick made our job so much easier.

The only major problem occurred on Wednesday, July 8 when we held Transfer Orientation. The purpose for having transfer and re-admitted students on campus that day was to have them register for Fall classes. However, they could not since the computers were down because the Cashiering-Student Accounts Office (or whoever) was trying to get tuition billing, notices printed. As Karen Clifford commented, this was "just another example of how students come last at Longwood." It is to my understanding that she stressed to the administration how important it was to have the computers working for registration that particular day. I know from first-hand experience that many of the transfer and readmitted students were quite angered for having to make a three or four hour trip and then not being able to register for classes.

I hope that the administration will be more cooperative and sympathetic to students in the future. MAKING STUDENTS FEEL THAT THEY COME FIRST MAKES ALL THE DIFFERENCE IN THE WORLD!!

Problems Continue In South

By TERRESA BUELOW

Upon arrival last week the residents of South Cunningham walked into their rooms expecting a complete makeover. What they did find was new furniture, freshly painted walls, new light fixtures, and rumor of a repeat of last semester's relocation for renovation. Why was the work not completed as promised when they vacated last semester? Due to many delays, namely the finishing of Stevens, the Frazer fire, then the appropriation of a contract, South Cunningham's plumbing was not touched.

A contract was signed by the administration to begin work in January of 1988 and to continue for at least five months. This means that the residents of South Cunningham would go through the turmoil of moving again. Because the administration recognized that there would be many protests. A meeting was held Thursday night to discuss the issue and possible solutions.

One of the first issues brought to the attention of the administration was why were the residents not notified of this before their arrival. The reply from one member of the administration was that it was "an error in judgement." However, as stated by South resident Mike Rose, "We should not be put through torment for the administration's shortcomings."

Many of the opinions voiced were emotional and biased, but held much truth. As one irate student put it "If it weren't for our parents money and us, there wouldn't be a Longwood College." Futhermore, as stated by another student "Why do they have to make their problem our problem?"

The best solution arrived at by the students was the possibility of waiting until summer to begin renovations, and in the meantime relocate in-coming freshmen to other locations. These locations may include local hotels and trailers until the construction is completed. The administration agreed to consider this possibility and some others that were brought up. They said they would get back to the students within ten days with a reply.

When moved last semester, the residents were faced with many problems. Roommates were split-up, promised help from the college was limited, the reconnections of phones and cable were few, and the snow delayed moving. As also pointed out by student Kenny Hatchett, "It took away from study time to move across campus in the snow last year. I don't want to go through that again."

Friday, South Cunningham residents were presented with a flyer saying that South Cunningham would not close. It did not take ten days, but the decision was made over night. The students pulled together, fought for what they believed and won. Just one example, to show that we, the students, do matter and can change things.

As of Friday, the administration said that they did not know when construction would begin. They hope to have it completed between the end of final examinations in the spring and the beginning of the 1988 fall semester. If not completed, they will close the building for the 1989 spring semester and summer; "but should that be necessary, we will make sure that all South Cunningham residents are notified of it at the time of room assignments."

By TIM SHERIDAN
a.k.a. BINK

"The dorm will be completed by Fall semester" former Housing Director, Ric Weibl told me on April 30 of this year. I had asked him this because the dorm in question, South Cunningham, had just been turned into new Pikap and Spe halls. (For the new students who are not aware of it, the movement of the fraternities, and a few other displaced students, was due to the extensive damage of a fire early on the morning of Tuesday, April 28. Note new landmark sticking out of the room where the fire started: a wooden sliding board). Anyway, South Cunningham was closed that semester because it was being renovated. Or was it? The administration moved all the students out of South in January, stating that the necessary work required more than a summer's time. Nearly all roommates were split up. Most of the students were freshmen and were just getting settled.

With the Pikaps and Spes moved to South for the rest of spring semester, one assumed the dorms were livable, implying that a resident-displacing renovation had not yet begun. So for three complete months South just sat there. It's true that during those months new lights and storm windows were put in, but who cares about that? Those jobs could have easily been done over Spring Break and maybe the week after that. So now we had a situation of this: There was the summer break to do the rest of the work — but, remember, the college said that wasn't enough time. Which brings us back to the response Mr. Weibl had given me

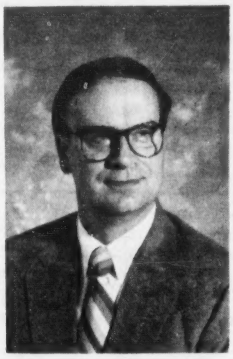
Lemish Leaves Longwood



By MATT PETERMAN

After serving over 5½ years at LC, Donald Lee Lemish, 43 year old Vice-President for Institutional Advancement and Community Relations is moving on to what Money magazine and U.S. News World Report have called "one of the best undergraduate universities in America."

Lemish has been appointed vice-president for University Advancement at James Madison University by JMU President, Mr. Ronald E. Cerroer. The appointment is effective Sept. 5th.

During his tenure here at Longwood, "Lemish has built the college's fund-raising programs to a level of national recognition," according to sources, resulting in two Longwood Incentive Awards. "Annual alumni donor participation has exceeded 40 percent, ranking second in the nation among all public institutions for donor participation." Assets of the Longwood College Foundation, Inc. have quadrupled under Lemish's leadership.

Lemish also has been an active community leader serving on numerous boards. He is the immediate past-president of the Farmville Chamber of Commerce, budget chairman and member of the Board of Directors of the Prince Edward County United Way, and a Director of the Prince Edward School Foundation. He also was chairman in Prince Edward County for the Commonwealth's recent "We Have It Made In Virginia" economic development campaign.

DONALD L. LEMISH

Two prominent college programs which draw high visiability to the institution were established under his leadership; creation of the Longwood Ambassadors, a student public relations and fund raising group, and the Lancer-Coors Invitational Golf Tournament.

His educational background includes completion of the Harvard University Institute for Educational Management, and Bachelor's and Master's degrees from Ball State University with concentrations in speech and journalism.

Janet Greenwood, former president of Longwood and recently appointed president of the University of Bridgeport, said, "Don is among the most outstanding development professionals in the nation. His track record proves it. He virtually created our advancement program from scratch and he is an excellent manager as well. He is a leader and was a valuable asset to the Longwood cabinet."

Something New In Management

By MARNA BUNGER

According to Mr. Julian O'Neal, the Society for the Advancement of Management (SAM) "promotes management by bringing students, faculty and management professionals together."

SAM is a relatively new organization on campus. It was started in the Fall of 1986 because there were organizations for almost all the business concentrations except management. The Longwood chapter was started so that people with an expressed interest in management could get more exposure to the management profession.

SAM has campus members and senior members who are graduates in management. These groups come together at regional meetings and at the state and national competitive events.

The Longwood chapter of SAM has many plans for next semester. They want to have tours and bring in guest speakers in addition to their socials.

Students who want to apply their management techniques to real world situations are ideal for SAM. If you are interested in joining, see Mr. Julian O'Neal or Mr. Harsh Luther.

Iraq Attacks Iranian Targets

By MATT PETERMAN

Iraq has broken its 42 days of silence by attacking Irarian offshore oil installations and some tankers, causing substantial damage according to various news organizations. Attacks began late last week, with the latest strike occurring yesterday.

Iraq seemingly becoming impatient with the Iranians stall over the United Nations ceasefire resolution, decide that enough time had passed and began a new wave of attacks. Citing that Iran's oil exports had jumped from 1.6 million barrels a day to about 2 million, thus taking advantage of Iraq's goodwill while bringing in more revenues to feed its war machine.

The United States expressed concern that the attacks could increase the risk of a U.S.-Iranian confrontation, if Iran decided to retaliate at Arab targets in the gulf. The U.S. will continue to escort Kuwaiti tankers out of the gulf.

Rebel soldiers under the apparent command of Col. Gregorio Honasan attempted to overthrow the government of President Corazon Aquino late last week, killing over forty people and wounding hundreds—mostly civilians, according to the New York Times Service.

The rebels, who took over numerous government buildings, including an attempt to sieze the Presidential Palace, slowly began to surrender as the coup fizzled. The leaders, including Honason, remain underground as the government has put out an intense search for them. Gen. Fidel Ramos, the Armed Forces Chief of Staff, believed that as many as 1200 soldiers may have participated in the uprising.

President Aquino vowed to have all the mutineers arrested and prosecuted to the full extent of the law, putting aside her usual easy going style of those who had taken actions against her government in the past.

The situaation in Manila remains tense for many uncaptured mutineers remain at large with the fear they may be banding up once again for another attempt.

C.P.A.'s
(Career Planning Aides)

Primary Duties: Give students and other "lost" persons directions to OCPP (Must be willing to personally bring to office if necessary). Organize, plan, and implement at least one Orientation-tour per semester for 10 people. (Must be willing to ask 10 friends to help you fulfill this job requirement); spend 15 hours per semester in the Career Planning Office (Must be gutsy enough to review resources and activities and give honest feedback-suggestions to staff.

Only Interested Persons Need Apply by Attending a Meeting at 7:30 p.m. on Thursday, September 3 in the Career Resource Center.

OCPP: All Welcome

OCPP welcomes you to an exciting year! We have planned a wide variety of programs and activities to facilitate and enhance your career development. Feature activities include:

1. A Student field trip to Woodrow Wilson Rehabilitation Center in Fisherville on October 29 — All students in all majors are invited to check out this potential employer. There will be something of interest for everyone!

2. The Minority Student Career Day in Charlottesville on November 3 — Juniors and Seniors you will be amazed by this opportunity for you to interact with over 150 employers from all over the country and over 1000 college students from all over Virginia. It's a well organized and "classy" set up which allows you to interview for a job, seek out an internship, or just make a contact for future use.

3. The Challenge Liberal Arts Career Fair in Lynchburg on November 18 — Seniors, this is your moment to shine! The OCPP plans Challenge for you and seniors from eight other colleges. Over 60 employers will be there looking for good people to hire. It's a time to "strut your stuff" so to speak, a time to gather a sense of the competitiveness in the job market, a time to make some contacts and experience the "Challenge" of packaging and marketing what you can do. Believe it or not, Graduation is not far off. Challenge is our way of helping you to "hit the floor running!"

4. The Career Night in Business on November 9 — All students, especially Business Majors, will not want to miss this opportunity to hear what alums have to say about "life in the real world" or what employers and other professional have to say about what they are looking for in new hires. ... All this will be found right here on campus!

These are just some of the highlights. Stop by the OCPP and pick up the calendar of events for the fall semester. We are located on the second floor of South Ruffner and are open M-F from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Contact us if your organization would like us to do a special program or activity just for you. We work with students, faculty-staff and alums on an individual as well as group basis. We are committed to helping you take steps in bold directions and making 1987-88 best year at Longwood.

President Feels At Home

By MELISSA GIBBS

There's a new face behind the president's desk—for awhile, at least. Dr. George R. Healy will serve one year as Longwood's interim president while the college searches for someone to permanently fill the position.

Dr. Healy found the accommodations "quite comfortable" when he moved into the president's house at Longwood Estate a few weeks ago. Before coming to Farmville, Dr. Healy missed Virginia's summer heatwave by escaping with his wife to their vacation hideaway in East Summer, Maine. Dr. and Mrs. Healy spent their vacation adding running water and central heating to their "primitive" retreat, an 1820's Greek Revival home.

As interim president, Dr. Healy plans to encourage continuing progress at Longwood during the coming year, though his temporary position limits him from instituting new policies. "I will do my best to keep the college moving forward and to leave as clean a desk as possible for the incoming president in 1988, "Dr. Healy said at the time of his selection.

Dr. Healy comes to the interim position at Longwood having been acting president of two colleges; Christopher Newport College and the College of William and Mary. He also brings numerous years of experience as academic vice president and provost at William and Mary and as history instructor at Bates College and M.I.T.

Dr. Healy received his A. B. degree from Oberlin College and his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees in history from the University of Minnesota.

Longwood Ambassadors Who Are They?

KELLY COGGSDALE

This is the first of a weekly column review in what the Ambassadors do for Longwood. First of all for those who do not know who the Longwood Ambassadors are, they are a student service organization of 65 members who promote Longwood. The Ambassadors work with the Institutional Advancement Office in promoting Longwood to everyone. Some of the activities that the Ambassadors are involved with are giving tours to perspective students (possibly you at one time), serving as hosts and hostesses to a variety of groups visiting the campus such as alumni and donors, sponsoring the very successful annual spring weekend oozeball touranment and most importantly phoning for the Annual Alumni-Parent Telethon which helps to provide shcolarships for the students of Longwood. Last year the Ambassadors raised approximately $169,000 through donations..

If you are interested in becoming an Ambassador please go to the Institutional Advancement Office on 2nd floor Ruffner and ask for an application. The Ambassadors require that you have a 2.5 grade point average and have been a student at Longwood for at least one full semester. The Ambassadors will be accepting applications during the next couple of weeks.

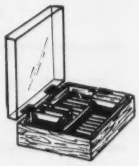
And up to the present.

This fall the new South residents returned to what they feared but expected: South wasn't done. Sure we got new furniture and the walls were painted. Big deal! We knew what all this meant. In short, we will all be moved out again — probably. For about 80 percent of the residents of South this will be their second year of this. What's to say it won't continue forever? Longwood's record shows: Why not three years in a row?

The message was getting across to the administration: the residents of South were adamant on their position to not be moved. Rick Hurley, VP for Business Affairs, ergo responsible for the overseeing of all contractual work at the school, decides it was time to tell the residents of South of the school's plans. This took place last Thursday night in South. Needless to say, it wasn't a pleasant sight. Students were screaming and administrators were apologizing. End result: We were being moved out. Thanks Longwood.

The next day the surprise of the year came to the residents of South via a letter signed by Hurley and Phyllis Mable, VP of Student Affairs. They were actually doing something smart, stating that they can "now assure us that we will not be relocated." Amazing. They will try to have it done over the summer. If not, then South will definitely be closed spring semester of 1989.

My advise to anyone thinking of signing up for a room in South at the time of room draw next semester: don't do it.



Congratulations to all residents of South who helped the administration realize something big: students make a college go. Rumor has it that Stubbs is next...

Gilligan says: "I get to keep my balcony."

WLCX Returns

By CINDY GOOD

WLCX, Longwood's radio station, is back on the air this semester with the largest return of previous members since the station's reorganization three years ago. The D.J.s are ready to give Longwood its best year of music, information, and special programs ever! The officers for the Fall semester are as follows:

General Manager — Sonny Merchant

Program Director — Dennis Morley

Music Director — Cindy Good

Public Relations — Cathy Gaughran

Sports Director — Jeff Symanski

News Director — Shirley Thistle

Business Manager — Marian Martin

Faculty Advisor — Jan Evans

If you would like to get involved with WLCX, there will be an informational meeting for all interested persons, including current members of the Radio Association, this Wednesday evening, September 2nd, at 6:30 p.m., in Grainger room 019. If you cannot attend this meeting, but would still like to be involved with the radio station, please drop us a note through campus mail, box 1130. We hope to see a lot of new faces in order to expand our air time as soon as possible. See ya there!

Soccer Opens Season

Longwood opens its 1987 SOCCER season next weekend (September 5-6) in the Glassboro State (N.J.) Invitational Tournament. The Lancers play Indiana of Pennsylvania at 4:30 Saturday following the game between Glassboro and Marshall at 2:00. Sunday, the losers will play a consolation contest at 2:00 and the championship game will be at 4:30.

Glassboro, 17-3-2 last season, has made eight appearances in the NCAA Division III soccer playoffs. Should Longwood advance to the championship, Glassboro would provide a tough early eason test for the Lancers.

With a 75-24-17 record and three state championships over the past six years, the Longwood program has reached a consistant level of excellence. If the Lancers are to maintain their strong tradition, they will have overcome the loss of 8 seniors from last season's 13-5-2 Virginia State Champion squad.

Coach Rich Posipanko says this will be a rebuilding year, despite the presence of 15 veterans.

"We have a lot of holes to fill after losing so many top players," says the coach. "The raw talent is there, but we have to come together as a team and find some new leaders."

Four seniors are among the key performaers returning for Longwood. Goalkeeper Dave Goerke (Cinnaminson, NJ) and back Jeff Robinson (Huntingdon Valley, PA) will anchor the defense, along with junior Rich Venere (Cherry Hill, N.J). Shawn McArdle (Neptune, NJ) and Jim DiModica (Manassas) are seniors at midfield. McArdle, who has been slowed by a sprained ankle, DiModica and Goerke will serve as tri-captains for the team.

A pair of sophomores who started last season will supply much of the offense. Forward John Barone (Neptune, NJ) and midfielder Mike Edge (Chester, England) accounted for 16 goals and eight assists between them. Junior Kenny Lim (Ardmore, PA) had four goals and two assists in '86.

A host of talented newcomers will be working to break into the starting lineup. A pair of freshmen, forward Ray Jones, (Smith's Parrish, Bermuda) and back Mitch Rubin (East Brunswick, NJ), and junior forward Chris Helmus (Garden break into the starting lineup. Also new to the team are goalkeeper Jeff Chewning (Fredericksburg), midfielders Phaly Moravek (Leesburg), Brent Boone (Annapolis. MD). City, NY) are definite threats to Mark Fishman Gaithersburg, MD), Nils McCarty (Gaithersburg, MD), back Tom Rich (Rockville Centre, NY) and forwards Rodney Funk (Gambrills, MD) and Paul Doyle (Virginia Beach).

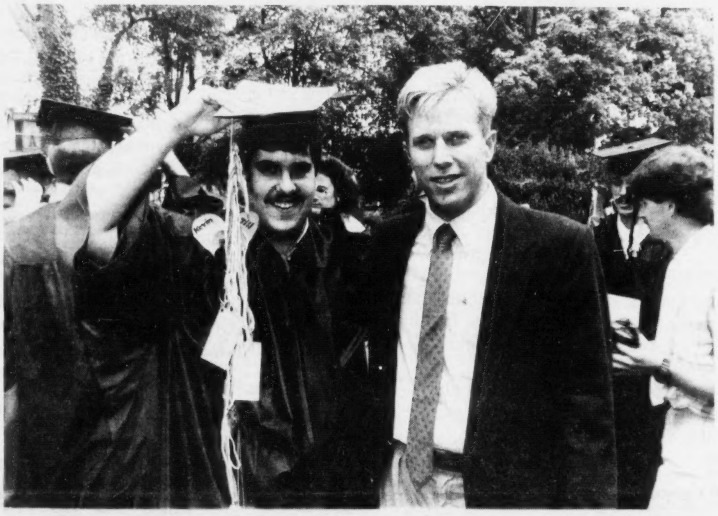
New Twist On Freshman Life

By SHIRLEY THISTLE

Beginning this summer, Longwood freshmen have been involved in an extensive orientation program. Called the Longwood Seminar Program, its purpose, explains Phyllis Mable, Vice-President of Student Affairs, "is to challenge and support freshmen in their adjustment to Longwood College and to encourage them to be fully involved in Longwood courses and student life."

Co-direced by Sarah Young and Kathe Taylor, the program is based on a pilot program at the University of South Carolina but is specially designed tc be unique to Longwood and the Longwood experience.

The first stage of the program was a two day orientation. Divided into three groups, prospective freshmen and their parents arrived on campus this summer to meet with administrative officials and explore the campus. Students also met with their faculty seminar leaders, who are also their academic advisors for their freshman year, to make preliminary course selections for the fall semester. Freshmen have also been grouped into "clusters" that have the same seminar leader and live on the same dorm hall.



The Longwood Seminar program will continue throughout this semester with a one-credit pass/fail seminar class that is a new requirement for graduation. The class uses two books, the first of which is Medusa and the Snail by Lewis Thomas, a story of symbiotic relationships in nature which can be seen as a metaphor for interdependence in human relationships. Freshmen were required to read this before the semester for class discussion. The second book is College Is Only the Beginning by Gardner and Jewler, the main text to be used for the semester.

Topics to be covered in the course include transitions from high school to college, understanding the meaning of a general education, living in the residence halls as part of education, time management, study skills, use of the library, and wellness: intellectual, social, physical, and spiritual.

Dr. Orth, one of about thirty seminar leaders, feels the course is going well so far. At this time his section has had perfect attendance. His students' latest project has been to clock a typical day to learn about time management. Although it is still early in the semester, Dr. Orth says the course has been "easy to manage and pleasant to teach." He is especially impressed with his students' willingness to discuss the wide range of topics involved in the transition to college life.

Mrs. Tinnell, another seminar leader, agrees, saying, "It's going great so far." She

New Tenant In Housing Office

By NIGEL SMITHERS

One new face on campus this semester moved in to take on quite a job. David Rettig, Longwood's new Housing Director, knew exactly what he was getting into as he moved into Farmville this summer. Rettig, who was interviewed for the job this summer, after the consequences of the infamous Frazer fire were known, says he considered the job to be a challenge, but that "(he) would like to take it on." Equipped for the people-part of the job by his work at the North Carolina School of Arts as hall director, then Director of Student Activities and eventually Director of Resident Life from 1979 to spring of 1987, Rettig admits that the building-part of the job (renovations, relocations, etc.) might be "a little more than (he) expected." Regardless, with the help of his "orientation leaders'" Sue Saunders and Phyllis Mable and his omniscient secretary Betty, he knows the job will be done well.

When he first came to Longwood as a candidate to pick up where Ric Weibl (presently working on his doctorate degree at Ohio State University) had left off, Mr. Rettig says he "got the feeling that Longwood was one huge family." During his time here he hopes to accomplish a number of things. Once the urgent work of finishing work on third and fourth floor Frazer is completed and people who have been displaced by the work there are moved in, Mr. Rettig hopes to be able to hire an Assistant Director of Housing to help him in his job and to be "an extra set of eyes and ears" around campus. "I want students to know they can come by -- we have an open-door policy here, and I really want to meet them, as many as possible, on an individual basis."

Among the tasks that our new Housing Director has laid out in front of him are Loft inspection, possible Lounge and chapter room renovations, and the streamlining of housing sign-up

Rock'n And Roll'n With Pro Wrestling

By ELMER "E.T." TOLENTINO

Last Thursday, September 3, 1987, Jim Crockett Promotions, Inc. and the Longwood chapter of Tau Kappa Epsilon Fraternity, Inc. brought the National Wrestling Alliance to Lancer Hall. The same mounds of muscle and folds of fat that are seen weekly on television were now rolling around the squared circle right here in Farmville for hundreds of people to watch in person, including Phyllis Mable and Sue Saunders.

Bell time was 8:15 p.m. for the start of the first of six professional wrestling matches. The guest ring announcer for the evening was Franklin Grant from the Office of Institutional Advancement. This first match paired a 230 pound George South of Georgia against Gary Royal, a 223 pounder from Kansas City; this was a slow moving match with little exciting action and several complaints of hair-pulling from South, a man with a body by Pillsbury, who was eventually pinned by Royal. The second match featured 240 pound Virginia Beach native Mark Fleming pinning 212 pound Ricky Nelson. The third bout was a very exciting, crowd pleasing battle between Dino Bravo and Teijho Khan, a 270 pound Mohican from Singapore. After several minutes of grunts and groans and pokes and chokes, the local favorite was able to keep Khan down for the three-count with a small package pin.

The final bell of the third bout meant the evening's events were half over and it was time for a brief intermission. This break in the action allowed more time to buy some of the wrestling souvenirs for sale which included T-shirts, posters, and pennants. Intermission also

Did You Catch It?

As you may or may not have noticed, the Rotunda's front page flag has been altered slightly. This was a move in the direction of authenticity. It was brought to my attention sometime last week that the old flag, which depicted the rotunda as having 3 columns, was leaving out one of the four columns, each of which traditionally symbolizes a part of the Longwood spirit and characteristics.

I thought about the prospect of correcting this omission, basing my actions on what I've learned at past CHI burnings in the little speech about the symbolism behind each part of the abstract depiction of the rotunda. Further thinking revealed that there was more missing from our front-page rendition than just a column. Finally, I decided to go the full nine yards and make the logo 100 percent the real McCoy.

It is only fair, now that I've sprung all these changes on you at once, that I explain their significance to you.

The four columns represent loyalty, character, respect, and challenge. The bar across the top of the columns stands for responsibility. The triangle signifies cooperation among students, faculty and staff here at Longwood, and the dome holds the parts as a whole, tying them together.

We might hear from higher authorities on this matter between now and next week, but, for now, I think this explanation will do.

LANKFORD LAWN'S NEW ADDITION: SETTING A (SUB) STANDARD?

"The shortest path between two points is a straight line." — Old Mathematical Proverb

"Nonconformity will surmount conformity." — Catchy new saying of the 80's

Let's talk sidewalks.

Early last week there was a drab and dreadful addition made to our campus. They brought in bulldozers and dumptrucks, and laid a concrete sidewalk across the lawn beside Lankford. This new walkway connects two old sidewalks, which are connected 15 feet away anyhow.

Why was this new concrete slab installed? Because there was a path beaten into the lawn — not a gruesome path, just a nice little one — where people had taken to the habit of walking on their way to and from the mailboxes and Lancer Cafe.

Why did these people walk on this path? Because they did not want to walk on the sidewalk — they were NONCONFORMISTS. Society has dictated to us for some time now that people should walk on sidewalks. But has anyone ever given the name of this mortar menace a thought? "SIDEWALK". The very name is self-defeating. Sidewalk. Walk on the side. Side of what? Sidewalks are usually found alongside streets, so we can walk on the side of the street, rather than in it, where we would be a hazard and in danger ourselves.

One of the old sidewalks involved in this "sidewalk scenario" was on the side of a street — Madison Street, to be exact. The other old "sidewalk" runs perpendicular to the bona fide sidewalk — right through the middle of nowhere, alongside nothing! A nonconforming sidewalk!

Sidewalk. Walk on the side — walk on the side of what? If the sidewalk does not provide footspace along the side of something else (ie: a street), then its name must mean "Walk on the side of me", or, walk beside the sidewalk. Sidewalks that do not run parallel to something are telling us not to walk on themselves, but along their edges.

Now — why would a nonconformist want to walk on a sidewalk that itself was a fellow nonconformist, a sidewalk that did not want to be walked on in the first place? The only logical solution for the nonconformist was to listen to the vibes being given off by the un-sidewalk, and avoid walking on it, since it was a falsity anyway.

Nonconformists on their way to get their mail cut across the grass to avoid the pseudo-sidewalk.

Good. Now that that's clear, what the heck does that make this new "sidewalk"? It lies alongside nothing at all. Another un-sidewalk for people to walk around. People will beat a new path across the grass, which will in its time be paved over, continuing a never-ending process which will eventually result in 23 separate and distinct concrete paths beside Lankford, all screaming "Don't walk on me!". Why don't we save ourselves the trouble of living through the evolution of 23 of these monsters, and just pave over the Lankford lawn? "Pavement." Not at all a suggestive word. While we're at it, we might as well pave over the whole campus — and save future generations the trouble of fulfilling the "sidewalk" ritual-dilemma! This would certainly help alleviate our present parking problem — unlimited parking spots! Good idea, eh? There'd be no grass left in Farmville (which would reduce the area's oxygen supply significantly), but there wouldn't be any question as to where one should or should not walk, either.

Would that make for a step towards "campus beautification"? I dare say no. This new concrete creation is our first step in the direction of "campus uglyification". A solution to the problem of people walking on the grass that might have served the dual purpose of beautifying the campus would have been bushes alongside the old sidewalks. This probably would have been less costly than the new path was, what with the cost of all those trucks and cement and man hours. The college had to pay a man for sitting watching the new "sidewalk" for a whole day, to make sure people like me who are opposed to its exsistence did not rip it up — know how much those guys make an hour?! Bushes would not have had to be watched, because everybody loves bushes, and no harm would ever have come to them.

Next time a path on campus (and there are plenty of them out there) gets to the point where somebody feels something should be done about it, I hope they think about bushes, rather than concrete.

Thank you very much (as I step down off my soapbox until next week).

To spark interest in and give some background information on Longwood's upcoming Sesquicentennial celebration, the ROTUNDA has decided to include among its pages this semester a series of articles about preparations and other things pertaining to the gala event. Alongside these new articles, we hope to be able to re-print articles from old copies of the ROTUNDA. Hopefully this will give our readers and participants in the 1989 celebrations a sense of knowledge about the school and its past.

Farmville Will Celebrate Fifty-sixth Founders Day

Basketball Game, Luncheon, Tea, Dinner, Lyceum, and Dance Are Social Events

The fifty-sixth celebration of Founders' Day will take place Friday and Saturday, March 9 and 10, when approximately 150 alumnae will be welcomed back to the campus. Classes of 1890, 1900, 1910, 1920 and 1930 will observe reunions and the class of 1915 its twenty-fifth anniversary.

First event on the week-end program will be the traditional varsity basketball game with Madison College on Friday evening at 8 o'clock.

Morning session on the occasion will begin at 10:30 o'clock Saturday morning in the large auditorium. At this time a program will be presented by the students. The Intermediate Quartette will sing the old Scotch Folk Song, "Flow Gently Sweet Afton" while the Senior Quartette will offer "A Song of Home" by Dvorak. Peggy Bellus will be the soloist on the program. Gifts will be presented to Dr. J. L. Jarman, president, at this time by different organizations, the gifts to be used for various improvements on the campus. After the singing of the Alma Mater, a response will be given by Dr. Jarman.

Miss Grace B. Moran, President of the Alumnae Association, will welcome the alumnae after the student program. Greetings and reports from alumnae chapters will be given to be followed by a welcome from Dr. Jarman.

Longwood will be the scene for the Alumnae Luncheon and the business meeting which follows.

At 3:30 o'clock, the Freshman gymnasium classes will present a Folk Dance demonstration in the gymnasium. The Granddaughters Club will entertain at tea in honor of the alumnae at 4:30 o'clock in the Home Management House.

There will be dancing from 10 to 12 o'clock in the gymnasium and recreation hall. Clyde Duvall's orchestra and one from Richmond have been engaged to play.

Mr M. B. Coyner heads the committee on arrangements.

Free Computers For You

By NIGEL SMITHERS

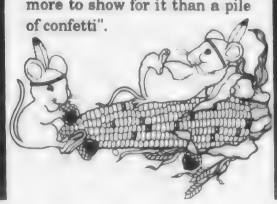
Longwood's Writing Center opened for the semester on Monday, Sept. 7 -- restaffed, renovated, and ready for action! Open 1-10 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 1-4 p.m. Fridays, and 6-10 p.m. Sundays, the Writing Center provides the opportunity for all Longwood students to learn the simple "art" of word processing and gives them a place to practice it. Even computer-avengers of the past can appreciate the 'EASY' system of word processing for the uncomplicated, streamlining advantages it will lend their term papers and other documents.

Located in Coyner (2nd floor), the Writing Center is easily accessible to any and all students in need of a typewriter, or who crave that special dot-matrix touch in their homework and papers, so grab a floppy disc and get over there!

Happy Birthday Longwood

By KRISTINA M. SMALL

Longwood is gearing up for the most extravagant celebration this campus has ever seen. Plans for the 150th anniversary of the founding of Longwood include a birthday party on Founders Weekend that, according to Don Winkler, Associate Vice President of Public Affairs, will "bring a very special program to Longwood."



Also included in the celebration are plans for campus beautification, restoration of a bell that once called students to class and was rung on special occasions, and a symposium series that will bring nationally known individuals to Longwood, whose names will be announced at a later date.

Although these and many other exciting events have been in the planning stages for almost one year, few other than the members of the steering- and sub-committees know much about the upcoming sesquicentennial celebration, which centers around the 150th graduating class of Longwood.

This ignorance is due to the fact that no formal announcement has been made and won't be until commitments are assured from the national figures that will take part in the birthday celebration, symposium series and commencement.

The purposes of the sesquicentennial as outlined by the steering committee are; to initiate or conclude a number of projects that will enhance the presence of Longwood in the state and region, to provide a thoughtful balance of events of quality, and to leave something of lasting value behind so that Longwood will be a better, stronger college than before the sesquicentennial.

As Mr. Winkler puts it, "When the dust settles we want more to show for it than a pile of confetti".

WRESTLING

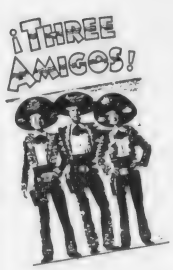
permitted one chance to enter a drawing for two people to meet the United States Tag Team Champions, the Rock and Roll Express, along with a T-shirt and program featuring the champs. The lucky winners of the drawing were Scott Williams of Yorktown and Tina Napier of Waynesboro. These two Longwood students also got their picture taken with the Rock and Roll Express, their autographs, and sat in on a press conference conducted by The Rotunda, WLCX, and the Farmville Herald.



The second half of the show meant tougher competition and more action. Starting it all off was Kendall Windham and the Italian Stallion taking on the Mod Squad who hail from the Badlands of New Orleans at a total combined weight of 540 pounds. This match had the crowd on their feet from the start, cheering and booing as the four massive men exchanged blows. Near the end of the long, heated battle, all hell broke loose as all four men were in the ring at once, apparently trying to kill each other. While referee Earl Hebner tried to restore order, the twenty minute time limit expired, ending the match in a draw. This match left the crowd on the edge of their seats and hungry for more . . . and they got it.

Next on the card were two experienced ring veterans in Ivan "The Russian Bear" Koloff and Ron Garvin who is billed as "the man with hands of stone." Koloff walked from the dressing room to the ring with long steel chains hanging around his neck and his manager Paul Jones at his side. Koloff was welcomed into Lancer Hall by a standing ovation of boos. As he passed through the crowd, the battle scars on his bald head were nearly impossible to miss; he looked as though somebody had used his head to sharpen a set of knives. As soon as the bell rang to begin the match, Garvin and Koloff went head to head

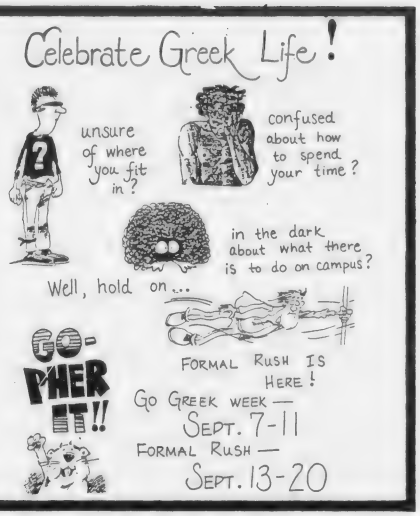
Most Students Say Good Bye To Super 8



By MATT PETERMAN

Only a handful of overflow students remain in motels such as the Super 8, allowing them to get in a pattern of normal college life. The frustrating two to three weeks of waiting for an official vacancy can be evidenced by an unidentified student's contention that: "I don't have a car and I have the extra hassle of finding a ride every time I need to go to room." "I just hope I don't have to go through another week of this..."

Other students in temporary housing, such as lounges, also have been on the move. The reasons for this great progress is the no-shows and drop-outs that every college expects to have during the first weeks of school. The new housing director, David Retting, seems determined to solve the problem so everyone wins. A letter was sent to students in temporary housing, which allows the student to scout for a compatible living situation, by the use of a list of vacancies, thus no one is forced into a living situation less than efficacious to him or her.

At the moment, there are approximately six females in temporary housing with about sixteen vacancies for them on campus. Approximately eighteen males are living in temporary housing, however only four will be searching with a list of over fifteen vacancies for a compatible living situation. The other fourteen males were displaced because of the Frazer fire and technically already have a room, so no additional rooms need be assigned.

Construction to restore third and part of fourth floor Frazer residence hall is moving at a rapid pace as demolition of burned material is almost complete. The displaced students will move back in as the rooms become available, but in the meantime they will continue to live in the Super 8.

finds the students to be enthusiastic and grateful for the help in getting involved in Longwood life. Her students are currently working on "decoding their professors" by interviewing a professor to see his or her point of view.

Freshmen are responding well to the program. "It's fun," says Jeremy Smith, "and it makes you do a lot (to get involved)... Maybe most people could get by without it, but it's helpful overall". He also points out that it gets people involved who might not be otherwise. Esther Oliver also "likes it a lot". She feels the program is a good forum for letting out feelings. "Freshmen can talk about things that are bothering them about all this new stuff they have to cope with." She also thinks that it is helping those freshmen who would rather not admit that they don't know everything about coping with college.

It is estimated that freshmen formulate their attitudes toward their colleges in the first three to five weeks of their stay. The goals of the Longwood Seminar Program are to improve this "bonding experience", to help students be successful, and to prevent transferring out.

The program seems to be meeting all its objectives so far.

New rulings and regulations on lofts were handed down by state fire marshals, and not just to Longwood: JMU, among other colleges, is also going through loft restriction changes.

Renovations in lounges might include some new furniture, along with making them comply with fire marshal's standards. Greek chapter rooms have fire codes to live up to, also. "I don't want to inconvenience the students, but we have to comply with the marshal's standards. At the same time though, we want to keep these rooms useable."

Dave Rettig has quite a year ahead of himself here, and he welcomes the challenge.

Tensions In The Gulf

By MATT PETERMAN

Kuwait expelled five Iranians in protest after Iran fired three Silkworm missiles at and around the oil rich emirate. Kuwait has been targeted by Iran because of its support of Iraq in the Persian Gulf war. Kuwait filed a formal protest with the United Nations Friday.

The most recent convoy of tankers under the protection of U.S. warships made it safely through the gulf without incident. Two other supertankers followed the minesweep path of the U.S. Navy. The entire convoy was shadowed by an Iranian frigate.

Iraq continued to step up its attacks on Iranian interests in the area reporting that three ships were attacked off Iran's Gulf Coast. Iran reported that it launched new ground operations deep inside Iraq territory on all fronts. None of the reports could be independently confirmed.

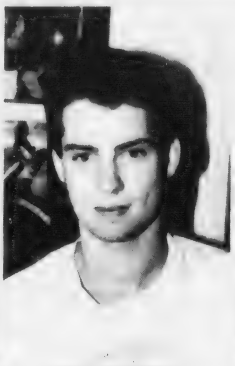
QUESTION OF THE WEEK

"Campus Parking. Any Comments?"



CONNIE DUNN and BELINDA TIGNOR

The parking around campus is ridiculous. If you move your car once, you've lost your parking spot til the weekend. I think there could be many improvements made on the parking situation. While paying $12.00 for a parking sticker I had to pay $10.00 for a parking ticket. Unfair!

BRYAN WEST

People with cars can't ever find a place. Why? Because people are afraid to move their cars, so they sit in the same place. When you leave that place its gone; it's like people are on the High Rises scoping for places. I know because I left my car here last year in the same place in fear of parking at Wynne. Get some parking put in LC, preferably near French.

JOHN WINSTON

The parking situation here has gotten out of control. What makes it so ridiculous is that it could be easily solved. All you have to do is assign parking spots for each student relative to where they live.

RON COUCH

Parking is very inadequate during the week. I just got a ticket on Sat. for parking on the side of French, even though the sign said resident parking. They again issued too many parking stickers. I have been forced to parking in day parking.

OOPS!

Apologies to Sebastien Volcker and Jenny Ford for the inadvertent mix-up of their photos in last week's Man on the Streets feature.

Keep your eyes peeled and your answers ready for our Man on the Streets throughout the semester!

Rotunda Wrestling Interviews

By SAM CLEMENS and RICH JONES

ROCK AND ROLL EXPRESS: Rick, from Nashville, Tennessee and Rob from Pensacola, Florida. Total combined weight of 468 pounds. World Tag Team Champions.

ROTUNDA: What is it like having to travel all over to wrestle?

RICK: At first it was kinda fun, then it gets to be a job. But, it's what I chose for my career and you either take it or leave it, so I guess I'm gonna take it...I enjoy it.

ROTUNDA: Rob, was there anybody that influenced you to get involved with wrestling?

ROB: My brother -- he's five years older than me: I followed in his footsteps. He is a good wrestler and taught me everything I know.

ROTUNDA: What is it like going out every night and having a lot of girls wanting you?

ROB: It feels great.

RICK: It's good to be alive in America.

ROTUNDA: What are your immediate goals?

R&R: To hang on to the tag team title longer than anyone in history.

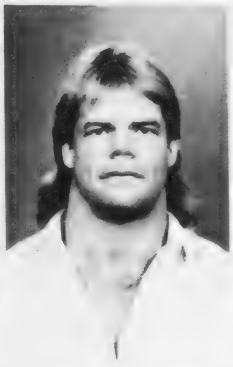
TULLY BLANCHARD: From San Antonio, Texas. 5'11" 235 pounds. Twelve years on pro wrestling circuit. One of the "elite four horsemen."

ROTUNDA: Where did you go to college and what was your major?

TULLY: I went to SMU for two years and West Texas State for two years, majoring in mass communication.

ROTUNDA: Did you wrestle while you were in college?

TULLY: No, I'm from Texas and they don't have much collegiate wrestling in Texas; I played football.



ROTUNDA: What made you come from Texas to the east coast and the NWA?

TULLY: Money.

ROTUNDA: What has the money done for you? Has it changed you at all?

TULLY: It's got me a big house, two Mercedes, clothes, anything I want; other than that, it's just the same 'ol me.

Fight Cancer with a checkup and a Check
AMERICAN CANCER SOCIETY

LEX LUGER: Blonde hair, blue eyes, 6'5" 270 pounds from Chicago, Illinios. The current U.S. Heavyweight Champion. One of the elite four horsemen. "The Total Package."

ROTUNDA: Where did you go to college and what was your major?

LEX: I went to the University of Miami on a football scholarship for four years and majored in business.

ROTUNDA: You played pro football? Tell us about it.

LEX: I played for the Green Bay Packers for seven years as an offensive tackle.

ROTUNDA: How does "The Total Package" keep himself in such excellent physical condition?

LEX: I was blessed with a very good metabolism. I can eat just about anything, so I don't follow a diet. I don't have time to workout in the gym six hours a day. We get to the gym when we can.

ROTUNDA: What immediate goals have you set for yourself?

LEX: To remain U.S. Heavyweight champion for as long as I see fit!

WEEKEND COED FLAG FOOTBALL. Entry blanks are due Thursday, Sept. 10th at 6:30 p.m. at mandatory captain's meeting in Lankford's Intramural Room. Play will begin on Saturday morning Sept. 12th. Entry blanks can be picked up in Iler Gym. Players can be from any residence hall.

3-ON-3 BASKETBALL OFFICIALS NEEDED!!!!!!!!! Applications are due on Monday, Sept. 14th at 6:30 p.m. at the mandatory meeting in the Lankford Intramural Room. The officials will be paid. All are encouraged to apply. Applications are available in Iler Gym.

in a slugfest with Garvin receiving the worst of it. Koloff proceeded to slingshot Garvin out of the ring and then distract the referee as Paul Jones stomped on Garvin. Garvin finally regained his senses while outside of the ring and returned to stalk down the Russian Bear. I glanced over to see what Phyllis Mable and Sue Saunders thought of the action and just at the moment Koloff went down from a kick to the groin, Sue got up and walked out, leaving an excited Ms. Mable smiling and licking her lips for more as she was sitting there with her shoes off. Ron Garvin, with the help of his hands of stone, was able to pin his Soviet counterpart who had just missed with a knee off of the top rope and soon after he did so, I noticed Sue Saunders returning to her seat.

The time had finally come for the main event of the evening, the sixth and final match: and the crowd knew it. Everybody was on their feet because they knew that the Rock and Roll Express would soon be coming out of the dressing room and heading for the ring. The world champion Rock and Roll Express wrestled against two of the four horsemen, Lex Luger, the U.S. heavyweight champion and Tully Blanchard; the entire ring shook violently as bodies were slung into the turnbuckles. There was plenty of activity outside of the ring as well, with bodies being thrown out to the crowd's feet. Several momentum changes took place during the match, the final one being to the champion's advantage. To everybody's approval and nobody's surprise, the Rock and Roll Express were victorious.

As Phyllis Mable put her shoes back on and left with Sue, four sweaty men in tights headed for the showers and then on to another town to bring a little excitement and a smile to several hundred other people.

The TKE's are to be commended for an excellent idea of a fund raiser and a wonderful job of putting it all together. The night's events were very successful despite not selling out.

Soccer Team In Second Place

Longwood's soccer team, ranked 12th in Division II, started its season with a second place finish in the Sunkist Classic at Glassboro, New Jersey over the weekend. The Lancers beat Indiana of Pennsylvania 2-1 Saturday but fell to division III power Glassboro State 3-2 in the championship game Sunday.

Now 1-1, Longwood plays in the Blue Marlin Classic Friday and Saturday at Virginia Beach. The Lancers face Eastern Mennonite at 4:00 Friday following the game between host Virginia Wesleyan and Southern Vermont at 1:00. Saturday, Longwood will play S. Vermont at 1:00 and the Marlins will face EMC at 4:00.

Celebrate Greek Life

By Judy Flanagan and Dina Femingo

The Time has come for all perspective rushees to have a chance at being a part of our Greek system here at Longwood.

Sorority rush began Sunday, September 13 with a series of four coke parties and continued on Monday with five coke parties giving sororities and rushees a chance to become acquainted with each other.

As the groups narrow down a bit, skit parties take place Wednesday and Thursday night. These are for invited girls who get to watch various sororities put on a 30-minute skit sharing a little about themselves.

Psychology Dept. Renovates

By Jamelyn Hampton

The Psychology Department, located in the Wynne building here at Longwood, is going through some changes and is also adding a couple of new programs to its department this semester.

Last semester Dr. Ed Smith, head of the Psychology Department, and Ms. Phyllis Wacker introduced the Personalized System of Instruction (PSI) to Psychology 131 students at Longwood. The self-paced and mastery oriented course produced five times as many A's, with no increase in F's, as among those students in the traditional lecture courses. Dr. Smith and Ms. Wacker are trying the PSI again this semester with their Intro-Psychology students.

Ms. Wacker and Dean McCombs are in charge of a new internship program here at Longwood. The program is being sponsored by the Washington, an organization that will recruit students to work as interns in D. C. for the summer

CHI walked on Thursday of this past week. This first public viewing of Longwood's secret organization this semester followed all typical traditions: the event was announced by blue ribbons draped over the statue of Joan of Arc in the Rotunda building, and CHI began their procession at 1 a.m. Photo Credits: Rob Smith

Board Gives Green Light On Parking Lot Development

By MATT PETERMAN

The Longwood College Board of Visitors unanimously approved a motion proposed by rector, Thomas D. Rust, that would implement eminent domain, the power of government to take land for public use, as a last resort concerning the master plan and more specifically, the construction of new parking lots.

The decision is against the cry of residents represented by the committee to save our neighborhood, who believed a compromise on the situation could be reached, concerning the expansion of Longwood College. Eventually the college may expand to where approximately sixty homes now stand.

Currently seven homes are affected in the area of Hooper, S. Main, Franklin, and Pine Streets, located south of the College.

The decision directs the college to "Make every reasonable effort" to acquire the necessary properties at fair market value. "Should such negotiations fail, and as a last resort, the Board of Visitors on separate action should request the state to exercise its right of eminent domain to obtain those properties, if any, which it is unable to acquire by negotiated purchases." Residents presently living on properties needed by the college will be offered the option of a lifetime lease after the college buys the property.

The proposal that Bicentennial Park, located across from the Rotunda, be converted into a parking lot was shot down for various reasons and will remain much like it is today.

James E. Ghee, a member of the Citizens Committee, listened to the proposal with concern. He stated earlier in the year that it was "A slap in our face for Longwood to develop a master plan that drastically impacts on the black community . . (and for it) . . . not have any input into it . . ." On Saturday he said, "In essence, they are saying "We are going to do what we want to and we don't want to deal with the community.' "

Other than additional parking, the present master plan includes proposals for the construction of two dorms, a pedestrian mall, a new library, tennis courts, and playing fields.

Delta Sigma Theta Sorority Enters Second Year On Campus

By TAMARA L. BROWN

The Pi Mu Chapter of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority Incorporated is the newest addition to the entourage of existing greek letter organizations on Longwood College's campus. Its chapter was chartered on May 3, 1987.

By involving themselves in various extra-curricular activities such as the Student Government Association, Longwood Ambassadors, Association of Black Students, Longwood Drill Team, as Resident Assistants, and by actively participating in the Big Brother/Big Sister program, the Deltas (as they are commonly called) have already made some positive strides toward improving the quality of life on Longwood's campus.

Founded in 1913 at Howard University, the most prevalent thrust of the Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Inc. has been community service. Although the sorority involves itself in a variety of service activities, the five major points of emphasis are educational development, economic development, community and international development, political awareness and involvement, and physical and mental health.

Five of the nine Ladies of Distinction of the Pi Mu Chapter, Lisa Redding, Linette Jones, Jeris Hill, Kathleen L. Watkins and Bonita Turner, will be graduating in May of 1988. The other members are Tamara Brown, Wanda Shelton and Sheri Stanford. Patricia Keene, the ninth member, transferred to Virginia Commonwealth University to complete her nursing degree. The advisor of the Sorority is Brenda Cross, director of the Pre-College program at Longwood College.

We look forward to seeing more of and hearing more about the ladies of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Inc., as they endeavor to further establish their chapter here at Longwood College.

ROTUNDA POLICY

Please address contributions to the ROTUNDA, Box 1133. Letters are subject to editing. Please type or neatly print any contributions.

Opinions expressed in the ROTUNDA do not necessarily reflect those of the Longwood College administration, staff or students as a whole.

Deadline for articles is 3:00 p.m. Friday prior to the Tuesday publication date. Contributions handed in within 3 hours before deadline should be placed in the envelope on the Publications Office door in Lankford. Letters, personals, etc. are due on the office door by midnight Sunday.

Editorial

The Student Excursion Club of Longwood College has just been approved by the SGA, and we are currently seeking new members.

Student Excursion is an academic-social club whose express purpose is to get all Longwood students actively involved in campus activities. As this is a new campus organization, the direction it takes will be decided by you. We can use all of the ideas and assistance offered to the Club to make student life at Longwood better. This is your Club — make the most of it!

If you are 1.) a currently-enrolled Longwood student (dorm or day) and 2.) are interested in meeting new people, or just like to become involved in campus activities, please contact Rick Breidensten (South Cunningham, R. 124) or Jeff Haynes (Curry, R. 619). We'll look forward to meeting you!

JUST ONCE — BY THE STAFF

Somebody somewhere has it in for Longwood students, and they're out to get us this semester. Fire drills at 5:30 in the morning, electricity blackouts, pinto beans in the dining hall — they're getting us pretty good!

Who would do such a thing? Rival schools? No — Hampden-Sydney guys aren't that cunning. Ex-administrators? Nah — Vepco doesn't collaborate with out-of-state individuals.

Could it be someone from within the ranks? A traitor, perhaps? Egads, I hope not.

Did You Catch It?

We hope you notice something different about this week's and last week's Rotunda.

The Farmville Herald, who prints the Rotunda, is using a new typeface for the body copy throughout the newspaper. The typeface is 9 point New Century Schoolbook, which is being printed on an Apple Laserwriter Plus.

The change brings The Herald to the latest technology in typesetting, which is basically word processing by a computer. The type is actually key stroked on a Macintosh Plus and then printed by the Laserwriter.

In addition to operating fast, the computer system is very quiet. The copy is printed on plain paper, which means the cost is quite a bit less expensive than the old method.

The switch to the Macintosh and Laserwriter system is the first major change in typesetting by The Herald since 1974. That system was based on a flashing light that exposed the letters on a photosensitive piece of paper. Once the paper was exposed it had to be developed by a processing unit.

Obviously the cost of the photographic paper is far more than the cost of the plain paper used by the new system. Herald publisher Bill Wall estimates that the savings in paper and chemicals will offset the $25,000 investment in the new system in three to five years. Wall also commented that the cost of the old system, purchased in 1974, was in excess of $25,000.

Letters to the Editor

As a secretary here at Longwood, I would like to address a problem that I feel sure many secretaries have experienced. Question: How many secretaries are performing secretarial duties outside their job description? For instance, being asked to type materials for a workshop that you find out later on the person is being paid handsomely to do or provide secretarial duteis that you were never paid for.

Secretaries here at Longwood have enough responsibility as far as performing secretarial obligations pertaining to their job description.

Be considerate by not asking us to do duties outside the job description or offer payment when duties are performed outside the job description.

Signed
Secretary at Longwood

Editorial note: The above letter has been printed exactly as it was written.

Dear Editor:

Having just read the article on Pro Wrestling in the Tuesday, September 9 edition of the Rotunda, I felt it necessary to make a couple of corrections.

In the third match, it was stated by reporter Elmer "E.T." Tolentino that Dino Bravo wrestled Singapore Strongman Teijho Khan when in actuality it was Denny Brown who wrestled Khan.

Even more of an oversight in reporting was calling Rock'n Roll Express the United States Tag Team Champions and the world champions. Rock'n Roll Express is really only the National Wrestling Alliance Tag Team Champions.

The biggest oversight of all the blunders is in your biased reporting by stating that the Rock'n Roll Express won to "everybody's approval and nobody's surprise."

There were many fans upset with the outcome of that match.

The Pope's Tour Continues

By MATT PETERMAN

☐ The Pope will continue his nine city tour of the United States this week. His tour began in Miami and will end in Detroit. During his visit, he has been approached by all groups seeking his advice and support.. Catholic Priests are concerned about celibacy and women in the Priesthood. The Jewish leaders concerned about the Vatican's stand on Israel, which does not have official recognition by the Vatican. The Pope urged leaders to provide the Palestinian people with a homeland. He reassured all Blacks that he was on their side. Thus far his visit has been plagued by rain and excessive heat.

☐ U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar is on a peace mission in the Persian Gulf to mediate a cease-fire in the seven-year-old war. On his visit to Iran last week, Iran demanded that Iraq be labeled the aggressor in the war before it will consider any resolution. Iraq repeated threats of a much more severe war if Iran does not accept the UN's peace resolution. Each nation has a different claim as to who started the war in September of 1980.

and will report on its interns to Longwood College.

Also new to the Department is a Psi Chi chapter, the National Honor Society of Psychology, to be started within the next few weeks under the direction of Ms. Wacker.

The new internship program and the new Psi Chi chapter will be prestigious for Longwood, while also giving students the chance for greater career opportunities. The PSI course will teach students time management and study skills, yet still allowing student flexibility. According to Dr. Smith, "it's a more adult-way of teaching students, rather than spoon-feeding them."

The Psychology Department will be busy this semester, working to do more for Longwood College and to offer greater opportunities to its students.

GREEK WEEK

The rushees then progress to themes. This is when the girls accept invitations to up to three parties. Themes are longer than skits.This is a time that both rushees and sororities will get more formal about whether or not they belong together.

On Sunday, September 20, Inspirational Parties take place. Rushees are only allowed to attend two parties. They will witness a more serious side of the two sororities they have narrowed their choice down to.

After attending the parties, rushees will be asked to sign a reference card with the sorority of their choice. In return, the rushees Rho Chi (rush counselor), will deliver the rushees' bid (formal invitation to pledge a sorority) for walk.

Walk will take place Sunday at 6:30 p.m. in front of Lankford. This is the time when the pledges walk to the sorority of their choice in all white in front of the student body which attends this function.

Points Plus, A Plus

By MATT PETERMAN

Flushed with optimism, ARA officials introduced the "Points Plus" plan to Longwood College to provide students with flexibility, convenience, bonuses, and ease of use with regards to their college I.D.

The new plan allows students to purchase points in $25 increments and spend that money in any amount the student wishes at the following locations: Blackwell Dining Room, Rotunda Market, Lancer Cafe, or the Tea Room. Each point is worth one penny (for example, 100 points = $1.00). The balance of ones "Point Plus" account will carry over to the second semester, but there will be no refunds for any reason (including withdrawal) for the obvious reason that processing a refund would cost more than the refund itself. Should a student have a balance at the end of the year, for example $10, that student could go shopping at Lancer Cafe for non-perishable items that they sell.

The "Plus" to the system is the bonus everyone receives upon purchasing points. 19 meal boarders receive a 25% bonus on all point purchases, 15 meal boarders a 10% bonus, and faculty, staff, and other students receive a 5% bonus. EXAMPLE: A 19 meal boarder purchases $100 in points: he is credited with $125 in his points account.

Purchases of points can be made in Blackwell Dining Room Office between the hours of 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. Upon receiving payment, your Longwood college I.D. will be encoded to access your dining service account. Points will be deducted from your balance automatically after each purchase. Your current balance will be indicated on the cashiers card reader at point of purchase.

The plan is beginning to catch on slowly as more students are signing up each day. According to Rick Johnson, the Director of ARA services at Longwood: "We are excited whenever we can do something a little bit new or expand our services, (and) . . . we know that this will improve our services to you, the customer."

The Longwood Players have begun rehearsals for "A Midsummer Night's Dream," their first production of the season. It is one of Shakespeare's best loved comedies and is well worth seeing. The play consists of a maze of love-hate relationships between Greek lovers, a magical dispute between fairy royalty, a romantic tryst between the fairy queen and a most unusual man, and the merriments of comical commoners.

Become a part of the fun and join a mischevious puck on a journey into a midsummer nights dream.

MANAGERS NEEDED

Students interested in working as managers or statisticians for Longwood's men's basketball team should contact head coach Cal Luther or assistant coach Ernest Neal in Lancer Hall as soon as possible.

Longwood's 12th ranked soccer team notched a pair of 4-0 shutouts Friday and Saturday in the Blue Marlin Doubleheader at Virginia Wesleyan and now turns its attention to the Southside Virginia Classic in Farmville this weekend, following a Wednesday game at Roanoke.

The first meeting of the Psychology Club this semester will be held in the Prince Edward Room on September 16th at 5:30 p.m.: all psychology majors and minors are encouraged to attend. On the agenda are: the election of all-new officers, the planning of activities, and to find out what kinds of career-development-speakers students are interested in, in order to learn about possible career choices.

Longwood Football Still Undefeated!

By: LOU CIPHER

The Longwood football team opened its season Saturday with a win at Michigan 38-6. Head coach Philip Michaels says that "This may be the best Lancer team" he has ever coached. Michaels, the only coach in the team's short five year history has compiled an outstanding 64-0-4 record. "These boys have a lot of heart, they're hard workers and as long as we can stay healthy, we should have another good year," coach Michaels said after the game with Michigan.

Leading the way for the Lancers were senior co-captain Louis Cotton with six receptions for 63 yards and two touchdowns and senior quarterback Jack Reeder who completed 14 of 23 passes for 168 yards and three touchdowns.

Longwood returned 33 lettermen from last season's MDAC championship team, including 17 starters. Strong safety and captain of the defense Lee Denton said "Coach Michaels did a great job of recruiting this year, we have good depth at every position."

The Lancers will travel to Nebraska this weekend for what should be a very good game. The team will make their first home appearance of 1987 against rival Maryland next Saturday September 19 at Lancer Stadium, game time is 1:00 p.m. The first home game, as always is Banner Day, the first 1,500 fans will receive a free Longwood Football banner.

OCPP:The Graduate

On a national level, 1987 graduates experienced moderate increases over last year in starting salaries but considerably fewer job offers. Graduates in technical fields fared the worst, with sharp declines in job offers and decreases in starting salaries. Humanities graduates did significantly better, especially in the merchandising and services industry. Generally this year's starting salaries were 2 to 6 percent over last year's.

Of the business disciplines, marketing and distribution showed the only gain in both average starting salary - up 5.7 percent to $20,364 - and the number or job offers - up .1 percent. Accounting graduates received 16 percent fewer job offers, with a 2.5 percent higher average salary - $21,744.

Computer Science graduates had rougher going than last year's with the number of offers dropping 28 percent and salaries decreasing slightly of $26,364.

Liberal Arts graduates have fared well by the shift in the U.S. from a manufacturing to service economy. Liberal Arts graduates are becoming increasingly desirable. Employers have found that such graduates have more flexible job skills than others, thanks to their broad educational backgrounds.

1987 Longwood graduates appear to be experiencing success in securing professional positions in their field of study. Data on the 1987 Longwood graduates is being collected and the Annual Placement Report detailing the status of our graduates will be completed and available for student, faculty/staff perusal in January.

Farmville Celebrates

By HOLLY PREBLE

On Friday September 17 - there will be a parade in Farmville celebrating the 200th anniversary of the constitution of the United States. At two-o'clock this grand spectacle will be kicked off by the ringing of church bells. Held the same day the constitution was signed by the thirty-nine delegates, the parade will begin marching on the north end of main street and will end between Wygal and Lankford at the parking lots.

The march will consist of high school bands, on ROTC unit, a color guard, floats, and many others who hopefully will be donned with historical costumes. Patriotic songs will be played and may be sung by the participants and spectators if they wish.

When the marchers reach their conclusion everyone will be asked to walk to the Farmville Courthouse and hear readings from some of the Constitution makers. Then anyone who has read the whole Constitution will be requested to sign a scroll which will be kept in Farmville and a copy will be sent to the National Bicentennial Committee. "The purpose of this," said Dr. Helms, the President of the celebration, "is to put an emphasis on the need to have a greater knowledge and understanding of the constitution and to call attention to its importance."

Player Of The Week

Senior golfers Tammy Lohren and Tina Barrett turned in the best 54-hole scores of their careers over the weekend, leading Longwood to victory in the 11th Longwood Invitational Tournament. Lohren and Barrett have been named Longwood College Players of the Week for the period September 6-13. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

Lohren fired a 77-76-76-229 to place fourth in the tournament out of 47 golfers as Longwood won for the second year in a row. The score was Lohren's best collegiate performance by far (she had a 241 in last year's Invitational), and it came on the heels of a summer in which she was unable to play golf.

Barrett carded an outstanding 72-80-71-223 to finish in second place in the Longwood Invitational. With two sub-par rounds (par is 73), she topped her collegiate best for 54 holes, a 75-75-74-224 in the 1986 Small College Nationals. Had her putter not gone cold in the second round Saturday, Barrett would likely have broken both Longwood (222) and tournament (220) records.

Rugby Team Downs VA Tech In Season Opener

By BRENT RANDALS LARSON

The Longwood College Rugby Club kicked off its Fall '87 season against Virginia Tech, who was ranked number one in the state last year. The first half, played in heavy rain, was primarily a defensive struggle for both teams. Va. Tech. drew first blood with a penalty kick about 15 minutes into the first half. Longwood quickly countered with a penalty kick, worth 3 points, and drop kick, worth 3 points, by Tim Seymour to end the 40 minute half with Longwood on top, leading 6-3! The first half brought some real head-to-head play and low scoring!

The second half was a bit more exciting, with a lot more scoring! As the rain let up, Va. Tech regained the lead with the first try, worth 4 points, of the game about 15 minutes into the second half. The point after, worth 2 points, failed and the score was 7-6. On the ensuing kick off, Longwood drove deep in Tech's territory, and with a super pass from Eric Nelson, Dave Larson, dove across the end line scoring Longwood's only try! The point after attempt bounced off the upwrights and Longwood was ahead 10-7. Shortly thereafter, Virginia Tech tied it up with a 25 meter penalty kick. Bouncing back, Tim Seymour gave Longwood the lead with a drop kick from about 35 meters out. Maintaining the up and down intensity for both sides, Tech scored against Longwood for a second try with only minutes left in the game, the score 14-13. Then, with a penalty by Tech, Longwood was awarded a penalty kick 40 meters out, with all time expired and down by one point. Tim Seymour kicked it through, the whistle blew, the team screamed, the fans screamed, everyone screamed - Final score 16-14, Longwood. Shaka-Laka!

This was an exciting victory for the team and they look forward to many more on their quest for the 1987-88 Virginia Division II State Championship. The Rugby Club would like to extend their appreciation to all the fans who came out in the rain to watch, it was great support! Also, the team urges everyone to come out and support them again next week at home against the men from VMI!

Women's Soccer

By REGINALD DWIGHT

Longwood Women's Soccer Club defeated the varsity squad from Lynchburg College by a score of 2-0 on Sunday. This was the first ever women's outdoor soccer game Longwood has played in the school's 149 year history.

Scoring for the Lady Lancers were Suzi Bakka and Bobby Shuler, leading a very strong defense was sophomore Chris Anderson. Recording the shut-out in goal was 6'2" basketball standout Barbi Burton.

Hockey Team Wins Season Opener

A strong showing in the season opener brought Longwood's field hockey team a 3-0 win over Lynchburg Saturday, but the Lady Lancers have a tough week ahead with William & Mary, Richmond and High Point visiting Farmville for games this week.

Longwood hosts William & Mary Tuesday, Richmond Thursday and High Point Saturday at 2:00. The Tuesday and Thursday games begin at 4:00. The Indians promise to be a particularly tough opponent.

The last time Longwood beat William & Mary was 1981, a 1-0 victory in the VAIAW State Tournament. While the Indians have won seven of the last eight meetings by a margin of 27-5, last year's game was close with Longwood falling by a 2-1 score.

Women's Tennis

The 1987 fall Longwood women's tennis team, coached by Bill Moore in his fourth year, will begin its season hosting Randolph-Macon Woman's College Tuesday at 3:30. The netters' roster consists of two seniors, four juniors, and five sophomores. Of the eleven players on the team, nine of are returnees.

Among those returning from last spring's 9-5 squad are seniors Diane rogers and Karla Boggs, and junior Mary Lynn Lawman. Rogers, a co-captain along with Boggs, will be playing in the No. 1 position. She finished last season with a 7-6 record in singles and a 8-6 record in doubles. This year, she will team with Lawman once again to compete in the No. 1 doubles spot.

Newcomers to the squad are sophomores Laura Vollrath and Linda Swe. Vollrath will compete in the No. 2 position in doubles with Boggs. Swe switches over to tennis after playing for Longwood's volleyball team last year.

Balance, Depth Key Lady Lancers To Victory In Longwood Invitational

Five Longwood golfers placed in the top 10 as the Lady Lancers won the 11th Longwood Invitational Tournament in record-setting fashion Friday through Sunday at rain-soaked Longwood Golf Course.

The defending Division II National Champs got career best performances from seniors Tina Barrett, who shot 72-80-71-223 and Tammy Lohren, who carded a 77-76-76-229.

"It was great to win for the second year in a row," said Longwood coach Barbara Smith, "especially with a record breaking final round. I was glad to see Gretchen, Marcia and Ashley come back strong today. Tina had two sub-par rounds and Tammy played the best of her career. It was really a team win."

Next up for the Lady Lancers is the James Madison Invitational October 2-4 in Harrisonburg, Virginia.

Booter's Up Record To 3-1

Longwood, along with co-host Hampden-Sydney, will welcome Shenandoah and Slippery Rock as visiting teams in the Southside tournament. The Tigers, 1-1 following a road trip to North Carolina, will play Shenandoah at 12:00 Saturday while the Lancers, 3-1, tackle The Rock at 2:00. Winners meet for the title at 2:00 Sunday while the losers play at 12:00.

Freshman Ray Jones scored three goals in two games for the second week in a row as Longwood beat Southern Vermont 4-0 Friday and Eastern Mennonite 4-0 Saturday. Jones, who played despite a sprained ankle, was joined on the Blue Marlin All-Tournament team by Jeff Robinson, John Barone and Franck Euksuzian.

Barone and Euksuzian had two assists each, and Bill Moore and Nils McCarty one. Kenny Lim scored two goals while Nick Ruebel, Jim DiModica and Mike Edge had one goal each over the weekend.

Coach Rich Posipanko was pleased with his team's play, following a poor first half against Southern Vermont Friday. Freshman back Mitch Rubin suffered a sprained knee, but should be able to play this week.

Senior tri-captain and goalkeeper Dave Goerke was credited with both shutouts, though he had relief help from Jeff Chewning in the second half Friday.

AXP's To Host Benefit Bash

September 26, 1987

By NIGEL SMITHERS

The Longwood chapter of Alpha Chi Rho Fraternity will be sponsoring a benefit concert event on Iler Field this Saturday. Tickets for the all-day affair (3-11:30 p.m.) are $3.00.

The idea for Farmville Aid, as the concert is being called, was started last May by AXP philanthropy officer, Tom Harrison. Tom's position requires that he come up with possible ideas for benefit-type events.

The notion of a concert held in Farmville to help financially support charities began as a pun on the names of the town of Farmville and the nationally-reknowned Farm Aid benefit concert.

"I wanted to do something that might keep people on campus for a weekend, while at the same time raise money for charities," explains Mr. Harrison. Benefits from the concert will be split equally between Special Olympics, Hands Across America, and F.A.C.E.S.: Farmville Area Churches' Emergency Services.

The bands performing for the weekend are all from either the D.C. or Richmond area.

Performing at a uni-greek party on Iler Field Friday night will be The Limit and The Eccentrics. This exclusively greek bash is the AXP's way of saying "thank you to the fraternities and sororities on campus who are helping with refreshments and equipment set-up all day Saturday.

Six bands will play on Saturday the 26th. The schedule of appearance will be: 3:00-4:15 Shattered Glass 4:30-5:45 Jettison Charlie 6:00-7:00 Winter Rose 7:00-7:30 Revelations 7:40-9:15 The Furries 9:30-11:30 Candle Factory

Philanthropist Tom Harrison spent a bit of time this summer searching for bands who were willing to road-trip to Farmville and play for nothing.

Concert-goers will be paying only fifty cents per band. Why such a low admission price? "I'd rather charge a low price and have lots of people come," says concert organizer Harrison, "than ask a high admission fee and have only a few people show up."

Anticipated attendance at the bash is 2,000-3,000. This event has been publicized on about a dozen other Virginia campuses, as well as on a few Richmond area radio stations.

RUSH'87

(or how to get free pizza)

By MIKE McGRATH

ATTENTION: ALL NON-GREEK MALES

The time of year has come for Fraternity Rush! It is a two week period in which non-greek males have the opportunity to go around campus and meet the brothers of each fraternity. Each fraternity has two rush parties so that everyone will have a chance to come and see what the fraternities are all about. The rush parties are fun for everyone. There are pizza, chips, and other refreshments to eat and movies to watch.

Non-greek males get a chance to learn about brotherhood and they may see that a certain fraternity has some of the same interests. To become a pledge of a fraternity they give out bids to the people that they believe will make a good brother. Rush lasts from September 14 until September 25 when bids are given out. So, all non-greek males who are interested in fraternities, it's time to get out there and find the fraternity you think is the best for you!

Walk Was Wonderful: Welcome New Pledges!

By DINA FERRIGNO

The time everyone was long awaiting finally arrived. On Sunday, September 20, this year's rushees walked to the sororities of their choice.

The mood was set with the annual omen of rain which started to fall early Sunday morning, as the girls hurried to Lankford to sign up for inspirationals. At 9:15 a.m. all hopefuls attended their first of two possible ceremonies.

This is a very emotional time: not only for the rushees, but for the sorority members also. After the tears and soul searching for the right decision for them, the rushers follow their hearts and dreams and sign their preference cards with the sorority or sororities of their choice.

Then the hardest part begins; the four hour wait for their Rho Chi (rush council) leader to deliver their bid from the sorority they will walk to. We all gathered on Stubbs Mall donned in our sorority colors, wearing hats and banging pots and pans, awaiting the moment of truth.

All the rushees, now known as pledges, were really great girls and will be a tremendous asset not only to their sororities, but to the Greek system here at Longwood as well. Our warmest congratulations to all the sororities for having such a successful formal rush!!

YOU NEED OCPP

By TAMARA L. BROWN

The Office of Career Planning and Placement is an office on Longwood's campus that plays a very vital role in the employment success of students once they graduate. Located on the second floor of South Ruffner, it is not utilized by the majority of the students. OCPP provides services ranging from workshops on the "how-to's" of your job search to preparation of a resume to setting up interviews with employers – to name a few.

Students need to visit the OCPP to learn the procedures for contacting employees and recruiters. It is important to prepare a resume early and establish a credentials file so that when you meet with recruiters that come to Longwood, you will be prepared. The "Campus Bulletin" and "Avenues Unlimited" are excellent sources of recruitment information, career fair dates, and tid-bits on career preparation and the transition from college to the work-place or to graduate-professional school.

Upcoming events from OCPP are:

* MINORITY STUDENT CAREER DAY, sponsored by the OCPP at the University of Virginia, will be held on November 3, 1987 at the Omni Hotel in Charlottesville. The last day to sign up is October 2, 1987.

NOTE: Juniors and seniors need to actively participate and get a jump on other graduates in the job search process. There will be many on-site interviews!!

NEAL TAKES PODIUM ON KIDDIE DANCE DILEMMAS

The attitudes children have about dance – and what it takes to change those attitudes – will be discussed in this year's first Faculty Colloquium Lecture at Longwood College.

The lecture will be given by Dr. Nelson D. Neal on Wednesday, September 23, at 7:30 p.m. in Wygal Auditorium. The public is invited to attend the lecture free of charge.

Neal, who is associate professor of health and physical education at Longwood, will discuss his studies of children's attitudes toward dance in the U.S., Canada, Finland, and Italy.

Neal has reported on his research at two international conferences, most recently in August at the Congress on Movement and Sport in Women's Life in Jyvaskyla, Finland. He also chaired one of the sessions during the congress. Representatives from more than 30 countries participated in the congress.

Following the five-day congress, Neal remained in Finland for three more days, returning to an elementary school in Keuruu to teach a modern dance session to children he had worked with in the spring of 1986.

An article by Neal has recently been published in an international journal, Movement and Research, published in Jyvaskyla. The article is entitled "The Effects of Dance Workshops on the Attitudes of Fourth-Grade Boys and Girls in the USA and Finland."

To Park Or Not To Park

By REBECCA NEHER

The campus police are aware of the parking problem here at LC, and have made suggestions to alleviate the problem. Some of these solutions include a multi parking deck, parking privileges based on GPA, and, freshman car privileges.

Editorial

The week of October 26-30 is Alcohol Awareness Week. It might seem a bit early to be mentioning this event, but it really isn't. The Longwood Alcohol Awareness Slogan Contest has begun, with entries for the contest due on this Friday, September 25th.

Last year's slogan, "Stop and Think — do you want a drink?" is still heard and seen all around campus. But how about the rest of the world? Alcohol is not restricted to campuses or college students, and neither is alcohol abuse.

Our society will never be rid of things like alcohol or alcoholism, but we can learn to live with them in reasonable amounts and to tolerate their presence, rather than look forward to the day we will be rid of them. That day will not come.

Perhaps this year's contributions to the Alcohol Awareness Slogan Contest could try to focus on the alcohol consumer in general, rather than on the college drinker. Posters bearing the slogan picture an "empty" sitting on top of a pile of books on a desk with various other student-type possessions lying about. Does this picture make an impact on non-student drinkers in the college's vicinity? Perhaps, perhaps not.

The aroma of fresh, hot cookies baking is sure to attract a crowd to your kitchen. And this recipe for Oatmeal-Carrot Cookies can satisfy a craving for sweets while contributing valuable nutrients to your diet.

Oatmeal-Carrot Cookies

½ Cup Brown Sugar
⅓ Cup Margarine, Melted
1 Egg
½ Teaspoon Vanilla
¾ Cup Carrots, Shredded
1 Cup Whole Wheat Flour
1 Teaspoon Baking Powder
½ Cup Oatmeal
¼ Cup Wheat Germ
½ Cup Raisins

In a small bowl, cream together, sugar, margarine, egg and vanilla until light and fluffy. Add carrots and mix well.

In another bowl, thoroughly stir together flour, baking powder, oatmeal and wheat germ. Stir the dry ingredients into the creamed mixture; fold in the raisins.

Pour mixture into a vegetable-oil sprayed 9 x 9 x 2-inch pan. Bake at 350 degrees F for 30 minutes. Let cool. Cut into bars or squares.

Yield: 24 Bars
Approx. Cal/Serv.: 70

Recipe Tip: Whole grain flour should be kept in the refrigerator or better yet in the freezer to keep it from becoming rancid.

Letters to the Editor

Editor,

On September 4th my two children and I attended the wrestling matches at Lancer Hall sponsored by one of the Longwood College fraternities.

While the wrestling matches were obviously phony, yet somewhat entertaining, one could not enjoy the evening because of the actions of about 10 college students who were sitting behind us screaming gutter language all through the event.

How can a parent teach their children responsible behavior, when irresponsible behavior is permitted at Longwood College functions.

I applaud Rev. Allen Breckenridge's effort in seeking community involvement of the Longwood College students. They need us as much as we need them, however, respect must be earned. This is one parent who will be very selective in supporting any Longwood College activity in the future until the students clean up their act!

Gene Brooks Cumberland, VA

Dear Editor,

In response to the recent decision of the Longwood Board of Visitors to approve the use of eminent domain in obtaining available land for proposed parking lots, I would like, as a student at Longwood, to apologize (from the bottom of my heart) to all those involved, that my school has acted in this manner.

Instead of looking deeper into the problem of where new students can park their "weekend wheels," the Board went ahead to plan for the future forced movement of several residents of our community from their homes. (As well as the possible movement of up to 60 homes!)

Is this progress? Or simply another way to "cash-in" on extra government funds? (You know, spend it or lose it.) And will money ever take the place of homes many of our neighbors have grown to love?

Thank you,
Jim Hash

The 1986-87 school year saw a combined total of 299 Judicial Board and Residence Education Coordinator Hearings on campus.

It is interesting to note that more than 60 percent of the cases were brought against males, who comprise only 30 percent of Longwood's population. Also, almost 45 percent of offenders are Freshmen. For 65 percent of the people brought before the judicial board or REC's, this was not their first time in such a position, and an average of 85 percent of those accused are found to be guilty.

The Residence Education Coordinator is the residence hall administrator responsible for the building where an incident occurs.

There are three other bodies available to hold hearings: the Administrative Hearing Officer, the Honor Board, and the College Disciplinary Board.

The referral of a case to a particular hearing body is as listed on p. 70 of the student handbook, based on the nature of the case, the jurisdiction of the hearing bodies, the location of the alleged incident, the prior record of the accused student, possible conflict of interest among a hearing body member and the accused, and/or the need for timely hearing of cases.

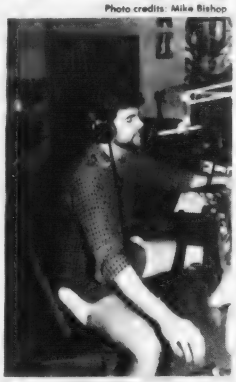
D. J. Of The Week

By CINDY GOOD

Several days ago while I was eating lunch in the dining hall, I overheard a conversation at the table next to mine. The students were discussing our radio station – so naturally, as music director, I tuned-in to listen. The upshot of their talk was that they thought our station, WLCX, had no variety, that all the D.J.'s either played 60's and 70's music or heavy metal.

This week's D.J. of the Week proves that the charge of "no variety" is definitely not true. Bill Rooney, a junior here at Longwood, is starting his third semester with WLCX. This semester though, Bill is playing a different type of music than he did last year. His show name, "The Blues Room," gives an accurate description of the music Bill plays.



He told me that doing a blues show was something he'd been thinking about last semester but decided to wait so he could start fresh with it this year.

Although his main musical interest is older rock, which he played last year doing a partner show with Ross Blommel, Bill says he wanted to play "something different from everyone else." He wanted more variety on the air so that WLCX could be a better station.

During the two-hour block from 10:00 to 12:00 on Tuesday nights Bill's listeners will hear such blues greats as John Lee Hooker, Eric Clapton, The Allman Brothers, Stevey Ray Vaughn, Muddy Waters, and Robert Cray.

When I asked our D.J. of the Week why he got involved with WLCX, Bill said it was because he's a "big music fanatic" and that he always wanted to be a Disc Jockey on the radio. "Besides," he commented, "it's fun!" It's not just fun, though, that Bill is after, he's truly interested in bettering the station. He has worked with record sorting and cataloging, a task that the station took on last year which would not have been possible without help from Bill and other D.J.'s. Bill also goes out of his way to play listeners' requests. He feels that the people who tune in to his show probably appreciate good music more than the average listener. "Blues," he told me, "is straight-ahead music." Then he added, "Without the blues, there wouldn't be rock and roll."

Turn on WLCX, 90.1 FM tonight and catch Bill's program and stay tuned every evening for lots of great entertainment and information. Next week the D.J. in the spotlight will be the station's Chief Engineer, Jim Long.

I think there are a few of us heavy metal students out here. We just seem to be drowning in a sea of pop and punk rock. Remember R. J. Dio says:
"They were thrown to the ground
With a terrible sound
Just like somebody broke a heart
Rock'n'roll children alone again
Rock'n'roll children without a friend
But they are rock'n'roll."
We head bangers will get it together sometime. METAL RULES!

Enter: Mr. Campbell

By Renee DePriest

Among the handful of new students and faculty members this year there stands Mr. John W. Campbell, new director of Choral Activities and Instructor of Music. Mr. Campbell's task is to direct Longwood's Concert Choir, Camerata Singers, and Lancer Edition. Since his commencement here, certain changes have already occurred. One of the changes is that the Concert Choir is now open to men, whereas only women sang in the choir in past years. Another change is the decrease in the size of the Camerata Singers and the Lancer Edition. With smaller groups, the kind of sound that results is what Mr. Campbell requires. If you are curious about what this fresh sound is like, all three choirs will be performing at Oktoberfest.

Mr. Campbell, who sings, plays the timpini drum, and composes, received his Masters in Music from the University of Illinois. With this musical profession, Mr. Campbell has traveled and taught a great deal. He has instructed at numerous schools including Oakland City College in Indiana and various public schools in Knoxville, Tennessee. He has also directed "a great deal of church music over the years" in Illinois and Indiana.

An interesting highlight in Mr. Campbell's career was his work as a music missionary in the East African Country, Malawi. His main occupation there was to help students, specifically from the University of Malawi, to be involved in activities outside of school. For instance, he set in motion a drama group there. He also worked with churches and established a church choir.

Behind this hardworking professional is a "nice", warmhearted man. Already impressed by the fact that he remembered my name from a full forty-seven student classroom, Mr. Campbell's teaching style also left me with an impression of high quality workmanship. The moment he enters class with a light step and pronounces a cheerful "GOOD-Morning", one already senses his good-naturedness. During class, if someone does not understand a tough point in lecture, Mr. Campbell goes to lengthy explanations to try and help the student understand. Amidst lecture, his smiling and telling of side jokes, dry as they are, puts the student at ease with the professor, making them unafraid to ask questions.

When asked what he liked about Longwood, his reply was, of course, the people. Starting a job in new surrounding is always difficult; however, Mr. Campbell says "the faculty and students have been very gracious in helping me get my feet on the ground . . ." You're welcome.

Free Money To Be Allocated

The National Research Council announces the 1988 Resident, Cooperative, and Postdoctoral Research Associateship Programs for research in the sciences and engineering to be conducted in behalf of 28 federal agencies or research institutions, whose laboratories are located throughout the United States. The programs provide Ph.D. scientists and engineers of unusual promise and ability with opportunities to perform research on problems largely of their own choosing yet compatible with the research interests of the supporting laboratory. Initiated in 1954, the Associateship Programs have contributed to the career development of over 5000 scientists ranging from recent Ph.D. recipients to distinguished senior scientists.

Approximately 450 new full-time Associateships will be awarded on a competitive basis in 1988 for research in: chemistry, earth and atmospheric sciences; engineering and applied sciences; biological, health, behavioral sciences and biotechnology; mathematics; space and planetary sciences; and physics. Most of the programs are open to both U.S. and non-U.S. nationals, and to both recent Ph.D. degree recipients and senior investigators.

Awards are made for one or two years; senior applicants who have held the doctorate at least five years may request shorter tenure. Annual stipends for recent Ph.D.'s for the 1988 program year will vary from $27,150 to $35,000, depending upon the sponsoring laboratory, and will be appropriately higher for senior Associates.

Reimbursement is provided for allowable relocation costs and for limited professional travel during tenure. The host laboratory provides the Associate with programmatic assistance including facilities, support services, necessary equipment, and travel necessary for the conduct of the approved research program.

Applications to the National Research Council must be postmarked no later than January 15, 1988 (December 15 for NASA), April 15 and August 15, 1988. Initial awards will be announced in March and April (July and November for the two later competitions) followed by awards to alternates later.

Information on specific research opportunities and federal laboratories, as well as application materials, may be obtained from the Associateship Programs, Office of Scientific and Engineering Personnel, GF1 Room 424-D1, National Research Council, 2101 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20418, (202) 334-2760.

Frankly Speaking

Beyond Longwood

Incumbent Tribe Won't Seek Another Term

By MATT PETERMAN

☐Republican U.S. Senator Paul S. Trible, Jr., surprised the state Saturday when he declared he would not run for a second term according to different sources. He cited the frustrations of public office and a lack of family life as reasons for his departure.

Others believe he is bowing out because his public image is eroding and the threat that former Gov. Charles Robb would run against him.

Trible, 40, has spent the last eleven years in Congress, now finishing his first senatorial term. On most occasions he has supported the policies of the Reagan Administration. He was appointed to serve on the committee investigating the Iran/Contra Affair.

Among the top GOP candidates who may run for the seat in 1988 includes U.S. Reps. Stan Parris, of Fairfax; Thomas Bliley, Jr., of Richmond; and former Attorney General, J. Marshall Coleman.

Trible graduated from Hampden-Sydney College and received his law degree at Washington and Lee. He served as U.S. District Attorney before moving up to The House of Representatives.

☐ A Beirut newspaper, Ash-Shiraa, quoting highly reliable and informed sources, said all foreign hostages in Lebanon could be freed if negotiations continue. They said local, regional and international parties, were talking about a deal to free the hostages. There are currently eight American hostages being held.

Ash-Shiraa is the newspaper that set off the investigation known as the Iran-Contra affair.

☐The United States has agreed in principle on an arms control pact with the Soviet Union this past week. After three days of talks President Reagan said, he and Soviet leader, Mikhail Gorbechev were preparing to sign a treaty.

In the agreement, both super powers are to remove the nuclear warhead, from ground launched missiles and destroy the launching tubes.

However, the super powers remain divided on two crucial points. 1) A timetable of withdrawal, 2) and a set of rules to prevent violations. Negotiations are to continue to work out these problems.

Interested in learning how to play the guitar or building on skills you presently have? Want to get a good start in the basics, or are you ready to move on to a new level of guitar playing? Well, why not join in either the Beginners or Intermediate Guitar classes that are being offered at Longwood this semester through the Continuing Studies program? On Tuesday evenings, beginning Oct. 6 through Dec. 8, the Episcopal Chaplain, Allen Breckenridge, will teach a Beginners' Class at 7 p.m. and an Intermediate Class at 8:15 p.m. in the music building (Wygal, Room 106). Beginners will learn the basics of guitar selection and care, tuning, simple chord structures, strumming, fingerpicking, and some basic songs to start off with. Intermediate players will learning a variety of techniques for advanced chord development and use, moving up the neck in the various positions, some advanced picking and strumming patterns, new songs, and more. Students must have their own guitar. Books for the class may be purchased in the Longwood Bookstore. For more information contact Continuing Studies Center at 392-9256. Cost of the nine week course is $35 dollars.

By NIGEL SMITHERS

Geist has selected two seniors to be inducted this semester.

Stuart Hallett, a business major whose concentration is in marketing, is one of these fortunate seniors. Stuart hails from Newport News.

In addition to Mr. Hamett, elementary education major Theresa Labyak of Virginia Beach will be joining the members of Geist for her last year at Longwood.

Geist, Longwood's honorary leadership society, chooses members on the basis of their leadership, scholarship, and service qualities. Induction ceremonies are held at the end and beginning of each academic year. Members are chosen to be incorporated into Geist for their senior year only. Therefore, the organization's membership turns over 100% every year.

Geist members are the people ultimately responsible for the planning, organization, and occurrence of Oktoberfest each year.

Staff meetings are held Tuesdays at 7:30 p.m. in the Publications Office (across from the mailboxes in Lankford). If you are interested in working on the Rotunda staff but cannot attend the meetings, send your name, phone, and box number to The Rotunda, box 1133.

The multiparking deck and GPA based parking are in the planning stages so there are no details, but statistics show that last year freshmen only used 20% of parking available, where as seniors took up 60%. Doing away with freshman parking would not solve the campus's parking problem.

Temporary parking facilities have been made available. Located across the street from Frazer, this area provides approximatly 60 new spaces.

The wooded lot across from Wygal is now being considered for construction of yet another parking lot providing approximatly 100 spaces.

Although parking is bad at Longwood we should consider the fact that at some colleges, such as Virginia Tech, students must park half a mile away and use a bus system to get to class.

After making several calls to other campuses, campus chief of police Husky discovered that another plus for Longwood College student parking is that parking stickers at other colleges can cost as much as 244 dollars annually.

Parking Code: Blue-Faculty , yellow-No Parking, white-Student

*Remember to notify campus police of visitors so they will not be ticketed or towed.

HOMECOMING

By DIANNE PHILLIPS

Homecoming 1987 is quickly approaching us: this Saturday, September 26, is the big day. The fun and festivities will begin Friday night with several pre-homecoming parties around campus. Then, on Saturday at 1 p.m., the Lancer football team will try to lengthen their unbeaten streak in the Homecoming game against Maryland at Lancer Stadium. At half-time of the football game, the names of the Homecoming King and Queen will be announced. Also at half-time will be the judging of the Homecoming Floats and the winning floats will be announced.

There will be two categories for the floats this year: classes (FR, SO, JR, SR) and individual groups (frats, clubs, etc.). Graduate students will be considered seniors for this event. A few floats have been nearly completed already. If your class or group has not yet started on its float, you are running out of time. There is no limit as to the size of the floats, but they must be able to fit into the stadium. Absolutely no corporate advertising will be allowed on any of the floats. Groups may accept contributions from anywhere with the cost of the floats, but no advertising will be permitted in return; any violations of this rule will result in immediate disqualification of the float. No open fires will be allowed on any float in the competition. No alcohol will be allowed on any float in the competition.

The Homecoming Dance will be on Saturday night from 9 p.m. until 2 a.m. in Lancer Hall. There will be a cover charge of $3 per person and $5 per couple. Live music will be performed by The Honeymooners. Alcoholic beverages will be served only with proper ID. No alcohol will be allowed to be taken into or out of the building by anyone. Proper attire is strongly requested.

HOMECOMING KING AND QUEEN NOMINATION FORM

Nominate only one person for each.

Freshmen and new transfer students cannot be nominated for either position.

Please use full name (no nick-names) and class (if known).

Player Of The Week

Freshman Ray Jones scored a record five goals in Longwood's 9-0 win over Slippery Rock Saturday, and for his performance, Jones has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period September 13-20. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood Sports Information Office.

Jones, who has been named to All-Tournament teams three consecutive weekends, broke the LC mark for goals in a game with his performance Saturday. His five goals topped the record of four in a game held by Tim Brennan (1982), John Kennen (1984) and John Barone (1986).

The freshman now has 11 goals and two assists while helping Longwood get off to a 5-1-1 start. He was also named Player of the Week August 30-September 6.

Combining quickness with a strong leg, Jones has helped Longwood achieve a 12th place ranking among NCAA Division II colleges according to last week's ISAA-Gatorade poll. The high-scoring forward has been named All-tournament in the Glassboro-Sunkist Classic, the Virginia Wesleyan-Blue Marlin Classic and the Southside Virginia Tournament.

Jones had already begun drawing comparisons with Longwood's all-time scoring leader Gus Leal (1979-82). Leal had a season record 22 goals in 1981 and a career record of 51 goals while playing for the Lancers. If Jones continues at his present pace he could be a threat to both records eventually.

A graduate of Berkeley Institute in Pembroke, Bermuda, Jones has been a member of the Bermudan National Youth Team. He had 14 goals and 12 assists last year for the Devonshire Colts Soccer Club.

Hockey Team Ups Record To 3-1

Longwood bounced back from a 2-0 defeat to William & Mary Tuesday to defeat Richmond 2-1 Thursday and High Point 5-0 Saturday in field hockey action last week. The Lady Lancers visit Randolph-Macon Wednesday before traveling to Appalachian State for games Saturday and Sunday.

Longwood, now 3-1, will play Eastern Kentucky Saturday and Appalachian Sunday in games against Division I foes at Boone, North Carolina.

In Thursday's win over Richmond Longwood's Melissa Gwinn, scored in the first half on an assist from Kris Meaney for a 1-0 lead at the half. Richmond tied things at 1-1 on a penalty stroke with 11:08 to go. Liz Annett scored the game-winning goal with just 4:29 remaining.

Coach Sue Finnie named Annett offensive player of the game and Claye Conkwright defensive player of the game. Conkwright tied her own school record with 32 interceptions/tackles against the Lady Spiders.

Five different players scored for Longwood in the shutout of High Point Saturday. Beanie Felch, Laura Goetz and Conkwright scored first half goals for a 3-0 edge. Celeste Lloyd and Traci Strickland on an assist from Conkwright, closed out the scoring in the second half.

Conkwright was a repeat winner as defensive player of the game while Felch was named the top offensive player. Longwood out-shot High Point 33-2.

"We're playing real well right now," said coach Finnie. "We're taking the shots and the goals will come. Last week was tough for us because we lost to both William & Mary. We got through a tough week."

Soccer Team Wins Southside VA Soccer Tourney; 3rd Straight

Longwood, ranked 12th in Division II, waltzed to its third straight title in the Southside Virginia Soccer Tournament over the weekend, dispatching Slippery Rock 9-0 in first round action Saturday and Shenandoah 2-0 in Sunday's championship tilt.

This week the Lancers, 5-1-1, will face a tough challenge when Division III power Lynchburg, 4-1, visits Saturday for a 3:00 game. The Hornets hung a 3-0 defeat on the 1986 State Champion Longwood team in Lynchburg last season.

In other tournament games Shenandoah edged Hampden-Sydney 1-0 Saturday on a goal by Peter Kim, while the Tigers and Slippery Rock played to a 0-0 tie in the battle for third place Sunday. The Rock took third when it out-pointed H-SC 4-2 on penalty kicks. The game will count as a tie for both teams.

With freshman Ray Jones leading the offense, Dave Goerke the defense, and John Barone having a fine all-around tournament, Longwood lived up to its advance billing as the team to beat.

Jones notched a record five goals in the 9-0 win over Slippery Rock, beating the old mark of four held by Barone (1986), John Kennen (1984) and Tim Brennan (1982). Jones added an assist in Sunday's championship game and was named MVP forward for the tourney.

Goerke notched a pair of shutouts, giving him four for the season. Named the top goalkeeper in the tournament, the senior tri-captain lowered his goals against average for the year to 0.71.

Barone was named Most Valuable Player in the southside event. The sophomore had an excellent tournament, according to coach Rich Posipanko.

"We had two goals coming into the tournament," Posipanko told his team following the championship game Sunday. "We wanted to win the tournament and get two shutouts, and we accomplished both goals."

'87 FOOTBALL

By LOU CIPHER

The Longwood football team continued its winning ways Saturday with a victory over Nebraska 13-6. Starting quarterback Jack Reeder left the game in the first quarter with several bruised ribs suffered during a sack. Reeder, a senior Sports Communications major, will be out of action for three to five weeks. Sophomore David Coe Jr. replaced Reeder and completed 11 of 23 passes for 102 yards and threw two interceptions. Coach Philip Michaels said that "Coe did a good job for us today after Reeder got hurt; we were very fortunate to come out on top of this one. Nebraska has a very tough team this year."

Strong safety Lee Denton scored the only touchdown of the game on a 73 yard interception return. Junior place kicker Nasser Abu-Rish provided the rest of the scoring for Longwood with an extra point and two field goals from 19 and 37 yards.

Longwood's next home game is Saturday against rival Maryland at Lancer Stadium at 1 p.m.: this is the team's first home game of the season. The first 1,500 fans to the game will receive a free Longwood Football banner. This is also the 1987 Homecoming Game, and tickets are expected to go very fast. Advance sales tickets are available at the Ticket Center on campus. Tickets are free to LC students and faculty with school ID.

Women's Tennis

Longwood's women's tennis team fell to Randolph-Macon Woman's College Tuesday and Sweet Briar Thursday by 6-3 scores in season-opening action last week. The Lady Lancers, 0-2, are scheduled to host Mary Baldwin Wednesday at 3:30 and visit Hollins for a 3:00 match Thursday.

Sophomore Laura Crigger was a double winner against RMWC with a victory at No. 4 singles 6-2, 6-2 and a doubles win with partner Lauri Labyak at No. 3. Traci Moore was also victorious by a 6-4, 6-4 count at No. 6 singles.

Susan Miller won two matches Thursday at Sweet Briar. She won No. 5 singles 7-5, 6-1 and teamed with Moore to take No. 3 doubles 6-0, 6-2. Labyak and Crigger won No. 2 doubles by a 6-0, 6-0 count.

Coach Bill Moore feels his team has solid depth and balance, but may lack strength at the top of the ladder.

"We're missing our top two players from last year, but we've played pretty well thus far," said the coach.

Intramural Update

By CHRIS DOUGLAS

The Division of Intramural and Campus Recreation has gotten off to a good start with three sports well underway. Men's Flag Football has 9 teams in the "A" league, they are: Total Package, Keggers Boinkers, Hard Times, Phoenix, Alf's Bunch, Tabb II, Pi Kaps, and Tekes. The "B" league has 8 teams, they are: Deltas, Full Tilt, Crows, Bomb Squad, Phoenix II, Death Tongue, Tabb I and the Gang from Curry. Women's Bowling started with 12 teams but only 6 teams: Dreamgirls, Strikers, Tabbers II, Sweetstuff, Fitness Fighters, and Smigas, are left. Men's 3-on-3 Basketball started Thursday night w/15 teams entered.

Applications are now available in Iler for Men's Bowling, 2 on 2 Volleyball (men's and women's), Women's Flag Football, Coed outdoor Volleyball, and applications for Volleyball officials.

In the coming weeks will be Arm Wrestling (men's and women's), Men's Indoor Soccer, Women's Volleyball and men's and women's Pool, Mixed Tennis Doubles, Coed Pickleball, and Coed Strongest Team are coming up for weekend events.

Men's Golf

By MIKE McGRATH

This year's 1987 Men's Golf Team faces a rebuilding year. The team was hard hit by graduation last May. The 1986-87 team was probably the best in Longwood's history. This year, Coach Steve Nelson has to start from scratch. There are only two returning golfers from last year: Kevin Haskins, and Kevin Hare. The rest of the team will be newcomers to Longwood Golf. Coach Nelson expects good things from freshman Jeff Smiley and the other newcomers, including Hank Kim, Dan Ford, John Holmes, and Greg Boyce. Coach Nelson expects it to be a difficult but learning year. We had great ability last year," stated Nelson, "and that's hard to replace."

LOW TURNOUT HAMPERS AXP CHARITY EFFORT

By MATT PETERMAN AND CATHY GAUGHRAN

Despite good weather and great music, the AXP's experienced an unbelievably low turnout for their charity event this weekend.

Expected attendance for the bash was to be in the thousands. It was hoped that extensive publicity on other college campuses and metropolitan area radio stations would spur roadtrips to Longwood for the weekend. Apparently this exposure was not enough, as the AXP's incurred a sizable loss.

Despite the low attendance, Farmville AID was a success in every other way. All the bands came and played on schedule. "The music was great," commented John Haas, a student spotted at the bash. "If they do it again, this is where you will find me," said Cathy Brown.

Many involved in the project blamed competing events like FiJi Island at Hampden-Sydney and other scheduled happenings for the low turnout. The possibility of a second Farmville AID is in the works, though nothing is certain at this time. "I want to get in touch with someone who is in charge of Oktoberfest for a repeat event, perhaps in the lower dining hall," said Tom Harrison, the AXP philanthropy officer.

Commentary – It is nice to know that the lack of interest on the part of their fellow students has not dampened the spirits of the Alpha Chi Rho fraternity.

Personals Conundrum Prompts Shift In Rotunda Policy

By MATT PETERMAN

Several controversies stemming from the use of The Rotunda's personals section gave way to drastic policy changes at an emergency meeting late Wednesday night. The Personals, a feature of the weekly paper found itself intangled in a cycle of unanswerable enigmas, which intiated accusations and actions in the Longwood College community.

The main controversy centered around an incident occuring Saturday night on the Kappa Delta Hall. The TKE letters were spray-painted on the recently painted Kappa Delta crest located on the hall wall. The perception was given that an alumni of Alpha Sigma Alpha sorority and friends perpetrated the activity, though the perception could not be independently confirmed. A member of the ASA sorority, who wished to remain anonymous, said: "I'm confident nobody in my sorority would vandalize another sorority. It's just stupid!"

The action–which brought sharp criticism from all in the greek community–prompted "Your Fellow Sorority Greeks," who obviously believed the perception, to submit a personal that sparked a fire of controversy in all circles of the Longwood campus. The personal, addressed to ASA: "Rush week used to represent Greek unity, not vandalism and back stabbing," was inadvertantly printed with a bulk of personals received at the last moment.

When the papers were circulated early Tuesday morning, the reading of the personals left the ASA sorority in a quandary which intiated a response. Whether acting on authority of the sorority leadership or not, an ASA member captured most of The Rotundas and hid them in one of the members closet.

The absence of the recently circulated papers left the Editors scrambling for an explanation as many inquiries were received. After many hours, the paper was discovered by staff members and all went back to normal on the surface. Accusations about the author and why it was printed went on down below.

The fact that an editing error had been committed seemed too convenient for those involved but a Rotunda statement issued by the Editors, cited the error as "unfortunate and though inadverdent it is controversy and difference of opinion that really commands public attention." The statement further read that "The Rotunda does strive to exercise its responsibility to be fair and accurate . . . (and) Americans are indeed fortunate to live under a political system that not only allows but encourages controversy." The Rotunda extended its apologies "in a cautious manner as The Rotunda is a student newspaper and the views expressed " 'do not necessarily reflect those of the Longwood College administration, staff, or student body as a whole.' " The personal that started this controversy was one student's view, though maybe not the "whole," nonetheless, that person has the right to hold that view.

This incident and other stemming from the use of the personals as a way to embarrass or injure will not happen and if it does at least responsibility will be noted.

The new Rotunda policy requires all personals to be written with name, box number, and The Rotunda reserves the right to edit or not print any personal submitted for any reason. The basis of the new policy will hopefully curb these people who are planning a non-responsible personal away from writing them. The box number and names will not be printed but merely used as a reference.

Catch The Avery Collection At Bedford - Quick!

Selected works by the 20th-century American artist Milton Avery are on exhibit in Longwood College's Bedford Gallery through October 2.

The exhibit, sponsored by the Longwood Fine Arts Center and the Department of Visual and Performing Arts, includes 24 of Avery's oils, watercolors, and prints.

"The privilege to exhibit such a large number of Avery's works is a real plus for Longwood," said Dr. S.C. McCarter, head of the Department of Visual and Performing Arts.

"This artist's works are not normally exhibited at a college," McCarter said. "We are most grateful to Sally Avery (the artist's widow) and to Fay Gold, of the Fay Gold Gallery in Atlanta, for their help in making this exhibit possible."

The Milton Avery exhibit is open to the public during the following Bedford Gallery hours: Monday-Friday, 9 a.m. to 12 noon and 2 to 5 p.m.; Saturday and Sunday, 2 to 5 p.m. Evening visits to the gallery may be arranged by appointment; cal 392-9359.

SAM Discusses Future Plans

By MATT PETERMAN

The Society for Advancement of Management (SAM) held its third meeting last Thursday and discussed the future goals and plans of the organization.

After the first order of business, which consisted of handing in of National and Local dues, the discussion moved to SAM's involvement in the Oktoberfest parade. After many minutes of debate, it was decided that marching in the parade would spread its resources to thin and it would be better to concentrate on its Oktoberfest booth.

It was decided among the members that Coke would be sold at the booth, but the selling of hot dogs was not ruled out. Members then volunteered their time as to when they could work during Oktoberfest.

Then the conversation shifted to the making of T-shirts for each of the members. Many suggestions were raised to set the plan in motion and the final decision is pending.

SAM, a relatively new organization on campus, is in its second year and continues to grow in many ways. Though the final membership count is not conclusive, it is surmised to have grown from last year, the question is, by how much. SAM has scheduled its next meeting for October 8 at 6 p.m.

Editorial

I would like to address the subject of uninvolvement in campus life, a discrediting phenomena which seems to be hitting us like the plague lately.

The AXP's spent a lot of time putting together Farmville Aid; a benefit event that could have been lots of fun for everyone who contributed to the cause. I haven't seen the official statistics yet, but from what I saw Saturday, there was not much in the way of participation on the part of the students of Longwood. Granted the beer garden was full, but nobody in there gave a "darn" about the bands that were playing. The AXP's might as well have hooked up a stereo out there on the stage and played some radio station all day long. Nobody would have known the difference.

Perhaps participation this weekend was low because the proceeds from the event were not for the benefit of the students themselves, but for a bunch of people they don't know a thing about. Maybe we'll find out in a couple of weekends if this is true or not — Oktoberfest is for us. How many of us will be here for it?

Chi is an organization whose essential purpose is to promote and maintain a spirit of cooperation among students in every phase of college life. Its aim is to foster respect for Longwood and loyalty to its academic program and extracurricular activities. In fulfilling this aim, Chi hopes to be an organization that supports the entire student body and commits itself to recognizing the efforts of students, faculty, and organizations.

The tangible evidence of Chi's presence on campus includes the signs on sidewalks; walks at night by members robed in the College colors of blue and white; and letters to the student body encouraging support of College and civic functions, as well as academic excellence. The banner of Chi is white with the Gothic letters CHI in blue. Beneath the letters is a figure of the Rotunda whose four columns represent the four phases of student life – social, recreational, intellectual, and spiritual. It appears on special occasions to encourage student support of a campus function.

The real evidence of Chi can be seen in the hearts and minds of those who seek its real purpose of constructive support and cooperation.

Letters to the Editor

Editor,

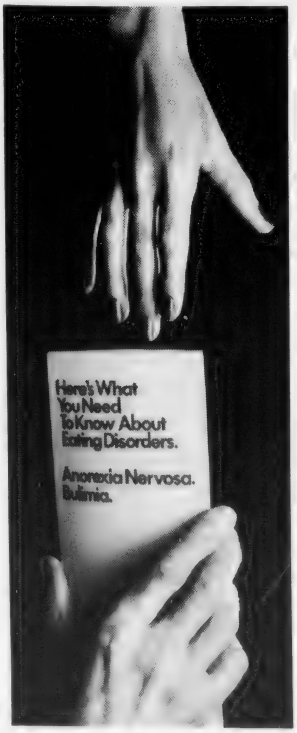
This is in response to the letter to the editor in last week's Rotunda from Gene Brooks of Cumberland, Va.

First of all, I don't know how this man expects to teach his children anything (especially responsible behavior) by taking them to watch professional wrestling matches. If he was offended by anything said by members of the audience, he should have moved to another part of the gym. I would also like to know just how he knew that the people yelling were Longwood students: they might have been some red-necks from Cumberland: LC students were a minority at the event. And, even if they were from Longwood, I don't think that he should hold the actions of "about 10 college students" against the entire school, as there are over 2,700 of us here.

Mr. Brooks also stated that we need the community just as much as they need us. Wake up Gene, we need this community like we need a pair of gloves: they're good to have around, but we don't need them. This community needs the school. Longwood employs over 300 non-students and our money keeps several local businesses from going out of business.

I suggest that Mr. Brooks think carefully about what he writes to the editor in the future. For now Gene, just stay in Cumberland and milk your damn cows. Michael Phillips

A proud Longwood student.



Letter to the Editor,

In the September 22 issue of the Rotunda, a Mr. Gene Brooks of Cumberland, VA, wrote you a letter. He commented that he couldn't believe some of the actions of the students attending the wrestling matches. He stated, "How can a parent teach their kids responsible behavior, if the college students act like this?"

Well, Mr. Brooks. In the first place, what kind of parent takes their kids to a professional wrestling match to learn behavior? I know when I have kids, I'm definitely not going to give them lessons at an event like that. I would also like to correct a point you made. Longwood College doesn't necessarily need this town. Have you ever seen, or could you imagine, what Farmville would be like without the college? Well, I've seen it, and I think the economy here couldn't survive without the students.

In closing, I feel the students here act fine. I feel it's you who should look at the way you act, and how you teach your kids. I also don't think the college will suffer without your support Mr. Brooks!!

Signed,
"A Fine Acting Longwood Student"

Some People Are Dying To Know The Facts About Eating Disorders.

The truth is, bulimia and anorexia nervosa are being diagnosed at an almost epidemic rate. An estimated 15 to 20 percent of all college women are bulimic, and approximately one out of every 100-250 young women suffer from anorexia.

People with bulimia go on periodic eating binges, only to force up or "purge" their food later. Anorectics typically starve themselves to as little as 65 percent of their normal body weight—or even less.

Eating disorders are illnesses, ones that can take over your life. But it doesn't have to be that way—effective treatment can turn your life around.

Don't wait. Get the facts now. Clip and mail this coupon, or call Dominion Hospital at 536-2000 for a free booklet.

By CINDY GOOD

On Monday evening from 8:00 to 10:00 Longwood listeners are in for a "new" treat on WLCX. Jim Long's "New Music" show offers the best in what many people call progressive tunes of the '80's.

I asked Jim to explain a little more about the music he plays and how he got involved with our college radio station. He said that it all started when his older sister, who attended William and Mary a few years ago, brought home music taped off the air from WCWM, the W and M Station. The music, he later explained, was "the cutting edge of top 40," and it caught Jim's attention. Jim's appreciation for this "new music" grew, and when he came to Longwood he wanted to share some of his favorite music with others through our radio station.

Unfortunately, Longwood's station, then known as WUTA, had been shut down for several semesters due to management problems. So, in the spring of 1985, Jim and a handful of other radio enthusiasts helped get the station back on the air. Jim told me that one thing he will always remember about his radio experience here is that during the first semester in which WUTA was re-organizing there were no formal training procedures. He was briefly "trained", auditioned, and put on the air all at the same time! "We did it that way back then" he commented, "I remember I was extremely nervous."

Some of the bands you will probably hear Jim play on his show are The Cure, Japan, The Human League, Echo and the Bunnymen, Depeche Mode, and Cabinet Voltaire.

Jim, who is now a junior, took over the position of WLCX's Chief Engineer in the spring of 1987. Keeping up the maintenance of station equipment and doing production are Jim's two main jobs as Chief Engineer. Production involves taping public service announcements (PSA's) and station promos to be played back later over the air.

During the summer of '86 Jim worked as a news reporter and morning news anchorman for a Lynchburg station where he gained valuable radio experience. He said that eventually managing his own radio station is a very real career goal for him. As a sports communications major, who has, as one listener put it, "a good radio voice," Jim hopes to go "as far as (he) can in the radio business."

Player Of The Week

Known for her aggressive style of play, Bingler has drawn praise from coach Sue Finnie for her hustle and ability.

"Diane has provided us with excellent leadership," said the coach. "She plays all out from start to finish."

Bingler is a graduate of Western Albemarle High School.

Senior co-captain Diane Bingler broke the Longwood field hockey record for interceptions/tackles in a game with 33 against Eastern Kentucky Saturday, and for her performance, Bingler has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period September 20-27. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

Bingler broke the record in a 1-0 loss to Eastern Kentucky, surpassing the interceptions/tackles mark of 32 set by Claye/Conkwright last year. She also scored a goal in Sunday's 6-1 win over Appalachian State and was named defensive player of the game against Eastern Kentucky and in a 6-0 win over Randolph-Macon Wednesday.

A physical education major, Bingler has been a four-year starter with the Longwood hockey team. Last year she received the Olive T. Iler award which is presented to the top rising senior majoring in physical education.

Men's Soccer

Soccer Team Wins

Senior Jeff Robinson and freshman Ray Jones had a goal and an assist each, teaming up to lead Longwood to an impressive 3-0 soccer victory over highly regarded Lynchburg Saturday afternoon.

The Lancers, now 6-1-1 and ranked 12th in last week's ISAA-Gatorade Division II poll, visit Virginia Military for a 4:00 meeting Tuesday, host Hampden-Sydney at 4:00 Thursday and visit Mount St. Mary's for a 3:00 contest Saturday in games this week.

Women's Tennis

Longwood's women's tennis team fell to Mary Baldwin 7-2 Wednesday at home and to Hollins 8-1 on the road Thursday in action last week. This week coach Bill Moore's squad hosts Virginia Wesleyan Monday and Washington & Lee Wednesday.

Longwood, 0-4, did not play well against Mary Baldwin, according to Moore.

"Our fall schedule is always tough, but I felt we should have given Mary Baldwin a better match Wednesday.

The one bright spot for the Lady Lancers was sophomore Laura Crigger who won both her singles matches to up her season record to 3-1.

LANCER BASEBALL TEAM SPLITS WITH VCU

Longwood's baseball team split a twinbill of fall scrimmages with Virginia Commonwealth Sunday afternoon at The Diamond, losing the opener 8-2, but claiming the nightcap 9-4 behind a nine-inning performance by sophomore pitcher Franklin Watson.

Hockey

Longwood's field hockey team shook off the effects of a disappointing 1-0 loss to Eastern Kentucky Saturday and bounced back to whip Appalachian State 6-1 Sunday in Boone, North Carolina, ending the week with a 2-1 record and an overall mark of 5-2.

Congress Wants War Powers Act Invoked

By MATT PETERMAN

☐ Congress will begin this week to debate whether to force President Reagan to invoke The War Powers Act. The act requires the President to inform Congress forty-eight hours after imminent danger has been experienced, as is the case in the Persian Gulf.

If the act is invoked, Congress could restrict the U.S. convoy operations in the Gulf. The fear of growing hostilities after the U.S. captured and destroyed an Iranian ship laying mines in the gulf, has worried many on Capitol Hill. Also, in one thirty-six period five ships were attacked around Kharg Island, a key Iranian oil transport site.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinburger thinks the idea is "absurd" and not necessary, holding to the view of the administration that the act is unconstitutional. John Warner, Republican Senator from Virginia, thinks the timing is bad as the gulf states and allies are becoming aligned with U.S. policy.

☐ The NFL football strike entered its first week yesterday, halting the '87-'88 season, however, if the strike is not resolved by next week, the managers will field free lance teams. The owners have said they will not begin talks until the end of next week, but that was not final.

The main argument centers around free agency, the ability of a player to negotiate with any team under his terms while having no obligations to his present employer should a better deal be made; share of T.V. revenue contracts, and the establishment of a better pension plan.

☐ After two weeks of hearings, the chances that Judge Robert H. Bork will be confirmed by the Senate will come down to the wire with the hearings finally coming to an end.

Senator John Glenn, democrat of Ohio, conceded Sunday that the "vote on Bork is coming down to the last four of five persons that haven't made up their mind yet." Vice President Bush will be on hand to cast the deciding vote, if it is a 50-50 tie. The White House realizes that Bork's testimony has not been the deciding factor, but they are not going to give up on the nomination and will actively lobby the swing votes that are still in Congress.

The latest Louis/Harris poll indicates that the tide is going against him. It showed that 57% believe his confirmation should be rejected, 29% support it and 14% are undecided.

LET THE Oktoberfest FUN BEGIN!

By JUDY FLANAGAN

Oktoberfest '87 will be taking place this wekend, October 9 and 10. As well as all the traditional events which always occur, new events are also scheduled this year.

Friday at 3 p.m. the fun begins with Color Rush and the Paint Battle on Wheeler Mall These are two events which compromise a duel between the green and whites and red and whites. Color rush is a series of games and relays between the two teams. For Paint Battle, both teams have a trash can, each filled with their respective color paint (either green or red), and they have an allotted time to throw their paint on their teammates. When time runs out, the referees decide on a winning team by which one has the most paint on them.

That night, the group of the hit single On the Dark Side, "John Cafferty and the Beaver Brown Band" will perform in Lancer Gym. Tickets are now on sale for $6 until supplies last.

Bright and early on Saturday morning, prospective students and their parents will be parading on campus, attending a variety of programs on topics such as choosing a major, financial aid, and housing. At the same time the tours are being given, the Rugby tournament will be taking place: 9-12 noon.

The Lady Lancers Field Hockey team will be challenging UMBC at 10 a.m. on Barlow Field. There will also be alumni games taking place in various sports: Golf at 10:00 (Pres. Golf Course), Field Hockey at 11:30 (Barlow Field), and Soccer at 12:00 (First Avenue Field).

At 11:45, the Oktoberfest Parade of approximately 20 floats will begin on Main Street.

Glenn Gilmer and James Gross rehearsing a scene from "A Midsummer Night's Dream". The play will run Oct. 7th - 10th in Jarman Auditorium. Curtain time each evening - 8:00. Students free with I.D.

The opening of the Midway takes place following this. On the Midway on Lankford Mall will be booths, filled with games and different kinds of food. "There is an expectancy of 32 booths this year," noted JoJo Katz, President of Geist and Geist member in charge of Oktoberfest '87. "Almost every organization gets involved since it's a major fund raiser." The Midway will officially be opened by a releasing of balloons by the Meister, dressed in his German attire, being Mr. Haga from Farmville this year. There will be almost a dozen performances from 12:00 - 4:00 p.m. taking place under the balcony of Lankford. From 2:00-5:00 p.m. you can catch more Rugby on Iler Field before the play at 8:00 p.m, "A Mid-Summer Night's Dream," in Jarman Auditorium. But, if you'd rather, you can join three bands from Richmond at 8:00 p.m. in Lancer Gym. "The New Keys," "B-Time," and "Not Even" will be performing for a ticket price of $3 a person.

The week prior to Oktoberfest, one should be "catching the spirit" by participating in daily events. The dining hall this year will be looking like a veritable German "Brauhaus", with a variety of flags from different German cities hanging form the walls. T-shirts will also be on sale all over campus for $9 and cups for just 75 cents.

Geist has always put on Oktoberfest and runs the campus-wide event annually. This year Geist rounded up a steering committee crew consisting of people from a variety of organizations on campus. Together they helped to put on this festive weekend. Geist got help this year because, as Katz put it, "it's a campus-wide event; we're not holding our own little baby." Geist advisors, Kandi Dowdy and Nancy Shelton, helped everyone involved to get going. Katz stated, "We had lots of meetings with them, offering us advice and suggestions about what to do."

Geist has been meeting since February '86 on a successful Oktoberfest. They have been putting in a lot of time and energy, and we wish them the best of luck this weekend, as well as all our sports teams.

Be prepared not to be able to find a parking space this weekend, for Katz said, "It's a good weekend to keep everyone here. Hardly anybody goes home, and everyone is involved in some way."

SPIRIT WEEK SCHEDULE

Tuesday: Wear Your Oktoberfest shirt! Lip Synch nite at Lancer Cafe.

Wednesday: Wear your Class Colors Day! Relay Race-A-Thon on Stubbs Mall 6 p.m.

Thursday: Tacky Tourist and Beach-bum Day. Klowns Performance at Lancer Cafe 8 p.m.

A Colorful Battle Of The Classes

The messy tradition lives on. Each year, on the Friday before Oktoberfest, the clash of the classes manifests itself in a very funny, very messy Paint Battle on Wheeler Mall. This year, Color Rush/Pain Battle is on Friday, Oktober 9 at 3 p.m. on Wheeler Mall.

Even-numbered graduation years ('88, '90) are the Red and Whites. People who graduate in '87 are Green and Whites. On Friday, to kick-off the spirited Oktoberfest weekend, the Red and Whites and Green and Whites will battle it out to see which group splashes the most of its color onto the other team.

Come play in the messy spectacle. Let out those midterm frustrations by pouring paint on your friends (and enemies). Wear old clothes and come have fun at Paint Battle '87.

For more information, see Dave Larson or a member of GEIST.

WEEKEND PARKING LOWDOWN

Starting October 8 there can be no parking on south Madison St. between Pine and Griffin Boulevard. That's where the Oktoberfest booths will go.

There will also be no parking on Pine St. between High St. and Madison Boulevard on Saturday, October 10, because of the parade.

Dorm students may park in the day student parking lot on Friday, October 9, after 3 p.m. Campus police urge students to take extra precautions this weekend to insure safety of their cars. Lock all doors, put any valuable items in the trunk out of sight. Students who see any suspicious people hanging around the cars should call campus police. According to the campus police 68% of campus thefts last year were preventable.

Editorial

On my way to the Rotunda office this Sunday, I noticed a vandalized snack machine in the basement of the Lankford Building. Apparently, somebody had thrown a garbage pail through the glass front of it to satiate a case of the munchies sometime over the weekend. Every bit of glass was removed from the front of the machine and scattered across the floor. All the vending wares were gone.

I went and talked to Rick Johnson, Director of ARA Services, who stock these machines on campus. Every one of those machines costs over $2,000.00, not taking into account the price of the food they contain.

Vending machine vengeance is quite apparent around campus - you can't help but notice vandalized snack machines. The most frequent "victims" are the Cunninghams front lobby machine and the one in the alcove down the hall from the President's office. Usually, though, the levels of violence and destruction are nowhere near those of this weekend's incident.

Who ends up paying for these pranks and "get-fat-quick" follies? The students. Basically, the perpetrators themselves are indirectly paying for their ill-doings in the long run, while at the same time requiring their schoolmates to also help pay for their crimes.

Are you, the students, going to put up with this?

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

I am writing this letter in reference to the D. J. In The Spotlight article published in the September 29 issue of the Rotunda. I was reading the article at breakfast Tuesday and discovered that there were a few untruths or half truths. I feel the need to write this article and set the record straight.

It was not Jim Long and "a handful of radio enthusiasts" who reorganized and established the radio station as a viable media source on campus. It was Sonny Merchant, a Senior, who took the initiative as a Freshman in the Spring of '85 and invested countless hours trying to get WUTA, now WLCX, on its feet again. He met with administrators and faculty and held innumerable meetings trying to establish a budget and administrative support for the station. I would like to add that Sonny has been the only General Manager for the radio station since it resumed broadcasting on this campus. He has done a fine job managing and providing this campus with diverse programming.

The second falsehood I would like to bring to your readers' attention is Mr. Long's comment on the informal training of its new broadcasters. The new members of the radio station were not "briefly trained, auditioned and put on the air all at the same time." A few of my friends were some of the first broadcasters on the "New WUTA." They went on the air with a more experienced D. J. until they felt comfortable and relaxed on the air. It was at this time that they were allowed to go solo.

I would like to add in closing that Ms. Good should have taken the time to confirm her information before having it printed for the entire campus to read as fact. Credit should go where credit is deserved.

A Student for Truth in Journalism

Dear Editor:

Last weekend, Longwood was the site of Farmville Aid. It was a good idea and a great cause. Why was there a "Greek only" keg party on Friday? Is that the only means the IFC, Panhellenic Council, fraternities and sororities can come up with to get members? I was just wondering.

Everyone is concerned that a large number of students go home on weekends. The problem is very simple. Longwood College gives the average student a turbo enema (get out your dictionary and look that up) and the "Greek" organizations provide the hot water.

Earthquakes, Bork, And New Pact

By MATT PETERMAN

☐ Southern California was rocked last Thursday by an earthquake that measured 6.1 on the richter scale and claimed 3 lives. Damages for the quake have reached over $100 million dollars.

The earthquake was followed by an unusual aftershock sequence, which has involved over 100 aftershocks. The most powerful of the aftershocks took place Sunday measuring 5.3 on the richter scale.

This earthquake brought back memories of the 1971 earthquake that measured 6.5 on the richter scale and caused the death of 64 people resulting in billions, of dollars of damages.

Most of the injuries in Thursday's quake were minor and included broken bones, cuts, and sprains of various types.

Experts are predicting a catastrophic earthquake in the next 20 years, and believe this one is making people more aware of the threat.

☐ President Reagan asserted in his weekly radio address that Liberal opponents of Supreme Court Justice nominee Bork are trying to "Thwart the desire of the American people" by blocking jurists who will bring criminals to justice.

The Judicial Committee is scheduled to vote on the nomination today, and many predict he will not be recommended to the Senate.

Even so, Reagan will continue the fight to have him confirmed. Those undecided are beginning to announce how they will vote seem to be falling on partylines.

☐ The U.S and Canada have reached a tentative free trade agreement that would eliminate tariffs between the two countries and give unique investment opportunities for both sides.

In 1986 the U.S. and Canada exchanged $124.5 billion worth of goods and services making them the world's largest trading partners.

ROTC Land Navigation

By TONYA GREENE

Saturday morning, Sept. 26 the R.O.T.C. MS 2's, 3's, and 4's left at 9:00 a.m. for Fort Pickett in Blackstone. Their day included a land/navigation exercise and a ranger challenge exercise.

The land navigation exercise consisted of a 5,000 meter course of rough terrain. They used maps and compasses to get to each checkpoint on the way.

For the ranger challenge exercise, the MS 2's, 3's, and 4's practiced target shooting with M16's. This practice was for the annual nationwide target competition. The winners will go to Fort A.P. Hill to compete for finals. Last year Longwood got as far as the semi-finals in Delaware. The ranger challenge exercise also included a fast rope brigade building contest, assembling, and disassembling of weapons, and a practice of throwing fake hand grenades for distance and accuracy. The day ended up with an enjoyable 10,000 meter jog with a 25 lb. ruck sak.

On October 9 the freshmen, sophomore and lower division classes will have a UH-1 helicopter come from Fort Lee fo cadet orientation flights.

The Army ROTC prograi is opened to all qualified peop who are interested. If you ai interested in finding out mor about ROTC, just come up t third floor East Ruffner an talk to Captain Fox or any the other officers up ther They are there to help you. Th program offers two and three year scholarships as well a opportunities to become commissioned officer in th United States Army.

Accepting The Challenge

By LISA ELBON '87
Longwood Admissions Counselor

Seniors, are you feeling as if you really should be looking for jobs but don't know where to start? Well, Challenge '88 gives you a great incentive to begin your job search, complete your resume, and take advantage of the services of Longwood's Career Planning and Placement Office.

Challenge '88 is a liberal arts career fair which will be held on November 18, 1987 at the Radisson Hotel in Lynchburg. Seniors from nine colleges will have the opportunity to meet with representatives from over fifty corporations and businesses such as IBM, Thalhimers, Sovran Financial Corporation, and Phillip Morris U.S.A. Each employer will have an information sheet on file in the OCPP. This sheet gives pertinent details about the company and what kinds of employees it is looking for.

Each participating senior must pay a $5.00 registration fee and submit thirty copies of his or her resume by October 7 to the OCPP. These resumes will be sent to potential employers who, in turn, might request an interview with a student at Challenge '88.

As a Longwood graduate who participated in Challenge '87 last year, I encourage all seniors to take advantage of the benefits of attending this Career Fair. Challenge '88 is a great chance to ask questions and get information fro prospective employers i various career fields. It give one the incentive to start his/h own job search, complete resume and brush up o interviewing skills. Wh knows?... It could lead to a jo offer!

To register for Challenge '8 or for more information contac the OCPP.

Longwood College has the largest number of students in its history, 2,978. The previous high was 2,789, last year.

Longwood also received a record number of applications for the freshman class, 3,020, for an entering class of approximately 760. Applications are up 10.6 percent over last year's 2,730 which had been the highest ever.

"All of our residence halls are in full, very full use," said Phyllis Mable, vice president for student affairs. She noted that 34 students were housed temporarily at two area motels.

The transfer enrollment is up about nine percent over last year. Longwood has entered into "articulation agreements" with five community colleges to simplify the transfer process.

The number of male students is up slightly (three percent). Males comprise about 32 percent of the freshman class.

Students interested in working on the 1987-88 Virginian yearbook who could not make it to the Oct. 1st meeting should send their name and campus address/phone to The Virginian, Box 1134.

PIZZA PIG OUT

Alpha Phi Omega at Longwood College will sponsor the first "Pizza Pig Out" at 9:00 p.m. on October 27 in Lancer Cafe. All groups on campus are invited to enter their two man team for the cost of $15.00. The team that devours the most pizza will be declared the winners. Prizes will be given for first, second, and third place. Look for more info. coming soon.

Broadsides, the campus' student writing tabloid, is interdisciplinary, and will welcome almost any kind of written submission–essays, essay exams, journals, reaction papers, etc.

Here are the dates for publication and their respective deadline:

Broadsides #1: October 30 (submissions by Oct. 16);

Broadsides #2: February 5 (submissions by Jan. 25);

Broadsides #3: April 22 (submissions by April 15).

You may send the manuscripts to Dr. Craig Challender at his faculty mailbox or to his office doorbox (Grainger 109). Thanks.

The Carpenter Center for the Performing Arts is pleased to announce a concert by The Moscow Virtuosi with violin soloist Vladimir Spivakov, October 12 at 8 p.m.

The increasing global interest in chamber orchestras and authentic performances of symphonic masterpieces originally composed for chamber-sized ensembles owes a profound debt to The Moscow Virtuosi, a national treasure of its homeland that is universally regarded and honored by critics and audiences everywhere as among the pre-eminent chamber ensembles in the world today.

This program is made possible in part by a grant from the Virginia Commission for the Arts.

The Moscow Virtuosi tickets are on sale now at the box office and at Ticket Center outlets. Tickets are $12-$15-$20-$25 for the October 12 concert at 8 p.m. For more information or to order tickets by phone call the box office at 782-3900 or Ticket Center 780-3777 or 1-800-448-9009. VISA, MasterCard, American Express, Choice and checks are accepted.

Sale Of State Theater: Pasttime Revisted

By MATT PETERMAN

The sale of the State Theater to The Waterworks Players last week brought back many memories to those students remembering when seeing a movie was just a block away. The old theater located on Main Street was closed when Neighborhood Theatre, Inc., moved last year after completion of the new theaters two miles down the road at Longwood Village Shopping Center.

converted into a bar featuring music videos played on the giant screen. "They've done it (changed theaters into bars) in the D.C. area, I don't know why they couldn't do it here," commented John Hawkens, a Longwood junior.

Waterworks Players, whose new home is the State Theater after a twelve year search, are working on closing the deal to secure it. A $50,000 loan backed by an anonymous group is the

State Theatre on Main Street

"I can remember thinking when they closed the theater, how decentralized businesses were in relation to the campus," said Pam Wingler, a Longwood student. Other students reflected similar views and the problem of transportation as Farmville expands further away from Longwood.

The theater was built 66 years ago for live performances and later movies. It was sold for $75,000 – $25,000 less than its appraised value by the Thalhimers of Richmond.

The sale ended speculation by many Longwood students that the structure would be basis of the deal. Another $25,000 will have to be raised by December 10 to close the deal. The new owner's confidence that the money will be raised is expressed by the sponsoring of try-outs for the play, "Oklahoma."

Many are glad to see the building in use after a year of vacancy. "It just goes to show you that Longwood College isn't the only one expanding its horizons," quiped an unidentified person associated with Longwood. When "Oklahoma" opens it will mark the first time in many many years, the theater's use for live performances.

AMBASSADORS

By KELLY GREENE

The Longwood Ambassadors would like to congratulate their 18 new members: Lynda Chenoweth, Donna Ferrier, Barbara Fitch, Melinda Hopper, Darren McCauley, Jennifer McInnis, Melissa Miller, Tracey Morrison, Denise Owings, Michelle Pointer, Cheryl Ann Simpson, Robert S. Smith, Frances St. John, Timothy Tabler, Michelle Tinsley, Tracey Tolliver, Deborah Vaughan, Petra Walian.

These members had to first apply to be Ambassadors then had to go through interviews. They also had to have good grades and references. The Ambassadors would like to congratulate them on their big honor.

Also, Longwood students, be on the lookout for "Lennie Lancer." Lennie is the new Lancer Mascot designed by Jo Jo Katz.

Scuba Doo....

By Noby Line

Jim Glasser, the Longwood SCUBA Instructor, teaches a beginning class in the fall and an advanced class in the spring. This is Mr. Glasser's 7th year teaching PADI SCUBA diving at Longwood.

The beginning class will go to Gum Springs for their Open Water certification the weekend of October 24-25th. Previously certified divers may go for a quarry fee.

Those who enroll in the advanced SCUBA class, as well as other interested divers on campus, have the opportunity to go to Cozumel Mexico.

Advanced certified divers may arrange with the instructor a specialty program through the regularly scheduled advanced SCUBA class next semester.

Any divers wishing to go on the quarry dive or on the Mexico trip this spring should contact Jim Glasser at 744-7501, or go by the Lancer gym on Monday or Wednesday nights at 7:00. Slots are filling up fast!!!

Hopefully a SCUBA Club will be started up next semester, so keep your eyes peeled.

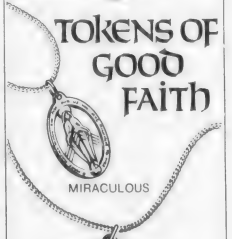
Artist Of The Month

By JAIME HAMPTON

All artists must exhibit – "(it's a) horrible experience that every artist must live through," says Dr. Elisabeth Flynn of the Visual and Performing Arts Department. Longwood's art program holds an Artist of the Month Contest once a month and all art students are not only invited, but are encouraged, to participate.

Dr. Flynn was in charge of the Artist of the Month Exhibit for September (a different faculty member is in charge each month), and is excited about the program. It's been very successful in the past, with fifteen to twenty art students participating each month.

Winners of the September 1987 Artist of the Month competition are:



FIRST PRIZE:
Norma Jeffer

Some People Are Dying To Know The Facts About Eating Disorders.

The truth is, bulimia and anorexia nervosa are being diagnosed at an almost epidemic rate. An estimated 15 to 20 percent of all college women are bulimic, and approximately one out of every 100-250 young women suffer from anorexia.

People with bulimia go on periodic eating binges, only to force up or "purge" their food later. Anorectics typically starve themselves to as little as 65 percent of their normal body weight—or even less.

Eating disorders are illnesses, ones that can take over your life. But it doesn't have to be that way—effective treatment can turn your life around.

Don't wait. Get the facts now. Clip and mail this coupon, or call Dominion Hospital at 536-2000 for a free booklet.

Students are invited to make contributions to the United Way of Prince Edward County. There are many, many needs for people in and around Farmville. I would like our students to show love, spirit, and care for neighbors and help by giving ,50 or $1.00. Bring to my office. I will be sure that you are thanked. Doing something for another person is a commentary on your opportunity and value. (P. Mable)

Superstar Spotlight: Elton John

By MICHAEL PHILLIPS

Most people have a favorite musical performer, be it a group or an individual – somebody that when they release an album, you go out and buy it just because they did it.

I'm that way with the work of a man named Reginald Kenneth Dwight, or, as I'm sure everyone else knows him...Mr. Elton John. I like Elton John because of the variety in his work. He sings sad songs, happy songs, slow songs, and fast songs, and he uses a variety of instruments and sounds in his music.

Elton John was born Reginald Kenneth Dwight in Pinner, Middlesex, England on March 25, 1947. He showed an interest in show business at an early age and started his career by playing sing-along pub songs on an old piano at the Northwood Hills Hotel. In between pub gigs he played for a semi-professional backing group called Bluesology.

As most small-time bands usually do, Bluesology disbanded. Desperate for work, Elton answered an ad for "new talent" in New Musical Express newspaper/magazine. Through this he was given a pile of pages of lyrics written by another unknown, Bernie Taupin, and was told to compose music around them. Unknown to anyone at the time, this was the beginning of a musical partnership that would take the world by storm.

In 1969 Elton John recorded his first album. Unlike most solo artists, he did not title this album after himself: the title of his was Empty Sky, which is also the title of one of the songs on the album. His second album, he titled Elton John, was also released in 1969.

Elton John has released a total of 26 albums that I know of (three of which are double albums), all of which were done in the 18 year period from 1969 to 1987. I'm proud to say that I have 25 of those 26 albums and I do intend to get the one that I do not have. Also, I intend to buy any albums that he may release in the future, and I strongly recommend that everyone else does too; you don't know what your missing.

Superstar Spotlight is a new part of the Rotunda that I hope will catch on and become a regular feature in the paper. Superstar Spotlight will allow people to share their knowledge of a famous person. You don't have to be a member of the Rotunda staff or an English major: if you would like to tell about or praise a famous person, this is your opportunity to do so.

Submit your stories to the Rotunda, LC Box 1133 or place them in the envelope on the door of the Rotunda's Publications Office which is located in Lankford across from the mail boxes.

Player Of The Week

Senior All-American Tina Barrett, who won the individual title in the James Madison Invitational Tournament over the weekend, has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period September 27 to October 4. The honor is chosen by LC's sports information office.

Barrett shot 80-74-76-230 to win the JMU title. She was runner-up in the event the past two years. She carded an outstanding 72-80-71-223 to finish second in the LC Invitational 3 weeks ago.

A three-time All-American and two-time Academic All-American. Barrett has won, over the past two years, two National Golf Coaches Association Division II titles and two Baltimore Metropolitan titles. In June she won the Eastern Amateur Tournament in Charlottesville. A three-time qualifier for the NCAA Women's Golf Tournament, Barrett is a business major at Longwood. She graduated from Perry Hall High School in Baltimore.

Lancer Baseball

Freshman Matt Carlisle was the pitching star and senior Kelvin Davis the leader at the plate as Longwood beat James Madison in the first game of a fall baseball twinbill Sunday in Harrisonburg. Carlisle went the distance in Longwood's 5-4 opening game win while Davis had four hits in four trips with a homer. He had a homer in the second game as well, won by the Dukes 6-4. Robby Smith also had two hits for the Lancers in the opener.

Friday, Longwood fell 7-5 in a single game against Liberty University in Lynchburg. Davis had three hits with a homer in the loss while Robert Jackson and Pete Criscione contributed two hits. The Lancers will take part in the Virginia Tech Fall Classic this weekend.

Women's Tennis

Longwood's women's tennis team won two of three matches last week, beating Virginia Wesleyan 6-3 Monday and Christopher-Newport 8-1 Saturday on the road. Coach Bill Moore's squad, 2-5, fell to Washington & Lee 9-0 in a Wednesday match.

Grabbing singles wins for Longwood Monday were Karla Boggs at No. 3, Laura Crigger at No. 4, Susan Miller at No. 5 and Lauri Labyak at No. 6. Miller teamed with Traci Moore for a win at No. 2 doubles while Laura Vollrath and Linda Swe won for Longwood at No. 3 doubles.

Longwood closes out its fall season with two matches this week. Monday LC visits Meredith and Thursday the Lady Lancers host Randolph-Macon at 3:30.

Football Team Wins Homecoming

By LOU CIPHER

The Longwood Lancer Football Team opened its home season Saturday with a 42-20 victory over Maryland in the 1987 Homecoming Game. "This was a very important game for us; we had to win big. The first home game of the season and Homecoming, the team and the fans were ready for this one," said head coach Philip Michaels after the win.

The Lancer's record for the season is now 3-0-0. Going back to the 1985 season, Longwood is currently on a 23-game winning streak and with a 67-0-4 record since 1982 (the first season of LC football): the team is on a 71-game unbeaten streak (the longest in the nation). The Lancers will try to lengthen both streaks on Saturday when Oaklahoma comes to Farmville and Lancer Stadium.

Cantlay Wins Longwood-Southside Tennis Tourney

By SONYA HUGHES

Hampden-Sydney faculty member David Cantlay won the men's singles title in the Division A bracket in the seventh Longwood-Southside Tennis Classic September 24-27 at Longwood College. The three-day tournament included over 60 total entries.

Hockey Team Tops Wake, Season Record Now 6-2

By ELMER "E. T." TOLENTINO

The Longwood field hockey team upped its record to 6-2 last Tuesday by defeating Wake Forest University 3-1. It was the first meeting between the two schools in Longwood's 61 years of field hockey. The Lady Lancers outshot the Demon Deacons 57-23.

Sophomore Diane Brown scored the only goal of the first half off of an assist by Laura "Beanie" Felch, also a sophomore. In the second half, Longwood got goals from sophomore Laura Goetz and Laura Felch with assists from sophomore Liz Annett and senior Traci Strickland. Getting the win, in goal, was sophomore Kim Howells.

The Lady Lancers will travel to Duke University on Tuesday to take on the Lady Blue Devils, and on Friday to Georgetown to take on the Hoyas. Saturday, the Lady Lancers will be back home to host the Lady Retrievers of UMBC at 10:00. A Longwood field hockey alumni game will follow at 11:30 as part of the Oktoberfest celebration.

Lady Ruggers Beat JMU 19-8 In First Game Ever

This past Saturday Longwood College Women's Rugby Football Club played its first official game against the women from James Madison University. JMU's veteran club anticipated an easy victory over the newly formed club from Longwood. Unfortunately for JMU, Longwood showed up ready to make a name for itself in Women's Rugby.

The game started and Longwood meant business early. L.C. capitalized on a JMU penalty ten meters out with the forwards pushing the ball into the try zone. Ann Secules put the ball down for the first score of the game. Chris Anderson kicked the two-point conversion and Longwood took a 6-0 lead.

Shortly after, Longwood again took advantage of a JMU penalty. Ann Secules and Kerri Thoreson pushed the ball in with the aid of the Longwood pack for another try. Again with her golden foot, Chris Anderson kicked the conversion and Longwood took a 12-0 lead. This ended a Longwood dominated first half.

JMU fought back in the second half, scoring two tries and converting neither bringing the score to 12-8. JMU's hopes for coming back were crushed as Terry "Pippy" Pugh shed tacklers on a forty meter dash for L.C.'s third try.

Chris Anderson added a three-point penalty kick late in the game. Longwood won 19-8.

This victory was accomplished through hard work on and off the field by members of the newly formed club. We would like to thank all the fans who come and supported the club on its awesome victory.

Lady Golfers Top JMU Tourney

Longwood won the James Madison Invitational women's golf tournament for the third year in a row Friday through Sunday carding a 331-319-325-975 to out-distance second place Penn State (988) by 13 strokes. The 54-hole tournament was played at Spotswood Country Club.

Leading the way for the Lady Lancers was three-time All-American Tina Barrett who shot 80-74-76-230 to capture the individual title, after finishing second the past two years.

Also playing well for Longwood were: Gretchen Pugh, 78-81-83-242, who tied for third place and Tammy Lohren, 84-81-85-250 (10th). Marcia Melone shot 89-88-81-258 to tie for 18th and Ashley Warren was 25th at 92-85-87-264. Playing as individuals for Coach Barbara Smith's squad were Kim Poirier 86-91-92-269, who tied for 31st, Leigh Russell 84-88-92-271 and Libby Moore 93-93-91-277.

Men's Golf Team Takes Eighth

By SONNY MERCHANT

In its third competition of the fall season, the Longwood men's golf team recorded an eighth place finish in the Old Dominion Golf Club Tournament at the Sleepy Hole Club in Portsmouth, VA last Monday and Tuesday.

The tournament saw marked improvement in the performance of freshman Jeff Smiley who led the Lancers with an 89-77-166. Coach Steve Nelson said he was very pleased with Smiley's second round play, the best performance of the fall season for the team so far.

The rest of the Lancer scores were as follows: Kevin Hare and Kevin Haskins 84-92-176, Hank Kim 94-84-178, Dan Ford 88-93-181 and John Holmes 96-103-199.

The Lancers will be hosting the Dick Williamson Alumni Match at Longwood Golf Course October 10.

Soccer Team Celebrates 10th Anniversary

Saturday will be an important day for alumni and supporters of the Longwood soccer program. Longwood will celebrate its 10th anniversary of soccer with an Alumni Game and a reception for alumni, parents, current players and friends.

The Lancers have compiled a 99-63-18 record after a 7-40-2 start the first three years. Since coach Rich Posipanko's second season in 1980, the Lancers have had seven straight winning records with a 92-33-16 overall mark. Posipanko (96 wins) and Longwood (99 wins) are going for win number 100 this season.

Longwood, currently 8-2-1 and ranked sixth in Division II last week, will try to get win number 100 Wednesday when Mary Washington visits for a 3:30 contest.

Saturday's festivities will begin with a game pitting the alumni against the current Longwood squad at 12 Noon. A reception will follow at 3:00 in the Lankford Building.

Listed below is the 10th anniversary Longwood Soccer team, recognizing the top Lancer booters over the first 10 years.

10TH ANNIVERSARY TEAM

Goalkeeper – Brian Sprinkle, 1981-84, Olney, MD; Rob Liessem, 1983-86, Oakland, NJ.

Midfielders – Mark McArdle, 1982-85, Neptune, NJ; Bill Foster, 1981-83, Newport News, VA; Mike Edge, 1986-, Woodcliff Lake, NJ; Mahfaud Kyoud, 1984-86, Rabat, Morocco.

Forwards – Gus Leal, 1979-82, Rockville, MD; John Kennen, 1983-85, Stony Brook, NY; Mark Kremen, 1983-86; Neptune, NJ; Tim Brennan 1980-83, Upper Dublin, PA; John Barone, 1986-, Neptune, NJ.

Rich Posipanko Commended

By RICHARD "J. O." JONES and ELMER "E. T." TOLENTINO

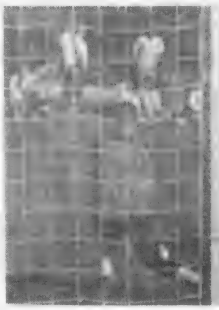
This year's Longwood Lancer men's soccer team is off to another great start. The team is presently 8-2-1, and is playing very well. Some people don't realize that behind every good soccer team is an even better soccer coach; the Lancers are no exception to this rule. The man behind the Lancer's success is Richard J. Posipanko.

"Rich," as he is known to his players, is a 1975 graduate of Slippery Rock University. While at Slippery Rock, Rich earned his B.S. in physical education and played on the 1974 Pennsylvania State champion soccer team. His first coaching job was at Bristol Borough High School in Pennsylvania, and his first college level coaching job was as an assistant at Trenton State for three years. During that time Rich earned his Master's degree. He also has some coaching experience on the professional level, as an assistant with the Houston Dynamos of the ASL.

Rich came to Longwood in 1979 and inherited an 0-14 squad. Since taking over as head coach, he has compiled a 96-43-18 record, including an 83-26-17 record and three state championships since 1981. Posipanko's Lancers have been nationally ranked in the NCAA's Division II polls over the last six seasons, going as high as 6th this season.

Rich is also concerned with the advancement of the young people in Virginia. This past summer, he coached a 17 and under Virginia State team; the team is part of the Olympic Development Program.

The Lancer coach said that "The only goal I had when I came to Longwood was to make the team here a national power. This, I feel I've achieved." When asked if he had any other goals at Longwood, Posipanko answered "I would like us to have a shot at a national championship." Rich would also like more members of the Longwood community to come out to watch the games.



The talent that Rich has brought to Longwood has given him a reputation of or being one of the best recruiters in Division II. He has brought in such powerhouses as John Barone and Dave Goerke from New Jersey, Kenny Lim and Jeff Robinson from Pennsylvania, and Ray Jones from Bermuda. Between 1981 and 1985 Longwood had at least one All-American on the squad and had no less than two All-Region players each of the five years. Being a Division II team, with limited funds, these feats alone are very impressive.

Some of Rich's personal achievements while at Longwood include being voted Virginia Intercollegiate Soccer Association (VISA) coach of the year in 1982 and 1986. He was named the top coach in the Mid-Atlantic Region in 1982. Secretary of VISA since 1982, he has been elected president for 1987.

Richard Posipanko, head coach of the Longwood Men's Soccer Team is hereby commended for an outstanding job of leading the Lancers to a consistant level of excellence and helping the team to get the attention and respect it deserves, not only at Longwood, but all over the country.

Rich, good luck this season and every season that you coach, you and your teams deserve nothing but the best.

Lancer Booters Win 2 Of 3, Host Mary Wash. Wed.

Longwood's soccer team, ranked sixth in Division II last week, won two of three games, beating VMI 5-2 Tuesday and Hampden-Sydney 6-0 Thursday, before falling at 17th ranked Mount St. Mary's 1-0 in the rain Saturday.

Now 8-2-1 and ranked third in the South Region behind Tampa (7-0-1) and The Mount (8-1), Longwood hosts Mary Washington Wednesday at 3:30 in a key Virginia Intercollegiate Soccer Association match-up.

Both Longwood and Mary Washington, 7-1-1, and ranked 20th in Division III last week, are members of the Eastern Division of VISA. The Eagles, who have already lost to Eastern member Virginia Wesleyan, could be eliminated from the race for the VISA title if they lose Wednesday.

"It will be an important game for both teams," said Lancer coach Rich Posipanko. "We'll be trying to bounce back from our loss to Mount St. Mary's and they'll be attempting to keep their VISA hopes alive."

Longwood, which will celebrate its 10th anniversary of soccer Saturday with an alumni game, will also be going for the 100th victory in Lancer soccer history. LC has an overall mark of 99-63-18 since the program began 10 years ago.

Rain, Cold, Hamper Lancers

The Lancers fell at Mount St. Mary's Saturday while playing in a steady rain and cold temperatures. The Mount's Roger Sullivan scored in the first three minutes of the contest on a rocket from about 35 yards out. Neither team was able to score after that.

"Playing conditions were horrible," said Posipanko, "but, that's no excuse. We just got beat. We missed some good opportunities."

Thursday, Longwood got three goals from Ray Jones, two from Nick Ruebel and one from Paul Sidhu while beating neighboring rival Hampden-Sydney 6-0. Jones, who has 16 goals for the season, also added an assist while John Barone chipped in with three assists. Longwood has a 10-2-1 record against the Tigers since 1978.

Goalkeeper Dave Goerke tied the Longwood record for shutouts in a season Thursday with his sixth of the year.

Rich Venere had two goals while Jones, Ruebel and Chris Helmus had one in Tuesday's 5-2 win over Virginia Military. Jones, Barone and Jeff Robinson had assists.

HELP CROP STOP HUNGER

By TAMARA L. BROWN

On October 25, 1987, many Longwood students, as well as members of the Farmville community will be walking six miles to do their share in combatting world hunger.

Participants in the CROP walk for hunger receive pledge sheets on which sponsors pledge money for each mile walked. For example, a sponsor pledging 50 cents would be donating $3 to CROP for the six-mile walk. By enlisting sponsors who pledge funds for every mile or kilometer they walk, CROP walkers have raised more than $31 million to help stop hunger since 1969.

CROP donations are used by the Church World Service (CWS) to meet the human needs of people in more than 70 countries through partner agencies on the scene. However, because CROP events are worldwide, donors may designate their gifts to other aproved international, hunger-fighting agencies.

Family health services, food production, and vocational training are some of the ways CROP event gifts make a difference to persons less fortunate than we are. CWS also supports activities which help bring about more constructive policies affecting human needs.

Delta Sigma Theta Sorority Incorporated is sponsoring the CROP walk on campus. If you are interested in walking, or donating money, please contact Kathleen Watkins, the community service coordinator for the sorority, in Curry 421 or at 392-7818.

One person alone cannot solve the staggering problem of world hunger. Working together with our brothers and sisters on campus, and around the world, we can do more than we can do alone.

THE ROTUNDA

Exclusive: Sports Interview

By CATHY GAUGHRAN and MATT PETERMAN

While attending a Lancer soccer game a few weekends ago, these reporters had the grand opportunity to speak with a few of the Longwood sports department's more valuable and essential employees. The game could not go on without the four boys who describe their job as being to "go on the sidelines, pick up the balls and throw in extras". Yes, the proud, the few, the Lancer soccer team's ballboys.

Will O'Connor, Jason Bartas, Joe Bagby and John Dalton, all 9 years old, spend many an afternoon out on the field next to the old high school on First Avenue doing their job. When asked how they came to be employed by the sports department, Jason Bartas replied "My dad is the dean of Education." Joe Bagby was interested in the employment opportunity offered him by Coach Posipanko because, as he told us," I live down the street and I like to watch the games."

Will O'Connor informed the Rotunda that he and the boys each get a dollar a game from the coach, "and an extra dollar if the games goes into overtime". They get an extra dollar for the second game of a tournament, too.

Ballboy John Dalton, who was out cleaning yards for the afternoon, could not be reached for comment.

A bit of quick research showed that as far as the financial aspects of their current jobs go, the boys are not doing as bad as one might think.

Chatting briefly with Kevin Stanton of the Richmond Braves Diamond Employee office revealed that bat boys at the Diamond are hired from amongest people currently employed there. "It's a prestigeous job," commented Stanton;" Everybody wants it. We can only pick from our hardest workers."

Mr. Stanton quoted starting salaries for the Richmond Braves bat boys as being minimum wage.

The Farmville area offers slim pickings for qualified ball boys: Longwood is the only local establishment that hires ballboys. Hampden-Sydney has a work-study program to fill this position in their sports department.

D.T.'S: THE TRUE STORY

By PAMELA J. WERNER

Since August of 1985, Longwood College students have enjoyed the "night life" at D.T. Bradley's, a local bar and dance club. Recently, however, rumors of the club becoming strictly for those ages 21 and over ran across campus. But don't fret Longwood, D.T.'s isn't changing their tune just yet so, there's no need to start singing the blues.

Ever since the drinking age changed from 18 to 21, the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission began to clamp down on who could get into bars and who could not. A popular solution seemed to be to allow persons 18 and older in to dance but to serve alcohol only to those 21 and older with proper identification. So what's the problem? Underage drinking is still continuing despite the efforts of management.

By tightening security, confiscating phony I.D.'s and dismissing those drinking without proper I.D., D.T.'s has tried to curb the problem. Unfortunately, that isn't enough. The ABC commission is strongly suggesting that D.T.'s welcome only those of legal drinking age. Fortunately for the students, Mr. Dickie Jones, owner of D.T. Bradley's, is fighting for the students on their behalf.

"(The students) are good kids," says Mr. Jones. "They come to dance and have a good time. It's only a few (people) that mess things up for everyone else."

Mr. Jones has also stated that he will not ban the 18, 19, and 20-year-olds from his establishment until there is a law that says he must do so. He will, however, continue to be strict about not allowing underage drinking in D.T.'s. Anyone caught with a phony I.D. will be turned away and their I.D. confiscated. If a college group is hosting one evening and an underage member is caught drinking, the group will not be allowed to host anymore. "Bouncers" and other staff members will also continue to watch for illegal drinkers.

One small change will take place in the establishment's policy. Starting at 10 p.m. each night, if there is a full house, then those of legal drinking age will be allowed in first, and underage patrons will wait their turn. If there is a line outside as people leave, others may go in. All of this will go towards controlling the problem of underage drinking.

Mr. Jones says that the best way students can help to keep D.T. Bradley's open is to not drink in the establishment if they are underage. Hopefully, with the help of the students, Mr. Jones and his staff will be able to keep D.T.'s open to everyone.

SGA: BACK IN ACTION

Upcoming Events

The Student Government Association, coming off of one of its most successful and busiest semesters, is in the process of trying to establish programs that will interfest the students. "We want to do more than just solve problems. We want to take an active role in the educating process," said Ricky Otey, SGA President. "People expect a lot from SGA. Our accomplishments proves they've got a right to expect a lot from us. We've got the task now of living up to our own standards."

SGA will sponsor an OPEN FORUM on Wednesday October 14 at 1:00 p.m. in the VA Room. Items that may be discussed are Parking, Room Inspections, Renovations, and the Longwood Seminar. There will also be a special announcement by J. Paul Hurt, SGA Vice President, concerning the SGA elections to be held on Wednesday November 18. Students are encouraged to attend and to bring questions and concerns.

Any club that would like to appeal for money through the Student Government needs to pick up an appeals application in the information office. This form must be returned to Ricky Otey by Thursday October 15.

There is a new 24 hour study room open for students. It is located in Barlow. Students are encouraged to make use of this new facility.

SGA elections will be held on Wednesday, November 18, 1987. All Student Senate positions, including Honor Board and Judicial Board positions, will be up for election. Anyone interested in running for a position may contact Dr. Jim Crowl.

The next SGA meeting will be held on Thursday, October 22 at 6 p.m. in the Conference Room of Lankford.

ROTUNDA POLICY

Please address contributions to the ROTUNDA, Box 1133. Letters are subject to editing. Please type or neatly print any contributions.

Opinions expressed in the ROTUNDA do not necessarily reflect those of the Longwood College administration, staff or students as a whole.

Deadline for articles is 3:00 p.m. Friday prior to the Tuesday publication date. Contributions handed in within 3 hours before deadline should be placed in the envelope on the Publications Office door in Lankford. Letters, personals, etc. are due on the office door by midnight Sunday.

Editorial

Longwood College looks trashy on many occasions for all the wrong reasons. Is it because Longwood students are natural slobs with no respect for the school they pride themselves in? No! The fact of the matter remains: Longwood College has very few trash cans in which to dispose waste.

Oktoberfest was a disaster with respect to sanitation as litter was scattered haplessly around, void of any home. The trash cans that were around were packed solid with debris, making them a perfect haven for bees who enjoyed them while becoming a public nuisance.

If the school wants the campus beautified, we must start with the basics or all progress will be clouded in a shroud of sprinkled garbage.

INTERFAITH HUNGER APPEAL

WORLD FOOD DAY
OCTOBER 16, 1987

The only real "experts" on hunger are hungry people, and their hunger is caused by poverty. On World Food Day, 1987, the agencies of the Interfaith Hunger Appeal (IHA) ask you to reflect on this statement and support activities that enable people to lift themselves from the conditions that deny them access to food.

The problem of hunger cannot be solved by giving away food, although that may also be necessary in times of emergency. Rather, hunger will diminish only when those in need have the purchasing power and the opportunities to grow or buy their own food - in other words to become self-reliant. Self-reliance in turn, can be achieved only through a process of development in which people work together to remove the barriers - some of them institutional - that prevent the poor from improving their lives. All too often the social and economic growth of societies is achieved at the expense of those who are most in need. The benefits of growth must be spread broadly among all sectors of society.

To foster self-reliance, the agencies of IHA, Catholic Relief Services, Church World Service, Lutheran World Relief, and The American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee, work in partnership with overseas colleagues to provide agricultural training, expand credit opportunities, promote income-generating activities and enhance decision-making skills of poor people. Removing barriers to development and helping to create opportunities allows for the remarkable resourcefulness, wisdom and skills of capable people to flourish. Sharing experiences and conclusions, the agencies of IHA respond to specific needs by acknowledging and building on the talents and customs of their partners in the developing world.

You may be thinking, "But what can I do?" "I am only one person." You can do more than you think by (1) understanding the problems and causes of hunger and actively involving yourself in the development of public policies that address these injustices, (2) organizing or joining campus groups that inform and motivate others to a better understanding of global hunger and (3) upon graduation, involving your corporation, community, and religious organizations in efforts that will make the lives of some 500 million people more humane.

What can you do? You can do a great deal by keeping informed and involved.

Msgr. Robert J. Coll
Executive Director

Last week's issue of The Rotunda reportedly caused a bit of hullaballoo down in the Student Services and Dean of Students' Offices. Apparently, incalculable numbers of freshmen and South Cunningham denizens - some concerned, some irate - were motivated to call and inquire as to the validity of "facts" stated in the Gnupie section of the paper. Catch a clue! Do not, in the future, accept anything printed on a page with a gnu head at the top of it as bonafide fact.

Letters to the Editor

Still in the Spotlight.....

To the Editor:

In response to last week's Letter to the Editor from the "Student for Truth in Journalism", I would like to truly "set the record straight" as far as the radio station is concerned. I have been with the station since its "second coming" back in the Spring of 1985, and I know how things worked.

First off, the editorial stated that Sonny Merchant was the person who took the initiative and got WUTA back on the air. Not true. Granted, it was not a "handful of radio enthusiasts" who got the station started, as the September 29 "DJ in the Spotlight" stated: this statement is inaccurate. But Sonny's part in putting the station back together was not as great as we have been lead to believe. Actually, it was a guy named Gus Sallas who went to all of the meetings with the administration in trying to get WUTA broadcasting again. Sonny was there too, but it was Gus who did most of the talking. Gus has since departed Longwood College. Sonny Merchant did have a part, but that part was only minimal.

Secondly, the letter referred to my recalling the stations training methods for new disc jockeys. The "Spotlight" article quoted me as saying that I was trained, auditioned, and put on the air at the same time, whereas the editorial said, "(new DJ's) went on the air with a more experienced DJ until they felt comfortable and relaxed on the air." This statement and the one I made in the earlier article are synonomous. My training consisted of being told how the equipment worked by an experienced DJ. I was then put on the airimmediately, with the same DJ supervising. That was my training and audition. A lot of other new DJ's on the old WUTA were trained, auditioned, and put on the air in much the same manner.

This is not how we do things now at WLCX. A new DJ must now complete six hours of off the air training and then pass an audition before being allowed to go on the air.

I hope this clears up any false impressions that may have been left by the articles of the past two weeks.

GNUPIE: Freshman Feedback

Dear Editor,

I just read your article about No cars for Freshmen after fall break. Is this a true fact or is it a crude joke. I'm a car owner and I feel it won't change matters. Just face it Longwood, you are going to have to spend money on parking areas for your students. We have had this problem long enough. I also do not feel the police should just blame the freshmen for being wild natured; I know some upper classmen who just fly around here on bikes. Please give us more information soon!

The Longwood College Honor System was founded in 1910 so that high standards of personal integrity may be set in order to provide a healthy community for which students to live in. A community not to be limited or restrained by the low personal values of an undesirable few. Through evolution of the Honor System; it has come to be administered by a twelve member student-elected board, which ultimately receives its power from the President of the College via the Student Government Association.

The Board is charged with several responsibilities, the first of which is the promotion and enforcement of the Honor Code. The Board must interpret and publish the constitution which outlines four provisions prohibiting lying, cheating, stealing, and plagiarism. It must establish procedural guidelines for the effective adjudication of all cases involving an alleged violation of one of these provisions as well. The Board establishes programs and policies for publicity, maintenance, and operation of the Honor System. Finally, it is the Board's responsibility to publicize the results of all hearings within allowable provisions of the Colleges student records regulations.

In an attempt to fulfill our obligations to the Longwood community the Honor Board, in a joint effort with the Director of Student Services, has prepared these results of the 1986-87 academic year, specifically spring semester, and submitted them here for your review.

Remarks or questions concerning this information or in reference to any aspect of the Honor System would be appreciated. Such comments should be directed towards Michael T. Clements, chairman of the Honor Board, P. O. Box 1153, or Joseph C. McGill, Director of Student Services, 1st Floor Tabb office or 392-9210. We hope this information will be useful to you. As well, we urge you to become involved in Longwood and to play an active role in shaping the community in which you live.

Honorably Yours,
The Longwood College

Monster Nessie, Candidate Jesse, And Bork

By MATT PETERMAN

☐According to (AP), "The biggest scientific search for the Loch Ness Monster ended yesterday," resulting in some sonar contacts with large objects, but still no sign of the legend that continues to haunt Scotland.

Sonar showed large blips in the middle of the 754 foot deep loch, the most significant looking like an inverted V 620 feet down. Nessie is believed to be either something left over from pre-historic times or a creature not yet discovered.

The expedition featured about 20 boats who swept the loch with sonar. The three-day expedition carried a price tag of 1.6 million dollars.

☐ Democratic Presidential hopeful, Jesse Jackson declared himself a candidate for President Saturday joining a growing list of Democrats. Many feel he is not electable for one reason or another. Republican Presidential hopeful, Pat Robertson declared his candidacy, along with Vice-President George Bush in recent days. Minority leader of the Senate, Robert Dole, is expected to announce soon.

☐ With the knowledge that Supreme Court Justice nominee Robert Bork will not be confirmed, senators are eager to vote and be done with the issue.

Bork, who decided to stick out the fight, cited that the process must go on and be complete. If Judge Bork is rejected, he will join a list of about ten others who have been nominated but not confirmed.

AFC Is Here To Help

By CINDY GOOD

If you need money, they've got it to give! The Activities Funds Committee (AFC) (formerly the Student Activities Allocation Committee) has a total of $2,000 this year to give to qualifying clubs and organizations on campus.

The AFC was organized last semester after Paul Striffolino, Director of the Student Union, announced during the Longwood leadership convention last February that money was available for student activities.

With campus-wide mixers becoming a thing of the past due to the raise of the legal drinking age, the concern for student activities, especially on weekends, grew. This concern sparked the administration to allocate the $2,000 for organizations to use as seed money to sponsor campus-wide events. It is hoped that through the allocation of funds, more campus-wide activities will provide opportunity for student involvement in Longwood.

Last semester the Activities Funds Committee allocated money to help sponsor events such as the Longwood Men's Club cabin party, ROTC's repelling activities during Spring Weekend, an Easter weekend party in the AXP chapter room, and study breaks with food during exam week. This semester the AFC has given money toward Farmville Aid and several upcoming events.

In order to qualify for funds from the AFC, an organization or individual must be sponsoring an event that all students of Longwood may participate in if they wish. An appropriate "Program Proposal Form" must be filled out by the applying group and submitted to the committee for review at one of the regular meetings.

The remaining dates for the AFC meetings until the end of the Semester are: October 27, November 3, November 17, and December 1. Meetings are held on Tuesdays from 1:30 to 2:30 p.m. in the Student Union conference room.

Proposal forms may be obtained at these meetings, through the Student Union office, or from any committee member. The members for the fall semester are: Terri Pugh, Robin Olmstead, Anthony Booker, William Broaddus, Steve Chalkley, Cindy Good, and Doris Llewellyn.

Your organization can qualify for up to $200 for an event, so hurry and get those proposals in: $2,000 can go very fast!

The deadline for entering the preliminaries of the Miss Longwood Pageant is Friday, Nov. 6. Application forms are available in the Public Affairs Office, second floor of East Ruffner Building.

The Miss Longwood Pageant is an official Miss America Pageant. Preliminaries (not open to the public) will be held on Sunday night, Nov. 22, and Monday night, Nov. 23. Contestants may choose either night. In the preliminaries, contestants will compete in private interview, talent, and swimsuit. The top 10 finalists will perform in the Pageant on March 19.

The winner of the Miss Longwood Pageant is expected to receive a $1,000 scholarship, a $500 cash award, and an all-expense paid week to the Miss Virginia Pageant in July. The first and second runnerup will also receive scholarships. The Miss Longwood Pageant is regarded as one of the best-produced local Miss America pageants in Virginia.

To compete, contestants must be single and never married, between the ages of 17 and 26, a citizen of the United States, a registered student at Longwood, and in good academic standing.

Contestants must have a campus sponsor, which can be an organization, a residence hall floor, or an individual. The sponsor must pay the $15 entry fee by Nov. 13.

The Miss Longwood Pageant has become one of the College's major events, attracting an overflow audience last year.

LONGWOOD BUSINESS INNOVATION CENTER SEEKING INTERNS

By MATT PETERMAN

The Longwood Business Innovation Center (LBIC) has announced four openings in its internship program for next semester. As an intern, one would perform "the day to day activities of the Center and be involved in managerial and technical assistance projects", according to Dr. Larry Minks, Executive Director of the Center.

Students chosen for the internships will not only participate in many aspects of management and gain valuable experience, but also earn three credit hours. Applicants should be from the School of Business and Economics and preferably be attending Longgood in the Fall of 1988 as well.

LBIC opened its doors last year and promotes four primary objectives: To help stimulate economic, industrial, and community development programs, to improve new enterprise formation and development, to enhance the level of productivity and human resource development, and to improve organization development methods and processes.

Throughout the school year, with the help of Longwood Students, LBIC has assisted new and existing organizations in becoming more competitive and prosperous, and has helped them expand.

According to Dr. Minks, "the Center was recently cited in a bulletin by the National Alliance for Business and U.S. Department of Commence as one of the most innovative approaches to rural economic development established in the past year."

To demonstrate its commitment to results, Dr. Minks cited that: "the Center has serviced over 125 client requests since its opening on October 28, 1986. We have also worked with over 25 organizations in providing either project work and/or managerial and technical assistance throughout the region and state."

The Center is currently expanding in many ways. Plans are in the works to branch the Center out to various locations in Southside Virginia. They also include the delivery of "two weekend entrepreneurship courses designed for entrepreneurs and small business managers." These will be delivered around the state. Two major research programs include a Forest Products Industry Project and a Rural Economic Development Monitoring and Research Program.

The Center invites applications for internships for the Spring semester. Application and resumes need to be submitted prior to October 26. Interns this semester include: Sally A. Freeman, Michael S. Grey, Katherine E. Grooms, Tamara C. Jones, Laura Patrice Landers, Diane J. Sage, and Benjamin A. Woodson.

Alcohol Awareness Poster Contest

By CATALINA CABINDA and NIGEL SMITHERS

The Division of Student Affairs is offering the following cash prizes: first place–$100, second place–$50, and third place–$25; for designing and submitting the best poster for promoting Alcohol Awareness. Posters will be judged on four criteria: 1) use of the winning Alcohol Awareness slogan–"See Dick drink. See Dick drunk. See Dick die. Don't be a...Richard Cranium!" 2) creativity, 3) originality, and 4) promoting responsible use or non-use of alcohol. All entries must be submitted to the Student Services Office by 5 p.m. Friday, October 23 to be considered.

Prizes will be given for designing and posting the best bulletin board display which meets the following criteria: 1) creativity, 2) detail, 3) use of the winning Alcohol Awareness Week slogan, and 4) promoting responsible use or non-use of alcohol. Prizes for this contest include: 1st place–$100, 2nd place–$50, and 3rd–2 large pizza with any two toppings from Lancer Cafe. Social Workers Broadening Horizons

By TAMARA L. BROWN

What comes to mind when you hear the words "social worker"? Do you see someone counseling a welfare mother in a run-down government office? If so, you're not alone in your perception. But you're wrong.

Today, 10% of U.S. social workers work in private practice as psychotherapists or family counselors, and 19% work in hospitals. Some teach vocational skills to the blind, run support groups for new parents, or manage chapters of the United Way. A social worker might be the personnel director at a Fortune 500 company.

There are approximately 400,000 social workers in this country. Only about one-fourth of them work in social service agencies. Even there, jobs are more varied and less stereotyped than most people realize.

Although early social workers worked exclusively with the poor, today they address many issues that cut across socioeconomic lines such as child abuse, rape, alcoholism, drug addiction, and mental and physical illness.

There are misconceptions about many occupations. Find out more about the Social Work profession and other occupations by visiting the Career Resource Center located on the second floor of South Ruffner between the hours of 8:30 p.m. and 4:40 p.m.

Night classes will take their examination from 7-10 on the regularly scheduled night during examination week. NOTE: Wednesday evening classes will take their exam on Wednesday, December 9, 7-10 p.m.

Students having three examinations on one day may take one of the examinations during a scheduled makeup period. The instructor works out the arrangements with the student.

SUMMIT To Publish Again

By TAMARA L. BROWN

Do you have questions and concerns you want to raise and you don't know where to voice them? Why not write them in The Summit?

The Summit is a publication of the minority students on Longwood's campus. Poems, articles of interest and concern, and informative news stories from the students, faculty and staff at Longwood College make this newsletter a success.

The Virginia Plan of Longwood College states that a minority newsletter, called The Summit, is to be published twice each semester.

Because this year's first edition of The Summit will go out on December 4, 1987, all materials submitted must be received by October 22, 1987. in box 1108

MAN ON THE STREETS

Question of the Week:

"Why did you come to Longwood?"

Robin Yarbrough
Senior

Because I knew I'd find the man of my dreams . . . however, I'm still sleeping.

Michael Robinson
Junior

Because I thought I'd find some young, intelligent Biology major to marry me and support my bad habits . . . but I'm still thinking.

James Boston
Junior

Honestly? The thriving nightlife in Farmville! In fact, I almost didn't come 'cuz I didn't think I could handle it.

Jo Jo Katz
Senior

Because it was small enough to give everyone a chance to become involved and be a leader, or to become whatever they wanted. Everyone has the attention that they need here.

PERSONALS

Personals, neatly printed or typewritten, must be turned in by noon on the Friday prior to publication. In order to be considered for publication, contributions must include the contributor's name and box number. (The contributor should specify whether or not he wants this information published).

"Can't Buy Me Love"

By RENEE DePRIEST

"Can't Buy Me Love" is a light-hearted movie that takes you back to high school land and its stereotypes: the sluts, the bee-bop cheerleaders, the geeks, and the football player jerks.

This is about Ronald, the geek who dreams of going out with the head cheerleader and being popular. His opportunity arrives when, by exchanging favors, they arrive at a temporary agreement.

In her part of the deal, the cheerleader chick holds his hand in the hallways, lets him eat with her at the "popular" table during lunch, and basically pretends she likes him. And so Ronald goes from "geek to shiek" and has a blast – for a while.

The story evolves and eventually Ronald learns that money can buy him popularity, but it 'can't buy him love.'

Even though this movie had a predictable storyline and was rather corny at times, it did have very touching and honest moments. There were also hilarious scenes. Patrick Dempsey and the leading actress did a fine job of acting.

The rating I give it is 2 1/2 stars out of four.

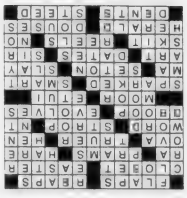
Can you pass the E.A.T.?

Campuses around the nation are preparing for the fourth annual National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week (October 19-25), making ready to test young people on their knowledge of alcohol. How responsible are college students about drinking? Passing the Equivalence Aptitude Test (E.A.T.) is a key measure of how much students know about alcohol consumption.



To pass the E.A.T. you must know this simple but crucial formula: The most common servings of beer (12 ounces), wine (5 ounces) and distilled spirits (1 1/4 ounces) contain equal amounts of alcohol.

Why is passing the E.A.T. and being part of National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week so important? To be responsible, everyone needs to know facts, not myths about alcohol.

Far too many accidents are caused by young people who get behind the wheel of a car thinking "I'm fine. I only had a few beers." Such misinformation is all to often deadly. Maybe that's why 50% of all driving fatalities are caused by drunk drivers. And why two-thirds of all those arrested for DWI "just had a few beers."

Morrison Biography Worth The Hunt

By TONYA GREENE

No One Here Gets Out Alive is a book by Jerry Hopkins and Danny Sugerman. It is a biography of Jim Morrison, lead singer of the 1960's San Francisco band The Doors. It explains in detail the life of Morrison as a poet, a singer, and a genius. It starts at the very beginning of Jim's life when he is born while his family is living in Florida.

No One Here Gets Out Alive also gives details about his college years, all of his girlfriends, how he came up with the name for The Doors, the steady progression of popularity for The Doors, and all of Jim's personal problems in his grown up life. For example, The Doors got popular so fast that Jim could not handle the pressure. The band played the psychedelic rock of the 60s and people either loved it or hated it. For some people The Doors wasn't a rock group: it was a religion. Morrison had a whole cult following him. He had the ability to hold an entire audience completely mesmerized, or to start a "rock riot" just by the way he sang. Some of his songs were about war; some were about love or lust and some were about hate, and most of the songs were poems he had written and put to music.

At first during his rise to popularity, Morrison was trying several drugs, then he got so he always used drugs in very large amounts. As pressure got worse, he turned to alcohol and eventually he could not function because he was always intoxicated. The book ends by not letting the reader know if Jim Morrison is dead or alive because his body was never found. Some people still think he is alive, and some like to party on his grave in Paris.

Even if you're not a Doors fan, this is a great book. It's not very long (no more than 300 pages), but each page is interesting and it goes very quickly. Those of you who are Doors fans will absolutely love this book. If you ever find it, get it and read it.

Player Of The Week

DAVID GOERKE

Senior Goalkeeper David Goerke recorded 18 saves in Longwood's 3-1 win over nationally ranked Mary Washington last Wednesday, and for his performance, Goerke has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period October 4-11. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

Goerke and the other Lancer defenders played a major role as Longwood beat Mary Washington. Ranked 19th in Division III last week, the Eagles had a 21-10 advantage in shots. The senior keeper tied the Longwood record for shutouts in a season (6) earlier this season.

He would have had his seventh shutout Wednesday, except for a teammate who mistakenly knocked in a goal for Mary Washington. Four of his six shutouts have come at home. The Eagles were the first team to score on Longwood at home this season. Goerke has allowed just nine goals in 12 games for a goals against average of 0.75.

A graduate of Cinnaminson High School who transferred to Longwood from Rider, Goerke came on strong at the end of last season to earn a starting spot. He had several outstanding performances in the VISA Playoffs and earned second team All-State and VISA All-Eastern Division honors.

He notched three shutouts with a goals against average of 1.18. He was a high school and Rider College teammate of Lancer midfielder Franck Euksuzian. Goerke is majoring in history and is one of three Longwood captains.

Longwood Riding

Longwood's riding team, under the direction of coach Mary Whitlock, opened its 1987-88 season with a fourth place finish out of 10 teams in an intercollegiate horseshow hosted by Mary Washington October 4.

What is believed to be a record 11 Longwood riders earned ribbons in the show. Top performance were turned in by Ann Patrick Irons with a first in novice over fences and Kathy Sykes who was first in novice on the flat and fifth in novice over fences.

World Series

Intramural Update

By CHRIS DOUGLAS

Men's Flag Football has finally ended with the Total Package winning the "A" league and the Deltas winning the "B" league. Total Package had to come from the losers' bracket to win 2 very close and controversial games against the Pi Kaps. The winning team was made up of Tim Morris, Mike McGrath, Steve Booker, Kevin Hare, Mike Gillieland, Tony Marshal, Chris Lloyd, Puddy Garrett, Ira Richardson, and Bobby Dobson. The Deltas won the "B" league. The Deltas were: Wade Morcum, Dave Crouse, Danny White, David Taylor, Pete Whitman, Matt Sisk, Elon Kelly, Charlie Parker, Chuck Thorton, John Hamilton, Steve Quincy, Jeff Algor, and Ben Bartley.

The Department of Intramurals and Campus Recreation introduced a new sport with 2 on 2 volleyball. This was played in the sand in front of Stubbs. The Men's Division started out with 16 teams. Rob Tressem and Danny White won the tournament losing only 1 match. Janine Bilger and Sarita Thurman were at the top of their division out of 5 teams.

Fifteen teams entered the 3 on 3 Basketball. The team calling itself Public Enemy won the tournament without losing a game. Public Enemy is: Bryan Diggs, Charles Gregory, Darrel Johnson and Quintin Kearney. There were no women's teams this year.

Twelve teams entered the Men's Bowling with only the Kingpins left in the winners' bracket and Phoenix and Boinkers in the losers' bracket. So far Donny Celata has the high game with a 191 in eight frames, and the Icemen have the high series with a 1017. The Amigos won the Women's Bowling.

Hockey Team Wins 2 Of 3

LAURA FELCH

Longwood received strong performances from several players and won two of three games last week in field hockey, beating Maryland Baltimore County Saturday and Georgetown Friday by identical 4-1 scores after losing at Duke Tuesday 4-2.

Longwood begins a series of five straight road games this week with a visit to Radford Wednesday for a 4:00 contest and a game at Loyola Saturday at 2:00. Next week the Lady Lancers play at Drexel Monday, at LaSalle Tuesday and at James Madison Thursday before returning home to host Pfeiffer Saturday, October 24.

While Longwood had some difficulty adjusting to the astro-turf at Duke Tuesday, Friday's game on turf at Georgetown was a different story. Outshooting the Lady Hoyas 43-16, LC got goals from Kris Meaney, Diane Brown, Traci Strickland and Celeste Lloyd. Strickland's goal was her seventh of the year.

Beanie Felch had two assists in the contest while Strickland and Liz Annet had one each. Top defenders were Claye Conkwright with 18 interceptions/tackles, Diane Bingler with 16 and Annet with 16.

In Saturday's win over UMBC Annet scored her seventh goal of the season while Brown, Laura Goetz and Conkwright also had goals. Felch and Bingler recorded assists while Conkwright led in interceptions/tackles with 19.

Scoring in Tuesday's 4-2 loss at Duke were Felch and Strickland. The game was tied 1-1 at the half, before the Lady Blue Devils converted three times in the second stanza for the win. Strickland and Bingler had assists while Conkwright had 23 interceptions/tackles.

Trailing Annet and Strickland (both with seven goals) are Goetz with five, Felch with four and Conkwright with four.

Longwood recorded its 100th soccer win last Thursday at home as Ray Jones scored three goals and the Lancers held off a determined upset bid by 19th ranked Mary Washington to take a 3-1 victory.

This week the Lancers visit Marymount Tuesday for a 4:00 contest and host Virginia Wesleyan Friday at 2:00 in an important Virginia intercollegiate Soccer Association Eastern Division matchup.

The Lancers are now 9-2-1 overall and 1-0 in the Eastern Division of VISA. Last week's ISAA Gatorade Division II poll had Longwood ranked 13th.

Thursday's win gives Longwood a record of 100-63-20 in 11 seasons of soccer. All but three of those wins have come under coach Rich Posipanka, now in his ninth year. Posipanko has a career mark of 97-43-19 and is also nearing the 100 win plateau.

LIM SHOOTS FOR LANCERS; Longwood's Kenny Lim fires a shot in Wednesday's 3-1 soccer win over Mary Washington.

Jones upped his goal total to 19 with Thursday's hat-trick. He put the Lancers up 1-0 24 minutes into the first half on a beautiful assist from Mike Edge. Nick Ruebel assisted on two second half breakaways as Jones scored easily. Jones is just three goals away from the LC record for goals in a season – 22.

Mary Washington got on the board with a minute-and-a-half remaining when a Lancer defender inadvertently headed the ball toward his own goal. The goal was the first scored against Longwood at home this season. Goalkeeper Dave Goerke had 18 saves for the home team.

"Mary Washington may be the best team we have played," said Posipanko after Thursday's clash. "They played very well, but weren't able to convert their opportunities."

Women's Tennis

Longwood's women's tennis team met defeat in its final two matches of the fall season last week as Meredith took a 8-1 win Monday and Randolph-Macon held on for 5-4 win Thursday.

Men's Golf

The Longwood Men's Golf Team pulled out a 13th place finish in the Ferrum Invitational held this past Monday and Tuesday at the Old Mill Golf Course in Laural Forks, VA.

Coach Steve Nelson said that this was the toughest course they have played on so far. Longwood finished with a 371-360-731, their worst 36 hole score ever.

ALCOHOL AWARENESS WEEK OCT 26-30

FARMVILLE – Longwood College proclaimed October 26-30, 1987, as Alcohol Awareness Week. (The National A.A.W. is October 19-23; and our local A.A.W. is October 26-30.)

Alcohol Awareness Week is intended to make alcohol education and information available for students, to emphasize prevention through education as a viable means of helping to solve problems associated with alcohol misuse and abuse and to increase awareness of the individual as the one ultimately responsible for decisions regarding alcohol.

Alcohol Awareness Week at Longwood is intended to not only promote responsible decision making regarding alcohol, but to emphasize that it is ultimately an individual's responsibility to make those decisions. The program emphasizes that only a personal commitment to making responsible decisions regarding alcohol will make an impact on the problems associated with its misuse and abuse.

Last year's Alcohol Awareness program won the Governor's Award for the best alcohol education efforts in the State of Virginia. We feel confident we will do so again this year.

Alcohol Awareness Week will include various workshops, displays, and activities across the Longwood campus, all aimed at promoting prevention through education and individual responsibility in connection with the use of alcohol.

Buttons, posters, and bumper stickers will be available the first part of Alcohol Awareness Week, October 26-30. In addition, booths, literature, and contests will be held. The week's highlights will include presentations by Michael Ford (son of President Gerald Ford, whose mother started the Betty Ford clinic for dependency treatment, and Thomas Murray, a professional actor whose specialty involves his personal experiences with alcoholism using dramatic acting portrayals.

DO YOU THINK THE ALCOHOL AWARENESS SLOGAN IS GOOD, BAD, OR UGLY?

ROBERT DEARMON

Robert Dearmon, Chairman of the Alcohol Education Committee – "It worked! More people are talking about alcohol education now than otherwise would have, had we gone with some feeble slogan (such as our competitive schools would have done.")

JOE McGILL

Joe McGill, Director of Student Services – Usually whenever controversy exists among students there is some chance they might learn something. If the slogan helps anyone think about alcohol education who otherwise wouldn't have, then, I'm satisfied.

Holly Barnes, Sophomore – "The slogan is understandable, it gets the point across, but the phrase should be shorter and rhyme."

Letters to the Editor

Editor,

On cold nights, there are hundreds of windows open on campuses, wasting heat and increasing tuition and taxes for us to pay. The incredible waste of ever more fuel makes more dirty smoke to poison our lungs and deplete the ozone layer, endangering all of us.

If our learning doesn't even lead to such simple action as closing windows, we are quite lost!

Harvey Sperry
"Golden Age" student

Dear Editor,

This letter is regarding the parking problem at Longwood College. Last year when the price of tickets went up from six to ten dollars, I went to Campus Police to ask a few questions. Because many of the officers seem so "ticket happy", I asked if they received a commission for the tickets they wrote. The answer was no. (I would love to know how much money is taken in daily from tickets!) I then asked where the money went. The answer I got was that a large parking lot was going to be built to aid the parking problem. Well, a parking lot was made near Frazer (although I wouldn't call it large) but more noticeable are the new police cars that the officers are driving. What was wrong with the old ones? Maybe they needed new cars for those high speed chases around campus!

Signed, A Concerned Student

The wrong picture was printed with the Soccer ballboy interview on page one of the Oct. 13 issue. The photo should have depicted Jason Bartos (whose name was spelled incorrectly, due to faulty sources), a LC soccer ballboy. Instead, it showed one of the team players. Sorry for the mix-up, fellas. This is Jason Bartos:

To the Editor

I am writing in response to the letter in the last edition of the "Rotunda" concerning the facts surrounding the WUTA (soon to be WLCX) come back to the Longwood Campus. I have only one question for Mr. Long about Gus Sallas' involvement in getting WUTA back on the airwaves. WHO CARES?

In the fall fo 1983, WUTA was a joke. DJ's went on the air high and intoxicated. They started the songs by dropping the needle anywhere on the record. Listeners were also treated to a selection of four and twelve-letters words. When they weren't cussing, we were occasionally blessed with minutes of "dead air".

I decided to attend a weekly interest meeting. (I could only improve this station). From the beginning, Sonny and Gus (and Gus' friends) argued. Sonny contended that WUTA should follow FCC regulations about what is broadcast. Gus and his groupies were concerned with opposing any of Sonny's "radical" ideas.

"F—k the FCC and their regulations. They aren't concerned with our little 10 watt station," Gus said.

After Gus and his friends left Longwood, Sonny enforced the rules with an iron hand. People didn't like it at first, but they got used to following the rules. I personally do not know how much influence Gus Sallas had in convincing the faculty to support the radio station. I do know that his disrespect of rules would have lead to an eventual total shut down of the station. Gus was concerned only with keeping the station on while he was here at LC, period. He showed no concern with long range plans of improvement for the station.

Today a WLCX disc jockey is a respected position. They are better trained and more responsible. A.B. "Sonny" Merchant is the Number One reason for the quality programing and improved image of WLCX. Many others have contributed, Mr. Long and the 86-87 executive board included. But without the care and hard work that Sonny put into it from the beginning, WLCX would not exist today.

So, Jim Long, Gus Salas IS a founding father of the new WUTA (WLCX). Big Deal?? Maybe he did pull it from the ashes. But, it was Mr. Merchant who "dusted it off", breathed new life into a dead organization, and made it what it is today. And isn't that much more important?

Signed,
Kevin S. Spencer

Dear Editor:

As someone working with Alcohol Awareness Week, I was disappointed to hear of low attendance at the concerts Oktoberfest weekend. I asked myself "why", and realized that alcohol is the preferred activity of Longwood students. It struck me as odd when only approximately 25% are legally eligible to drink on our campus. It is a sad statement that relatively low admission fees couldn't even draw students away from their precious alcohol. They would rather spend their money at "Beer" Lion or Par Bil's. I'm not against drinking, however, I am for alternative programming. Longwood students are lucky this is not a "dry" campus and also lucky to have concerts like Friday and Saturday nights of Oktoberfest. However, if alcohol continues to be the activity of choice, then we might as well not have student fees support non-alcoholic activities. Support for concerts, etc., would go a long way to insure there would be more things to do than just drink on weekends. As it is now, why should S-UN or any other organization plan an alternative to drinking on the weekends?

For now, we should not bother with alternative programming. Maybe we should wait until the campus goes dry. When you can't have alcohol, then you would have to support non-alcoholic programs, right?!

Campus Police Justice Foils Dining Hall Ingenuity

Once upon a time there was a campus policeman who decided he wanted to eat at Blackwell Dining Hall on Birthday Dinner night. Of course, he didn't have to pay for that big juicy steak — this meal was on the students for him.

While this campus policeman was enjoying his steak at Blackwell's, he spied a girl putting silverware or some other petty article in her bookbag. He whipped out his cape and flew over to the table that the girl occupied and tormented that dastardly fiend of a silverware snatcher in just the manner she deserved to be tormented. Ha! Justice prevails again, thanks to Super Copper!

Upon delivery of the burglar to the proper authorities, Super Cop went back to finish his half-eaten meal, but alas!! alack! his sumptuous steak was gone! Apparently, some dining hall serf had cleared his plate away, assuming that its imbiber had finished and left.

Crestfallen and still kind of hungry, Super Cop remedied the situation by getting himself a plate of fried shrimp. No reward was too great for the day's hero, so he was lavished with shrimp upon shrimp, until his plate overflowed with the fried feast and cocktail sauce to boot.

This indulgence ended up costing the rightful eaters of ARA grub. The students, probably as a direct result of Super Cop's feast and a half, had to eat chicken filets on a bun for lunch and hamburgers for dinner TWO DAYS IN A ROW!!! Dogs couldn't live on that stuff for very long!

The nerve: and right after break! What's the matter — did an ARA delivery truck give LC the slip this week or what?!

To add insult to injury, the chicken filet/hamburger incident was followed immediately by Earl of Sandwich Night — slap it between two chunks of bread and call it dinner! Viola! ARA ingenuity at its best.

And when will they stop trying to pawn off thin gravy substances as "Hearty Beef Stew"?

Need a grease or starch fix? Go to Blackwell's! (Ditto if you feel like partaking in a salad bar feeding frenzy.)

Have a hankering for some soggy veggies? You know were to find them.

We could continue in this fashion for quite some time, but then we'd end up getting into the topic of ARA employee temperaments — a nasty little subject that should be avoided at all costs if one wishes to maintain composure while involved in any of life's activities, especially writing editorials.

Hockey Team Breaks Even: VCU And Elkins Up Next

Strong play by the defense helped Longwood's field hockey team gain a 2-2 split in four games last week, leaving the season record at 11-5-1 with three games remaining. The Lady Lancers beat Drexel 3-1 Monday, lost to LaSalle 1-0 Tuesday and James Madison 2-1 Thursday and nipped Pfeiffer 1-0 Saturday.

Longwood visits Virginia Commonwealth Tuesday at 3:30, hosts Davis & Elkins Saturday at 2:00 and winds up the regular season Monday, hosting Mary Washington at 2:00.

Diane Brown, Judith Barnett, Cathy Sereno and Celeste Lloyd filled in against Pfeiffer for absent seniors Claye Conkwright, Traci Strickland, Diane Bingler and Theresa Labyak. The seniors were taking the National Teachers' Exam while the game was in progress.

Liz Annet broke a scoreless deadlock in the second half on an assist from Brown to give Longwood the win over Pfeiffer. Annet, who also scored against James Madison Thursday, has a team high nine goals.

Players of the game Saturday, as picked by coach Sue Finnie, were Brown on offense and Kris Meaney on defense. Meaney had a team best 16 interceptions/tackles.

Strickland tied her own school record for assists in a season with 8 when she logged two with a goal in the 3-1 win over Drexel Monday. Strickland has also totaled 7 goals for the year. Conkwright broke her own mark for season interceptions/tackles (275) the week before in a 2-1 win over Loyola. She now has 333 for the year.

Goalkeeper Kim Howells notched her fifth shutout of the season Saturday against Pfeiffer with able support from sweeper Margie Kernen. Kernen has collected 12 defensive saves.

Lady Golfers Finish Successful Fall

A return to form in the final round Sunday enabled Longwood's women's golf team to finish 12th out of 18 competitors at the 12th Lady Tar Heel Invitational Tournament in Chapel Hill, North Carolina over the weekend.

Hobbled by a slow start Friday, Longwood carded scores of 337-328-311 for a 976 in the 54-hole tournament at North Carolina's A.E. Finley Golf Course. Texas was far ahead of the pack with a 296-296-303-895.

Defending Division II champ Longwood concluded the fall with a stroke average of 319.1, second only to last season's 318.8. The Lady Lancers, who had a best-ever 34-14 record based on four tournament appearances, won two tournaments and finished fourth in another.

"I was glad to see us end the fall on a positive note," said Longwood coach Dr. Barbara Smith. "We have done well, but there is room for improvement. Our 311 Sunday was one of the top scores of the day, but Friday's round (337) kept us from finishing higher."

Player Of The Week

HOWELLS AND KERNEN FOR THE DEFENSE — Longwood goalkeeper Kim Howells (left) and sweeper Margie Kernen prepare to turn back a shot attempt by a Pfeiffer sticker in Saturday's 1-0 Lady Lancer victory. The duo has been named Longwood College Players of the Week for the period October 18-25.

A pair of sophomore field hockey standouts, goalkeeper Kim Howells and sweeper Margie Kernen have been named Longwood College Players of the Week for the period October 18-25. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

Howells and Kernen turned in outstanding performances as Longwood won two and lost two in four contests last week. Howells has recorded five shutouts and has a goals against average of 1.0 for the season, while Kernen has collected 12 defensive saves and 211 interceptions/tackles. The duo has played well all season, helping Longwood compile an 11-5-1 record.

Longwood beat Drexel 3-1, lost to LaSalle 1-0 and James Madison 2-1, and beat Pfeiffer 1-0 in action last week.

Howells, a graduate of Upper Moreland High in Willowgrove, PA had an outstanding freshman season last year with seven shutouts and a goals against average of 1.3. She is majoring in biology.

Kernen was also a starter last year and set an LC record for defensive saves in a season with 14. Also a graduate of Upper Moreland High, Kernen is majoring in secondary education.

"As our last line of defense, Kim and Margie have done a superb job this season and last," said coach Sue Finnie. "Their play on defense has been a big plus for us."

Gymnasts To Perform Thursday At 8

Hoping For A Blockbuster Season

Longwood's gymnastics squad will perform an exhibition Thursday night at 8 in Lancer Hall as a preview of the upcoming season. Coach Ruth Budd's Lancers won't begin actual competition until January, but with the number of injuries piling up Budd figures it's just as well.

"We have a lot of potential if everyone can get healthy," says Budd, now in her 10th year. "I believe all 10 of our gymnasts have been injured at some point this fall."

The veteran coach, however, expects most of the team to take part in Thursday night's exhibition.

Longwood has four veteran gymnasts and six newcomers. Budd says the veterans, and, in particular top returnee Lynda Chenoweth have looked good so far. A junior, Chenoweth has been the team's top-all around her first two years.

Senior Tammy Zeller is improved after working out over the summer and sophomore Amy Spiers has made dramatic strides thanks to hard work in the off-season. Senior Mary Schaefer has done well and expects to regain the academic eligibility she lost second semester last season.

The six freshmen have shown much promise, but injuries have been a big problem.

Budd also has high hopes for Becki Bagley and Lynn Lewis. Budd rates this year's group of newcomers among her best ever.

As usual, Longwood's gymnasts will face a schedule which includes mostly Division I opposition. North Carolina State is slated to visit January 24.

LADIES B-BALL GEARING UP FOR SEASON

By MIKE McGRATH

This year's Lady Lancer Basketball team will take the floor with some new faces among the returning ones. The team will be without the record breaking Caren Forbes and great center Karen Boska, but Coach Shirley Duncan will fill those positions with bright new talent that will score big for the team.

Coach Duncan has returning players at every position which will help them greatly with their difficult schedule. Four seniors return to this year's line up: Barbi Burton, Jill Everett, Angie Hill and Annette Easterling.

Four newcomers also step into the Longwood Gymnasium this year to add some excitement to the game. They are Carmille Barnett, Ann Callaham, Aretha Johnson and walk on surprise Allison Walek.

Coach Duncan believes that she has a much quicker team than last year's 13-14 squad. They will be strong in the guard position with the outside shooting of Annette Easterling and quickness of Angie Hill. The inside positions will be filled by Barbi Burton at center and Jill Everette and Kita Chambers will handle the forward spots.

The bench for this squad will be young and inexperienced, so the Lady Lancers will have to be strong and smart against their opponents this year as they face a grueling 16 game road schedule and have only 8 home games.

The Lady Lancers are looking forward to a successful and learning year as they begin the 1987 season. Their season opens November 20 in the Mt. Olive Tournament.

SOCCER TEAM IN CHAMPIONSHIP CONTEST:

Saturday At 2 P.M.

Longwood's soccer team will seek to bounce back from Sunday's 4-2 loss to Virginia Commonwealth when it entertains Christopher-Newport Saturday at 2:00 in a rematch of last year's Virginia Intercollegiate Soccer Association championship contest.

Lancer coach Rich Posipanko will be going for his 100th career victory Saturday. The ninth year coach has compiled a record of 99-44-19 since coming to Longwood in 1979.

The Lancers have played the last three games without backup goalkeeper Michael Phillips who suffered a knee injury in the alumni game October 10. Phillips is out indefinitely.

Lancer Soccer Recap

By MIKE McGRATH

Longwood, now 11-3-1 and ranked 12th in Division II last week, beat the Captains 2-1 in overtime to win its third state title last season. CNC, which is having an up and down year, would like nothing better than to spoil the Lancers' VISA Eastern Division title hopes. LC is 2-0 in the Eastern division, but must still play division foes CNC and Averett at home, plus

Randolph-Macon on the road November 8.

The Lancers gave up as many as four goals for the first time in three years when VCU won a 4-2 decision Sunday. The last team to score four goals on Longwood was Virginia on October 20, 1984.

Ray Jones talied twice for the Lancers to keep things close at the half (the Rams led 3-2), but Longwood was unable to catch up as VCU added another goal in the second half for the victory. Jones, a solid candidate for All-America honors, now has 27 goals for the year. Nick Ruebel got his fourth assist on one of Jones' goals.

Sophomore midfielder John Barone missed most of Sunday's contest because of a pulled muscle suffered in warm-ups. Back Mitch Rubin also missed a majority of the game because of an injury, according to coach Posipakno.

The Lancers missed an opportunity to take a big step toward an NCAA Division II Tournament bid against the Rams.

"Mount St. Mary's (ranked second in the South Region last week) lost to Tampa 1-0 and Eckerd 2-1 last week," said Posipanko. "We had a chance Sunday to strengthen our case for post season play but we blew it. If we win our remaining games, however, we'll still be in contention for a bid."

Longwood is ranked second in the South this week behind Tampa.

Boska Shooting Baskets In Belgium

By MICHAEL PHILLIPS

Karen Boska recently left graduate school to live a dream... getting paid to play basketball in Europe.

A letter in early September sent Boska, a 1987 graduate of Longwood College and a four year starter on the Lady Lancer basketball team, from graduate school at George Mason University to the Grivegnee Dames women's basketball team in Grivegnee, Belgium.

Shirley Duncan, Karen's coach at Longwood, received a letter/form in July from the coach of a team in Luxembourg that was looking for players 5'10" or taller, she returned it with the names and statistics of three former Lady Lancers on it. Along with Boska's name was that of Mariana Johnson, a 5'9" forward who graduated from LC in 1985 and Caren Forbes, a 5'6" All-American guard that graduated in 1987 with Boska. Coach Duncan sent the names of Johnson and Forbes, although they were shorter than 5'10", because she feels that they can play in Europe and deserve the chance to prove it. But, the Luxembourg coach wrote back saying thanks but no thanks, the position had already been filled.

Karen then proceeded along with her previous plans and enrolled graduate school. A few weeks later she received a letter from the coach of the Dames stating that he needed a center and had heard of Karen from the coach at Luxumbourg and that he would like her to play for him. She couldn't resist.

Karen was working on her Master's in psychology at George Mason University when she left for Belgium. She said that "grad school will still there when I come back. I felt that it was a once in a lifetime opportunity and I wasn't going to let pass me by. I was extremely excited about the chance to go to Europe and feel there will be a lot of opportunities in terms of travel and learning about other cultures."

The 6'1" center from Fort Hunt High School and Alexandria, Virginia had a 3.67 grade point average while majoring in psychology and a 4.0 in each of her last four semesters at Longwood. Karen was named to the GTE-CoSIDA District III Academic all-America team and first team VaSID Academic All-State her senior year. She graduated with high honors and received the Dan Daniel Senior Award for Scholarship and Citizenship, the Henry I. Willett Scholar-Athlete Award, and a Scholastic Achievement Award.

KAREN BOSKA

A co-captain with the Lady Lancer cagers, Boska Accumulated 1,077 points and 831 rebounds in her four years at Longwood. She holds Longwood school records for career field goal percentage (48.2) and free throw percentage (74.6) and played in a record 107 games for LC. She holds three of the top four spots in season field goal percentage and is second in career rebounds. Karen also was named to the all-Mason-Dixon Conference second team in 1987.

According to Boska, "In Belgium there are three categories or divisions and last year the Dames won the 2nd division and thus were obliged to move up to the first division this season. There are seven women on the team, ages 17-26, and eight reserves, 2nd team-ages 15-17. The team is sponsored by Les Produits Wollons and is coached by Cyril Van Geert."

Karen stated in a letter that coach Van Geert does speak English which is great because her French leaves much to be desired. Boska is the only 'foreigner' on the team, but she says that "there is an American on the team in Luxembourg."

Boska said that "the team practices two to three times a week and plays once a week, on Saturdays. Most of the games are in Belgium, but, the team does travel to other countries occasionally. There are 13 teams in the conference, all of which are from Belgium." The season began in late September and doesn't end until late March and is followed by a championship tournament.

Karen is living in an apartment with an elementary school teacher who she says "speaks less English than I do French," which Karen calls "a wonderful experience." She is enjoying her stay in Belgium and stated that "everyone is very kind and friendly."

Coach Duncan said that "this could not have happened to a nicer, more deserving person. While Karen was at Longwood she was a tremendous asset to the team and the college community. We are all very proud of her and wish her the best of luck while she is in Belgium."

Dear Gipper – Why has Oklahoma been ranked number 1 in college football all year? They haven't played anyone hard this year. – FOOTBALL FAN

It is true that Oklahoma has not played any powerhouse ball clubs. They have to play teams in the Big Eight conference, and that means they have to play number 2 ranked Nebraska. Coach Switzer has a great ball team this year. Do not under estimate them just because of their schedule.

Dear Gipper – Now that the NFL strike is over, can we expect football to get back to normal? – TIRED STRIKER

Well, the old familiar faces that we are used to seeing will definitely be back on the field showing their skills, but get ready for some newcomers (replacement players). These past three weeks a few replacement players have made a lasting impression in the NFL, and will be around the rest of the season.

Dear Gipper – Why has George Steinbrenner hired Billy Martin again? – CONFUSED YANK

Apparently there is some magic left in old Billy's hat, and, after the New York Yankees, disappointing season finale, a change was needed. By moving Lou Pinnella to the General Manager position and Martin back in as the Yankees Skipper, Steinbrenner must be attempting to start another Yankee Dynasty.

Dear Gipper – In your opinion, who should be the top forerunner for the player of the year in College Basketball? I believe that J. R. Reid from North Carolina should be the number one player. – CAROLINA BLUE

Granted, Reid is going to be an impact player in the future. The fact remains that he will be only a sophomore this year. There are other players in the Nation who are just as deserving and are more experienced than Reid. I believe that Danny Manning of Kansas will be the best player in the nation this year. He averaged 23.9 points last year. This will be his senior year and he will be the Jayhawks leader as they try to reach the Final Four.

Ripples Of Frazer Fire Felt In Room Inspections

By MATT PETERMAN

Room inspections began last week and will continue this week as inspectors search for any non-compliance to a set criteria established by the college. Some students favor these actions like Tom Foster, a Longwood junior, who believes these measures will prevent another fire. "Too many people are careless with electrical items these days and these inspections get rid of the carelessness factor," he says. The five main areas of inspections include the number of items plugged into an outlet, and allows only one item to be plugged into an extension cord. The extension cord must be of the 14-2 type, which is a heavy duty cord. Power strips are permitted as long as they are protected by a circuit breaker. Other areas that are being checked is the use of restricted items such as large size refrigerators, hot-plates, toasters, air conditioners, ceiling fans, dimmer switches, and toaster ovens. Wall hangings must be flush against the wall and all ceiling tiles must be in place.

The new Longwood safety standards are the result of last semester's fire that was caused from an overload of electrical devices that were plugged into a single outlet according to Virginia State Police Inspectors. Apparently eight items were plugged into a single extension cord resulting in an insulation melt. The fire got out of control as sheets dividing the room caught on fire allowing it to spread quickly.

In an attempt to prevent another fire, the college is taking these inspections very serious. Restricted items must be taken off campus or to campus police. Non-compliance with these regulations will result in Judicial Action, such as suspension.

Lofts also will be inspected and must receive an inspection sticker to be able to remain in place. Lofts cannot exceed more than 25% of the room and they must be fire treated. Student's reactions to loft inspection has not been favorable as one student, John Williams says: "It's just another hassle and expense and it seems that there are other things in the room that would be burned as well as the lofts."

The fire last semester displaced 122 students who had to be moved into other dormitories, such as the not yet renovated South Cunningham. The remaining of the rooms being repaired in Frazer were finished two weeks ago, putting an end to the last visible reminders of the fire.

Another area that the college had to deal with was the fire alarm systems in both Curry and Frazer. During the fire, the alarms in Frazer were silent forcing students to go door to door to wake students up. The new alarms that were installed have raised great controversy, being criticized for being to quiet. "I have slept through one and had to double check another," said a student who wished not to be identified.

Students wait outside Frazer during fire last semester.

Wall Street Blues, Twins By Two And Bork

By MATT PETERMAN

☐ When the bell rang on Wall Street last Friday, a week of fear and exhaustion ended with the future very much uncertain. The Dow Jones Average of 30 industries finished the week down 295.98, recovering only moderately from the record drop of 508 points on Monday, October 19.

During October before the crash, the stock market seemed to be moving downward, but no one expected the drop that occurred on Monday decreasing world wealth by about 1 trillion dollars, as the crash was followed worldwide. Many reasons for the decline could be found.

Many thought that the remarks that Treasury Secretary James A. Baker, made in West Germany, hinting that the dollar may be allowed to slide further if countries with a surplus did not change their economic policies. This fact hurt the confidence in the markets and coupled with many other factors.

These factors included the following: rising interest rate, that made the stock market less attractive; the twin deficits – trade and national, which causes the U.S. to borrow more from abroad; their declining value of the dollar, that perception that the market was too inflated already, and the threat of rising inflation.

Many experts found the timing of the drop at least good, opposed to having this decline in a weak economy. Had that situation happened many predict that the nation would have slid into a most certain recession. If the signals out of Washington with regard to deficit reduction aren't positive, another collapse could be imminent, for the market prefers action rather than words from the White House and Congress.

The market seemed to have stabilized for much has been done to stop further decline in the market. The Federal Reserve has put money into the system to help those sectors of the economy that need greater liquidity. Program trading, using computers to trade, has been suspended, interest rates are declining, yields on bonds are going down, and corporate earnings are on the rise.

☐ The Minnesota Twins took the World Series championship, defeating the St. Louis Cardinals 4-2 in the seventh game.

They became the first team in history to win all of their home games during the Series. This is the first championship for the franchise in Minnesota – the last being in 1924 as the Washington Senators.

The Twins were predicted to finish second in the American League West early in the season. The manager, Tom Kelly, is the youngest to lead his team to a victory in the World Series, installed at the helm only 7 weeks before the regular season started. The team whose future was much in doubt because of the many losses they suffered season after season now is removed from that status.

☐ Supreme Court nominee, Robert H. Bork, was voted down by the full Senate with a vote of 58-42 last Friday. The decisive vote ended campaigns for and against the judge who hit the nation with great controversy. He became the 11th nominee to be rejected by the Senate and the 26th who failed to be confirmed.

In total, 6 Republicans joined the 52 Democrats that voted against the nominee. Virginia Senators John W. Warner and Paul. S. Trible Jr. voted against and for Bork respectively. Two Democrats did join the 40 Republicans voting for the nominee, indicating that many voted on partisan reasons.

Those who supported Bork contended that his opponents distorted his record, and in fact, Bork was a compassionate legal scholar with the utmost respect for the law.

His opponents believed that his view of the Constitution was too narrow and that he would not protect privacy and civil rights.

Hansel And Gretel

Thursday, October 22, Theatre IV Productions, a professional acting company from Richmond, presented their version of the children's tale Hansel and Gretel in Jarman Auditorium.

The short, to the point, and thoroughly enjoyable story was performed in front of hundreds of children of all ages from schools for miles around, including Longwood itself. The production included delightful singing and dancing scenes, which spiced up the already terrific acting.

Phil Hyland did a wonderful job portraying Hansel, the all-brave boy who resolves to stray from the path in the woods to find the gingerbread house. This 18-year-old did a good job of convincing the audience that he really was no more than 10 or 12 years old.

Debhra Wagner played a young naive Gretel, charming all present with her genuine innocence and dependence on her "omniscient" sibling.

Jackie Jones and Gordon Doss aptly played their roles as the traditional, loving, do-only-good-for-their-children parents found in all fairy tales. Mr. Doss' singing abilities were an asset to the show, and a treat for the auditorium full of listeners.

Bracey Davis' crooked, stooped, ne'er-do-well posture and gestures produced an accurate portrayal of the pernicious witch who tries to eat the children after they have lost their way in the woods. Luckily, as we all know, the two are too smart for her and get out of the predicament alive: the wretched witch does not fare so well, falling prey to her own tricks.

The set for this production was quite innovative" it consisted of five or six rolling pieces of background, which shifted across the stage in the transition from one scene to another: one minute they portrayed a cozy cottage's insides, the next moment they were a thick forest, with a path between its trees.

The purpose of bringing this production to the area, according to Nancy Haga, Director of Theatre and Speech, was "to give children a chance to see live theatre, and at the same time allow Longwood students (especially education majors) to see the live spontaneity of the children."

Off-Campus Living:

Housing Scarce

By KRISTINA SMALL

Annoying roommates, overcrowding, noisy residence halls and too many regulations to comply with are some of the aspects of dorm life that students find hard to live with. Rather than complain, some students, approximately 636 according to David Retting, Director of Housing, have moved off campus.

The number of students living off campus is on the rise for many reasons. Some students simply prefer living off campus and have found that doing so is relatively cheaper than the cost of Longwood's room and board. But the greatest number of students are living off campus this year because they are allowed to. With the influx of so many freshmen and inadequate accommodations, students are no longer discouraged from finding housing on their own.

Mitzi Simmons, a junior, decided to move off campus when she learned she would be living in a six person suite with seven people, five of whom smoked. She thought it would be "neat" to live off campus and enjoy the independence of living in her own apartment. Although there are drawbacks such as the time spent cooking and the distance from friends and activities, she feels the advantages, both personal and economical, are well worth it.

This feeling is shared by senior Kristen Brenner. She feels the responsibility of having her own apartment will prepare her for owning an apartment after she graduates. Kristen believes that the restrictions and the supervision of an RA on a residence hall prohibit students from making their own decisions and gaining maturity.

While students may have an easier time getting permission to live off campus this year finding a house may be more difficult. Realtor Landon G. Atkins says he gets many calls from students from both Longwood and Hampden-Sydney students searching for a "pad", but housing is scarce. He states that realtors feel it is a poor investment choice to rent to a student for nine months out of the year when they could rent to a family for a year or more. Atkins had once considered building a complex for students but, due to the high cost of construction and the uncertain occupation of the homes, it was not feasible.

As for the housing that is available, Atkins assures he has no reservation about renting to college students. He finds them to be no more of a risk than any other clients.

Commuters Face Special Problems

By MELISSA GIBBS

A great number of Longwood students are forgotten once the sun goes down.

Each morning, these students, known as day or commuter students, trek anywhere from two blocks to sixty miles to attend classes. Naturally, they encounter special obstacles in their educational endeavers.

Day students cite unique problems such as difficulty getting to school in foul weather, lack of information about campus activities, and little opportunity to make friends with other students.

"You have to schedule your classes around possible snow. You don't want early morning classes because you want to give the highwaymen enough time to clear the roads, " commented Joyce Dickenson, a Junior from Buckingham. Joyce spends one hour each day on the thirty-mile stretch of road between her house in Buckingham and Farmville.

The commute poses other problems, especially for those who travel a substantial distance. Professors often don't consider the situation of the day student when they assign laboratory and other work which must be completed outside of the scheduled class time or when they assign books to be read on reserve in the library.

Many organizations which might otherwise attract day students, schedule their meetings for times inconvenient to the commuter, and, frequently, day students aren't even notified of the activities.

"One thing I really don't like about living off campus is that you don't have a chance to get involved in activities, or you are not invited into the activities. You are not treated like other students," said Joyce.

Jeff Dingeldein, a day student from Cumberland, agreed with Joyce. "Most day students don't know anything about what's happening on campus. Clubs need to find some way to notify the day students."

Jeff also pointed out that "you don't have the chance to meet as many people [living off campus] as you do in the dorms, but I've made a lot of friends on the campus." Jeff, who commuted twenty miles from Cumberland his Freshman and Sophomore years and this year began commuting from an apartment a few miles outside of Farmville, overcame the barrier between on and off campus students by joining the Series of the Performing Arts. His effort has paid off as he is currently president of the organization.

Another pet peeve of day students is the commuter student parking lot - its size, its location, and its condition. Unless a student arrives very early in the morning, chances are slim of find a parking space in the lot. When the day student can't find a spot in the commuter lot, his only option is to park at the Wynn Building. The day students' gravel parking lot has a huge rut running through it which, according to one student, is "big enough to swallow a whole car."

The college has provided some comforts for the day students. Between classes, commuters may relax in the Commuter Student Lounge located upstairs in Lankford. The room is equipped with the standard Longwood lounge furniture plus a pool table and kitchen facilities, including a microwave. To watch television, however, the students must go around the corner to the T.V. Lounge. The Commuter Student Lounge also offers mailboxes to those who request them, since off campus students are not permitted to have boxes in the campus post office.

This year for the first time the college held an orientation program for day students, but the turn-out was low. Off campus students who are newcomers to the college may find some hindrances to learning the "in's"and "out's" of the Longwood system. Experienced day students offer the following advice to rookie day students: "Be assertive and ask questions."

In The Spotlight

By CINDY GOOD

"Don't take our show seriously, you'll miss out on the whole point" is what Jeff Symanski told me he wanted his listeners to keep in mind while tuning in to his radio show. Jeff, a junior, does a partner show with senior Tim Sheridan (who is more commonly known as Bink) on Friday afternoons from 2:00 to 4:00 on WLCX 90.1-FM.

The show time is new for Bink and Jeff – at the beginning of the semester they had the 8:00 to 10:00 time slot on Friday nights. They both agreed that the earlier time slot is more enjoyable for them to be on the air. Bink said that, based on the amount of requests they get in the studio, more people seem to listen from 2:00-4:00 than later in the evening. They think the larger audience they have during the afternoon is because students are just getting out of class and winding down, hanging out in their rooms, cleaning or doing laundry, getting ready for the weekend.

What kind of music do Jeff and Bink play? As Jeff put it, "whatever strikes our mood at the time!" This usually includes progressive tunes, rap, oldies and rock. Several of their favorite bands to play on the air are: INXS, R.E.M., The Rolling Stones, X, and The Cure. Bink commented, "If Jeff would let me, I'd play INXS for a whole show!"

Bink and Jeff also said that they don't keep a consistent name for their radio show; they change it about every other month. Several show names they've used in the past were "Bedlam and Buffoonery," "Waaah!!", "Groovin Music and Tango Jazz," and presently they are calling their two hour slot "Mixed-up Stuff."

I asked these two wild and crazy men of the air waves how they ended up doing a partner show. Jeff told me that when they first joined WLCX in the spring of 1986 they had seperate shows but the time slots were back to back. One evening Jeff stayed in the studio a little while longer and helped out on Bink's show just for fun. They liked working together so much, they decided to make a habit of it.

Bink and Jeff both have been very involved with WLCX in ways other than just being on the air. Jeff is currently the Sports Director for the station, a job which he undertook in the fall of 1986. Bink held the position of News Director from the fall of 1986 through the spring of 1986. They worked together, doing a news and sports tape recording about three to four times a week. This news and sports update was played back over the air by the other D.J.'s once every two hours. Other information is supplied through the News and Sports Directors in the form of written announcements which the D.J.s read over the air.

Jeff and Bink told me that they get the information for news and sports from all sorts of places, including the Campus Bulletin, the Public Affairs office, the Town of Farmville, Richmond newspapers, Hoke Currie of the Sports Information Office, and even the National Inquirer.

There are several things that Bink and Jeff said that they will always remember about their time with WLCX. Jeff admitted to singing the "Love Boat" theme and even made up songs over the air. Bink said that one of the craziest things he ever did was when he gave away a can of Dinty Moore beef stew to the correct numbered caller. They both agree that being involved with WLCX has been the "highlight of (their) college career."

Although they have been accused of being a bit obnoxious on their show, Jeff and Bink always try to perform in a professional manner. Their main aim, they told me, is just to have fun!

SIXTY-SEVENTH YEAR | TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 1987 | NUMBER NINE

The Honor System On Trial

By Rotunda Staff

On Wednesday, October 27, the Honor Board met as is the case most every week. On the agenda was the discussion as to whether or not the Honor System, as it was proposed to the Student Government Association in 1910, is still applicable in 1987.

Based on the S.G.A. Constitution which states "The Honor Board shall have the power to establish programs, policies, and guidelines for the publicity, maintenance, and operation of the Longwood College Honor System," the 1987 Honor Board unanimously decided that such a decision, which could so drastically affect student life, should be made by the student body as a whole. In order to allow such a major decision to be made by any group, the Board clearly recognized its responsibility to see that that group be well educated. With that obligation in mind the Board also decided to use Honor Awareness Week, which is scheduled for November 9-13, to offer programs to discuss and present various angles to this issue. Due to the controversy raised when the Board's intentions were brought before the SGA Senate on Thursday October 28, the Rotunda has decided to publish an interview with Michael Clements, Chairman of the Honor Board.

Rotunda: What was the Honor Board's proposal to the S.G.A. Senate?

Clements: I went to the Senate with our plan to spend Honor Awareness Week discussing what the Board feels as the obvious benefits of being judged by our peers in a student run system as opposed to the possible negative repercussions of abolishing the presently existing system. Then I suppose you could say I dropped the bomb and suggested on the Board's behalf that at the end of Honor Awareness week we allow the students to vote by means of referendum to affirm the Honor System as it is written in the SGA Constitution, during the November 18 elections.

Rotunda: What was the response of the Senate?

Clements: Well, the entire Senate was not present, but of the members that were present a great deal of concern lay in allowing the student body to make such a decision. They were worried that the students would take the issue very lightheartedly, and without full knowledge of all the variables to be considered would make an unthought-about, haphazard decision. Finally, after quite a bit of discussion the Senate voted not to place the referendum to confirm the Honor System on the November 18 ballot with a vote of 5 in favor, 7 against.

Rotunda: What is the Honor Board's response to the Senate's decision?

Clements: I haven't had an opportunity to discuss the Senate's decision with the Board. Although I personally feel like any time a government imposes any policy on their constituents without the confidence to ask for popular opinion, an oppressive government is at work.

Rotunda: What are the Honor Board's plans at this point?

Clements: Well the Senate did not strip the Board of its Constitutional rights. It only decided not to take an active role in our plans; ie, the referendum. The Board still plans to use Honor Awareness Week to address the various opinions on the issue of a student run Honor System. Then at the end of that week the Board will provide student body at large to either support or not support our Honor System. Although such a means of formulating student opinion can't, by itself, change policy, the Board feels that if the students do respond in substantial numbers and the results are published, SGA will be forced to recognize the results and act accordingly.

Rotunda: Why is the Honor Board so determined to see this happen?

Clements: The Honor Board has spent countless hours and a great deal of money to talk about the Honor System. During last year's Honor Awareness Week, the Honor Board sponsored nine programs which gave the students the opportunity to talk to everyone from the President on down about the Honor System. The Board decided that all their talk is great if indeed the Honor System has the support of the entire college community. We feel the only way to get the complete support of the faculty and administration is to confirm that we as students not only enjoy the atmosphere it provides, but are willing to publicly support the Honor System. Quite frankly, it is time for the students to decide if they can except the "high standard of integrity and moral obligations" that our Honor System requires, and then be willing to live with their decision.

Rotunda: Is there anything you would like to say in closing?

Clements: I would just like to ask the students, on behalf of the Honor Board, please participate actively in Honor Awareness Week. Think long and hard about the decision you will be asked to make at the end of that week, consider all the different opinions presented to you and be willing to accept any decisions made which are based on the majority opinion of you and your fellow students.

ALCOHOL AWARENESS NEWS FROM ABROAD

UVA Policy Under The Gun - Longwood Next?

By Cathy Gaughran

The alcohol policy at The University of Virginia in Charlottesville was recently revamped to prohibit alcohol at any school sponsored events which could be attended by minors.

Chip German, Director of The UVA News Office, revealed that last spring a task force was coordinated to review the university's facilities on a number of fronts. The most significant conclusion arrived at by the task force was that reform of the campus alcohol policy needed to be taken into consideration. As a result, UVA is now a "dry" campus.

As can be expected at any institution where students are as concerned with decisions made that affect their lives, as the a students of UVA are, there was counteraction to this development. A petition drive was instigated, asking that the task force be allowed to reconvene and once again evaluate the policy.

There are some changes in this new task force: the old task force involved no undergraduate students. According to Scott Butler, a member of the UVA student council, "This new task force has two under-21 grads on it: after all, they are the ones who are affected by the policy."

Accompanying the rejuvenated force is a student group called ABSURD; Alcohol Busters Shouldn't Undermine Responsible Drinking, whose name basically says it all. ABSURD believes students can police themselves, giving the administration no reason to outlaw campus drinking.

Both ABSURD and the UVA Student Council want to see at least the part of the new alcohol policy that is school-imposed rather than state-imposed law done away with: state law allows for the no under-21 drinking part of UVA policy, but the

MWC Death Hits Home

By MATT PETERMAN

An 18-year-old student of Mary Washington College died two Saturdays ago due to alcohol poisoning. Christopher Goode died in his dorm room after becoming extremely intoxicated, reaching a blood alcohol level of 0.42, that subsequently caused his death.

At Mary Washington, beer is the only alcoholic beverage allowed on campus for those who have reached drinking age of 21. According to a state forensic chemist, Goode probably had to drink about 21-22 ounces of 80 proof whiskey taking in consideration Goode's size.

Apparently, Goode was drinking shots of whiskey and brandy at a party the night before.

William M. Anderson, the college's president, feels that the school has a sound alcohol policy and no changes in it are expected. The college recognized that they will never be able to stop illegal drinking for most of it happens behind closed dormitory doors. The only way to do this would turn the college into a police state.

Mary Washington, like Longwood, was beginning its Alcohol Awareness campaign last week when knowledge of a student's death became available. His tragic death echoed a message of sad irony and also that educating students about alcohol is very important. Longwood last year won the Governor's Award for the best alcohol effort in the state, because it recognized that teaching students to act with responsibility for themselves and others when alcohol is concerned is a big priority.

Letters to the Editor

Editor,

Tonight while walking across campus I had quite a scare. I was not actually threatened physically but my right to walk on campus undisturbed was threatened.

Tonight I left North Cunningham from the back entrance on my way to a meeting at the B.S.U. center, when I was approached by three, young boys (teens) on the sidewalk. They asked me my name and where I was going and I quickly said "to a meeting" and kept walking. But they did not catch the clue. One of them insisted on walking with me even though I asked him not to. He was very friendly to me although I did not encourage him at all but told him he should go back to his friends. He asked lots of questions including where I was going. I told him I was late and friends were there expecting me. This did not bother him a bit. He walked all the way with me even up to the door continuing to encourage conversation. Luckily, he did not try to keep me from my meeting but by the time I got there I was very upset. I was not only mad at him for scaring me, but I was also upset at the fact that I had a good distance to walk and there just happened to be no one around that I could have asked for help if needed. Also, the sidewalks I had to walk were not lit and made the walk seem even more dangerous.

I know you are probably thinking I asked for trouble by walking alone and maybe I did, but one thing is for sure – I won't ever again. I just want to let other girls on campus know – no matter now tough you think you are, no matter how fast you think you can run, don't take the chance of walking alone on the campus. I have never felt so frightened before as I did tonight, and I never want a friend of mine or other female bothered the same way – or maybe worse.

A More Aware Student

To the Rotunda:

Being a member of CHI, I perhaps see this campus from a slightly altered perspective. Participating in CHI enables one to carry around a proud secret that others are blind to. This secret allows me to look objectively at campus goings-on and see our school like only a few Longwood students are enabled to do.

In looking through my secret, it seems Longwood happenings are not as pronounced in my vision as are student attitudes. Of course, to see spirited CHI watchers and other enthusiastic participants in the activity of our school serves as a reassurance of genuine school spirit and good feelings about our college. CHI has conditioned me to feel good about Longwood and all that it has to offer. I try to see the snags and hangups that occur as results of typical universal bureaucracy. Longwood is no worse than other institutions in regard to what can be disconcerting bureaucratic red tape. Perhaps, though, Longwood students have not realized that bureaucracy and an element of officialism are fundamental in the operation of an institution such as Longwood. This denial and expectation of simple perfection seems to be that which creates an underlying attitude of negativism among some students at Longwood.

The CHI secret causes me to look at this college with a traditional view. I see Longwood as a small, simple, liberal arts college with much to offer my eager student. Academically, much can be gained if a student seizes the opportunity to employ the very elements that note Longwood as a small school and distinguish us from mass-quantity education factories. Also, Longwood offers social opportunities that huge, impersonal institutions are unable to offer.

It seems that students who have been initially disconcerted by distracting bureaucracy have chosen to look no farther for the jewels of the college experience that Longwood has to offer. It is these attitudes that encourages the existence of CHI. The surreptitious workings of CHI serve to show students that the secret of Longwood does exist. Despite surface invisibility, there is a constant blue and white spirit surging beneath the bureaucracy. CHI's secrecy acknowledges that the spirit of Longwood is not constantly obvious and may be overshadowed by other concerns. For those who search, however, the effects of that spirit are not only obvious, but are also rewarding. This spirit is that which enables me, as a member of CHI, to see this campus a little differently. I am able to look past any disconcertments that ensue in my Longwood experience, and can see the positive influence of the Longwood spirit on my education.

In the blue and white spirit,
a member of CHI 1988
(name withheld for obvious reasons)

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to the editorial about the dining hall "serfs" with the nasty little tempers. If the employees have an attitude problem it's not because of the management; it's because we spend anywhere from thirty minutes to an hour and a half on Sunday nights cleaning ··· after the students who don't have the energy to pick up their mess. Workers are cursed at for simply asking someone to pick up after themselves and then they begin to build an amusing little monument for us to remember them by. I would like to see the editor who wrote this article get her ass in the dining hall for just one week and see if she doesn't develop a bad attitude towards the "customer."

The editor has also complained about food. Maybe better food could be bought, but a large part of the dining hall budget goes to student workers who have to pick up after other students. A lot more money could be spent on special events with good food but it's just not in the budget. If there are 20 workers on the weekend and they work an hour extra to clean up all three days and for 15 weeks per semester at 3.35/hr., that comes out to $30015 spent. And that's only the weekend. It's the same for breakfast and lunch 5 days a week.

Many have complained of Family Style dining. It is not up to ARA to decide – the administration sets the policies and ARA must follow these policies. So if the students of Longwood College wish to do away with family style they need to talk to the president.

Your dining hall serf

Dear Serf,

I am sorry to see that you have misinterpreted my editorial of 10/27 – it was not you (the student employees) whose "tempers" I was poking fun at, and the term 'serf' was used in a sympathetic way – or so I thought. Sorry for the ambiguity on my part – don't take it personally. As for seeing my ass .... C.G.

Dear Editor,

The parking situation has steadily gotten worse over the years that I have been attending Longwood. I do not think it is fair that I or anyone else is being inconvenienced. Last Thursday was the straw that finally broke the camel's back.

On Sunday, when I parked my car in the gravel parking lot near Iler, there were plenty of spaces. When I went to move my car on Thursday, I could not get it out because of the way some of the cars were parked in that lot. Someone had blocked one entrance and the other one was very tricky to get out of –almost impossible.

Needless to say, I was furious. I went back to my room and called Campus Police. I then went down and waited by my car for them to help me get my car out of the lot. When campus police arrived, it took the officer and me 15 minutes to get my car out. I would like to thank him for his help.

Also, to the person who has the answer to this question. When is Longwood going to solve this growing inconvenience of parking on campus.

An Infuriated Driver

Update The System, Please

There is an unfulfilled need in this country's education system. Instruction on the most recent events in our history is virtually non-existent at all levels, college included.

The typical high school American History program runs only to FDR and the New Deal by the end of the school year. Rarely is a follow-up course on events after the New Deal offered.

Perhaps the US has accumulated enough of a 'history' to merit starting a new required history class. The format could be one of current events, preceded by background information of occurrences that have led to present situations over the past forty years. Why is our immediate past ignored, while George, Thomas, and the rest of the gang are shoved down our throats numerous times during our school years? Students must be sick of the Constitution by the time they've studied it three or four times during their lives – this school year in particular. What about Watergate? Most people under the age of 25 or so are clueless when a name like Bob Woodward is mentioned – How about Vietnam? Watts? The Red Scare? Young inquiring minds want to know.

A Commentary: Is Longwood A "Utopia" College?

I have heard from time to time that Longwood College has been referred to a a suitcase college (a college where on weekends students "pack-up" and go off to various places: home, other schools etc.) However, recently it seems that this has been making a slight turnaround. Now I find, there are people who are "packing up" to come here to Longwood, believe it or not!

Many have often complained in the past that there is nothing to do here on the weekends, so they feel they must seek entertainment elsewhere. This makes sense; however, this year there are a lot of new faces here on weekends. More surprisingly, these faces belong to students who attend those colleges I found Longwood students to be "road-tripping" to in the past.

When I approached these nameless faces at various functions and questioned them on their whereabouts, they claimed to be from such schools as James Madison University, Radford and Virginia Tech.

What I want to know is, why would those who attend the "party schools" we roadtrip to, be coming to Longwood on the weekends? Could it be that socially we are all basically in the same predicament, always looking for the "utopia college"? Or is this just a temporary occurrence based on the more recent well-publicized weekends?

Oktoberfest was a prime example. Longwood became a city within itself. Everything you could ask for in the social scene was right at your fingertips. It was very peculiar to see how many people were roaming around campus that weekend.

I wonder if this has all been merely a fluke? Once the weather gets colder, will Longwood students be reverting to their old ways, or will there be more Longwood students taking on a new attitude?

Geist Nurtures School Spirit

Longwood has a reputation as a "suitcase" college. So what else is new? Not exactly new but not well-known either, is Geist, an honorary leadership fraternity that puts on Oktoberfest in the fall and the Bloodmobile in the spring.

"Geist" is a German word for "spirit," and the fraternity's duty is to promote school spirit (not an easy job to do at Longwood). Geist members, seniors with a G.P.A. higher than 2.5, are chosen in the late fall as juniors by current Geist members. After the new members have been picked, they begin to make ideas and plans for the following Oktoberfest, which takes nine to ten months to prepare.

In the past, Geist alone has taken care of all details, fund-raising and preparation for Oktoberfest. This year, with President JoJo Katz pushing for it, Geist's fourteen members voted and decided to carry out an idea that originated last year but wasn't acted upon. The large organizations on campus were contacted by Geist and, through one representative from each organization, asked to play a part in Oktoberfest.

According to Publicity Chairperson Anna Prow, these representatives formed a "steering committee," and "all organizations on campus became involved in their respective areas." For example, WCLX and the Rotunda helped with all publicity for Oktoberfest while Candy Dowdy and Sue Saunders helped Geist member Brian Blakemore appeal and overturn a rejection for a liquor license in the Bier Garten. The reason for a steering committee, says Geist Liason and Oktoberfest Co-Chairperson Jean Yancey, was that "fourteen people alone could not put on an Oktoberfest the way they visioned it being."

The large success of the Oktoberfest three weeks ago, believes Miss Prow, had a lot to do with the new steering committee: "More people became involved and then a lot of others were interested, I think, because everyone was participating."

A steering committee will be on the "list of suggestions" to the new Geist members, who will be planning, in coordination with the Red Cross, next semester's Bloodmobile. Of course, a steering committee alone won't mean success. "Everybody worked together this year in Geist, especially when time was running out, helping one another without complaining," said Miss Yancey.

Just maybe school spirit at Longwood is growing. Can you feel it?

New Album Is "Heaven On Earth"

By KRISTINA M. SMALL

As a member of the short-lived Go-Go's, Belinda Carlisle's music was fun and had no hidden meanings. Songs such as "Skidmards on My Heart", "Beatnick Beach" and "Cool Jerk" were characteristic of their style.

When Belinda went solo after the break up of the Go-Go's, her music took on a more definite pop sound as she strived to be accepted as a solo artist and shed the reputation of a leader of an all girl band. Her first album, "Belinda" was a step in that direction, producing one hit single, "Mad About You".

Her new album, "Heaven on Earth" has already produced a single "Heaven is a Place on Earth" that is in the top 20. This album will likely be more successful than her first solo effort.

Part of the credit for that success should go to Charolette Caffey, also a former Go-Go, who co-wrote four of the songs and to Thomas Dolby and Stevie Nicks who helped out on the album.

The album consists mainly of pop love songs that depict the trials and tribulations of relationships. In "Circle In the Sand" Belinda's sometimes quivering voice is strong and full of feeling as it describes unending devotion.

On the same note there are "World Without You", a song about the worthlessness of life without the one you love and a song seemingly about independence, "Nobody owns me (but you)". "Should I Let You In" is a timely song that questions intimacy in a society that has become socially cautious.

One song that stands out from all the others is Belinda's cover of Cream's late 60's hit "I Feel Free", a song that evokes the attitudes and feelings prevelent in the sixties.

Stay Aware!

Alcohol Awareness Week may be over, but the choices and issues raised by the week's events will continue to be relevant throughout the year. In order to continue to promote alcohol awareness, student organizations are encouraged to plan and implement an alcohol education program some time between now and Thanksgiving Break. If you and your organization would like to be eligible for one of three cash prizes, call the Student Development Office (392-9207) to register your program.

Programs will be judged on the following criteria:

1) originality
2) quality of effort
3) participation
4) promotes responsible use or non-use of alcohol

Prizes will be as follows: 1st Place-$150, 2nd Place-$100, and 3rd Place-$50.

For more information, please contact the Student Development Office (392-9207) or the Student Services Office (392-9210).

Sports

Player Of The Week

Senior field hockey forward Traci Strickland notched her ninth assist of the season in a 4-0 win over Mary Washington Sunday, setting a new Longwood record for assists in a season. For her performance, Strickland has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period October 25-November 1.

Strickland, Longwood's all-time leader in assists, actually broke her own record for assists in a season. She collected 8 last year to establish the record and surpassed it Sunday with her ninth of the season.

A four-year starter at Longwood, Strickland also scored 8 goals this season, giving her a career total of 24.

"Traci plays a superb right wing position," says coach Sue Finnie. "She has excellent stickwork and a strong center pass.

A foreign language major who plans to become a teacher, Strickland was named to the All-District III GTE-CoSIDA Academic All-America team last spring. She is a graduate of Bayside High School in Virginia Beach.

Hockey Team Finishes Season On An Up-Note

Sunday, Longwood notched its seventh shutout of the season in beating Mary Washington. Beanie Felch, Traci Strickland and Kris Meaney scored first half goals and Bingler added a goal in the second half. Strickland, Felch and Theresa Labyak had assists.

Strickland ended the season with a record nine assists, one more than the record of 8 she collected last season. She also had 8 goals for the year.

Sunday's game marked the final appearance for seniors Bingler, Strickland, Labyak, Meaney, Claye Conkwright and Becky Hardin.

"The senior leadership on this year's team was terrific," said Finnie. "I couldn't have asked for a better group of kids. Not only was this year's team one of the best in Longwood history, it was also one of the nicest."

Longwood outscored the opposition 50-21 for the year. The 50 goal total is the third highest goal total in school history.

Virginia Commonwealth rallied from 1-0 deficit with three second-half goals and defeated Longwood 3-2 in a rain-soaked game last Tuesday in Richmond.

Celeste Lloyd scored from 40 yards out on a side-in from Meaney to give Longwood a 1-0 lead at the half. After VCU tied the game early in the second half, Liz Annet scored on an assist from Goetz to put the Lady Lancers up 2-1. Annet ended the season with 10 goals, tops for the Lady Lancers.

The Rams came back with two goals, one on a corner and another on a penalty stroke, to take the victory.

Longwood notched impressive wins over Davis and Elkins, 2-1 Saturday, and Mary Washington, 4-0 Sunday, to close out the 1987 season with a 13-6-1 record. The 13 wins was the highest victory total for a Lady Lancer team since the 1975 squad finished 16-5-4.

Diane Brown and Laura Goetz on an assist from Diane Bingler scored first half goals Saturday as Longwood edged Davis and Elkins, a team which had beaten Virginia 3-0.

Goalkeeper Kim Howells made a game-saving play in the first half when she dived to stop a penalty stroke.

"It was a big win for us," said coach Sue Finnie. "We played really well."

Therapeutic Recreation And Recreation Information

By JOYCE LAMOND

The Country's first program to be accredited with a singular degree in Therapeutic Recreation was recently considered for re-accreditation and Longwood's Health, Physical Education and Recreation is proud to announce that the program has once again met the standards. The good news was announced at the National Recreation and Parks Association Conference in New Orleans September 17th. Representing Longwood at the conference were Dr. Judy Johnson, Health, Physical Education, and Recreation Department Chair; Janet Merling, Therapeutic Recreation Program Director, and Rena Koesler, Therapeutic Recreation instructor.

The Therapeutic Recreation Curriculum was first accredited in 1982 by the Council on Accreditation sponsored by the National Recreation and Park Association. To prepare for re-accreditation the Therapeutic Recreation program completed a self-study. In the spring of 1987, Dr. Ann James of Clemson University, the continuing Accreditation Representative, visited Longwood Campus to review the program. Dr. James seemed very pleased with her findings in her report to the council she stated "The depth and breadth of the Therapeutic Recreation Curriculum enables preparation...to a level that is not exceeded anywhere."

The preparation of a career in Therapeutic Recreation includes Therapeutic Recreation in a Medical Setting, Leader and Group Dyanamics, Supervision and Administration of Recreation, Developmental and Adaptive Activities, and two eight to ten week internships. Dr. James is once again quoted, "preparation in Therapeutic Recreation is unsurpassed as attested to by the intern supervisors and employers of Longwood graduates." Last year over 90% of the Therapeutic Recreation graduates were placed in jobs in their major field of study. A few of the jobs were in Psychiatric Hospitals, Children and Adult Rehabilitation Centers, Camp settings, Correctional Services, and Community Recreation resources.

For more information about the curriculum please contact Janet Merling at 392-9266.

The Therapeutic Recreation Department has been granted accreditation until 1992.

The Longwood Therapeutic Recreation Students would like to thank their Therapeutic Recreation staff and the Health, Physical Education and Recreation Department for their hard work and outstanding support!

Recreation 375, "Leadership Development Through Wilderness Pursuits" is no longer a brand new addition to the HPER Department curriculum. This spring semester will be the 2nd consecutive year that this unique combination of adventure and leadership development will be offered.

Unlike many of the courses taught here at Longwood College, this course will be based on experiential learning. Ropes course activities, backpacking, rockclimbing, rappelling, orienteering, outdoor cooking, and evacuation techniques are among some of the activities students will be involved in. Much of these topic areas will be covered in an outdoor environment with nearly half of the course time spent out of class.

Along with class sessions, there will be a backpacking trip, rockclimbing trip, and several day trips that will combine experience, knowledge, and skill, all of which are essential prerequisites to becoming a competent outdoor leader.

The focus of the course will be on group enteraction skills as well as individual competencies, as both areas are dependent on each other when successfully leading groups safely into the wild outdoors. With the support and encouragement from group members, students will have the opportunity to develop a leadership style which enhances self-confidence in making sound decisions.

No previous experience is necessary upon entering the course. Students who are genuinely interested in this dynamic leadership course are required to be in good academic standing and to participate in an interview process before registering for the course.

Any student, faculty, or staff members who have questions regarding the course, may contact Ms. Rena Koesler, Lancer Hall-Room 131, or call 392-9266.

A special slide presentation will be shown on Wednesday Nov. 5 in Bedford Auditorium at 7:00 p.m. This 25 minute slide presentation will provide you with a visual explanation of what you can expect from this wilderness course.

Sport Talk

Dear Gipper – Who do you think will win the Heisman Trophy? It's a very close race for the award this year. – WHO KNOWS

Your right: it's tough right now to pick a winner. The candidates are also playing well. I believe that Notre Dame's All-American wide receiver Tim Brown will win the Heisman. He has had an outstanding year so far, but they have yet to play the big games on their schedule.

Dear Gipper – What do you think about the incident involving Steve Bucknall and J. R. Reid, basketball players for U.N.C.?

I think the whole subject is ridiculous and blown out of proportion. I want to know why two North Carolina basketball players were in a bar at all. They're supposed to be getting ready for the season. Dean Smith does not seem to be keeping tabs on his players.

Dear gipper – What do you think about the NFL's new 50 man roster? –CONCERNED FAN

I think it is a great addition. This gives the teams a chance to get people on the roster to help them, and some of those replacement players will get another chance to place in the NFL.

Dear Gipper – Well, the Twins finally won the World Series. Do you think they can do it again? Tom Kelly is a great manager. – TWIN FANATIC

It's true, Tom Kelly did a super job this year: he got the Twins a Championship. The Twins' chances of repeating are slim to none. These days competition is too good for a team to repeat as champs in back to back years.

To have your sports questions answered by The Gipper just leave the questions in an envelope entitled SPORTS TALK at the Rotunda Newspaper office.

Longwood Grapplers Open Season Saturday

Longwood opens its 1987-88 wrestling season Saturday in the Winston-Salem State Tournament starting at 9 a.m.

The numbers say that Longwood wrestling is getting stronger each year, but an especially tough schedule may prevent this year's squad from topping last year's all-time best 9-4 dual match mark.

Coach Steve Nelson, who guided the Lancers to a Virginia College Division Tournament title last season, brought in an all-time high 20 new recruits. Currently, 27 grapplers are hitting the mat, giving Nelson the most depth he has had in seven years at Longwood.

"We are deep in several weight classes," said Nelson, "and we have some outstanding individuals, but as a team we'll be very young. Plus, we have a tremendously difficult schedule. It's the best schedule we've had."

Soccer Team Wins Over CNC As Posipanko Nabs 100th Victory

Longwood got a pair of assists from All-America candidate Ray Jones and goals from Jeff Robinson and Bill Moore enroute to a 2-0 soccer victory over Christopher-Newport Saturday afternoon on the Lancers' home field.

The win boosted Longwood, ranked ninth last week in Division II, to 12-3-1 with two regular season games remaining. Coach Rich Posipanko also claimed his 100th triumph Saturday. Since coming to Longwood in 1979, Posipanko has led Longwood to a 100-44-19 mark and three state titles.

With Saturday's win, Longwood may be on the verge of receiving its first bid to the NCAA Division II Playoffs. The Lancers host Averett Wednesday at 3:00 and visit rival Randolph-Macon for a 2:00 game Sunday afternoon to wrap up the regular season.

Now 3-0 in the Virginia Intercollegiate Soccer Association Eastern Division, Longwood is virtually assured of a return trip to the VISA (state) playoffs. First round VISA games are scheduled for Wednesday, November 11.

The NCAA Division II Soccer Championship will include 12 teams. Three teams each will come from the Northeast, Central and West regions, and two teams will be picked from the South region, of which Longwood is a member. One team will be selected nationally on an at-large basis.

Only three Virginia colleges have ever been represented in the NCAA Division II soccer tournament. James Madison was chosen in 1972, Randolph-Macon and Old Dominion in 1975 and Randolph-Macon again in 1976. ODU had the best showing, advancing to the quarterfinals.

Should Longwood receive a berth in the tournament, it would be the first time in 11 years that a Virginia team has been selected.

Posipanko expects to receive word about a bid to the NCAA Playoffs by Sunday.

"We have a good chance, but nothing is certain at this point," said the Longwood coach. "There are several teams in contention, so we'll just have to wait and see."

Lady Lancer Basketball Gearing Up For Season

Longwood's 1987-88 women's basketball team will feature a blend of youth and experience as the Lady Lancers seek to better last season's 13-14 record. Fifth year head coach Shirley Duncan (53-54) has seven veterans from last season, a two-year performer back after a year's absence, and four promising freshmen.

The Lady Lancers open the season November 20-21 in the Mount Olive Tournament, after hosting the Blue Angels in an exhibition game November 15.

Duncan feels the upcoming campaign will provide plenty of challenges. In fact, the Lady Lancers will be playing on the road 18 times in a 26-game regular season schedule.

"I think, first of all, we're real excited about our new people," said Duncan. "We have some quality freshmen, but we lost quite a bit from last season."

Longwood will have to do without career scoring leader Caren Forbes and Karen Boska, one of the program's top all-time centers who is now playing in Belgium. Forbes scored 16 ppg. and handed out 161 assists last year while Boska averaged 12.4 ppg. and 9.3 rpg.

"We have some big holes to fill, but we have a number of people who are eager to try. The team has been working hard. We're looking forward to the start of the season."

Men's Basketball

Chris Mullins, a 6-4 freshman guard from South Lakes High School, will be red-shirted this season, Longwood head basketball coach Cal Luther announced Friday.

December 7th Summit And Ginsburg

By MATT PETERMAN

☐ President Reagan and Soviet Leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev are expected to meet on December 7th to sign a treaty to ban intermediate range nuclear weapons.

In a letter to President Reagan, Gorbachev said it would take some weeks to iron out the details. The Reagan administration is optimistic about the meeting, however, the missile cuts were not as much as either side wanted.

The agreement eliminates medium range missiles with ranges between 300 and 3000 miles. Reagan said he would not give up the space based missile defense program, S.D.I. It was this very point that many thought would be a major snag to any agreement. The Soviets are reportedly developing their own.

The democrats response to the proposed treaty has been of cautious optimism. Sam Nunn, D-GA., Chairman of The Armed Services Committee says the summit should be cancelled if any agreement cannot if an agreement cannot be totally put in order.

☐ President Reagan chose his newest nominee for the vacant spot on The Supreme Court on Thursday, a week after his last nominee, Robert H. Bork, was rejected by the Senate. He chose Douglas H. Ginsburg, 41, who is also a strong conservative.

Reagan called for a quick confirmation process from The Senate Judiciary Committee. He expressed his hopes in his weekly radio address to the nation: "As the Senate takes up Judge Ginsburg's nomination, I hope that it will join me in defending the integrity and independance of the American system of Justice against the kind of campaign of pressure politics, we saw during the consideration of Judge Robert Bork's nomination."

Variety, Nutrition, And Budget

A Critique Of ARA

COMMENTARY

By MATT PETERMAN

With A.R.A. on the verge of continuing its annoyingly repetitious menus, The Rotunda decided to critique the dining hall in an attempt to point out its successes and flaws. If debate could be affected in any place on campus–maybe some ideas would trickle down to the director and these problems that seem to plague the dining hall from year to year can be changed.

Before I start to doing any pointing, let me say that the ultimate boss of any business is the consumer. Students must realize that when problems occur that they must find the manager on duty and alert them to this fact. If enough students complain about something at the point when it happens, something can be done to correct the situation then, rather than waiting for the next time, hoping it will not repeat is just not very effective. A.R.A. contends that if students want their voice heard they should go to the Dining Hall Committee meetings and let them know. Let's face it, this committee on the surface is a great idea and it looks good–but since no one really attends these meetings how good is it? Students must complain on the spot, just as they would if it were a restaurant. In reality, one may choose not to come back to a faulty restaurant, but this situation is different since A.R.A. is handed to the student without recourse.

A.R.A. does keep the menus varied to a certain degree, but quality gets lost at this point. Using Wednesday October 22 as a starting point to give them credit for the birthday dinner, let's take a look at variety with respect to the main courses that seem to repeat with frequency throughout the week. Chicken related foods occur 5 days in that week, hamburger related foods occur in 4, potatoes occur in 6, and misc fried foods occur in 7. These are taken without regard to breakfast which many of students don't eat, even if they have the 19-meal plan.

The majority of the food served is fried and as even the worst nutritionist will recognize that food prepared in this manner may taste good but it promotes heart disease. According to The American Heart Association, this disease is responsible for killing more people than any other, yet the majority of students claim they eat more fatty foods than non. I firmly believe that A.R.A. does think of each meal in relation to the next, trying to incorporate the four basic food groups into them. True, the food is available in the dining hall to eat a balanced diet, but it is presented in such a way that hardly anyone does. It is just to easy to get the saturated fats served in the main line.

A.R.A. does stick to its own prescribed budget by buying in bulk and planning how to use these bulk items so that they can be stretched out for a week as witnessed by the frequency in which these items are served. They take in account the season because these foods are usually cheaper when they are in season. Sticking to a budget is nice only to the point that variety doesn't suffer. And

For the first time ever, Longwood is running a Jeopardy Show. The contest is free to enter and is open to all Longwood students.

There will be a test administered on Wednesday, November 4th in Lancer room 207 at 6:00. All of the questions have been written by our faculty members. The questions are brief and multiple choice.

The top three scores will qualify to be in the show held Wednesday, November 11 in Bedford Auditorium at 7:30 p.m. The show is open for all to attend. The host of the show is former Longwood student and current assistant of admissions, Benji Smith.

The prizes will be as follows:
1st place: $75.00
2nd place: $50.00
3rd place: $25.00

All are encouraged to participate. Questions should be directed to Beth Peat 392-7406 or Box 930.

A poem by Doctor Craig Challender, Assistant Professor of English, has been accepted by Southern Poetry Review; "Flood," a three-part lyric, will appear in either the Fall 1987 or Spring 1988 issue of the Review.

ATTENTION!

Elections for: Honor Board, Judicial Board, and Senate Positions (see handbook for details) are approaching!

Petitions are due back in the information office on Nov. 13 by 5:00 p.m.!

NO EXCEPTIONS!

The Student Excursion Club's camping trip to Holliday Lake over the weekend of October 23-25 was a great success: despite the seasonably-cool weather, all of our members who participated enjoyed themselves on our Club's first off-campus activity.

Student Excursion is open to all currently-enrolled Longwood College students. We sponsor both on- and off- campus activities to get students involved with one another, and have many exciting plans for this school year. Our meetings are held every Tuesday night, 6:00 p.m. in the Red/White/Green Rooms in Lankford. Please attend!

Turkey Walk Is For Everyone

By MATT PETERMAN

The American Heart Association is waging a nationwide fight against cardiovascular disease. It is sponsoring a TURKEY WALK in an attempt to get everyone involved and somewhat aware of its impact on their lives. These diseases are responsible for killing more people each year than all other causes of death combined. They have the goal of reducing premature death and disability from heart diseases and to do this funds are needed, thus the TURKEY WALK.

"The TURKEY WALK is something for everyone: students, children, and adults," said Anne H. Huffman, Assistant Professor of Physical Education. She also says that there is no requirement of how far one must walk, just that everyone try, and in doing so get as many pledges as possible to support the effort.

To participate in the TURKEY WALK, get a hold of a participation form at Lancer Gym or contact your Physical Education or Health teacher. Then, find sponsors who will pledge a certain amount of money for each mile completed. Several options exist, for instance, pledges will be computed on how much distance one goes, instead of having to go a certain distance to collect. Also, single donations to the cause will be substitutable for a pledge.

The TURKEY WALK will take place Sunday, Nov. 15, at 1 p.m., everyone meeting at the Roses parking lot. The walk consists of a five-mile course. The event offers some prizes and include: $50 and a Long-Sleeve Shirt, $100, T-Shirt and Turkey; $250, T-Shirt, Turkey and Warm-Up Suit; $450, All of the above plus Radio Headphones.

LIT Initiates

The recently rejuvenated Longwood chapter of Lambda Iota Tau, the honorary literary fraternity initiated four new members on Wednesday, Oct. 21. One unofficial member was also formally enrolled at this ceremony.

Current students Dawn Breathwaite, Cathy Gaughman, Melissa Gibbs and Julia Polvent were the only eligible language majors who chose to join LIT this semester. Bess Stephens, a graduate who had previously fulfilled requirements for membership but was never officially initiated was included in the induction.

There are a number of other students who are eligible to be members of Lambda Iota Tau. "Pledges" must have a 3.0 average in all English classes and an overall GPA of 2.8 after completing at least four literature courses.

The objectives of LIT include promoting extra-curricular reading and study of literature in the college, stimulating effective self-expression through speech and writing, and giving support to the college magazine, The Gyre.

LIT will be initiating again on January 20. Interested parties should contact moderator Priscilla Ord in Grainger across from the language lab, or LIT President, Susan Alonso.

variety does suffer when certain foods on the menu are constantly repeating and boring the student to the point where he or she will begin tossing it into the garbage. Is this very cost effective?

A.R.A. has caught itself in a trap that they felt certain would never happen. They were trying to abide by the students likes and dislikes in attempt to please the student. They did a good job until the repetition factor came into play, thus boring the student with what he or she once liked. A.R.A. must reassess their menus and start over from scratch in order to come up with some fresh menu ideas and implement them at once, not slowly phase them in. They have just received a very lucrative multi-million dollar contract, beating out Marriott Corporation on other areas that did not pertain to food–the very fact that it should pertain to. A.R.A. promised to purchase new items to make the dining hall look better while Marriott wasn't committed to this principle as A.R.A. obviously was.

A.R.A. is a good service, but there are many areas that have to be improved to bring them around. Students must complain to the management when a problem exists so it won't be a problem any more, thus ridding the school of the useless Dining Hall Committee. The menus must be of a new variety or quality will slip out of control further. Consistent with this is nutritional value of the food served. The food should be served as a nourishing substance that is eaten to sustain life, provide energy, promote growth, etc., not as a temporary stomach filler as is the case now. They must eliminate waste at their level thus relieving at the students level with regarding to throwing food away. This would make it a more cost-effective approach that would make A.R.A. employees happier, and ultimately the consumer–the student.

Honor — Why Bother?

By KRISTINA SMALL

"Honor Why Bother" is the slogan for this year's Honor Awareness Week, which begins November 9 with an information table in front of Blackwell Dining Hall.

The idea behind the slogan, as explained by Michael Clements, Chair of Honor Board, is to make students aware that the honor system operates for their benefit, and if they believe in it they need to support it. "[The slogan] is to challenge the students to tell us why the system should continue. We don't want to see a blatant waste of student money. We don't want to spend their money on the honor system if they don't want it. A vote of 'no' from the students will say, 'no, we can't accept the responsibility of following a code of high morals and ethics.'"

The vote Clements is referring to is the student's opportunity to vote in an opinion poll on Friday, November 13 in the Rotunda. The poll's purpose is to test the students' support of the honor system and prove to the SGA and all those who are skeptical that students do honor the system and do want to be governed by it.

Clements wanted to pose that question to the students in a referendum, but met with resistance from the SGA who feared students would be uninformed and wouldn't understand the repercussions of not having an honor system.

Unfortunately, some students may not fully understand the ramifications of abolishing the honor code. Most notable of the changes would be the loss of due process. No longer would students have the privilege of defending themselves in a hearing if they are accused of lying, cheating, stealing or plagiarism.

If a teacher believed he had caught a student cheating, the teacher would have the final say in the matter. If he chose to fail that student, there would be no recourse for the student to take. "Not having an honor system takes away the student's ability to be responsible for their own action: it puts them back in high school." Commented Michael Clements.

Interested students can hear teachers' opinions of this issue on November 12 at 1:30 in the Red, White, and Green Rooms in Lankford.

Another aspect of the honor code that may be less obvious is its impact on education. "The presence of an honor system is an intergal part of the educational process. Students will not learn because they won't have to. Without an honor system, cheating and plagiarism could become prevalent and the easy way to get good grades. But where will students be in the workplace without the skills and knowledge they could have acquired in school?" asks Laura Landers Sergeant at Arms for the Honor Board.

Clements agrees that putting the existence of the honor system in the students' hands is risky, but he believes it is well worth it. He feels the turn-out will be stronger than the usual 10 to 15% of the student population who vote in other school elections. Clements hopes the vote will be positive and show the faculty that their opinion of students not supporting the system is wrong."

"What do you think Longwood would be like without an honor system?"

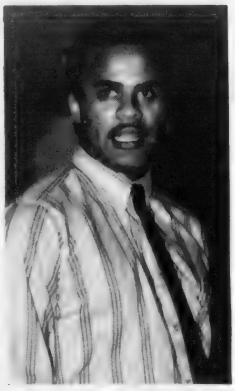
"I wouldn't want to think of Longwood without an honor system. What would the world be like without personal honor? We are a community of scholars...what would we do as an educational environment without personal honor?...it instills the value of honor in our students." – Dr. Jocks

"I have worked in schools without honor systems and can see that those that operate under an honor system make everyones' life go better. I enjoy knowing I can instutionally trust students, if I had to verify everything it would make my job three times harder. I believe things that may sound peculiar because of the honor code." – Joe McGill, Director of Student Services

"Without the honor system, a degree from Longwood would be worthless, what would it be based on? Everyone would know it wasn't worked for." – Renee Smith

"The teachers would have the final say if they believed you had cheated. It's hard to take a test with the added pressure of a teacher watching you to make sure you're not cheating, it makes me nervous." – Sofia Pandazides

"If people would pay attention to it, it would work." – Michelle Scudder



"The honor code makes people think twice before they break the rules." – Denise Braswell

"It would probably be the same as it is now, because no one pays attention to the honor code, except me!" – Jon Connell

"At first all hell would break loose and everyone would take advantage of it. Right now, as a whole, the system is not honored by students. If you take it away there would be pandamonium." – Cathy Gaughran

"It would not be better or worse. It would be more efficient. Teachers could immediately deal with problems and there would not be a need for so many meetings. We would lose the opportunity to develop important parts of the students' education, which include being responsible for your own actions, and taking responsibility for the actions of your peers, though. If we want a police state we need efficiency. If we want a college we need people to learn to be responsible." – Dr. Donald Stuart VP Academic Affairs

"I don't think much about the honor system because I don't think it is being abused so severely" – Jeff Symanski

Ricky Says 'Yes'

Yes, Ricky Otey will be running for the position of SGA President once again. His decision was announced in a press conference this past week.

. . . And these are the reporters who were there to get the scoop!

Gottlieb To Speak Tonight At 8 p.m.

One of America's newest and most unique speakers to surface in decades is Phyllis-Golden Gottlieb.

Ms. Gottlieb is currently the Director of Comedy Series Development for Lorimar-Telepictures in Los Angeles. Her career ascension to this prestigious position was not the overnight success story of which movies are made, but a real-life pursuit of personal tenacity and perseverance.

Phyllis Golden-Gottlieb is an incredible and spirited individual, entrepreneur and businesswoman who has inspired and motivated audiences across America.

Miss Gottlieb will be on campus today, Tuesday, Nov. 10. After spending time with various student organizations, she will be speaking in the Lankford Gold Room from 8 to 10 p.m. Her topic is "Breaking Down the Doors to Hollywood." There is no admittance fee, and all are urged to attend.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor;

I am writing in response to the negative critique of the dining hall in the Nov. 3 edition of The Rotunda. When I came here in the fall of 1981, I was an eighteen year old freshman and the dining hall was horrible. The feeling I received from Blackwell Dining Room seemed to say, 'We already have your money and we really don't care whether you are happy or not, just fill your stomach and leave.'

The dining hall has improved greatly over the last six years. Many students do not remember the introduction of the salad bar or even the opening of the Rotunda Market; I do. Frankly, I'm excited about the new dining hall. The variety of dishes offered at each meal is astounding and I enjoy the choices I am allowed to make in my diet. Rick Johnson is doing a terrific job and has brought the quality of the food and atmosphere upwards by an immeasurable amount. It is clear that the dining hall service now cares about the customers and wants them to be happy and have an excellent meal.

Some students are not going to be satisfied with anything but Mom's Home Cooking. Matt Peterman's article was interesting and the thought was well developed; however, I disagree with most of what was said. Perhaps the Dining Hall Committee is useless because there is no major need for one. Student apathy may not be the cause for the lack of attendance; student satisfaction may be the reason.

Each student should try living in his or her own apartment and cooking for himself or herself before knocking the dining hall. Variety does not seem to matter much when one is on a tight budget. There are a million different ways to prepare macaroni and cheese but pasta is still the main ingredient. Cooking for one is quite perfunctory and then there are dishes left to clean.

Thanks to the ministrations of people like Rick Johnson and Sheri Nunn, I no longer feel an overwhelming need to scream every time I walk into the dining hall; in fact, sometimes I find myself smiling.

Tom Richard

Dear Editor,

[This is in response to last week's editorial.]

If one seeks to know more about "post-current" history, he or she may need only step over to the public or school library and find out. There are (literally) tons of books written on almost every major event that took place in the last twenty-five years. Why not ask a librarian for guidance? Or, better yet, ask one of Longwood's several history instructors where to start.

On the reverse side, Editor, I have a question for you – why does it have to take a class to know about or understand such subjects? Whatever happens to private initiative? You know, doing it yourself? Or is one's education linked only to what he or she have been taught in the classroom? A "teach me or I'll never know" type-deal?

It is exactly this kind of inertia that makes you "wonder" in the first place.

Tim Hash,
South Cunningham

Dear Mr. Hash,

You are absolutely correct in saying that anybody who wishes to can go to the library and read up on whatever topic he desires. The fact still remains that there are people who will not do this when perhaps they should. What is the purpose of our education system if it is not to educate? What if the ten o'clock news team decided to leave it up to us to do our own research on the day's events? Would we ever know what was going on? The same is true for education: if it is not presented to us, most of us will live without it rather than go out and find it ourselves.

How many good books have you read on the Cold War lately? How many seventh graders do you know who have been keeping up with their Martin Luther King, Jr. free-time reading? It is the responsibility of the education system in our country to insure that you and that seventh grader do know about such things, as they have an immediate effect on the world you live in. It should not be assumed that you will take the initiative to do this work yourself. What if you were left to learn calculus on your own? Same idea here.

CG

The time has arrived again, when everything we have worked for all semester is finally coming together, especially for freshmen. Everyone can relate to the first week of confusion at the beginning of this semester, whether they were a senior or just coming to this school for the first time.

We all know the apprehension of receiving your syllabus, seeing how "easy" your professor really is, finding out what it's like to "live" with your best friend from last year, and the format of your western civ tests.

Now in November, steadily approaching Thanksgiving break, what was all new to us in August is starting to make sense. We now know the classes we can and cannot skip, what time the guy or girl we've been scamming on all semester is at dinner, exactly how long it takes to shower, dress and walk to Grainger from Frazer on Friday morning after DT's and to always expect a 30pt essay on all of your econ tests. Even though we are going through the time span where all professors are cramming in tests before break we still can take one last breather before a deluge of finals will overcome our every second. So go out and party one more time because before we all know it the damage will be done, and we'll be awaiting the mail after Christmas to see what we have and have not passed!

Dr. Minks Says Entrepreneurship 'Hope For Future'

By MATT PETERMAN

Dr. Larry Minks, Associate Professor of Business and Director of Longwood Business Innovation Center, spoke to members of the Society for the Advancement of Management (SAM) last Thursday concerning his work. He also spoke passionately for entrepreneurs and their role in the future of the United States.

He cited a series of statistics, all with the same basic message – American corporations may be worth taking a second look at. "Ten percent of the people running these corporations don't even own stock in the company; corporations have terminated 15% of the work force (in past years)," he said.

Twenty-five percent of people working for corporations claim they are at their full potential, one-half claim they put in the minimum work to hold the job, another one-half claim they do more than necessary to hold the job, according to Dr. Minks.

"We may be entering the age of Entrepreneurship," he said. "Five out of ten new jobs created are from small business," he continued.

The United States "has to create fertile soil for new business – it is the hope for (the) future economy," he stated. Many people find themselves looking at entreprenuership later in life after finding themselves fed up with the beauracracy of big corporations he suggested.

Students "owe it to themselves to do some reading," Dr. Minks said. They should come by the Business Innovation Center to look at materials available because, "it is a fascinating field . . . as a career option or just to look at things going on," he says.

The United States has 3 major strengths over most countries. 1) a very large number of starting businesses, 2) our venture capital and financing machines is the envy of the world, and 3) the large number of young people and ideas. "Money is no problem," Minks says, as long as you develop a business concept; in other words, an accountant, a lawyer, and a business plan.

Campus Police Receive "New" Cars

By REBECCA NEHER

Campus Police have bought two new police cars. Well, not exactly new, but new to them. The cars, (1) 1983 Chevrolet and (2) 1982's, each have 100,000 miles on them.

Purchased from the Virginia State Police for $1,000 apiece, a price found to be within their budget, Chief Husky considers the new additions a sound investment. The cars look new because of a new coat of paint and are sure to last much longer than the old worn out cars would have.

Chief Husky was advised by the Director of Central Virginia Criminal Justice Training Center to purchase these "new" cars to keep up with current standards. The compact cars were deemed inadequate.

Operating within a strict budget Chief Husky has been able to buy the three cars as well as new radios and other equipment, as well as pay for two new parking lots.

Although Husky was not upset by the recent letter to the editor, concerning police vehicles on campus he would like the students to know the facts before jumping to conclusions.

Syphilis On The Rise

By TAYLOR STEPHANS

Despite the recent focus on safe-sex practices to prevent sexually transmitted diseases, syphilis is on the rise. More than 8,200 new cases of syphilis were reported in the first quarter of 1987, an increase of almost 23 percent from the same period last year, according to researchers at the center for Disease Control (CDC). This increase is the largest in more than a decade and reverses a five-year downward trend in the incidence of the disease. Fewer homosexuals and bisexuals are developing the disease, but more heterosexuals are being affected. In my source, it is said that the decline in the number of cases among homosexuals and bisexuals reflects the following of safe-sex practices and a decrease in the number of partners. The problem seems to be that heterosexuals may not be taking the same precautions!

Hampden-Sydney President Inaugurated

BY MATT PETERMAN

Dr. James R. Leutze was formally inaugurated as the new President of Hampden-Sydney College Saturday. He is a former history professor at the University of North Carolina and directed their Curriculum on Peace, War and Defense.

Dr. Leutze, President-Elect of the college since being appointed in July, has plans for the college to slowly expand to 1200 from its present 800 students. In doing this he feels that the college must reach out to all ethnic and economic backgrounds.

Being the host of an international affairs show, "Globewatch," Mr. Leutze realized the importance of students becoming familiar with world events and is proposing that more students study abroad. He would also like to bring in more faculty from different parts of the world.

The former President, Josiah Bunting, left the college last summer to take on the job as headmaster of Lawrenceville School in New Jersey.

Shorts

Dr. Kathleen Flanagan, Assistant Professor of English, will give a lecture Wednesday afternoon, Nov 11, at 4:45 in French Lounge. Her topic is "The Orient as Pretext for Aesthetic and Cultural Revolution in Modern English Poetry." Dr. Flanagan was in Taiwan from 1979 to 1981, teaching at Tunghai University and at the YMCA Language School in Kaohsiung. In the summer of 1986, she did research for her doctoral dissertation at Beijing University in the People's Republic of China.

Ginsburg Withdrawn, Summit In Amman, And Terrorism

By MATT PETERMAN

☐ Last Saturday, Douglas H. Ginsburg asked President Reagan to withdraw his name from consideration to The Supreme Court.

Ginsburg complained that his view of the law had been clouded after aspects of his personal life were revealed. Particularly, his use of marijuana,the knowledge of which eroded much of his conservative support in Congress.

Reagan said in a statement: "I commended Judge Ginsburg for his record and qualifications when I announced his selection and I commend his selflessness and clear thinking now."

☐ An Arab League Summit opened in Amman, Jordan on Sunday to act on Iran's resistance against accepting a United Nations backed peace resolution. The goal of many of the Arab states is to break ties with Iran, but resistance from Syria could spoil this plan. Syria supports Iran in its war against Iraq.

It is also expected that Egypt will be back in the League after being kicked out as a result of signing the 1979 Peace Treaty with Israel.

About the same time the summit was meeting on Sunday, Iran fired two missles into the Iraqi Capital of Baghdad, taking the lives of many civilians.

Iran claims to be retaliating for Iraqi sponsored attacks of the last few days.

☐ A bomb exploded in Northern Ireland on Sunday killing about 10 people and injuring dozens of others. It came on British Remembrance Day, a day comparable to Memorial Day in the United States. Prime Minister Thatcher condemned the action and called it a "cruel and callous act."

The Irish Republican Army is believed to have been behind the attack.

New "Small" Parking Lot

By REBECCA NEHER

Another new "small" parking lot has been provided for Longwood College students. The new lot, located on Race Street across from Wygal, has approximately 20 parking spaces. Campus Police Chief Husky's feelings is that the lot is not very big, but every little bit helps.

The gravel parking lot is open to both dorm students and day students.

A few other parking alternatives are being taken under consideration. One is to add parking at the Wynne building: another is to allow parking on Franklin Street. Chief Husky is looking at every possibility in order to increase parking spaces.

The faculty are also complaining about the lack of parking. Chief Husky totalled the number of faculty/staff cars registered and subtracted from the number of spaces available – there is a shortage.

If you come on Campus late at night and you cannot find a parking spot, Chief Husky says you should contact campus police and tell them you are parking in a faculty lot. This will prevent the possibility of getting a ticket.

The police are willing to work the students with the parking situation: they understand the problem and are working to correct it.

F-15 Fighter Jets Practice In Farmville Skies

By MATT PETERMAN

According to The Richmond Times Dispatch, a meeting was held last Thursday night to discuss how the F-15's are using the Southside skies.

"The meeting was sponsored by the Piedmont Planning District Commission, which requested that the Air Force speak to residents of the area after one of the jets from Langley crashed in Amelia County woods in June.

"The F-15, a $26 million airplane, is better able to fight at low altitudes than the previous generation of fighters. Hence, F-15 pilots need a place to practice low-altitude maneuvers over land.

"Southside Virginia was chosen four years ago because it is sparsely populated, has limited commercial air traffic and is reasonably close to Langley." Langley Air Force Base is located in Hampton, Virginia.

The aircraft is allowed to fly in the skies of Farmville during restricted times and can fly as low as 300 feet to the ground. While doing maneuvers, it cannot fly any closer to the ground than 500 feet. "The F-15's are allowed to use the area for practice from sunrise to 9:30 a.m. and from 4 to 5 p.m."

The jets fly over Longwood College at a speed of about 500 miles per hour. "When they do fly over, you know they are there, at least for a couple of seconds," said Karen Ridgly, a Longwood freshman. "Since you don't hear it everyday, it's not much of a bother," said another Longwood student.

"The F-15's cost $3,000 an hour to operate and can fly only an hour and 20 minutes on a tank of fuel."

The preceding excerpts were taken from the Richmond Times Dispatch, Saturday, November 7, 1987. The article quoted is by Overton McGehee and excepts are printed with permission.

Patio-Deck Outside Lankford To Be Built

By REBECCA NEHER

Many people are wondering about the patio-deck to be built outside of the Student Union building. After an extensive interview with Paul Striffolino, head of Student Union, we discovered their plans.

This patio, named "The Deck" will extend 34 feet covering the now existing concrete. It will not cut into the grass. The concrete will be covered with quarry tile of a canyon red color.

This new outdoor eating area will be manned by waitresses and waiters as part of Lancer Cafe. Included will be a varied menu and maybe a salad bar. There will be a total of 13 lounge style tables with chairs, topped off by brightly colored umbrellas.

The big bushes will be pulled up and in their place will go two raised wooden decks approximately 2 feet high, ringed with flower boxes and hanging plants. Between the two decks is the sidewalk leading to Stubbs: across this area will be a trellis to create an entrance way.

The whole idea is to encourage students to study and meet friends in this area. The project, costing $15-18,000 will hopefully be completed by Spring.

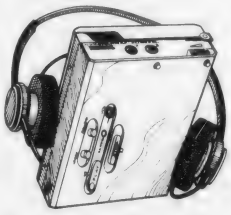
"Where The Heavens Is This?"

Be the first one to return your correct guess and win a free Coke from the Lancer Cafe'. Send your guess to Box 1133. Last week's winner was Robert George.

The Bible story of Adam and Eve does not say, as popularly believed, that they were driven from the Garden of Eden as punishment for eating the forbidden fruit. The punishment was pain and sorrow in childbirth for Eve, and thorns and thistles to make Adam live by the sweat of his brow. Afterward, the Bible says the Lord feared the two would also eat of "the tree of life" and live forever, so He drove them from the Garden of Eden to sweat and toil outside its boundaries.

Superstar Celebration:



Mac Is Back

By DWIGHT HODGES

Fleetwood Mac is a band that has been together for twenty years. In the late 60's and early 70's the band consisted of Mick Fleetwood, John and Christine McVie, Jeromy Spencer, Peter Green, and Bob Welch. This early line up played mostly blues and were popular in England. In 1975 Spencer, Green, and Welch left the group.

A search for new members was carried out and Lindsey Buckingham and Stevie Nicks were brought in after the group heard their album. The band came together and made the new self-titled album in less than a week. This album broke Warners Brothers record for sales of an album. Hits such as "Say You Love Me" and "Rhiannon" established the group as a California based rock band. Nicks and Buckingham were the definite spark needed for success.

The band went on tour and it was during this time that the McVies got divorced and Nicks and Buckingham broke off their long term relationship. Despite the breakups, the band decided to remain as a group. This proved to be a positive effect for their next album "Rumours". Each of the songwriters put their emotions and feelings into the songs. "Dreams" and "Go Your Own Way" are examples of how Nicks and Buckingham got out their feelings for each other. "Rumours" is somewhat of a phenomenon in the record industry because it has sold over twenty million copies to date, second only to Michael Jackson's "Thriller".

The group followed up the album with an extensive tour, which did a lot of damage to Nick's voice.

The next album posed a serious problem for the group. How do you follow up an album like "Rumours"? The Beatles faced this problem after the "Sgt. Pepper" album and like the experimental "White" album Fleetwood Mac came out with "Tusk". The album was experimental in that it didn't try the successful formulas of "Rumours." Buckingham tried different things such as using the UCLA marching band for the title song.

Not all the members of the band were happy with the album. Nicks described the making of "Tusk" as being held captive by the Ayatolla with Buckingham as the Ayatolla. If "Tusk" did anything it showed that Nicks and Buckingham were ready for solo careers.

In 1981 Nicks released "Bella Donna" which went to number one in a few weeks and three top ten hits shortly followed. Buckingham also released a solo album but did poorly.

In 1982 the band performed in France and produced "Mirage." "Mirage" was the exact opposite of "Tusk" in that there was no new experimenting. Christine McVie is credited for saving the album form failure with hits like "Hold Me" and "Love in Store." "Gypsy", one of Nicks' songs, was also a hit but it looked as if she was saving her best material for her solo career.

The Mirage tour was cut short due to Nicks having to leave and work on her second album, "The Wild Heart." That album went multi-platinum and had three top forty hits.

It looked as if Fleetwood Mac had finally ended because McVie, Buckingham, and Fleetwood were all planning solo albums.

In 1985 a new album was being planned but Nicks was already in the studio for her third album, "Rock A Little." The album was released and Nicks went on tour. It was at this time that Fleetwood Mac decided that they couldn't wait for her and started on the album anyway.

The new album, "Tango in the Night," was Buckingham's farewell album. He decided to leave the band and work on his solo album. He was replaced by Billy Burnette and John Vito, who have toured with the band before.

After their current tour Stevie Nicks plans to release her fourth album and then once again rejoin Fletwood Mac for their next album.

ATTENTION!

On October 29th, 5 video tapes were stolen out of a 1977 VW parked on High Street, across from Longwood College.

These tapes were irreplaceable because they contained footage of a dear friend who was killed on September 10, 1987.

They were being edited for Christmas presents for his family and friends.

If anyone knows the whereabouts of these tapes please call 392-7068 and a reward will be offered.

The tapes may also be dropped in any mailbox in Farmville— No address is necessary.

Nat (Bed time story teller) – Sorry for the intense situation on Wed. night! I hope it didn't leave a bad impression on you. Maybe we can try again or do something else? Let me try and make up, if there are no CONFLICTIONS. Love – The friendly ghost

By DAVE MUSTAINE

Every Tuesday night from 8-10 p.m. you can tune in to WLCX, 90.1 FM, and hear an energetic form of music played by an energetic disc jokey. The style of music is thrash and heavy metal and the DJ is Barry Green. Barry, a 23 yr. old senior, plays an ever-growing popular music style.

BARRY GREEN

This year Barry hosts the "Audio Assault". He plays everything from the early form of metal in the 70's like Black Sabbath, Kiss, Aerosmith, and Thin Lizzy up the modern form of trash or speed metal like Metallica, Megadeath, Anthrax, and Slayer. Barry says that the metal of the 70's was stagnant and slow.

80's metal, thrash, is sped up so that the lyrics are almost uncomprehensible. He describes thrash metal as "raw energy: it is the energy and speed of punk music with the musicianmanship of metal." This music was quite popular with the underground but recently became popular with mainstream metal fans with the signing of modern metal groups to major record labels.

This type of music has been a controversial subject. It is often said to be a form of revolt and to express satanic images and violence. Barry is opposed to these stereotypes that this music receives. He believes that it is a form of revolt, but this is what the whole Rock-n-Roll concept is about. The satanic image is just a gimmick used by bands to create something out of the ordinary. As the music has become more intense, so has the satanic gimmicks.

As for violence, Barry feels that "If someone is going to commit a crime or commit suicide from listening to a song then they are very mentally unstable in the first place and the song can't be blamed for that."

The main thing that Barry wants people to know about heavy metal is that it is fun. It is something you can enjoy if you just give it a chance, so tune in on Tuesday nights and experience a different and entertaining type of music.

WRESTLERS HAD A CLASSIC WEEKEND

Longwood bagged championships in three weight classes and placed seven grapplers in the top five at the Winston-Salem State Wrestling Classic Saturday in Winston-Salem, North Carolina.

Winning titles were Eion Kelly at 126, John Stukes at 134 and Ted Proctor at 142. Other place winners for Longwood were Jesus Strauss, third at heavyweight, Tommy Gilbert, fourth at 142, Dave Taylor, fifth at 177 and Doug Hartley, fifth at 190.

"He did very well," said coach Steve Nelson. "It was probably our most impressive showing ever in a tournament of this stature. When the final round came (six mats were used) we had four guys wrestling and two waiting to come on the mat."

Among the 14 colleges taking part, only Pembroke won as many individual titles as Longwood. Six Division I teams were entered, including Virginia Tech, Furman, Davidson, The Citadel and Campbell.

"It was a tough tournament with over 180 wrestlers taking part," said Nelson. "We started off the season very well."

Kelly (4-0) won four decisions and beat a Hokie wrestler 4-1 in the finals. Stukes and Proctor were both 5-0 for the day. Stukes rallied to win 10-9 in the finals over LeClair of Campbell. He won his earlier matches by scores of 8-3, 8-4, 16-0 and 17-4.

Proctor notched two pins, 2-0 and 8-5 decisions, and rallied for a 9-7 triumph in the finals over Carwise of Livingstone. Strauss was 3-1, Gilbert 5-2, Taylor 3-2 and Hartley 4-2. Andy Mautner had a 3-2 mark with two pins, but did not place.

Next up for Longwood is the Pembroke State Tournament Friday and Saturday which will feature an even more rugged field of teams. The Lancers' home opener is just a week away November 17 when William and Mary visits at 7:30.

Longwood Awaits Word On NCAA Bid

Longwood, ranked 9th this week in Division II, is still in the running for a berth in the NCAA Division II Tournament, but will not receive word from the South Regional Selection Committee until Sunday. The Lancers close out regular season play at Randolph-Macon Sunday at 2:00.

Wednesday Longwood got two goals from freshman Ray Jones and Bill Moore, and one each from Jeff Robinson, Nick Ruebel, and Rodney Funk.

Jones added two assists. Moore, Robinson, Ruebel and Toby Timmons added an assist each. Jones now has a record 29 goals to go with 10 assists. Ruebel upped his totals to seven goals and five assists.

Longwood, which out-shot Averett 50-4, tied the team record for goals in a season (62). The Lancers have outscored the opposition 62-14.

Freshman goalkeeper Jeff Chewning got the shutout Wednesday as Longwood notched its ninth shutout of the year.

Lancer Fullbacks Say "Backs Are People Too!"

The Longwood Lancer Soccer Team is having another great season. The team is presently 13-3-1, and is having a very productive year. One thing Longwood fans don't realize is that the defense has played a big part in the success of the team.

The phrase "Backs are People Too!!", is the motto of the Longwood fullbacks this year. Rich Venere, Jeff Robinson, Mike Harris, and Mitch Rubin make up the group. When asked where the phrase came from, Junior Rich Venere had this to say, "The phrase is our motivation. It helps us realize the job we have to do in the games." Venere also commented, "The fullbacks do a lot of hard work during the game, but don't get the headlines the goal scorers do."

Senior Jeff Robinson, (known as "Roz" to his friends), has been with the Lancers for 4 years. He has played with many great players during his time at Longwood.

Robinson had these comments about the fullbacks on this year's squad, "I feel we're a good hard working group. We haven't played together before, but we really have jelled as a unit." Robinson went on to say, "Fullback is a very hard position to play in college soccer. the four of us take a lot of pride in our group, and our phrase."

Mike Harris, a Junior from Mt. Holly, New Jersey, is back on the team after a year's vacation. Harris has been welcomed back with open arms, and his hard aggressive play has helped the team. Harris is affectionately known to his teammates and friends as "Weasel." Harris had these thoughts, "I really enjoy playing with Mitch, Rich, and Roz. The Phrase bonds us together." Mitch continued, "We're not the flashy players on the team, We're the Scrappers!!!"

Mitch Rubin, a freshman from East Brunswick, N.J. rounds out the fullbacks. When asked how it feels to be a freshman starting on Longwood's team, Mitch had these comments:

"I've had big shoes to fill with the graduation of Eric Karn. The other backs have really helped me adjust." Mitch went on to say, "The phrase (Backs Are People Too!) is just something to get us motivated."

So now if you attend a Longwood Soccer game and you hear that phrase, remember: "Backs Are People Too!!"

Longwood plays home Wednesday against Liberty University in the Virginia Intercollegiate Soccer Tournament. Be there!!

Basketball On The Farmville Airwaves

Nine Longwood men's basketball games will be broadcast live this season over the facilities of both WLCX and WFLO. The first broadcasts will be aired by WLCX 90.1 FM, starting with the Par-Bil's Tip Off Tournament. The next six games can be heard on WFLO FM.

The play by play action will be handled by Sonny Merchant, a senior sports communication major at Longwood, and the color commentary by Stuart Hallet also a senior at Longwood majoring in business.

Stuart worked as promotional director for the men's basketball team last season and has had an extensive background in basketball since before his high school years. Sonny has been the General Manager and an announcer for WLCX for the past two and a half years. He has also worked as an announcer for WSVS in nearby Crewe, VA. during his sophomore year.

Men's Baseball

Longwood Baseball Coach Buddy Bolding is tops in Division II. Bolding ranks among the top in both wins and winning percentage among Division II coaches. These figures were collected by the National Collegiate Baseball Writers. Bolding's career mark is 237-102-2.

Girl's Gymnastics

Longwood's Girls 'Gymnastic Team had a very impressive start to their season with an exhibition on Oct. 29. With seasoned veterans, and the best group of newcomers ever, Coach Ruth Budd is optimistic. As usual, Longwood faces a tough schedule. North Carolina State comes to Farmville Jan. 24.

Men's Basketball

Spencer Smith, a 6'5 Junior transfer from Emory and Henry College, is recuperating well from a pre-season knee injury. Smith has been nagged with injuries, but should be back to help the Lancers this year.

Men's Soccer

Senior Dave Goerke from Ciniminson, N.J. and Freshman Ray Jones from Smith's Parrish, Bermuda were both honored this year by Longwood College for breaking school records. Goerke, the team's Goalie, broke the school record for shutouts with 7. His goal against average is 0.71. Ray Jones, a forward on the team, broke the school's record for most goals in a season with 25. The previous record was 22 by Gus Leal.

ATTENTION PE MAJORS

Tuesday November 10th at 8:00 o'clock p.m. in Lancer Hall room 207 there will be an open forum entitled All Those Questions You've Always Wanted To Ask And Never Had the Chance. There will be four Longwood Physical Education Alumni coming to speak and answer any questions you may have. All four teachers are very successful and their past experience will provide very valuable information for those who are about to enter the teaching environment.

All are encouraged to participate. Questions should be directed to Tina Hall, 392-7641 or Box 476.

Basketball Team Young But Eager

Longwood will open play in men's basketball November 20-21 in the fifth Par-Bil's Tip-Off Tournament with one of the youngest teams in its history.

The Lancers, 13-14 last season, will play Clinch Valley and Pace will square off with East Stroudsburg November 20 in Farmville. Par-Bil's Food Store is sponsoring the tip-off tournament for the fifth straight year.

As head coach Cal Luther readies his team for the season, four starting spots are pretty well settled, but the fifth position is up for grabs with several players in contention.

Likely starters will include 6-4 junior Darryl Rutley and 6-4 sophomore Kevin Jefferson at the forwards, 6-8 sophomore Doug Poppe at center and 6-3 sophomore Dale Shavers at one guard. Junior guard Bobby Dobson had been leading the chase for the fifth spot, but it was learned last week that Dobson will not be eligible until January.

Freshman Joe Lowe and junior Tony Good are possibilities for the other guard position or Luther may elect to go with a bigger lineup. Red-shirt freshman Greg Holloway, 6-6, has looked good in preseason workouts and could start, moving Rutley to the backcourt. Holloway is a solid shooter in the lane area.

"We have a number of players who could earn a starting position," said Luther. "We'll just have to wait and see who progresses the most over the next two weeks."

No matter who starts, the best way to describe this Longwood team is YOUNG. Luther says it may be the youngest team he has ever coached.

"We don't have a senior on the squad," said the coach. "We have gotten good leadership from Rutley and Jefferson, but you have to remember that they have only been with us one season."

Luther is hoping that his squad will make up for its lack of experience with hustle and enthusiasm.

"I've found this team to be very coachable and eager to learn. We've gotten a lot accomplished in practice, but we still have a long way to go."

Soccer Team Still In Contention

Longwood, ranked 9th last week in Division II, got its 20th shutout Sunday and set a new school record for goals in a season with 64. The old mark of 62 was set in 1981. Just 14 goals have been scored by LC opponents this season.

Coach Rich Posipanko's squad also got a record-tying 10th shutout behind goalkeeper Dave Goerke. Goerke has been in goal for a record nine of those shutouts. Longwood got the shutout despite the fact that three defensive starters missed the game at Randolph-Macon.

Freshman sweeper Mitch Rubin and backs Mike Harris and Jeff Robinson did not play Sunday in Ashland. Rubin is out with an ankle injury while Harris and Robinson missed the game for personal reasons.

Paul Sidhu filled in at sweeper, while Nick Ruebel moved to back from midfield and Nils McCarty and Toby Timmons also saw action on the back line.

McCarty and Mike Edge had goals for Longwood while Ruebel and John Barone recorded assists. Ruebel now has seven goals and six assists while Barone has had nine assists.

Wednesday in a 7-0 shutout of Averett, Longwood got two goals from freshman Ray Jones and Bill Moore, and one each from Robinson, Ruebel and Rodney Funk.

Jones added two assists, while Moore, Robinson, Ruebel and Timmons added an assist each. Jones now has a record 29 goals to go with 10 assists.

Freshman goalkeeper Jeff Chewning got the shutout Wednesday.

Longwood, 13-3-1 overall and 4-0 in the Eastern Division of VISA, will host Liberty, 5-10-2 overall, 4-0 in the Western Division, Wednesday at 2:30 in the first round of the VISA Playoffs. Lynchburg (11-5-2, 4-0) will entertain Virginia Wesleyan (9-6-2, 4-1) at 1:00 Wednesday in the other first round contest.

Winners of the opening round games will play for the VISA title Wednesday, Nov. 18.

Longwood will be going for its fourth VISA (state) championship since 1982 when the playoffs begin next week.

Player Of The Week

Freshman wrestler Ted Proctor grabbed the 142 pound title in last week's Winston-Salem State Classic, and for his performance, Proctor has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period November 1-8. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

Notching a 5-0 record in the tournament, Proctor had two pins, 2-0 and 8-5 decisions and a come-from-behind 9-7 victory in the finals. He trailed 6-1 in his last match before overtaking Livingstone's Carwise in the final period.

"Ted turned in an excellent performance in his first college tournament," said coach Steve Nelson. "He was ferocious on the mat and the way he came back in the final match was impressive."

Proctor is a graduate of Osbourn High School. He was Northwest District champ, Regional champ and State AA runner-up as a senior last year. He was voted to the Journal Messenger and Potomac News All-Area team and was team MVP his last two seasons.

STUDENTS ARE URGED TO PARTICIPATE

Turkey Walk

The TURKEY WALK will take place Sunday, Nov. 15, at 1 p.m., everyone meeting at the Roses parking lot. The walk consists of a five-mile course. The event offers some prizes and include: $50 and a Long-Sleeve Shirt, $100, T-Shirt and Turkey; $250, T-Shirt, Turkey and Warm-Up Suit; $450, All of the above plus Radio Headphones.

To participate in the TURKEY WALK, get a hold of a participation form at Lancer Gym or contact your Physical Education or Health teacher.

Liberty At Longwood Wednesday

Defending state champ Longwood beat Randolph-Macon 2-0 Sunday to finish the regular season with a 14-3-1 record, and now the Lancers turn their attention to the Virginia Intercollegiate Soccer Association Playoffs.

Longwood, 14-3-1 overall and 5-0 in the Eastern Division of VISA, hosts Liberty, 5-10-2 overall, 4-0 in the Western Division, Wednesday at 2:30 in the first round of the VISA Playoffs. Lynchburg will entertain Virginia Wesleyan at 1:00 Wednesday in the other first round contest. Winners of the opening round games will play for the VISA title Wednesday, November 18.

Much stronger than its 5-10-2 record would indicate, Liberty lost to Division I power Virginia by a 1-0 score, recently. The Flames, who will be in Division I next season, played a schedule against mostly Division I teams.

Longwood is the first VISA champ to qualify for the playoffs the following year since Averett turned the trick in 1980. The Lancers will be going for their fourth VISA (state) championship since 1982.

SIXTY-SEVENTH YEAR THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 1987 NUMBER ELEVEN

Longwood Student Charged In Accident

By THE ROTUNDA STAFF

Five cars belonging to Longwood students parked along Griffith Blvd. were struck in a chain reaction causing approximately $15,300 worth of damage. The accident which is believed to be alcohol related occurred at 12:40 a.m., November 8.

Cadillac driven by student behind Cox and Wheeler the night of Nov. 8. An estimated $15,300 damage was done to there cars parked along the road.

According to the investigating officer of the Farmville Police Department, Tom Griles, a 1976 4-door Cadillac struck the rear end of a 1987 Chrysler Plymouth. This Plymouth was pushed into a 1969 Buick, which in turn was pushed into a 1981 Chevy, ending with the Chevy bumper to bumper with a Camero.

The driver of the black Cadillac, a Longwood student, identified to the Rotunda as D.M., was charged with driving under the influence and refused to take the breathilizer or comparable test, required by Va. law. Refusal can result in the suspension of one's driver license for 6 months.

One of the Cadillac's 'victims'

According to a witness who spoke on the condition his or her name would be kept anonymous, "The student (seemed) highly intoxicated."

GREAT AMERICAN SMOKEOUT

AMERICAN CANCER SOCIETY

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 1987

By REBECCA NEHER

Some Longwood students will be volunteering to take a test on Thursday, November 19.

This "test" won't establish their knowledge of American history, English literature or basic accounting. It will test their ability to do without cigarettes for one 24-hour period.

The Longwood College students will be among the millions of American smokers participating in the American Cancer Society's Great American Smokeout.

The Society sponsors the Great American Smokeout each year on the third Thursday in November to encourage smokers to test their willpower for just one day. Last year, almost 24 million smokers quit or cut down for the day.

"We know students aren't too crazy about anything even remotely resembling a test," said Belinda Seimer, campus Smokeout coordinator: "That's why we're planning some fun activities, to get everybody into the spirit of the thing."

"Among the activities planned are a cigarette collecting-table and a smokes/balloon lift off," comments Belinda Seimer. "The best news is, this is a test nobody can fail. Making any attempt to quit makes you a Smokeout winner; Anybody who tries, gets an 'A'!

The collecting table will be set up in front of Blackwell Dining Hall and will be accepting 'tobacco products' on Thursday, November 19, from 8:00 until 2:00 p.m. The people who participate will have their name attached to a balloon. The balloon release will take place at 5:00 behind Curry and Frazer. Belinda Seimer, the coordinator, is an employee of Student Health Services. The student Chairperson is Candy Glenn. She and a Freshman seminar class have been organizing the activities and publicizing this Annual American Smokeout.

Belinda Seimer added that the smokeout is intended for everyone – students, faculty, smokers, nonsmokers and even "smokeless" tobacco users.

"We hope everyone will participate," she said. "If you're not a smoker or you've already quit, you can "adopt" a friend and help them get through the day," Belinda said.

Campus Smokeout planners are especially interested in encouraging "smokeless" tobacco users to join their moratorium. "Unfortunately, lots of young people consider snuff and chewing tobacco safe alternatives to cigarettes . . . and that's just not the case," she said. "No matter what your tobacco habit is, the Great American Smokeout is your day to pass it up."

Buckingham Site Challenges Archeology Students

A low, rectangle-shaped stone wall in a woods in Buckingham County has intrigued and baffled Longwood College anthropology students for more than two years.

The enclosure, located a half-mile off Route 636 a few miles west of New Store, is roughly the size of two football fields. The walls, made up mostly of stones, are about two feet wide and range in height from about 18 inches to three feet. One of the end walls is mostly dirt. Inside and outside the walls, there are mounds of stones varying in size.

Like the famous Stonehenge site in England, the walls and

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

It has come to the attention of our class that some freshmen are not satisfied with the current Longwood Seminar curriculum. Through a comprehensive survey of freshmen, we have prepared to discuss the problems and possible solutions as seen by a majority of students surveyed. Consequently, we have attempted to provide suggestions for improving the Seminar.

This study was done through and opinion poll involving seventy-four Freshman Seminar students. Each student was asked five questions concerning the importance of and their interest in Freshman Seminar. The results were discussed and tallied to reflect the general attitude of the students. The results of the survey are charted below.

Longwood Seminar Survey

Q – Is Longwood Seminar helpful? A – 31, yes; 43, no.

Q – How many credits should Seminar be worth? A– avg., 2 credits.

Q – How many times a week should the class meet? A – Once or twice for 1/2 a semester.

Q – Should Longwood Seminar be pass/fail? A – 36, yes; 38, no.

Q – What suggestions or comments would you make concerning the text and topics discussed in Seminar? A – The Medusa and the Snail should not be discussed. More time should be spent discussing campus activities. Longwood Seminar is helpful in registering for classes.

The results show that the majority of those freshmen interviewed disliked having the seminar mainly due to the fact that they felt it was a waste of time. Of all those questioned, the average student felt the class should be worth two credits, while meeting only once or twice a week during the first half of the semester. It was also suggested that the seminar leaders be made available for counseling during the remainder of the semester. Thirty-eight of the seventy-four students participating disagreed with the pass/fail system of grading. They felt that if the seminar was worth their credit hours, it should count toward their GPA. Students who felt the class was useful believed that the curriculum should concentrate on campus activities and not on social aspects of college life. Concerning textbooks, most students felt The Medusa and the Snail was useless reading.

This survey, taken by Dr. Overton's Seminar class, was based on what students thought of the course curriculum and usefulness of the class. From the results of the survey many Freshman Seminar students feel that the seminar could be helpful if some aspects were changed. Suggestions include making the amount of time required by the class more compatible with the number of credit hours and the system of grading, and making minor adjustments in the topics discussed.

Dear Editor,

I am very disappointed in the fraternity that sold the Bed-Time Stories. After three weeks, the story still has not been delivered.

Why make a bad name for yourselves, guys? When you sell something, see it through. I want my bed-time story.

The Honor System Wins

The Honor System, at this point in time, could conceivably be considered one of the most controversial issues on campus. As often is the case (the Honor System no different) any issue which generates such discussion also generates its fair share of criticism. Some of these critics are knowledgable, rational, and articulate in their comments, while some simply wonder off into tangents which don't even merit the energy required for response.

Of those critics deserving response, the reasons behind their questions about the effectiveness of the Honor System vary. The one argument to surface most often is the lack of support on the student's behalf.

The Honor Board realized that the impression that the student body was not in support of a system which was designed and operated for their benefit was indeed a stigma. The Honor Board also felt such a stigma need not exist because it was in their eyes not at all the case. For that reason the Board decided to take opportunity allowed by Honor Awareness Week to pose question "Honor, Why Bother? to the students.

After asking the students to make such a weighty decision the Board offered the students a chance to become aware of the issues which should be involved in formulating their opinions.

A poll was conducted on Friday, Nov. 13th in an eight-hour time period, 50% of the on-campus Longwood students were polled as to their position on The Honor System: do you support it at the present time, or not? Of the students who chose to participate, 98% claimed to support the functioning Honor System; 2% did not.

Let the numbers speak for themselves.

Education Major In For A Change

By CINDY GOOD

Education majors, or prospective education majors, will in the near future have more practical experience in the classroom as freshmen, sophomores, and juniors so they can decide early in their college careers if teaching is really what they want to do.

Starting next semester, the practical experience for teacher education majors will take the form of two practicums. A practicum is a three-credit course in which the student spends six hours a week for ten weeks in an elementary school classroom. These Longwood students will be actively involved with the school children and serve as a teacher aide.

Education majors will be required to do one practicum in their freshman year and one in their sophomore or junior year.

Dr. Gibbons said that since most of the education majors here get certified to teach K-4, they will do one of their practicums here at the nursery school on campus. The other practicum will be done in one of the eight area school systems which have agreed to work with Longwood students in the endeavor. These school systems are: Prince Edward, Cumberland, Nottoway, Amelia, Buckingham, Appomattox, Charlotte, and Lunenburg.

The student doing the practicum will be assigned to a teacher who will act as a mentor, not just a supervisor, for the Longwood student helping in the teacher's classroom.

The idea of the mentor program originated last spring. Longwood education faculty members Dr. Nancy Vick and Mrs. Betty Jo Simmons contacted the superintendents of the area school systems and asked the superintendents to recommend seven teachers who they thought would be good mentors for Longwood's education majors.

The recommended mentor teachers had to meet several requirements before they would be accepted to do the job: they should have at least three years' teaching experience, be endorsed to teach what they are presently teaching, they should have a masters degree, and must have the desire to work with the college students.

Dr. Gibbons said that if additional sources of funding become available, there will be a mentor workshop every summer to get more area teachers involved in the program.

Through this new Teacher Education program, it is hoped that education majors will no longer decide during or after student teaching (after it is too late to change their major) that teaching really is not what they wanted to do afterall.

mounds have been an enigma to student archeologists from Longwood.

"I believe the enclosure was not a physical enclosure but more of a symbolic one. Perhaps it was used for supernatural belief purposes," said Dennis Fenton, the leader of a four-member research team that is doing independent study there this fall.

Keith Russell, a since-graduated Longwood student who first studied the site, also thinks it was used for ritual or religious purposes.

"Keith and I think the site was used at different times by different groups," said Tom Richard, a graduate student and assistant director of housing. "Where we disagree is that he thinks the real focus was in prehistoric times, and I think it was in Colonial times. But that's just my 'gut' feeling. We don't have enough evidence to say what it is."

Persons connected with Longwood's anthropology program learned of the location in the summer of 1985 from the landowner, K. M. Beasley Jr., who lives nearby on the other side of 636.

Russell, now a graduate student at the University of Utah, and Richard began doing survey work and some excavation at the site in early 1986. Richard continued the work that summer, as part of the Summer Field School in Archeology, and last fall, as an independent study project. Fenton, who is now the site supervisor, started going there last fall as a volunteer.

The site was registered with the Virginia Research Center for Archaeology as Site 44BK213 in the spring of 1986. The thickly wooded site, which is bisected by an old logging road, is only about three miles from the field school's location, which is on the Appomattox River near Holliday Lake State Park.

The long walls of the enclosure are 564 and 619 feet long. The shorter walls measure 362 and 320 feet. Along one of the end walls, known as the eastern wall, the students have found evidence of as many as 19 graves.

"Eight or nine are marked with foor- and headstones," said Fenton. With the others, you can see depressions in the ground."

"There's a lot of periwinkle there, which usually indicates Christian burials," Justin Patton, another member of the group, said. "It's fast-growing and covers up the graves quickly."

Because Robert E. Lee used Route 636 on his retreat to Appomattox, Richard thinks Confederate soldiers may have been buried in those graves after the surrender. Fenton disputes this, saying that soldiers usually were buried in mass graves rather than singly.

The stones that make up the walls and are scattered around the site are roughly the size of bricks. Inside the enclosure, there are seven mounds of stone; outside there are more than two dozen. They range from about three to 10 feet in diameter and from one to three feet in height.

"You kind of stumble upon them," Fenton said. "I'm sure there's many more that we haven't seen. The mound farthest from the wall is at least 300 feet away.

Such sites are known as "stone mound" sites and are common in the southeastern United States. There are several stone mound sites in Alabama, Georgia and Tennessee, and one at Smith Mountain Lake in Virginia, the students said.

Richard and Russell attended the Southeastern Archaeological Conference in Birmingham, Ala., in November 1985 and heard these sites discussed in a special session. "No one has an answer to the stone mound problem," said Richard.

Fenton said he is certain of three things about the site. "The walls and mounds are prehistoric. The graves along the eastern wall are from historic times, as opposed to prehistoric. And beyond the northern wall, there's a long trench that's been dug out and an earthen wall next to it. An older man who lives in the area said that's where people once searched for gold."

Added Richard, "Before the 1849 Gold Rush, Buckingham County was one of the biggest places to find gold."

Fenton also thinks the enclosure may have "served as a marker for people who moved in and out of the area. The site is almost due west of Willis Mountain and the walls follow the cardinal directions almost exactly."

The students have been disappointed by a lack of artifacts, which is characteristic of stone mound sites. Fenton found a piece of forged metal that's of recent vintage, and Patton found a pottery fragment that's also from historic times. They have found no prehistoric artifacts.

"Some people are fortunate enough to work in the tombs of Egypt, and then there's us," said Fenton with a laugh.

"But it's our site and we love it," Richard added.

"You have to be philosophical about this," Fenton said. "Some people spend their whole lives going over a piece of ground and never find anything. But at least they can say that a certain people didn't live there. Negative evidence isn't the same as no evidence. This isn't as frustrating as you would think."

The students are grateful to Beasley, a real estate agent, for his cooperation.

"Mr. Beasley has been very helpful and enthusiastic," said Fenton. "We have a conditional use permit and can go out there any time we like. We can also camp there, which we have done several times."

Two other Longwood students, Mike Plum and Eric Sanders, also have been going to the site this semester as an independent study project.

The students' enthusiasm is undampened. "I'll be going to Longwood for another year and a half, and I plan to keep going out there until I graduate," vowed Fenton.

Davis Selected As Artist Of The Month

Mark Davis, a senior from Dale City, has been chosen Artist of the Month.

Davis received the honor for a black and white photograph of his girlfriend, Michelle Hummer, who's also a Longwood student. He took the 35-millimeter photo from behind her as she put on make-up in front of a mirror.

He received a $50 check for winning the award, which is sponsored by the art faculty.

Davis is majoring in art. After graduating next May, he plans to be a graphic designer or professional musician.

ACCIDENT

"He tried resisting arrest yelling: 'My grandpa is a lawyer.' " "He was finally handcuffed to the passenger seat of the police car. All injured vehicles were checked by police and most damaged ones were quickly towed away."

The case goes to court on December third in the Prince Edward courthouse at 9 a.m.

The accident comes one week after Longwood's Alcohol Awareness Week. The program emphasizes that only a personal commitment to making responsible decisions regarding alcohol will make an impact on the problems associated with its use and misuse.

Some speculated that "incidents like this one would increase just as the drinking laws did."

Iran/Contra Findings, Iraqi Attack, And Kennedy

By Matt Peterman

☐ Yesterday, the findings of the Iran/Contra affair were officially released to the public, however, because the report is released after this printing, the following will give the reader a good idea of what will be found in the report.

The two main points it will cover is the decision to sell arms to Iran and the diversion of funds to the Contras. The one thing it will say is there is no evidence that President Reagan approved of the diversion of funds.

It will say: If the president didn't know, he should have. There was a lack of presidential oversight and will raise tough questions about Poindexter and North's testimony, citing laws that may have been broken.

It will also be critical of the short span of media and public attention of important constitutional questions.

The report is a book of 600 plus pages that many republicans will call clearly partisan and anti-administration.

☐ Iran was reporting Tuesday that Iraq carried out an attack against its nuclear reactor saying it could result in 'another Chernobyl.' The report could not be independently confirmed.

Iraq says it raided two chemical plants about 35 miles away from what U.S. officials are calling a Quasi nuclear plant. As for the "Chernobyl' effect, experts believe that could not happen.

Among the many people killed in the raid was a West German engineer who worked for the Technical Inspection Agency of Essen.

☐ President Reagan chose Anthony Kennedy to be the newest nominee for the vacant spot on the Supreme Court. He is the third in a row that have included first Robert H. Bork and Douglas H. Ginsburg.

Judge Kennedy from California is in his early fifties and is labeled more moderate than the first two nominees. Reagan is calling for quick confirmation hearings.

AIDS And The College Student

By GARY BAUER, Assistant to the President for Policy Development

On hundreds of college and university campuses this year, students have returned not only to be greeted by the usual panoply of activities and issues, but also by a new crusade – safe sex. Reacting to the growing national preoccupation with the AIDS epidemic, student groups and school administrations are attempting to educate students about how to avoid contracting this fatal disease.

Not surprisingly, given the "open" atmosphere on most campuses, the safe sex crusade has not been constrained by many taboos. On some campuses, safe sex packages have been distributed containing not only the more common contraceptive implements, but also a variety of devices for the aficionados of more exotic activities. Despite this, "safe sex" campaigns are not giving students the full story about AIDS. Indeed, many students are arguably being denied the information that is most likely to assist them in avoiding the AIDS virus.

A look at those taboo subjects might be in order. First, few campus efforts seem to be aimed at promoting the most obvious and effective measure to slow down the AIDS epidemic – abstinence. Yet, as Surgeon General C. Everett Koop has indicated time and time again, abstinence is the only foolproof way to avoid this disease. Are we to assume that highly educated young Americans are so enslaved by their passions that they are unable to limit their number of partners or sexual activities – even if failing to do so risks death? Actually, much research shows that many students do abstain or establish a mutually faithful relationship with marriage as the long-term goal. Why the hesitancy to build on these healthy tendencies, particularly when the issue is life or death?

Second, many of today's educational efforts are what could be called "sexually egalitarian." That is, they refuse to distinguish or even appear to prefer one type of sexual practice over another. Yet medical research shows that sodomy is probably the most efficient method to transfer the AIDS virus as well as other diseases – for obvious reasons. Why is this information censored on so many campuses? Does it illustrate the growing power of gay rights activists who not only want to be tolerated, but want the culture at large to affirm and support the legitimacy of the gay life-style?

In fact, on many campuses students are surprised to find that no one is willing to assert and defend the moral and religious norms they learned from their families and churches. Even though homosexual behavior, if embraced by a sizable proportion of the population, would result in a dying civilization in a generation or so, it is taboo to describe this behavior as socially undesirable, unnatural or deviant. As a result, students are denied the best medical advice available – which is to avoid dangerous sexual activities associated primarily, but not exclusively, with the gay community.

Writing in National Review magazine, Jeffrey Hart recently alluded to what in literature is called the "presence of the absence." Just as the dog that didn't bark helped Sherlock Holmes once solve a case, what is absent in the safe-sex campaign may be telling us an important bit of information about the cultural atmosphere on many campuses.

Johnson: 'we want to hear any comment'

By HOLLY PREBLE

In the past few weeks, there have been controversies concerning the quality of the ARA dining hall services. Rick Johnson, the head of ARA at Longwood, met with this Rotunda reporter to talk about issues dealt with in recent issues of the paper.

In the 10/27 issue of the Rotunda, the editor made a point that we "had to eat chicken filets on a bun for lunch and hamburgers for dinner two days in a row." To this remark Rick Johnson said, "the . . . point of repetitiousness is important, (even though) the idea of having chicken filets back to back (was) not a good one." Later he said, "We consciously put filets on the menu because (some students) told us they wanted them. But now that we have them every week, people get sick of them."

Rick Johnson, however, welcomes any comment on the ARA dining services so that he and the dining hall crew can better know how to keep improving the food they serve. Since Mr. Johnson has received complaints about the chicken filets, they are now redoing the menu and are trying to incorporate more variety in the menu. The problem, though, is that when there is something new on the menu that a lot of students want, the results are not predictable. For example, they gave us sandwiches on a Sunday night because some students told them they wanted that. Said Mr. Johnson, "When we put the new Sunday menu on . . . we did it with the best of intentions, but the plan backfired."

Right now, in response to many complaints, ARA is changing the Friday night menu. They will serve carved meats to order. Alternating weeks, they will have beef, ham, and turkey breast.

Another new item coming soon is hot grilled sandwiches made to order at lunch. Not just grilled cheese sandwiches, but grilled beef with cheese, grilled tuna and provolone cheese, grilled turkey and swiss cheese on rye. There will be ten to twelve items to choose from.

Rick Johnson made it clear that he wants to hear what they are doing wrong in serving us. "We just want to improve . . . we want to hear any complaint . . . and I try to work on (those) that I hear."

Candidates Confess Marijuana Use

By MATT PETERMAN

Should indiscretions bar candidates from public office? A consensus of many people seen on the news and quoted in newspapers, believe the answer is no, even if they smoked marijuana.

Secretary of Education William J. Bennett is one who believes "youthful discretions are allowed," however, college professors should serve as a role for their students.

Why all the questions about marijuana lately? Because three prominent candidates, one of which is no longer, recently got wrapped up in the controversy.

First Douglas H. Ginsburg, President Reagan's second nominee for the Supreme Court after Judge Bork was shut down. Though an F.B.I. background check failed to uncover that Judge Ginsburg had smoked pot, he said it himself on the first Thursday of this month.

The stigma of drug use prompted 20-30 conservative congressmen to lobby the White House to drop the nomination.

At this point, the President, who has led a fight against illegal drug use in the country, concentrating on the federal workplace seemed trapped. "The President stands by the nominee" was the official word.

Sen. Gorden Humphrey, New Hampshire Republican echoed a sentiment that many who supported Ginsburg had. "I think it's on indiscretion, a college-student indiscretion, comparable to plagiarism," he said. Ginsburg was also cited for smoking marijuana as a professor of Harvard up until seven years ago.

Judge Ginsburg's chances to serve on the high bench seemed derailed. William Bennett telephoned the judge to ask him to withdraw and soon after he did. On Saturday November 7th, he asked President Reagan not to send his formal nomination to the Senate.

In a Newsweek poll conducted a day after Ginsburg announcement, 69 percent of 507 adults interviewed did not think marijuana use was a reason to disqualify Ginsburg. However, an overwhelming number, 77 percent opposed the legalization of marijuana, up from 72 percent in 1982.

Ginsburg was not alone. Two Democratic candidates for President admitted to using marijuana in their younger years: Sen. Albert Gore Jr. and former Gov. Bruce Babbitt.

Mr. Gore, 39, said he smoked marijuana while in college and in Vietnam, but admitted he has not used the drug in 15 years.

Mr. Babbitt, 49, said he had not used marijuana in 20 years and when he did, it was in college and during times as a young civil rights lawyer in the South.

The Iowa Democratic Party Chairwoman, Bonnie Cambell tried to save face and push any significance aside. "On college campuses, young people everywhere were experimenting with marijuana," she said.

62 million people are estimated to have tried marijuana in The United States. "There are tens of millions of Americans in my generation who had some [marijuana] experience," said Sen. Gore.

The impact on the campaigns cannot be gauged accurately now, but in the short-run the damage has been light. Both candidates have a long way to go, though.

Ford Speaks About Alcohol

By ANITA BERGER

On November 3, a lecture was given by Mike Ford, son of the former president Gerald Ford, on alcohol.

This was not a typical lecture on alcohol abuse for it didn't present statistics or preach about how one should not drink. Instead, Mr. Ford told us about his life, the role alcohol played, and what it was like to have an addicted mother. "Interesting and informative," were two words used to describe the lecture by Mary Collins, a spectator.

Mr. Ford emphasized the importance of being a responsible drinker, as well as upper classmen setting good examples for the younger-classmen since they follow in their footsteps.

The audience mostly consisted of Greeks who seemed to be very interested by Ford's seriousness and humor. "He was on the same level as us (the students), and instead of lecturing us, he was talking in an entertaining manner to us," stated Cardine Bowe when asked to comment on the performance.

The looks on the audience's attentive faces said it all. Mr. Ford's lecture on alcohol abuse was entertaining and much enjoyed.

ATTENTION!

On October 29th, 5 video tapes were stolen out of a 1977 VW parked on High Street, across from Longwood College.

These tapes were irreplaceable because they contained footage of a dear friend who was killed on September 10, 1987.

They were being edited for Christmas presents for his family and friends.

If anyone knows the whereabouts of these tapes please call 392-7068 and a reward will be offered.

The tapes may also be dropped in any mailbox in Farmville— No address is necessary.

AIDS

What is absent is an acknowledgment of the traditional moral values of our society. Even before AIDS, heterosexuality was preferable; stable families were good; abstinence had a medical as well as a moral basis; fidelity in marriage was a good thing. The absence of these truisms from many campus anti-AIDS efforts not only cheats students of information they need, but it helps us understand the hidden agenda of those who all too often control the cultural milieu on campus.

Students themselves will have to ponder the paradox of getting advice that denies the wisdom of the ages while a microscopic virus daily reminds us with its growing list of victims why that wisdom was right.

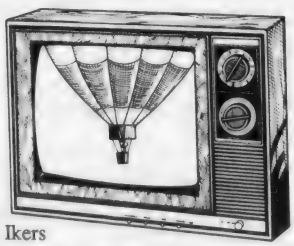
Miss Smith-Johnson's roommate reported that the burns resulted from a curling iron. The accident occurred around 7:00P.M. as Miss Smith-Johnson was preparing her coif for an evening of party hopping.

Saturday's accident marked the third such curling iron incident in the history of the college.



Study reveals institutional food as better than Kal Kan

A recent study conducted by the Better Chow and Munchies Bureau revealed that institutional meals, contrary to popular belief, are more nutritional than Kal Kan, tastier than airline food, and more appetizing than stepping on a slug in bare feet.

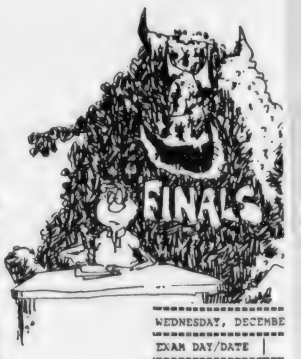
"We've come a long way in food preparation techniques in the last ten years," commented Chuck Upson, manager of BSB Food Services. "Since the last study like this, we've begun to insist that our cooks wear shoes in the kitchen, and we've even installed hot water pipes in our dishwashing machines."

"Archie and Alf" to premier

By G. Will Ikers

Looking for some quality programming on prime time TV? Once you see "Archie and Alf", you won't ask for anything else out of life.

The FUN TV Network, of which Gnu Pie is a subsidiary, will be fostering a high point in television history when Archie Bunker and NBC superstar, Alf , pair up for the first time ever this Wednesday night at 7:30P.M.



This blockbuster sitcom finds Alf , played by himself, and Archie Bunker, played by Carroll O'Connor as always, living together with Edith, Gloria, and Mike during Alf first visit to the planet in the mid-1970's.

The first episode deals with Alf attempt to talk Edith into joining a radical left-wing "learn to play Bocci-ball by mail" club with him. Archie's reaction to this is as good as it ever was, and the results are hilarious, as can be expected.

LONGWOOD'S BUFFOONS REJOICE

Mu Rho to form chapter here

By R.U. Seareus

It's about time! Longwood is finally going to allow a chapter of Mu Rho, the international funny-guy fraternity, to bless its campus.

Administrators have seemed wary about giving campus cut-ups the go-ahead to form a chapter of Mu Rho for a number of years, but with the resignation off Dr. "no antics on my campus" Greenwood, clandestine clown administrators have come out of the closet like gangbusters. When asked to comment on the departure of No-Jokes Janet, Myllis Phable, a member of Goofballs Anonymous for seven years now, said, "Thank God she's gone! Now I can juggle in my office anytime I want to!"

The move toward organizing Longwood's comedians was initiated by interim president Healy, whose only comment on his decision was "What the heck ,I'm only here for the year."

Founded in the early 1970's, Mu Rho Fraternity has its alpha chapter at BBC(Britain's Best College) in London.

Prior to initiation, Mu Rho pledges are expected to complete tasks such as:

--memorize and recite whole Woody Allen monologues

--visit the grave of John Belushi

--sit up until the wee hours of the morning before tests in their 8:30A.M. classes to watch Marx Brothers movies and Honeymooners reruns

--collect the signatures of Mu Rho brothers George Carlin, Eddie Murphy, Dan Akroyd, Buddy Hackett, and Rodney Dangerfield on a rubber chicken

--shave their heads just like Curly from the three stooges

Once chapter status is reached, the Longwood colony will be chartered by the founding fathers in a ceremony at the Comedy Club in Richmond. They hope to hold the ceremony on April 1st of this coming year.

Husband-Wife Duet Packed Wygal

By REBECCA NEHER

The audience, anticipating a great performance, was not disappointed. Dallas Weekly and Nancy Agranbright, a piano duet, thrilled the packed auditorium Monday night.

The two hour performance covered several classical pieces especially composed for one piano, four hands. The earliest duet composition was in 1765 by Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart and his sister. Before this time, piano duets were impossible because of the narrow keyboards.

Starting the evening off was a piece by Franz Schubert, Four German Dances, a very likely piece which prepared the eager audience for the classical evening ahead.

The longest piece played was by Mozart. Lasting 23 minutes, this was Mozart's most serious work, composed at the height of his creativity; highly emotional and draining for both the listener and the duetists.

Jumping into three familiar pieces on a livelier note, Weekly and Agranbright played the Slavic Dance by Antanin Dvorak, a Norwegian Dance by Evard Grieg and a Hungarian Dance by Johannes Brahms.

After a 10 minute intermission the piano duet delighted the audience with Dolly Suite by Garbriel Faure´. This piece, having six parts, was written especially for Faure´s youngest daughter.

Following was Sonata by Frances Poulene – the most contemporary piece of the evening. Sonata was not only the shortest piece played but also the most amusing. Written simply for fun, with numerous hand crosses and intertwined fingers, Sonata was not meant to be taken seriously.

The last piece, Andante and Variations by Felix Mendelssohn, was both emotional and dramatic – a good finish.

After receiving a roar of applause the duet played Dizzy Fingers as an encore.

Weekly and Arganbright are a husband and wife duet team who tour the country in order to popularize the one piano, four hand medium. Weekly and Arganbright are artists-in-residence at the University of Wisconsin at La Cross. Called "America's foremost one piano, four hand team" they perform concerts, do recordings, radio and television performances, publications, research, workshops, and annual Four-Hand Festivals.

The concert was presented by the Chamber Music Series and was ushered by members of the Longwood Ambassadors.

In The Spotlight

If you tend to hate Mondays, as many of us do, then tune in WLCX-90.1 FM for the brighter side of a Monday. From 6:00-8:00 p.m., Eric Sanders and Jay Venturi bring you, via the airwaves, "Obscure Rock and Roll", as their show name indicates.

Obscure rock and roll actually means a variety of music types for Jay and Eric. Occasionally they play tunes from American bands but they mostly focus on groups from other countries such as Britain, Germany, Ireland, and Australia. For a special show every now and then, Jay and Eric do what they call British Rock Hours featuring, of course, all British bands.

However, they don't like to think of what they play as mainstream Top 40. They try to play the newest music as possible, mixed in with some older Beatles-type sounds. Eric and Jay enjoy playing what they call "orchestral rock and roll" from groups such as Boston and Kansas. They try to stay clear of "twangy" types of rock.

Jay told me one of the main reasons he got involved with WLCX is because he didn't have a stereo of his own here at school, so the station was a good way for him to listen to his own music. He also said that being a D.J. was something he never did before and it was "something new (he) wanted to try."

Eric said that what got him inspired to join the college radio station was that he hated listening to music with constant commercial interruptions. Since WLCX is a non-commercial station he looked forward to being able to play "lots of commercial-free rock and roll."

Jay and Eric are involved with the station in more ways than being D.J.'s. Eric helped cook the station's first place award winning chili in 1987's Spring Weekend chili cook-off. Jay will be taking over the position of Business Manager for the station next semester and plans on upgrading the current bookkeeping system by putting everything on computer disks.

Eric and Jay enjoy doing a show together. They both agree that doing a show alone is nice for a while, but it can start to get really boring.

When asked what their audience seemed to be like, they commented that their audience was most likely "demented and strange", and that their listeners are very faithful – a lot are friends.

Neither Jay nor Eric have any plans for working in radio in the future at this point. We're "doing the show for the fun", Jay said. However, we do plan, they said, to "keep doing the show until we graduate or pass out!"

PERSONALS

Phyllis Golden-Gottlieb Hollywood Doorbuster

By HOLLY PREBLE

On Tuesday, November 10, from 8-10 p.m., Ms. Phyllis Golden-Gottlieb gave an informal talk about "Breaking Down the Doors to Hollywood." This talk was about how she rose from being a simple suburban housewife and president of the PTA, to the director of comedy at Lorimar-Telepictures.

After graduating from the University of Massachusetts, majoring in Political Science, she went to New York and received a degree in Education. Subsequently she married and had children.

She became involved in the League of Women Voters (LWV) and their Public Relations director. She was on many talk shows and one day she got a phone call from the director of a Metromedia station in New York. To her surprise, she was offered a job as a news anchor. However, she declined because "my husband was not thrilled. It was only OK if I worked from nine to five." So then she took the job as a staff producer instead. "I entered a new world. I really didn't know what I was doing. But the idea is to always ask for help." After learning how to edit, do sound, and how to operate the lights, "I started putting together ideas I had . . . and I executed them." She produced everything from a documentary on Martin Luther King, to an interview with Elizabeth Taylor's plastic surgeon.

Her big break was when NBC and MGM asked if she wanted to be the director of comedy development. Her job there was "to supervise the making of pilots." However, she again knew little about what she was doing so she "kept (her) mouth shut" and watched and learned from those who did know. From this job she developed the monumental show, "The Facts of Life," which is still on television today.

Phyllis was fired at MGM, for apparently no reason, which, as she explains, happens all the time in the world of Hollywood.

Her next step on the ladder of success was at Walt Disney's Productions. Here she worked for Ron Miller, son-in-law of Walt Disney. She was "the first woman executive ever to walk through Walt Disney's doors." Phyllis Golden-Gottlieb realized her position and took advantage of her situation. "In working for Walt," Phyllis says, "I had the feeling of having walked in the boys' locker room. I felt like I didn't quite belong . . . but it was something you get used to."

Sadly, Walt Disney Productions was taken over, and Phyllis left there to work for a company that produced nighttime serials. This company is called Lorimar-Telepictures and is the largest supply company of serials in the world. They produce such shows as "Falcon Crest", "Dallas", "Love Connection", and "People's Court." Lorimar produces seventeen programs altogether.

Through her perseverance and realizing when to take advantage of certain situations and relationships, and also being at the right place at the right time, Phyllis made it to the top.

Towards the end of her talk, she turned more philosophical. Her advice to women was this: "In your life, you don't have to make choices, you can do it all . . . Be prepared to do something. You have a long life apart from just having children." Her advice for having a successful life and career for everyone is to have a college education and to get experience in the field that you want to be in – even if it is volunteer work. You'll find, after college, you will be richer. College gives you time to grow. It gives you experiences."

SOCCER SEASON SEEN OUT

Lancers Finish 13th In Division II

A record-breaking Lancer soccer season ended on a sour note Saturday when Liberty got a goal in each half from junior Chris Dickens and beat Longwood 2-0 to win a share of the Virginia Intercollegiate Soccer Association title.

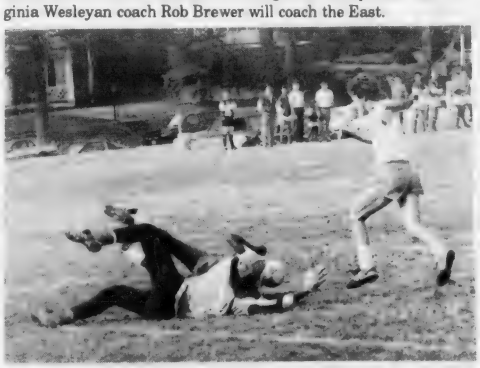
Finishing the season 7-10-2, Liberty shares the crown with Lynchburg (12-5-2) which beat Virginia Wesleyan 3-1 in the other VISA semifinal November 8. Because of an agreement between Liberty and Lynchburg not to play each other, the two teams will share the 1987 VISA crown.

AN OPPORTUNITY MISSED – Longwood missed a golden opportunity to score against Liberty in the second half of Saturday's VISA playoff game. As seen in the 2 photos above Ray Jones helped to jar the ball loose from Liberty goalkeeper George Nimo. Nick Ruebel rushed in to attempt a shot (second photo) but it was off the mark.

Longwood ended the year 14-4-1 and was ranked 13th in the final Division II poll which came out last week. The Lancers broke numerous team and individual records while coming up with the second best record in the history of the program.

"We had a great season, but it's a shame it had to end with a loss," said coach Rich Posipanko. "Liberty has a very strong team."

For the year, Longwood set new records for most goals in a season (64) and fewest goals allowed (16), highest national rank (6th), and highest regional rank (1st), and tied the mark for shutouts in a season (10).



Senior goalkeeper Dave Goerke broke the record for shutouts in a season (9) and ended the year with a goals against average of 0.89.

All-America candidate Ray Jones set new standards for goals in a game (5), season (29) and ranks third in career scoring. Scoring in seven consecutive games, Jones had a season and career record four hat-tricks. Jones also had 10 assists, the second best season mark ever.

Five Lancers Named All-Eastern Division

Jones, Goerke, Mike Edge, John Barone, and Jeff Robinson have been named to the Virginia Intercollegiate Soccer Association All-Eastern team for 1987. Robinson is a three-time choice for all-division, while Edge, Barone and Goerke are repeaters from last season.

The five will play for the East in the VISA East-West All-Star Game to be held December 6 at Longwood. Posipanko and Virginia Wesleyan coach Rob Brewer will coach the East.

Grappler Stukes Places At Pembroke

Longwood's John Stukes won four of five matches to place third at 134 pounds in the Pembroke State Wrestling Tournament Saturday, but Stukes was the only Lancer grappler to finish in the top five.

Longwood opens its 1987-88 dual match season Tuesday night in Lancer Hall, hosting William & Mary at 7:30. The Tribe was one of the teams which gave coach Steve Nelson's squad a hard time at Pembroke. The Lancers visit George Washington Saturday to take on the host school and Cheyney State at 1:00.

"We did not wrestle very well at all Saturday," said Nelson. "We were flat and got intimidated by some of the Division I colleges."

Stukes, who apparently was not intimidated, won his first three matches by scores of 12-4, 9-3 and 4-2 before losing a semifinal match to Warren Dumas of Pembroke 3-1 in overtime. He bounced back to beat Marvin Jones of Pembroke 7-4 to claim third place. Stukes now has a 9-1 mark for the season.

Also showing up well for the Lancers were 142 pounder Tommy Gilbert who was 3-2 for the day, and 167 pounder Tim Mason who was 2-2 and came back strong after a poor showing at Winston-Salem last weekend. Gilbert advanced to the semifinals and had "a very good tournament," according to coach Nelson.

Fifteen college teams took part in the Pembroke State event, including Division I's Campbell, Furman, The Citadel and Division II Liberty.

Our three-year and two-year scholarships won't make college easier.

Sports Comments

By MIKE McGRATH

The NFL strike has had a definite effect on the quality of teams. Since the strike ended, the teams that were usually at the bottom of the ladder have risen into contention. Some of the teams that are on top of the divisions have fallen into the cellar.

The Super Bowl Champion New York Giants are at the bottom of the NFC East and look like that they will stay there the rest of the season. The L.A. Raiders and Denver Broncos have also slipped from the elite this season. On the other of the coin teams that have been down and out for so long have risen. The Indianapolis Colts, Buffalo Bills, Houston Oilers, and the New Orleans Saints are all winning ballgames this year. In the AFC East it is a five way tie for first with the Bills and Colts in the thick of things.

The Houston Oilers are also in a tie for the lead in their division at 5-3 with the Steelers and the Browns. Probably the most surprising team in the league is the San Diego Chargers, who are leading the AFC West with a 7-1 record.

The rosters in the NFL have been expanded to 50 players, this has enhanced the quality of play in the NFL. Some of the replacement players have made a life for themselves in the league. This also has helped some teams out this year. Probably the team that has benefited most from the strike is the Washington Redskins. Before the strike the Redskins were loaded with injuries. The strike gave them time to heal and now they have a 6-2 record and stand alone at the top of the NFC East. The strike has brought good and bad to the NFL, and who knows who will win this year's Super Bowl.

Gymnasts Flip Wednesday At 8

Longwood's gymnastics team will hold an inter-squad meeting Wednesday night at 8 p.m. in Lancer Hall. The meet is open to the public at no charge and will be the last competition for the gymnasts until the regular season opens January 15.

Lady Hoops Off To Mount Olive After Blue Angels Loss

Longwood women's basketball coach Shirley Duncan expects to have five veterans in the starting lineup when the Lady Lancers open their 1987-88 season in the Mount Olive Tournament in Mt. Olive, North Carolina Friday night.

North Carolina Central plays Atlantic Christian in the tournament opener Friday night at 7 p.m. Longwood plays host Mt. Olive at 8:30 p.m. Losers will play for third place at 7 p.m. Saturday night while the winners will play for the tournament title at 8:30 p.m.

Following a 77-76 exhibition loss to the Richmond-based AAU Blue Angels Sunday, Duncan says she will likely start senior Annette Easterling and junior Angee Middleton at the guards, senior Jill Everett

"We plan to play an up-tempo game and use a lot of players," said Duncan. "This is not the best ball-handling team we've had, but we have a little more overall talent than in the past. We can bring four or five players off the bench and not lose much."

"We saw evidence today (against the Blue Angels) that we have strength inside," said Duncan. "If we can get consistent play from our guards we could have a pretty tough team. We should have better balance in our outside shooting than in the past."

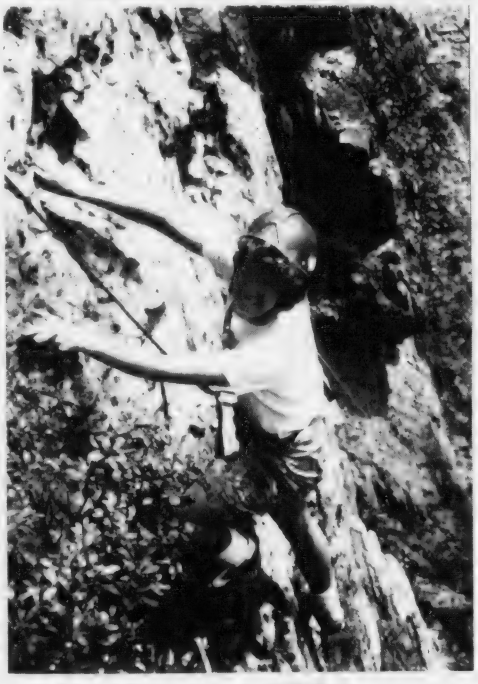
Tip-Off Tourney Friday At 7

Longwood will open play in men's basketball Friday night in the fifth Par-Bil's Tip-Off Tournament. The Lancers host Clinch Valley in the season lidlifter at 7:00.

The Lancers will be out to improve on last season's 13-14 record. Pace University will square off with East Stroudsburg at 9:00 in the second first round contest. First round losers will play at 6:30 Saturday night with the winners meeting in the championship at 8:30.

Par-Bil's Food Store of Farmville is sponsoring the tip-off tournament for the fifth straight year. Faculty-Staff Appreciation Night will be observed Friday night with all Longwood faculty, staff and their families admitted free of charge.

Likely starters for Longwood are 6-4 junior Darryl Rutley and 6-4 sophomore Kevin Jefferson at the forwards, 6-8 sophomore Doug Poppe at center and 6-3 sophomore Dale Shavers at one guard.



Freshman Joe Lowe and junior Tony Good are possibilities for the other guard position or Luther may elect to go with a bigger lineup. Red-shirt freshman Greg Holloway, 6-6, has looked good in preseason workouts and could start, moving Rutley to the backcourt. Holloway is a solid shooter in the lane area.

"We have a number of players who could earn a starting position," said Lancer coach Cal Luther. "We'll be flexible with our lineup, depending on what our opponents do."

Freshmen of note include Devone Williams-Hines, a 6-4 guard, and 6-5 forward Keith Latimer both of whom may be able to contribute immediately.

PAR BIL'S MEANS TIP-OFF BASKETBALL – For the fifth year the Lancer basketball season will be kicked off by the Par-Bil's Tip-Off Tournament at Longwood. Head coach Cal Luther's squad will be out to win its second Tip-Off Tournament in a row when action begins this weekend. Gathering to talk about plans for this year's tournament recently were Lancer cagers Kevin Jefferson and Darryl Rutley, Par-Bil's owners Bill Grogan and Parker Wheeler, Luther and assistant coach Ernest Neal.

Merry Christmas From Both Ends Of The Campus!

Christmases Past At LC

By KRISTINA SMALL

The Christmas spirit is back at Longwood, thanks to the return of the Christmas tree to the Rotunda. No one knows for sure when the tradition of decorating the towering tree began, but it is chronicled in the Rotunda newspaper as far back as the 1940's.

Back then the semester ended after students returned from Christmas break, giving students and faculty more time to devote to Christmas festivities.

Those festivities began with the annual Christmas banquet sponsored by the Freshman Commission. After prayers, which followed dinner, "The Other Wise Man" was recited and running cedar was distributed among the students as they sang carols and decorated the tree in the "Hanging of the Green".

Longwood's holiday observance held a greater religious meaning in the 40's and 50's. The highpoint of the season was the "O Holy Night" pageant presented by the Farmville YWCA. One girl was chosen to play the Madonna in the pageant, an honor that was greatly sought after. The Madonna was chosen by the student body who voted in a secret ballot box in the dining hall. The pageant consisted of a manger scene where the Madonna's identity was revealed.

In 1948 Longwood, then called the State Teachers College, raised $182.90 during the White Christmas Service, an annual fundraising drive. A banquet was held in which the heads of all campus organizations dressed in white and presented charitable donations for Christmas welfare projects. In that year the sum was divided three ways. One part went to a

Please address contributions to the ROTUNDA, Box 1133. Letters are subject to editing. Please type or neatly print any contributions.

Opinions expressed in the ROTUNDA do not necessarily reflect those of the Longwood College administration, staff or students as a whole.

Deadline for articles is 3:00 p.m. Friday prior to the Tuesday publication date. Contributions handed in within 3 hours before deadline should be placed in the envelope on the Publications Office door in Lankford. Letters, personals, etc. are due on the office door by midnight Sunday.

There is an opportunity for you, the students who use and live on this campus, to have a hand in what is to become of a section of it – a part of campus that most of you use and look at a number of times every day. This area is the mall outside the dining hall's new smoker, between the back of Grainger, the Virginia Room, and the road that runs alongside Hiner. The opportunity that is available to you is one that will allow you a voice in the decisions that will be made in redesigning this area.

Right now, this mall area is a shambles. Decorations consist of a flag pole that serves no purpose and a bulletin board that is small on eyesore that nobody knows or cares that most of the notices posted on it are out-of-date by a couple of months. The area is bisected by an inadequate cement walkway which runs from one corner of the lot to another, leaving yards of unused ground on either side. As it presently stands, this slot of land is wasted: it does nothing to enhance the appearance of the campus as a whole, and most of the land it encompasses is never used in any way.

But think what it could be! If you were to take down the hedges that restrict this area, perhaps level the ground and resurface it with brick or cobblestone or something to that effect, think about what you could do with the mall! Parties, concerts, outdoor things of all kinds could be held on the mall. Add a couple of benches and tables, and maybe you could loiter in comfort with a couple of friends. This is also the perfect spot for some sort of a campus "conversation piece".

Because this area is used primarily by the students, shouldn't it be planned by the students? Don't you want to have some say in what your campus could look like in the future?! Wouldn't you like to be able to walk across it with a friend and say, "I helped put this place together, and I'm damn proud of it!"?! Your ideas are necessary – very necessary – if this endeavor is to be as productive as it has the potential to be.

There is going to be a meeting to discuss the mall project this Sunday, December 13, at 6 p.m. in the President's Board Room (right by the President's Office in East Ruffner). All students and student input will be welcomed. If for some reason you cannot attend this meeting but would like to, send a quick note to the Rotunda, ATTN. Mall Meeting, Box 1133. Include your name and box number and any ideas or questions you have about the project. If you don't know where the meeting room is, ask in the information office.

Remember: it's your mall – what are you going to do about it?

ARA's Lancer Cafe

ARA's Lancer cafe has decided not to accept checks from students for the remainder of the semester.

Fearing huge losses, ARA makes the cafe just that more inefficient. The main message seems to be: students are not to be trusted and are basically incompetent in handling their checkbooks.

However, ARA should be commended for showing students sound business practices. The lesson to be learned is: when in the Food Service Business and the boss says "No checks," it is better to throw food and drink away than risk accepting a check.

So if one doesn't have a certified check or cash, one is not welcome at Lancer cafe – Merry Christmas.

Muth: Disputed Reputation Surfaces

To the Editor,

I have become aware of the appalling rudeness of the secretary in the Social Work department, Millie Muth. She has offended many students with her flip remarks and uncaring attitude. It always seemed to me that a secretary should have exceptional social skills, especially in a department such as Social Work. Unfortunately Mrs. Muth does not seem to be aware of the fact that she is one of the first people students and other members of the community come in contact with when dealing with the department of social work. It is disappointing that such an exceptional department can be hindered so greatly by one person.

Signed, a concerned student

Dear Editor,

I would like to thank someone who has done a great deal to help me and others here at Longwood, Millie Muth. Millie is the secretary for the Social Work Department. Millie is the type of person who is always willing to lend a helping hand whether it is related to school or personal concerns. For instance, she types our newsletters for the Social Work Club, makes posters and so much more. Most of all Millie always listens: when you talk, she's never too busy.

Thanks Millie,

Jeaneen Louden

Dear Rotunda Editor,

I would like to appreciate what Millie Muth has done for us social work majors. Millie is one of the most patient and understanding ladies that I have every met. She has had to put up with our bad moods and helped lift up our spirits. She even made sure that our work and other things were given to the professors. She talks to us even when she is busy. She did a lot of things for us that we don't even realize – she is one understanding person who takes time out to help and listen to us when we are in need. I thank the Lord for a dedicated person like Millie.

College Cords Not Up To Par

Letter to the Editor:

Upon my return to Longwood after the summer, there were many changes concerning the resident's life through rules and regulations due to the fire last semester. During my walk to the library Thursday night, I noticed the beautiful Christmas candles in Ruffner windows and in the library. When I entered the library, I noticed that these lights were all plugged into the wall with a cheap $1.97 K-Mart extension cord: you know, the one's that most of us got written up for by the Fire Marshall. Then on Friday when I went to my classes, these same lights were plugged into these same cords. I realize that in these buildings there is less of a chance of someone getting hurt if it were to catch on fire; however, the danger is not my point. If residents are required to have 14-2 extension cords, who is to say that this rule doesn't apply to the library and classrooms as well. RA's respond with "If the Fire Marshall were to catch you, we would all be in trouble". Is this a lie or are they trying to keep themselves out of hot water? The library and classrooms are places where people go every day and observe these things and it would be much easier for them to get caught than it would for the student in our rooms. Who ever is responsible for enforcing this rule is doing a very poor job of it.

Amy C. Moore

Dear Editor,

I would like to take the time to commend the school on its choice of Christmas decorations in the Rotunda. But at the same time I would like to point out that they are causing a fire hazard by not using the approved extension cords.

It was my understanding that all extension cords used on campus were to be of the 14-2 type. On December 6th the extension cords used to light the window candles in the Rotunda and the Collonades were not of the approved variety. Upstairs in the Rotunda there were 5 of these extension cords plugged into each other (against policy and standard safety practices).

I can't help but wonder: why are students expected to abide by rules that the administration does not heed themselves. Are there two different sets of rules? Are students the only ones that start fires? Does there have to be a fire (again) before the school starts acting as responsible as the students are expected to? I hope not.

Soccer Team Slighted

Editor,

I am writing this letter in response to the events that have occurred over the past few weeks involving the Longwood soccer team. Isn't it funny how a division two school with a winning record, winning tradition, and a highly respected coach, got overlooked by the NCAA selection committee for a national bid. Isn't it also funny that Longwood was the only soccer team at any level of Division to have three players on the team the same year named All-American. Through hard work and dedication, Rich Posipanko has built a highly respected soccer program that has been ranked as high as third nationally over the past few years.

I think Longwood should hold its head up high, and be proud of the accomplishments the team has made.

The soccer team has reached many great heights this year, and their success will continue. I myself had a chance to be involved with the team this year, and I have nothing but praise for the coaches and players.

The team may not have gotten the national bid, but I think now the NCAA realizes the grave injustice they've committed.

Rich "J.D." Jones

It's A Shame.....

Editor,

The incident which brought me to pen this letter is as follows: I returned from Thanksgiving break to find that the school had repainted the interior of the elevators in two colors and it looked fairly nice except someone had already scratched in the paint, "This college sucks." I wonder if this person stopped to think that he/she may be the initial cause this college has problems. Don't you people want to live n a decent place?

This college has the potential to look very nice but things are always torn up and it's a damn shame.

LC Students Nothing In School's Eyes

To the Editor:

I was quite pleased at the beginning of this semester when I learned that A Christmas Carol was going to be brought to Longwood by the Longwood Series of Performing Arts. My enthusiasm dropped sharply when I arrived at Jarman at 7:35 p.m. (hoping to get a good seat). At that time I was informed that since I was a common peon student I was banished to the back of the auditorium or the balcony. I paid for my ticket when I paid my fees. So why – WHY! was I not allowed to be seated wherever I wished? Are the students of this school second class citizens?

I would also like to know why the students were not told that they must pick up their tickets in advance in the Student Union Office!

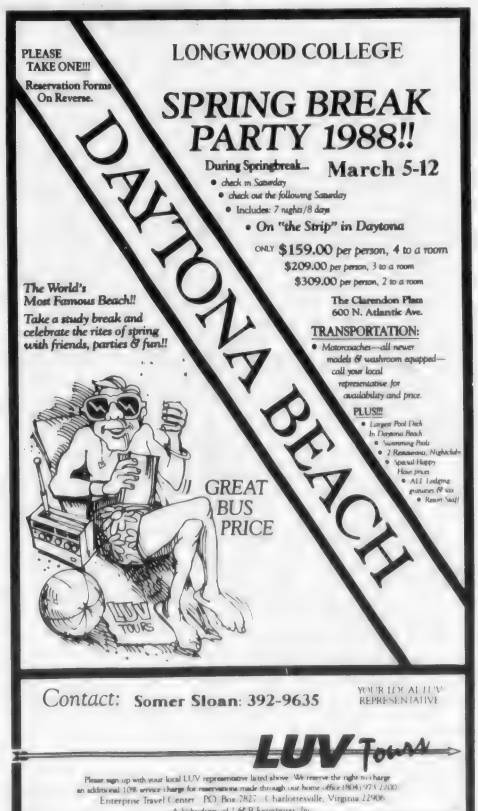
Freshman Trees Beautify Campus

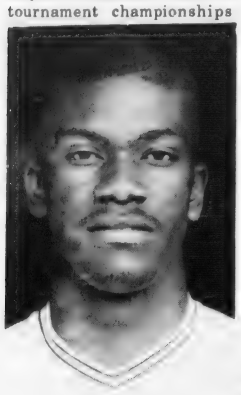
Dear Editor:



On Wednesday, December 2, the Longwood Freshmen Seminar Class, taught by Mrs. Simmons, planted two trees on campus – a white pine, and a maple tree.

The trees represent our present physical togetherness as a group of first year students, but it also represents more. It represents the past. From what we know about the earlier history of Longwood, students and faculty worked together to create a suitable learning environment for themselves and others.

The faculty set aside December 2, as Arbor Day. On this occasion, the children of the Campus Training School assisted with the tree planting as an act of beautification, conservation, and appreciation. It was also a token then and now of a desire to make this campus more beautiful for those who choose to attend Longwood College.



Our Seminar group is looking into our past to appreciate the traditions which we have inherited. We are looking forward to the future and wish to provide some beauty along the way.

With a feeling of gratitude for this institution, pride in our class, and a desire to make life better for others, we, the class of 1991, assisted by our nursery school, planted these trees – a white pine and a maple tree as a symbol of life, growth, and regard for others.

Players Of The Week

Senior Annette Easterling and sophomore Kevin Jefferson earned Most Valuable Player honors while leading their respective basketball teams to tournament championships over the weekend. Easterling and Jefferson have been selected as co-recipients of the Longwood College Player of the Week award for the week of Nov. 22. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

KEVIN JEFFERSON

Easterling scored 36 points and hit six of 12 three-point field goals to lead the Lady Lancers to the Mount Olive Lady Trojan Classic title. A 5-4 guard, she scored 15 points in a 73-61 win over Mount Olive and came back with 19 points, 4 assists and 4 steals in an 83-69 victory over Atlantic Christian.

ANNETTE EASTERLING

A physical education major, Easterling had several career-best performances over the weekend. She is also a standout on the Longwood softball team. Easterling graduated from Manchester High School.

Co-Cap Conkwright Captures Honors

Longwood senior co-captain Claye Conkwright is a repeat choice on the 1987 Field Hockey Coaches Association/Penn Monto All-South Region team, it was announced last week.

Conkwright received honorable mention on the all-star squad for the second year in a row. Longwood's leader in interceptions/tackles for the second year, Conkwright also scored four goals and handed out an assist. She helped Longwood compile a 13-6-1 record. The Lady Lancers recorded more wins than any LC team since 1975.

A four-year starter at Longwood, Conkwright was the lone Division II hockey player named to the predominantly Division I squad. She collected 388 interceptions/tackles in 1987, breaking the record 275 she had last year.

Riders Win Ribbons

Longwood had 11 riders earn ribbons at an intercollegiate horseshow November 14 at the University of Virginia.

"It was super," said head coach Shirley Duncan. "We went down there to win and we did it. We had a total team effort. Our depth and balance were big keys. I think we wore the other teams down."

TKE's Fund Scholarship

By Rich Jones

The Longwood College Athletic Department was presented an additional athletic scholarship this past week. The scholarship was made possible by the Tau Kappa Epsilon Rho Kappa Chapter here at Longwood. The scholarship is the Tau Kappa Epsilon Athletic Scholarship, and will be presented to an incoming freshman male athletic on the basis of need. The recipient of the scholarship will be decided jointly by the Athletic Department and the Financial Aide Department.

The scholarship will be $300 the first year, but this amount could be raised if additional funds are received.

The scholarship is in honor of the following people; Tony Perini, Tommy Pairet, Parker Wheeler, and Bill Grogan.

The transfer of the Tau Kappa Epsilon Fraternity had these comments, "We wanted to make the scholarship to show an appreciation to the local businessman that made our presentation of NWA Wrestling possible."

The winner of the scholarship will be announced at the honors and awards day ceremonies. If anyone would like to contribute or find out more information about the scholarship contact a member of Tau Kappa Epsilon.

Lady Hoopsters Doing Great

Senior center Barbie Burton and freshman Carmille Barnette led Longwood to its second tournament championship of the season in the Wofford College Invitational Friday and Saturday.

The 5-2 Lady Lancers, who visit Division I Towson State Wednesday, had four or more players in double figures in a 73-70 overtime win over Central Wesleyan Friday and a 92-70 victory over Coker College in the championship Saturday night. Longwood had won the Mount Olive Lady Trojan Classic on the opening weekend of the season.

Burton totaled 31 points and 26 rebounds to earn Most Valuable Player honors in the event and was joined on the All-Tournament team by Barnette, who collected 33 points and 12 rebounds.

"We felt real good about it," said coach Shirley Duncan of her team's tournament title. "We'd like to be 7-0 now, but we've accomplished a lot."

Duncan, who got her 99th career win Saturday night, will be going for win number 100 Wednesday at Towson State. The coach pointed to Longwood's work on defense and an effective fastbreak as key factors in the tournament showing.

"We jumped out to a 7-0 lead in the championship game," she said. "Our fastbreak worked very well and helped us get ahead. Our player-to-player defense kept the other teams off-balance."

Senior guard Angie Hill, who moved into the starting lineup Friday night, scored 19 points in the championship game. Burton and Barnette scored 17 points, Angie Middleton scored 11, and Jill Everett was the fifth Lady Lancer in double figures with 10 points.

Longwood outrebounded Coker by a 59-30 margin and hit 15 of 23 free throws for its best showing of the year at the line.

SURVIVE MIRACLE SHOT

Longwood survived a near miracle shot by Central Wesleyan's Mona Blasingame to win Friday night's opener in overtime. Blasingame had a prayer answered when her shot from just past midcourt bounced in to tie the game at 63-63 and bring an overtime.

LADY LANCER BASKETBALL 2-2-2

Thanks to a bucket by Hill, four points from Burton and two free throws from Everett and Barnette, Longwood won the overtime period 10-7 and the ball game. Annette Easterling scored 17 points to take honors for Longwood. Barnette scored 16, Burton had 14 with 11 rebounds and Everett scored 11 points.

Easterling added seven assists and canned three of nine from 3-point range.

BEST START IN 11 YEARS

Longwood's early season 5-2 start is the team's best beginning since the 1976 squad began the year 6-2.

"We're getting great balance in our scoring and contributions from a lot of players," says coach Duncan. "We need to maintain that balance to continue our success."

Four players are scoring in double figures for Longwood. The leaders are Barnette at 13.9, Easterling 12.1, Everett 11.4 and Burton 10.7. Burton is also averaging 8.7 rebounds.

Stukes And Strauss Out-Grapple At York

Junior John Stukes and senior Jesus Strauss won individual titles and Longwood finished third out of seven teams in the York College Wrestling Tournament in York, Pennsylvania Saturday.

Longwood, 1-6 in dual matches, concluded its first semester action at York. A match scheduled at Campbell Tuesday night has been postponed until January 21.

Stukes took 12-2 and 4-3 decisions to win the title at 134 pounds and Strauss won by scores of 13-3 and 8-0 to finish on top in the heavyweight division. Stukes is now 16-2-1 for the year while Strauss is 10-6.

Other place winners for Longwood were Eion Kelley 3-1 for third place at 126, Dave Taylor, 2-2 for fourth at 177, and Doug Hartley 2-1 for third at 190.

Delaware Valley won the event with 107 3/4 points. Lycoming had 82 3/4 for second, Longwood was next with 40. Other scores included: Salisbury State 31 1/2, Glassboro 17 1/2, Gettysburg 16 1/2 and York 13.

Coach Steve Nelson was particularly impressed with Strauss, who won his first collegiate tournament title.

"Jesus wrestled the best he has all year," said Nelson. "He placed in six of 8 tournaments last year, but this was his first individual title. As a team we started off a little shaky, but we came back strong in the consolation rounds."

Nationally ranked Pembroke had too much for Longwood's young team Wednesday night as the Braves took a 36-6 victory in a match held at Deep Creek High School in Chesapeake, Virginia.

Winners for Longwood were Stukes who won a 7-3 decision over Marvin Jones at 134 pounds and Hartley who beat Rick Hooten 6-4 in the heavyweight division. Lancers Todd Robson, 118, and Tommy Gilbert, 142, lost close decisions.

"We had a competitive match, and with a couple of breaks we could have made it a lot closer," said Nelson. "Pembroke is one of the toughest teams on our schedule."

Football Team Finishes Season

The Longwood Lancer football team has accepted another bowl bid. This is the sixth year the Lancer Football Team has been in existence, and the sixth bowl bid the Lancers have received. The Lancers on Jan. 1 will be playing in Hershey, Pennsylvania in the Chocolate Bowl. The Lancers were overlooked by the Rose and Orange bowl selection committees because of the ties to Florida and Virginia Tech in the final two games of the season. Lancer head coach Micheal Phillips had these comments on the team getting overlooked by the other bowls, "We've had another undefeated season. But the last two ties really put our national championship hopes to rest."

The Lancers did have wide receiver Russell Alves named first team All-American by the Associated Press this week. Alves had 60 catches in 10 games for the Lancer football team, with 6 being for touchdowns. Coach Phillips also reported that star tailback W.C. Woods will be back in the lineup. Woods suffered a concussion after his wife struck him over the head with a fry pan. Woods was out of the line-up for 5 games. The team will be playing the loser of the South Carolina and Miami game.

All ticket and bussing information for the trip to Hershey can be obtained at the student union or from any member of the Pi Kappa Phi fraternity. Let's all go out and jeer the Longwood Football team to victory. By Rich Jones

Three Lancers Named All-American

By Rich Jones

The Longwood Lancer Soccer Team was bestowed with a great honor this past week; three of the team's players were named All-American. Senior Jeff Robinson and sophomore John Barone were named second team. Freshman Ray Jones who scored a school record 29 goals, was named first team. Jones at one time was listed in Sports Illustrated magazine as the nation's leading goal scorer.

Robinson is a senior from Huntington Valley, Pennsylvania. He has been on the team for four years. Barone came to Longwood from Neptune, N.J. and Ray Jones hails from Smith's Parrish, Bermuda. Coach Rich Posipanko had these comments about the three players. "Roz, John, and Ray had a great year. They showed leadership that helped us come together as a team. There aren't three other players who are more deserving of being named All-American." The Lancer soccer team was the only team – Division I, II, or III – to have three players named All-American this year. That statistic alone should make the Longwood Administration and student body feel very proud.

Golf Team: End-Of-Season Profile

By SONNY MERCHANT

The Longwood men's golf team finished their fall season with a record of 1-3. The teams best score for the season was 320 against Radford. Their overall team stroke average was 346.8 for seven rounds.

This is a rebuilding year for the Lancers, who graduated four starters from last year's team. Out of the nine man squad this year only two are returnees. Coach Steve Nelson says the new squad has potential and he is looking forward to increased success in the spring season.

Senior Kevin Hare, a native of Mechanicsville, competed on the Longwood men's golf team during this fall season. Hare, in his fourth year with the Lancers, is a graduate of Lee-Davis High School where he competed in baseball one year as well as golf. Kevin is a business administration major at Longwood. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Starkey Hare III of Mechanicsville.

Junior Kevin Haskins, resident of South Boston, also competed with the Lacers this season. Haskins won medalist honors at Radford, shooting a 74 for the match. Kevin finished with an 84.7 stroke average for the season. He is currently a math major at Longwood and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Haskins of South Boston.

Freshman Jeff Smiley, from Palmyra, had an impressive first year on the squad. He held the teams best combined tournament score with an 82-82-164 at the W&L Invitational, as well as the best overall season stroke average of 83.5. Jeff is a business administration major at Longwood and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Grover Smiley of Palmyra.

Sophomore Hank Kim, a resident of Chester, is in his first season with the Lancers. Kim attended Thomas Dale High School where he participated in both golf and soccer. His best showing was at Radford where he shot 86. Hank is a business marketing and finance major at Longwood and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Chong U. Kim of Chester.

Senior Dan Ford, from VA Beach, competed for the Lancers in two tournaments this fall, the Old Dominion Tournament and the W&L Invitational. His best performance came at W&L where he shot a 97-81-178. Dan attended First Colonial High School in VA Beach. Dan is now a fitness major at Longwood and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel R. Ford III of VA Beach.

Freshman Darrell Nichols, a native of South Boston, is in his first year on the Lancer squad. Nichols saw action at both Radford and at the Ferrum Invitational this fall.

His best score came at Radford where he shot 84. Darrell attended Halifax County Senior High School where he was named MVP in golf his senior year. Nichols is a business major at Longwood and the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Nichols Jr. of South Boston.

Freshman John Holmes, a resident of Chesapeake, is also in his first year with the Lancers. John attended Indian River High School where he was the captain of their varsity baseball team. John is currently an undeclared major at Longwood and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Holmes of Chesapeake.

Sophomore Gregory Boyce, also of Chesapeake, is in his second season with the Lancers. Boyce saw limited action in match play this fall season. He graduated from Indian River High School where he was a member of the school's golf team for four years. During this time he placed as high as the #3 position. Greg is currently an undeclared major at Longwood and the son of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Boyce of Chesapeake.

Tip-Off Victory Over Pace

Tournament MVP Kevin Jefferson and the Longwood basketball team followed last year's script to capture their second straight Par-Bil's Tip-Off Tournament title over the weekend, edging a strong Pace University team 79-78 in the championship game Saturday night.

An enthused Longwood coach Cal Luther felt his team got off to a solid start " thought our chances of winning the title were slim and none. We hung tough with a young bunch of kids."

Last Week's Player Of The Week

Barbie Burton

Senior center Barbie Burton scored 31 points and grabbed 26 rebounds to lead the Longwood women's basketball team to the championship of the Wofford College Invitational over the weekend. Burton has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period November 29-December 6. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

Burton, 6-2, scored 14 points and grabbed 11 rebounds in Longwood's 73-70 overtime victory over Central Wesleyan Friday night, and came back with 17 points and 15 rebounds against Coker in her team's 92-70 tournament title victory.

Burton also had eight steals in the Wofford tournament and was named Most Valuable Player.

A graduate of Yorktown High School in Arlington, Burton has been a two-year starter for the Lady Lancers. Showing marked improvement each season, she seems to be set for her best year. While helping Longwood get off to a 5-2 start, she has averaged 10.7 points and 8.7 rebounds while hitting 55 per cent of her shots. She has had 10 or more rebounds four times.

"Barbie played very well at both ends of the floor in both games," said head coach Shirley Duncan.

Only One In Ten Rapes Reported

By JAIME HAMPTON

Straight from Webster's New World Dictionary: rape is "the crime of having sexual intercourse with a woman or girl forcibly and without her consent." According to Chief James Huskey of Campus Police, the biggest problem after rape has occurred is that the woman "isn't willing to pursue it by pressing charges."

The most common types of rape are when the rapist is someone the victim knows; or "date-rape." Most of the time it is not reported, and if it is, it's usually later rationalized by the victim and not pursued.

So far only one rape has been reported this semester, though not pursued; and Chief Huskey speculates that only one in ten rapes is ever reported, due to fear of publicity. "This is an unfortunate attitude because there is no publicity except in court; and the "Perk Kit" (rape test kit) is administered at the hospital by a doctor and a nurse to the victim with no one else present," says Huskey.

There are several reasons why a woman should report a rape and press charges against the rapist when he is someone she knows. Most importantly, he has violated her rights as a woman and a person.

"...Rape Could Lead To AIDS"

Besides that, nowadays one must worry that rape could eventually lead to AIDS; whereby, you have not only a case of rape but also of manslaughter or second degree murder.

Another important consideration is that once a male rapes someone and gets away with it, more than likely he will do it again to someone else. Then it becomes a campus problem. Someone should be told; if not campus police, then the Dean of Students or the Vice President for Student Affairs or a Resident Assistant.

A rape should be brought to someone's attention right away because physical evidence is soon lost, and a jury is very hesitant to convict a rapist if it's simply a case of one person's word against another's, with no other evidence.

It should be noted that there is a statue of limitations for rape of five to seven years. This means that any physical evidence gathered from the victim can be saved, due to forensics, should the victim decide to wait before pressing charges. But it must be REPORTED right away.

Chief Huskey feels "the male population needs to be educated as to what rape is." He goes on to say, "As far as we're concerned, if a male and a female are in the middle of a sexual act and the female says 'no – stop!' anything happening after that is rape."

As far as preventing rape, the most important thing to remember is: use common sense! "Three-fourths of ALL campus problems, not just rape, are problems that students have created for themselves," says Huskey. Women should NOT walk around campus alone at night. Chief Huskey reflects, "Although the laws of nature say that we are all equal, the laws of man have proven that this just isn't so."

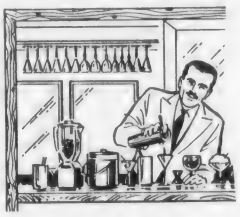
If a female is alone at night, she should travel in a well-lighted area; and if someone grabs her, she should scream. As far as fighting back, a woman shouldn't fight back unless she is somewhere where someone will hear or see her.

Campus police is also willing to help. If a ride home is needed from one end of campus to the other, call them. If you have to park your car at Wynne, stop by campus police and let them follow you up there and give you a ride back to your room. Sure, you might have to wait a while, but think of the alternative. Is it worth it?

Concerning date-rape or rape by someone that is known to the victim, again common sense is important. Get to know this person as well as possible before going off alone with him, getting in his car alone with him, or going to his room alone with him. Another alternative to date rape is to lie. Chief Huskey says, "Tell him you have a venereal disease or that it's your time of the month – anything that will work."

Unfortunately, in some cases of date rape, intoxication is a contributing factor. However, "no" should be sufficient. "No" means no.

Students And Administrators Got Drunk



By KRISTINA SMALL

What is the Longwood Men's Club and why did they host a controlled drinking experiment? According to a member of "the club" who preferred to remain anonymous the Longwood Men's Club is a "psuedo-secret social organization which holds special activities at special times."

He further stated, with a smile on his face, that the club's members are "strong believers in responsible drinking" and would like to premote that attitude among Longwood students.

Prompted by Alcohol Awareness Week, the club contacted Art Greene, a Drug and Alcohol educator, to present the program. Mr. Greene travels to colleges around the region getting administrators and students drunk to help them and those watching to realize the effects alcohol has on motor skills and driving abilities.

Four administrators and four students began drinking the liquor of their choice at 5:30. By 7:00 when the experiment opened up most of the participants were already on their way. Sue Saunders found it more comfortable to sit on the floor while Mr. Greene had Derrick Lily walking a straight line and counting backwards.

Mr. Greene asked the participants to keep notes about the changes they felt after each drink.

Rick Hurley reported that after two drinks he had a "low Donkey Kong score of 1,000, a glow around the top of my head" and a "drunkeness feeling from head to toe." With a blood alcohol content of .06, Mr. Hurley had a "feeling of goodness" and felt drunk at .08.

Mr. Green administered a test in which he had Rob Liessem follow a pen with his eyes, a test given by police to suspected drunk drivers. If the eyes don't move smoothly it is a sign of intoxication. Mr. Greene's aim was to prove the legal consequences and potential dangers of irresponsible drinking.

Local Band Going Strong

By CINDY GOOD

On Thursday night, November 19th, the Lancer Cafe' was packed with classic rock 'n roll lovers who came to hear the local band False Dmitri play.

The college radio station, WLCX 90.1 FM, and the Longwood Student Excursion club sponsored the three hour concert, which members of both organizations deemed as a "huge success."

The band has played at the Lancer Cafe' several times in the past but this was the first time this year. Lead singer and bass player Allen Franklin said that they always enjoy playing for Longwood students at the Cafe' and that the band hopes to play there again next semester.

False Dmitri got started in November of 1977 with five members, three of which are still in the band. Two of the original members were Hampden-Sydney students who decided to leave the group after they graduated. Since then, False Dmitri has filled vacant positions with Longwood and Hampden-Sydney students, but the student band members have always ended up leaving the band after graduating.

False Dmitri currently has only four members: Allen Franklin who sings lead and plays bass, J.W. Frank who plays rhythm guitar, Steve Brown on drums, and Norman Voss on lead guitar. Allen is the head post office person at the post office on campus. Steve and J.W. also live and work in the Farmville area. Norman is currently a senior here at Longwood and has been with the band about two years.

As a "classic rock" band, they play mostly older hits from the 1960's and 1970's. Several songs they play during almost every concert are: Brown Sugar (Rolling Stones), Born to be Wild (Steppenwolf), Smoke on the Water (Deep Purple) and Free Bird (Lynyrd Skynyrd). They also play a lot of ZZ Top's material.

There are usually four or five of their original songs included in each concert. The band made a demo tape about two years ago with some of their original pieces on it. They would like to cut an album, but cost has prevented this, at least for now. Allen said that the band knows about 300 songs which they play and out of these songs there isn't one that any of the members doesn't like.

False Dmitri's logo is the face of a bull dog. Allen said that, as with the name of the band, they had a hard time finding a logo which all the members liked. The bull dog face came from an old squeaktoy that a co-worker had. Allen said he drew several pictures of the toy and showed them to the band. The bulldog (with added sunglasses) was a hit with the other members and the rest is history.

Next semester, WLCX will probably host False Dmitri again at the Lancer Cafe', so, classic rock lovers; get ready for another concert that is guaranteed to rock the roof off!

The band tried three or four names when they first started playing, but none of them fit very well. The name False Dmitri originated from a story of a Russian Prince named Dmitri. Dmitri dissappeared before he could take over the throne, so a cousin, who was next in line, took the thrown. Several years later a person claiming he was Dmitri came back and was given the Russian kingship. However, soon it was found out that he was an impostor, or, as he was called, a "false Dmitri." In the late 70's, Allen said, "False Dmitri" was a saying that meant "no way," not for real," "fake," etc. The band adopted the phrase and it seemed to work.

Currently, False Dmitri plays mostly in-state at colleges and bars.

'Tis The Season... For Suicide?

By DINA FERRIGNO

Since most freshmen and sophomores on this campus fall in the teenage suicide range of 15 yrs.-19 yrs. old, we all must be able to recognize the signs and cries for help. The suicide rate in this age bracket has tripled in the last two decades, reaching five suicides and about five hundred attempts daily. Not only this, but researchers also think that the rates may even be higher since death is not coined as suicide-related unless the deceased has left a note.

It has been found that one's socioeconomic background is not a factor. The only clear, headstrong factor is depression: deep, dark depression set off by some event. Sometimes it is hard to tell if our friends are depressed to the extent of contemplating suicide. Sometimes the events which trigger a suicide do not even have to be anything more out of the ordinary than a daily occurance, like getting in an argument with your roommate, or failing your history exam.

Suicides are often seasonal, occurring at Thanksgiving, Christmas and in the spring. We must always remember that if we think twice about the actions of our friends it is time to deal with a possible suicide taking place. Get help immediately! Here are some signs:

- preoccupation with death
- changes in sleeping and eating habits
- unexplained or unusually rebellious/disruptive behavior
- depression and withdrawal
- running away
- persistent boredom
- difficulty concentrating
- drug/alcohol abuse
- falling grades
- unusual neglect of appearance
- radical personality change
- psychosomatic complaints
- giving away prized possessions
- expressing suicidal thoughts, even jokingly.

If you can't handle the problem yourself there is help. Call the American Association of Suicidology at 303-692-0985.

Spotlight

By CINDY GOOD

If you've been keeping track of the D.J.s in the Spotlight, you probably think that all of WLCX's D.J.s are men. However, this is not the case at all. In fact WLCX has just as many female D.J.s as males.

Marian Martin, a senior Elementary Education major, has been with the station for two and a half years. Currently Marian is doing a partner radio show with junior Tammy Dawson from 6:00 to 8:00 on Friday nights.

Marian plays a variety of music ranging from progressive to pop to oldies. Her music is usually upbeat, party music because at that time on a Friday night, her listeners are just starting to party or are getting ready to go out.

MARIAN MARTIN

Marian has served as the station's Business Manager for the past three semesters but will be giving up the position to student teach in the spring. Marian said that by being Business Manager, she got a chance to see what funds are really necessary to run the station and by being an officer she got a good "view of all the officer positions" and who is in charge of each aspect of the station.

One of the craziest things that has happened to Marian during her years on the air is when she got a phone call in the studio from a guy who said that she had a sexy voice and wanted to know if they could get intamately involved very quickly!

In the future, Marian said that she would possibly like to work as a D.J. for a small radio station or do some other part-time radio work.

A Christmas Carol

By MELBA FARBUCKLE

A musical version of Charles Dickens' A Christmas Carol by The Nebraskan Theatre was the final presentation in Longwood College's Series of the Performing Arts this semester.

A cast of 25 actors, accompanied by a four-piece chamber ensemble, told the classic story of the reformation of Ebenezer Scrooge. Much of Dickens' original dialogue was maintained, as the spirits of Christmas Past, Present, and Future showed Scrooge the way out of a miserly existence to one of generosity and kindness.

A primary motivation in the creative force of Charles Dickens was the wish to expose the suffering and hopelessness of the working poor in England during the Industrial Revolution. A Christmas Carol, written in November of 1843 contains Dickens' philosophy. He believed in the brotherhood of man, in the necessity of good will in human conduct.

Scrooge is the embodiment of the acquisitive, middle-class society whose value system focused on profit and gain. The Cratchit family are the working poor, portrayed with all the tender honesty, limited prospects, and tragic problems that typified that class in Victorian England.

Even the medical problems of Tiny Tim are important to Dickens' theme; in 1843 there was no hospital in London that would admit a child as a patient.

The staging creates a Christmas-card tableau, with a row of shops, a light snowfall, street vendors, and caroling children. The production features outstanding singers and dancers, lavish costumes, and spectacular special effects.

The Nebraska Theater has given more than 1,000 performances of A Christmas Carol throughout North America during the past eight years.

fund which provided clothes for elementary school students, another part was donated to the Farmville welfare department and the last third went to retired college staff.

The annual traditions at Longwood ranged from the conventional to the odd. For example, everyday from 12:05 to 12:30 students crowded into the Rotunda and surrounding balconies while singing Christmas carols. The Dramatic Arts Club put on its annual Christmas party complete with carolers and a visit from Santa while the art classes decorated residence hall bulletin boards around campus.

The annual water pageant was put on by the H_2O Club. 1951's theme was "A Wet Christmas Eve."

Thursday, December 10, 1987
4:30-6:30 P.M.

The Concert Choir, Lancer Edition, and Brass Ensemble will present a Candlelight Christmas Concert on Tuesday evening, Dec. 8, at 7:30 at the Farmville Baptist Church. The program will include "some old and some new Christmas songs," said John Campbell, director of Longwood's choral groups. "There will be new musical settings of some traditional carols and several up-beat songs by the Lancer Edition." The audience will be invited to join in singing familiar carols, with accompaniment by the Brass Ensemble. "We have planned the program as a family evening, a way for people of all ages to celebrate the beginning of a beautiful season," Mr. Campbell said. All are invited to attend the concert at no charge.

The administration of Longwood College and the December Graduation Committee would like to invite you to a formal December graduation. The ceremony will be held on Wednesday, December 16, 1987 at 10 a.m. in Lancer Hall.

If you are interested in participating in the graduation ceremony contact the Registrar's office as soon as possible.

A dinner for all participating seniors is currently being planned by the Committee. Those interested should contact Marci Cantor at 392-5910.

Graduation announcements will be available after Thanksgiving Break. If you have not already done so, please reserve yours at the Book Store.

Batik work by Janie S. Mosby, of Warrenton, is featured in Longwood College's Showcase Gallery (first floor hallway in the Bedford Building) through December 12.

Dr. James Cross will speak at the next "Food for Thought" luncheon in the Tea Room on Wednesday, Dec. 9, at 12:30 p.m. These discussion programs, on "Issues Around the Constitution," are sponsored by the Longwood and Hampden-Sydney campus ministries. Faculty and staff members are invited to join the group. Dr. Cross is Interim Associate Vice President for Planning, Research, and Information Systems and Commonwealth Visiting Professor in the School of Business and Economics.

Dr. Gordon K. Davies, Director of the State Council of Higher Education for Virginia (SCHEV), will speak on Monday, Dec. 14, at 3:30 p.m. in Bedford Auditorium. He will discuss issues coming out of his 10-year report. If faculty members have educational issues pertinent to Longwood that they would like Dr. Davies to address, please get these suggestions to Dr. John Peale (ext. 356) as soon as possible and he will refer them to Dr. Davies.

A final special thanks goes to the brothers of Tau Kappa Epsilon for all their help with unloading and setting up.

Superpowers Come Together While S. Africa Withdraws

By MATT PETERMAN

President Reagan and Soviet leader Michail Gorbachev signed an arms treaty yesterday in Washington to eliminate intermediate range nuclear missles. It is the first treaty to ban an entire class of missles according to the wire dispatches. "Over three years, 3800, U. S. and Soviet warheads will be dismantled according to the Richmond Times Dispatch.

Reagan called the treaty "a complete bargain . . ." that "completely meets the long-standing goals of the United States and our allies and advances the interests of peace," speaking in his weekly radio address.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia said he was "cautiously optimistic" about the ratification of the treaty speaking in the Democratic response Byrd continued: "The Senate will not rush the process of advise and consent." "It took the President's negotiations years to pin down every word in this treaty. The Senate is going to take several months to consider its merits. We cannot be slip-shod in examining the fine print."

South Africa troops are being pulled out of Angola after sucessfully aiding, UNIRA, The Union for the Total Independence of Angola, against a massive land attack that began in September. The announcement came from South African general Jannie Geldenhuts.

According to the Richmond Times Dispatch, "Geldenhuts said the decision to withdraw 'Followed the successful completion of certain tasks in the interest of South Africa'." The Rebels claim they beat back a major government offensive in early November."

"On November 11, South Africa announced that its forces had intervened to help the rebels repel an offensive B7 Angola's Soviet-and Cuban-backed army."

"The fighting, pitting rebels and South African men, weapons and aircraft against Angolan soldiers and up to 50,000 forces from four East Bloc countries, has been waged since September in the grassy plains in southeastern Angola, up to 200 miles north of the border with Pretoria-ruled Namibia."

"On Nov. 25, the U.N. Security Council voted unanimously to demand South Africa's unconditional withdrawal. South Africa rejected the demand, saying it would withdraw when other foreign forces left or when its interests no longer were threatened."

Its Law For Life

By D. M. VEE

"Virginia's Safety Belt Law – It's A Law For Life" is the theme of the Virginia Department of Motor Vehicles and Virginia Department of State Police's new campaign to promote safety belt use and statewide compliance with the law.

Virginia's mandatory safety belt law, effective January 1, 1988, requires drivers and front seat passengers to use safety belts when traveling in motor vehicles.

"If just 60 percent of Virginia motorists wear their safety belts, we believe we can save more than 300 lives each year," said DMV Commissioner Donald E. Williams. "In addition, thousands of injuries will be avoided. Virginia's safety belt law is truly a 'law for life.'"

DMV's goal for compliance is 60 percent by the end of 1988 according to Williams. This represents almost double the number of motorists wearing safety belts at this time.

"We know of no other single law which could save the lives of so many Virginians," commented Col. Robert L. Suthard, Superintendent of the Virginia State Police: "Besides the deaths and injuries which will be prevented, this law will eliminate untold grief and suffering by families and friends of crash victims."

Drivers transporting a child four to 16 years of age in the front seat are responsible for seeing that the child is properly secured in a safety belt. Virginia law already requires children under four to be properly restrained while riding in a motor vehicle.

Penalties for violation of the new law include a $25 civil penalty to be paid to the state Literary Fund. Citations may only be issued when the law enforcement officer stops the driver for some other violation. No points for violations will be assigned under the Virginia Driver Improvement Act and violations do not constitute negligence according to the law.

Several exemptions to the law include: persons with certified medical reasons (must carry a physician's explanation statement); law enforcement officers in certain circumstances; persons operating taxi cabs or operating as a U.S. rural mail carrier, newspaper route carrier, bundle handler or rack carrier.

Elements of the "Law For Life" media campaign include television, radio and newspaper, public-service ads, tent cards, billboards, posters, exhibits and brochures.

Major And Minor Extra

By REBECCA STINA

ISL (International Studies at Longwood) is a program for Longwood students designed to supplement the major or minor in a given field. Students are required to take 36 credit hours in the areas of drama, literature, music, philosophy, anthropology, geography, government, history, and foreign languages chosen because of their emphasis upon foreign culture.

For some majors, the required credit hours can be acquired easily by carefully selecting courses in one's major and General Education which have been selected by the ISL Committee. The program will be enriched by a variety of lectures and performances to be held throughout the semester.

The target country for the spring semester will be Japan.

Upon successful completion of the program, students will receive a Certificate of International Studies.

Members of the ISL Committee are: Dr. Barber (Natural Sciences), Dr. Crowl (History), Dr. Flynn (Visual/Perf. Arts), Dr. Harbour (History), Dr. Kelly (Modern Foreign Langs.), Dr. Ra (Education), Mr. Stwodah (Lancaster Library), Ms. Terzin (Business/Ec.), Ms. Wacker (Psychology), Dr. Sue Saunders (Dean of Students), and Dr. Reynolds, Director (Modern Foreign Langs.). The student representative to the committee is Noah Wood.

So far the list of approved courses contains the following: Theater 406, Lit. 257, 263, 311, 312, 313, 314, 431, 425, Philosophy 211, 242, Music 123, 127, 231, 232, Anthropology 101, 321, History 111, 111H, 112, 320, 352, 360, 400, 466, all courses in German, French and Spanish at the 200-level or above.

For further information on the program, contact Dr. John F. Reynolds, English, Modern Foreign Languages, Philosophy, Grainger 12, Ext. 357.

Construction Underway To Replace Grazed Hardee's

New Hardee's Expected In March

By MATT PETERMAN

"Without construction delays, we expect to finish it (the new Hardee's) in mid-March," said Jim Dunn, the President of Franchise Enterprises, the company that owns the Hardee's. The decision to scrap the old Hardee's was chosen instead of remodeling because "the building was worn out and already been remodeled twice," says Dunn. The building was approximately fifteen years old.

The old building was grazed a week after Christmas so that the new one could be put up as quickly as possible in 1988. Mr. Dunn claimed that no tax benefits would come their way for the decision. The new building will seat approximately 100 people, whereas the old one could only seat 58. A figure of how much the project would cost was not available at this writing.

Lisa Reed, Franchise Sales Administrator of Hardee's Corporation, said that the building was destroyed because it was probably part of the "old image." It was probably more feasible to build a new one than to remodel the old depending on the situation of each particular restaurant. Age, size, and other factors always play a role in these decisions. Most of the time "it is based on cost," according to Perry Stallings, Director of Franchise Services, at Hardee's Division Two headquarters.

When Longwood students returned after winter break they drove in a Farmville without a Hardee's and the rumors began to fly. Many thought a bacteria that they could not get rid of pushed them to destroy the building. Others thought that a fire had claimed the building. "Whatever the reason, it was a big shock to see a big hole where the Hardee's once was . . ." said Richard Grogan, a Longwood student.

The employees displaced from the decision were promised their jobs back if they still wanted them. In the meantime construction will continue until the target of mid-March is reached. McDonald's, RJ's, etc. will have to pick up the slack of Hardee's customers. "I don't think it is going to hurt their market share in Farmville, once they start up again," commented a Longwood student.

"We look forward to providing Farmville with a new modern facility, and hope the community will support us again as they have in the past," said Jim Dunn.

Restaurant 'Twice As Big' Says Manager

By HOLLY PREBLE

The fast food restaurant Hardees, located on South Main Street in the College Plaza Shopping Center in Farmville will be closed temporarily due to remodeling.

Middle-of-the night runs to Hardees to satisfy bacon, cheeseburger n' fries cravings must be put on hold until early March.

"We have been planning to remodel for some time," says Vicki Lee, manager of the Farmville Hardees. "There will be a new state-of-the-art equipment that a fast food restaurant needs in the new and improved Hardees."

Ms. Lee says all facilities will be expanding. The dining area will be "twice as big", so that up to ninety people will be able to be seated . The kitchen area will also be expanded to accommodate employees and the new equipment.

But why was the whole building torn down? The manager's reply that originally they had wanted to put Hardees in a different location, but those plans fell through. Hardees would have been torn down anyway "as much as (the building) needed remodeling," commented Lee.

Hardees will still be housed in a one-story building. The menu of this favorite luncheon spot will be the regular line, consisting of a variety of burgers, fries, drinks, and desserts. The establishment will still have a drive-through.

On a down note, Hardees is discontinuing the Longwood/ Hampden - Sydney theme. Instead, the decor will consist of oil paintings and murals of assorted wildlife scenes.

International Studies Bigger And Better

By CATHY GAUGHRAN

The International Studies at Longwood program, better known as ISL, is alive and well this semester, made evident by last night's slide and video lecture in Bedford Auditorium on early Japanese History.

ISL's purpose is multifold. First, the program brings culture to our isolated Farmvillian campus. Granted, cows are culture too, but man cannot live on pastures alone. Cultural events which might be readily available to students at big-city universities are brought to Longwood for those here who are interested in them.

Second, as the country becomes more dependent on foreign trade, knowledge of foreign languages and cultures is gaining importance in the business world. Hopefully, in the words of ISL Director Dr. John Reynolds, the program will "give Longwood grads a good shot at a good job."

The International Studies at Longwood program presently includes members of various departments among its num-

20th Century Art At Bedford — Worth The Trip

By NIGEL SMITHERS

Make sure you take the time between today and February 19th to see the late 20th Century Art Exhibit over in Bedford Gallery.

This display includes works by everyone from Beal to Warhol. The artists' techniques represented range from meticulous detail to casual brush strokes, and journey beyond mere paint bristles into some truly unique mediums: imagine art that utilizes corrugated aluminum and leather straps. It's all there.

Granted, you won't like everything you see at this exhibit of pieces on loan from the Virginia Museum. "If everyone liked it all," comments Fred Brandt, 20th century art curator from the museum, "the show would be boring. It'd all be the same."

The Bedford exhibit is a small sample of the 20th century art collection of the VA Museum in Richmond. The museum cannot display its vast collection en masse due to space limitations, and is grateful for any opportunity to loan pieces of it out to smaller galleries.

Please address contributions to the ROTUNDA, Box 1133. Letters are subject to editing. Please type or neatly print any contributions.

Opinions expressed in the ROTUNDA do not necessarily reflect those of the Longwood College administration, staff or students as a whole.

Deadline for articles is 3:00 p.m. Friday prior to the Tuesday publication date. Contributions handed in within 3 hours before deadline should be placed in the envelope on the Publications Office door in Lankford. Letters, personals, etc. are due on the office door by midnight Sunday.

Dear Editor:

Please run the attached letter in your paper, perhaps in the Letters to the Editor column, if you have room.

This will let the students in my section of the Longwood Seminar last semester know that their group project–raising money for F.A.C.E.S.–was appreciated by the community. It will also let other students know about just one of the group projects performed by the freshmen in the Seminar.

Dear Friends

On behalf of the Farmville Area Churches Emergency Service (F.A.C.E.S.), thank you for your generous contribution to our ministry.

F.A.C.E.S. serves the needs of area residents by providing food when they have emergencies. Your gift will enable us to continue this vital service.

Edwin A. Sebolt, Convener

To the Editor:

I am writing on behalf of the Longwood Riding Team. We have been cheated out of what we rightly deserve. How many people even know that there is a riding team? Everybody knows that there is a basketball team. I realize that riding is not one of the most widely known sports, but give us some credit. The basketball team gets at least $10,000 and we only get $2,200, plus we have to pay $200 just to be on the team. Basketball players get paid to play either by full or partial scholarships. Does that seem fair? We also have to feed living, breathing animals, while they just use a basketball that only requires air.

I am mad at the fact that we don't get any recognition. If Longwood would give us more funds, we would be just as prestigious as any of the other teams that are at Longwood or any of the surrounding colleges that we compete against.

An angry rider,
Tanya Matrai

STUDY ABROAD
an international education column

Q. Why should I study abroad?

A. There are at least three good reasons to make study abroad a part of your college education. You can learn a foreign language at the source, gain a global perspective about how other people work and live and enhance your career opportunities.

Q. How will studying abroad help my future career plans?

A. Most counselors and career placement personnel agree that a study abroad experience helps you "sell" yourself to a future employer. Study abroad demonstrates maturity, interpersonal skills, willingness to try something new, independence and other qualities strongly considered by potential employers.

Q. Will I be able to transfer my credit earned overseas to a U.S. college?

A. In many cases, yes. But to be sure, check with your dean of students or study abroad advisor before enrolling in any program.

Q. What kind of study abroad programs are available?

A. Literally there are thousands of study abroad programs in hundreds of academic disciplines offered by colleges, universities and private organizations. Programs range from two-week study tours to full year academic programs. The most complete listing of programs is contained in "Vacation Study Abroad" and "Semester and Academic Year" books published by the Institute of International Education, 809 United Nations Plaza, New York, NY 10017.

Q. What resources are available to help me decide what, where and when to study abroad?

A. Your very best resource may be right on your own campus! On many campuses there are study abroad (or international) offices which have been created to advise students planning to study abroad. Your study abroad advisor will have all the latest catalogs, provide information or reading materials, travel details and generally help you find the program which meets your needs.

Another good source of first hand information is a quarterly newspaper called "Transitions" (18 Hulst Road, Amherst, MA 01002) written by students and other travelers who have participated in various programs.

A professional organization called NAFSA (National Association For Foreign Student Affairs, 1860 19th Street NW, Washington, DC 20009) has a variety of pamphlets and bibliographies of interest to students planning to study abroad.

The American Institute For Foreign Study (102 Greenwich Avenue, Greenwich, Connecticut 06830) offers the widest variety of study abroad programs—more than 100 summer, semester and academic year opportunities in their college catalog.

King Story

"I Have A Dream," a dramatization of the life of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., will be presented on Thursday, January 28, in Longwood College's Jarman Auditorium.

There will be three performances, at 10 a.m. 1 p.m., and 7 p.m. Longwood students, faculty, and staff are admitted free of charge.

The production, by Theatre IV of Richmond, follows Dr. King's life from his birth in Atlanta in 1929 to his assassination at the age of 39 in Memphis.

The title of the dramatization is from Dr. King's passionate plea for equal rights and justice in his 1963 speech in Washington, DC. In dedicating one of his books to his four children, Dr. King wrote: "I dream that one day soon they will no longer be judged by the color of their skin but by the content of their character."

The performances at Longwood are part of the Children's Theatre Series, sponsored by the Department of Visual and Performing Arts.

Longwood Senior, Grad Tops In Math Contest

John Eaves, a senior, and Jane Garrett, a Longwood graduate who is working toward a math endorsement and teaching certificate renewal, were the top winners in Longwood's third annual mathematics contest.

Eaves, a math major from Chesterfield, was the first-place winner in Level II, which is calculus and above.

Ms. Garrett, a 1974 graduate from Richmond, was the first-place winner in Level I, which is below calculus. She had taught for nine years at Warwick Christian School, a private school in Richmond.

Both received a $75 check and a plaque. The contest, which is sponsored by the Mathematics and Computer Science department, featured 10 problems of varying degrees of difficulty. The top finishers were announced on Nov. 12.

In Level II, Scott Loving was second and Charlene Hebert was third. Lori Given and Sandra Conner also were prize winners.

In Level I, Danita Hale was second and Robert Taylor was third. Bradley Morris and Cheir Stuckey also were prize winners.

Student Loan Forgiveness Outlined

The Student Loan Forgiveness provision in the Higher Education Act of 1986 establishes National Direct Student Loan (NDSL) cancellation authority for Peace Corps and VISTA Volunteers.

•For each of the first and/or second complete years of his/her Peace Corps or VISTA service, 15 percent of a Volunteer's total loan obligation plus the accrued annual interest would be cancelled.

•For each of the third and/or fourth complete years of service, 20 percent of a Volunteer's total loan obligation plus the accrued annual interest would be cancelled.

• The forgiveness provisions apply only to NDSLs (made to cover the cost of instruction) for periods of enrollment beginning on or after July 1, 1987, to "new borrowers" on that date A "new borrower" is an individual who, on July 1, 1987, has no outstanding balance of principal or interest owed on any loan made under the NDSL program.

•This provision does not grandfather past and/or current Volunteers with outstanding NDSLs. It does not allow forgiveness of NDSLs taken after Peace Corps Volunteer service.

•This provision applies only to NDSLs. There is no authority to forgive loans in other programs, such as GSLs.

•For undergraduate students, the maximum loan amount to which NDSL forgiveness applies is $9,000. For graduate students, the maximum loan amount to which forgiveness applies is $18,000.

Haiti Elections Fail, Direct Talks To Avail, And Bork

By MATT PETERMAN

According to the Associated Press the turnout in Haiti's first election was low.

"Most people refused to participate yesterday in an election run by the junta, boycotted by the opposition and marked by fear, confusion and bribery."

"The junta-appointed Electoral Council issued no turnout figures, but opposition leaders estimated that only 5 percent to 20 percent of those eligible cast ballots."

"Many people stayed home because of fear of violence or pessimism about the fairness of the poll."

"On Nov. 29, what was to have been the first free presidential election in 30 years was aborted when thugs attacked voting centers and killed at least 34 people in the capital. Witnesses said soldiers did nothing to prevent the violence and some even participated."

President Reagan accepted the resignation of Robert H. Bork Thursday. In a letter to Bork, whose resignation was dated January 7th, Reagan wrote, "all Americans are poorer today for not having the extraordinary talents and legal skills on the high court."

Bork who was criticized for what many thought were extremist views on the many constitutional issues plans to hit the lecture circuit. He plans to clear his name and his views who many thought were distorted by the Democrats during his nomination process to the Supreme Court.

In his resignation letter to President Reagan, Bork cited a lack of "time and energy . . . (he wished) to public discours." "If as a sitting judge, I cannot speak out against this attempt to alter the traditional nature of the courts, I think it is important to place myself where I can."

According to UPI, Nicaragua has agreed to direct talks with the U.S. back Contras. They also agreed to release all political prisoners and lift the state of emergency.

"The concessions by Nicaragua appeared to break an impasse at the meeting called to decide the fate of the Central American peace plan signed in Guatamala Aug. 7 . . . "

"The announcement by (Nicaraguan President Daniel) Ortega came as the Reagan Administration was preparing to seek more money from Congress to help the Contras in their war against the Marxist government of the Sandanistas."

The preceding excerpts were taken from The Richmond Times Dispatch, January 17, 1988, pages 1 and 10.

ISL Program

bers: Dr. Barker of Physical Science, Dr. Ra from Education, Dr. Kelley of Modern Foreign Languages, Dr. Flynn from Visual Arts, Dr. Walker of Psychology, Dr. Harbour of Political Science, Dr. Crowl from History, Dean of Students Sue Saunders, Dr. Terzin of Business, and director, Dr. Reynolds of Modern Foreign Languages. The program's board also includes one student representative. Noah Wood has filled this position in past semesters. During Mr. Wood's absence this semester while he is studying in Germany, another representative will be chosen.

Presently, completion of the formal program's requirements (as they are stated on page 42 of the 1987-88 College Catalog) is acknowledged with a certificate, which is presented at graduation.

The International Studies program has hopes of someday becoming a minor and perhaps, eventually, a BS program like those at at least 4 of the universities in Virginia. Closer to present time, though, is the hope that the program can someday incorporate similar Hampden-Sydney studies and thereby benefit a larger audience.

ISL chooses a theme to focus its lectures and activities on each semester. This semester's talks and video shows of Japanese history and culture are a fitting introduction to the language classes being introduced to the college's curriculum this summer and continued in the fall.

This week is virtually packed with opportunities to sample the beauty of Japaense history, culture, people and country. Videos on Japan will be shown at 7:30 in Hiner tonight, Wednesday and Thursday, and Monday, Jan. 25, will bring the conclusion of Dr. Daniel Metraux's lecture on the History of Japan, to be presented at 7:30 in Bedford Auditorium. Plans for later in the semester include bringing a Koto player to campus to display his talents on his stringed instrument.

Dining Halls Complete Face-lifts

By MATT PETERMAN

Longwood College is now the owner of an impressive set of dining halls thanks to the efforts of ARA and the man behind the project, Rick Johnson, the director. The final touches are virtually complete on a project that began last year. The estimated cost for the renovation of both upstairs and downstairs is estimated at half a million dollars.

"It sure looks good" is the response of almost all students contacted by THE ROTUNDA. Upon arriving back to school, students entered a dining hall with new chairs and tables, beverage areas, new self-serve buffet area, and among other things frozen yogurt and self-serve waffles.

The entire renovation project can be looked at as a gift to the college from ARA. ARA has been the dining service of Longwood for over thirty years and will continue to "help the school improve its facilities" according to Rick Johnson. The last piece of the renovation includes ridding the Prince Edward room of the collapsible wall that separates it from the dining hall. It will be replaced by french doors similar to that of the Virginia room.

According to Johnson, each table cost $500, and each chair had an average cost of $65. "It (the dining hall) has gone from a dining hall to an attraction that I think anyone is impressed with," said Tom Foster, a student. From the administration's point of view the reaction has also been very positive. Joe Mcgill, the director of Student Services, commented that complaints are hard to find.

"Now we have improved facilities, we would like to preserve them . . . so many classes in the future can take advantage of this decor," added Johnson. ". . . (Its) a facility in which everyone at Longwood College can be proud," he finished.

Though the jury is still out on what the long run reaction will be, many indications seem to point in the direction of many leaps into the positive. As always Rick Johnson extends his welcome to any comments on how to make the dining experience more pleasurable.

Redskins Headed For San Diego

By TIM OLIVA

On Sunday, January 17, the NFL championship game paired up the Washington Redskins and the Minnesota Vikings. The Vikings were 3 1/2 point underdogs out to prove they were not a fluke. The Redskins had something to prove also. During the regular season they only played two teams with winning records one of which was the Vikings whom they beat. The other game they lost to the Miami Dolphins.

Football critics doubted whether or not the Redskins were as good as their 11-4 record. Last weekend they upset the Central Division champion Chicago Bears 21-17, while the Vikings shocked everyone by dominating the San Francisco 49ers so much that San Francisco star quarterback Joe Montana was replaced by the scrambling Steve Young. However, it was Minnesota Vikings receiver Anthony Carter's day with 227 yards receiving as the Vikings won 36-24.

On Sunday however it was the Washington Redskins who prevailed and showed that they were deserving of their record and division crown. Throughout most of the game it looked like both teams wanted to lose. Redskins quarterback Doug Williams put two passes in receivers Gary Clark's hands but he dropped them, both would have been touchdowns. Kicker Ali Haji-Sheikh missed two field goals and kept the Vikings in the game. The Vikings meanwhile had first and goal at the three yard line, and failed to score a touchdown on three plays and had to settle for a field goal.

In the fourth quarter with the game tied Gary Clarke got a chance to redeem himself by catching a twenty-yard pass down to the Viking eleven yard line – then he caught the go ahead and eventually winning touchdown pass. The Vikings had come right back and marched down to the Redskins six yard line. On fourth down and four yards to go, Vikings quarterback Wade Wilson threw the ball right into the hands of his usually reliable running back Darrin Nelson for the tie but he couldn't handle the ball and the Redskins won 17-10, and are now headed for Super Bowl XXII in San Diego, California.

The Redskins have two weeks to get ready for the Denver Broncos who narrowly beat the Cleveland Browns 38-33 in a game that came down to a last minute fumble by Browns running back Earnest Byner – the fumble secured the game and a spot in the Super Bowl for the Denver Broncos.

SGA president Ricky Otey (center) with SGA vice president Tim Hale and Patrice Lander, corresponding secretary of the Honor Board.

Ricky Otey, a junior from Big Island in Bedford County, was sworn in last semester to a second term as Student Government Association president.

Otey, a business administration major, was sworn in during the SGA installation banquet on Dec. 7.

Also sworn in was Tim Hale, new SGA vice president. Hale, a junior from Fairfax, replaces J. Paul Hurt.

The other SGA officers are Michael Rose, treasurer, and Peggy Robertson, corresponding secretary. All were elected on Nov. 18 and officially took office at the beginning of the spring semester.

Otey vowed to work for the formation of a council of SGA presidents in Virginia and to help develop a new faculty/course evaluation form.

Otey praised the members of the 1987 Student Senate. "You have made serving as the SGA president the most rewarding experience of my life," he said.

He promised not to rest on his laurels during his second term.

"There is no room for lackluster efforts. The students demand that we continue to move forward. We cannot settle for the status quo; we must surpass it . . . Our goal will be to do whatever we can as best as we can. The empahsis is on quality, not quantity."

The Sweet Briar exhibit "Artists in Education" will remain on view through February 28.

The Visual Arts program in the Amherst County schools is designed to complement verbal and written communication by exposing students to the visual language of art. Interaction with professional artists in the community introduces students to the importance of artistic expression in daily living.

Richmond – Colonel R. L. Suthard, Superintendent of the Virginia State Police, reported today that preliminary statistics indicate 11 persons lost their lives on Virginia's highways during the New Year's holiday period compared to 20 for a similar four-day period last year.

Three pedestrians were among the fatalities; of those eight killed as a result of a vehicles crash, only one was wearing safety restraints. Five of the crashes involved alcohol.

Tentative figures indicate that there were 101 fewer fatalities in 1987 compared to 1986. As of December 31, 1017 people were reported killed as a result of motor vehicle crashes in 1987, compared to 1118 in 1986.

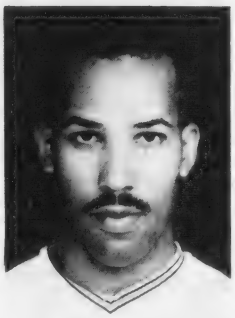
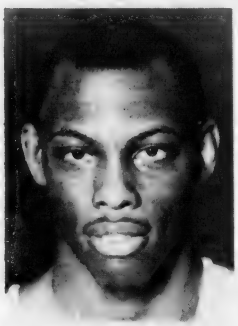
Player Of The Week



Junior forward Darryl Rutley scored 47 points in two Longwood men's basketball victories last week and for his performance, Rutley has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period January 10-17. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

A graduate of Trinity Episcopal High School, the 6-4 Rutley scored 21 points and grabbed six rebounds in a 76-69 win over St. Leo Monday and came back with 26 points and five rebounds in an 83-74 triumph over Armstrong Wednesday. The wins capped a 3-0 road trip for the 10-5 Lancer cagers.

Rutley, who boosted his team best scoring average to 17.1, hit 12 of 13 free throws and 17 of 32 field goals in the two games and added six assists and two steals.



"I told Darryl that he looked like a different player than the one I had seen the week before," said coach Cal Luther. "He played extremely well in all areas of the game."

Rutley averaged 14.7 points per game for Longwood last season. He was named second team All-Mason Dixon Conference and All-MDAC Tournament as well.

Stukes Wins Title At Newport News

JOHN STUKES

Junior John Stukes led seven Longwood wrestlers to be a fourth place finish out of seven teams in the Newport News Apprentice School Tournament Friday and Saturday as the Lancers resumed action after the Christmas break.

This week Longwood, 1-6, visits Davidson Wednesday to face the Wildcats and Duke, travels to Campbell for a dual match Thursday and takes part in the Washington & Lee Invitational Saturday in Lexington.

Stukes won all three of his matches to take the individual title at 134 pounds and the Lancers did well as a team, despite having no entries at 118, 126 or 190 pounds.

"The Christmas break took its toll on us," said coach Steve Nelson. "We have a lot of fat and happy wrestlers who are trying to make weight. We didn't do bad at Newport News considering we only took seven to complete. We've got to get these other guys to make weight if we expect to be competitive this week."

Dr. Johnson Honored After A Decade

Dr. Judy R. Johnson, head of Longwood College's department of physical education, health, and recreation, has received the 1987 Honor Award from the Virginia Association for Health, Physical Education, Recreation, and Dance (VAHPERD).

The award was presented to Dr. Johnson on December 4 during the opening session of VAHPERD's annual convention in Norfolk.

The Honor Award is given to a VAHPERD member for outstanding contributions, leadership, and service to the organization and the profession for a period of 10 years or more.

Dr. Johnson has been president of VAHPERD, served on the board of directors, was chair of the research section and the nominating committee, and was editor of the organization's research journal.

Non-Credit Exercise Courses Available

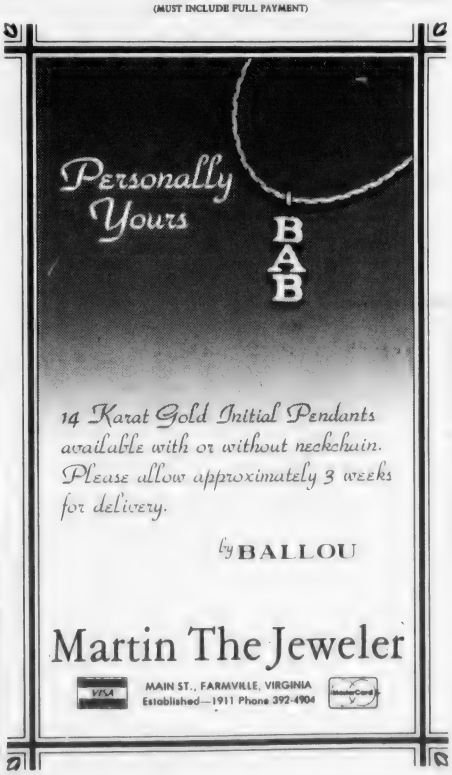
By DONNA ARMENTO

Have you made a New Year's Resolution yet? How about exercising? Two new non-credit courses in the continuing studies bulletin can help you keep in shape this semester.

Weight Training I is a systematic exercise program which utilizes free weights and individual machines, as well as some nutritional guidelines for body weight management. Constant supervisor will ensure that correct lifting techniques are employed throughout the individualized program.

Instructor: Donna Armento
Location: Lancer Weight Room (313)
Tuition: $35.00
Time: Tuesday and Thursday nights, Jan 26-March 3, 5:30-7 p.m.

The second non-credit exercise course being offered this semester is Trim and Tone Low Impact Aerobics. The activities involved here are less bouncy than traditional aerobics. The program is designed for the person who has not been exercising on a regular basis or who wants to begin an active exercise program. Participants will gradually build up their cardiovascular systems and take charge of their own weight. Group discussions about behavioral changes and nutritional concepts will accompany the low-impact exercises.



Instructor: Donna Armento
Location: Lancer 208
Tuition: $35
Time: Monday and Wednesday nights, Jan 25-March 1, 5:30-6:30 p.m.

Lancer Gymnasts Fall In Opener

Team and Semester Still Young , Though

By MICHAEL PHILLIPS

The Longwood Lancer gymnastics team opened its 1987-88 season Friday night with a disappointing loss at home to the Lady Colonials of Georgia College: 162.90-167.35. Georgia claimed the top three finishers in the all-around competition as Longwood picked up the next five places.

Longwood will be in action next when they host James Madison University and the U.S. Naval Academy Friday at 7:30 p.m. in Lancer Hall. Sunday, January 24, NCAA Division I North Carolina State and Towson State Universities will arrive in town for a 2 p.m. meet.

With only three upperclassmen on the squad, this may be the youngest team ever fielded by Longwood.

"Our inexperience showed Friday night with inconsistency and several falls on the uneven bars and balance beam routines," stated head coach Ruth Budd. Student assistant coach Jim Booth added that "the uneven bars hurt us the most, there was a break in nearly every routine." The Lady Lancers' high points came during the vaulting for which they received scores ranging from 8.3 to 8.85, "the best ever," according to Budd.

Georgia College was able to better prepare for the meet as they came back from the semester break January 2, and had been able to practice several times since. Longwood had been back for a little more than one week. Also, this was the Lady Colonials' fourth meet of the year. Longwood had seen no previous competition.

The Lady Lancers were led by senior co-captain Tammy Zeller who had one of the best meets of her career. Tammy received a third place tie with her team high 8.65 on beam. With a fourth place finish in the all-around competition at 33.40, Zeller just missed her personal best of 33.45, which she got against James Madison last year. Coach Budd said that Tammy's experience showed . . . she looked confident.

Junior co-captain Lynda Chenoweth also had a good showing as she finished fifth in the all-around competition with a score of 32.60. Chenoweth did remarkably well considering the tendonitis in her knee that kept her in pain throughout the meet – she had aggravated it again just the day before. Lynda posted a team high 8.15 on the uneven bars.

Freshman Natalie Taylor had the team high in vault of 8.85 which was also the highest Longwood score of the the night. Freshman Cindy Shelton got an 8.55 on her floor routine, a team high score. According to coach Budd, freshman Teri Dore "had an excellent performance on the balance beam" for which she received a score of 8.5.

Other performers for Longwood included freshman Lynn Lewis on bars (7.0) and sophomore Amy Spiers on vault (8.4), balance beam (7.5) , and floor exercise (7.1) Freshmen Becki Bagley and Kristin Lindsey may be out for the season with injuries suffered during the preseason.

Lady Lancers Win Two Of Three

Duncan Notches 100th Victory

Longwood's women's basketball team won two of three games for a 7-5 record and head coach Shirley Duncan notched her 100th career victory in a heavy slate of action last week.

The Lady Lancers beat Guilford on the road Tuesday 84-78 to help coach Duncan reach the century mark for wins. Returning home, Longwood blitzed Randolph-Macon in the second half Thursday for a 99-70 Mason-Dixon Conference win. Sunday, ninth ranked Mount St. Mary's shot 64 per cent in the second half for an 86-75 triumph in Lancer Hall.

Mount St. Mary's came in with a 13-0 record Sunday, but trailed Longwood with 14:00 showing on the second half clock. The Lady Lancers, who had played an exceptional game to that point, suffered through a seven-minute stretch in which they scored just two points. The Mount scored 18 points during the same time period, turning a 56-52 deficit into a 70-58 lead with 7:43 left.

During the first half, in which Longwood took a 42-39 lead, the Lady Lancers went hard to the boards (28-18 advantage), shot well from the floor (17-37) and the free throw line (8-11), and committed just seven turnovers. Center Barbie Burton who finished with 22 points and 14 rebounds, hit seven of eight shots in the first half.

Longwood started slowly against Randolph-Macon Thursday night, leading just 35-31 at the half. Rawdon tossed in 20 points (16 in the second half) and Barnette 23 to pace a second period charge which buried the Lady Jackets. Jill Everette added 16 points and Middleton 11 points and seven assists.

Duncan, in her 10th year as a head coach and sixth at Longwood, has a career mark of 101-118. She has compiled a 60-59 record at Longwood and has the most wins of any coach in Lady Lancer basketball history. Longwood Director of Athletics Carolyn Hodges was the previous leader with 55 career wins.

"It feels really nice to get a win any time, but especially when it's number 100," said the coach. "I just hope the next 100 don't take as long."

LANCER CAGERS FACE MORE ROAD JILTS

Fresh off a 3-0 road trip, Longwood's men's basketball team will open play in the Mason-Dixon Conference Saturday at Pittsburgh-Johnstown, after visiting NAIA power Elon Monday night.

Now 10-5, coach Cal Luther's team will be the underdog in both contests. Elon won an earlier meeting in Farmville 85-69. Pittsburgh-Johnstown, which features All-America candidate Tyrone Doleman, beat Liberty 88-79 Saturday night to run its record to 10-4 for the year. The Mountain Cats, with Coleman averaging 28 points per game, may be the most improved team in the league.

This week's games will complete a string of five straight road contests. Next week Longwood will return home to host Liberty Tuesday and Mount St. Mary's Friday. Despite what may turn out to be rough seas ahead, the Lancers can be proud of a trio of victories achieved last week in Florida and Georgia against Division II opposition.

Longwood beat Eckerd 60-54 a week ago Saturday, St. Leo 76-69 last Monday and Armstrong State 83-74 Wednesday. The Lancers won the games with just nine players after injury and academic woes sidelined four squad members.

"I couldn't be more pleased with the way we played on the road trip," said head coach Cal Luther. "We played exceptionally well."

Junior scoring leader Darryl Rutley totaled 26 points to lead four players in double figures as Longwood stormed from behind in the second half to win over Armstrong State in Savannah, Georgia. Rutley hit 10 of 18 field goals and five of five free throws while topping the 20-point mark for the third game in a row. The 6-4 junior scored 68 points on Longwood's three-game southern swing.

"I told Darryl that he didn't seem like the same player I had seen in our loss to Indiana-Southeast (81-70 January 5). "He played good defense, hustled, shot his free throws well and made some clutch baskets for us. The same is true of our other players as well. There was a point in each game when things got tight, but we hung in there."

SIXTY-SEVENTH YEAR | TUESDAY, JANUARY 26, 1988 | NUMBER FOURTEEN

"Dream" To Play Thursday

On Thursday, January 28th the Speech and Theatre Program will be sponsoring the fifty minute presentation of the life of Martin Luther King Jr. The performance, "I Have A Dream", will be given in Jarman Auditorium at 10:00 a.m., 1:00 p.m., and 7:00 p.m.

The production, by Theatre IV of Richmond, follows Dr. King's life from his birth in Atlanta in 1929 to his assassination at the age of 39 in Memphis.

The title of the dramatization is from Dr. King's passionate plea for equal rights and justice in his 1963 speech in Washington, D.C. In dedicating one of his books to his four children, Dr. King wrote: "I dream that one day soon they will no longer be judged by the color of their skin but by the content of their character."

SGA's SEMESTER SIZZLING WITH ACTIVITY

By SOMER SLOAN

The Student Government Association held their first meeting of the semester on Thursday, January 21, 1988. President Ricky Otey addressed several issues that are pertinent to this semester.

One of the biggest projects for Vice President Tim Hale, secretary Patrice Landers and the rest of the executive senate is the creation of the Student Academic Advisory Committee. SAAC will be comprised of select members from the School of Business, the school of Arts and Sciences and the School of Education.

Secondly, the Residence Life Advisory Committee will be holding their first meeting of the semester this Thursday, January 28 at 1 p.m. The topic to be addressed will be keeping Longwood students on campus for the weekend. The theme is reflective of the statement "What 'ya doing this weekend?"

February is Black History month, and on February 7, Charles Magnum will be speaking in Jarman Auditorium . . .

In addition, Minority Affairs will begin tutoring for those

Racquetball Courts 70% Complete

By MATT PETERMAN

After many months of renovation, the old French basketball court has been transformed into a modern racquetball facility that any health club would envy.

In addition to the four courts, locker rooms and offices have been either added or brought up to date. The project, which carries the price tag of $450,000, will be finished by the end of March.

The facility, which is completely adapted to the needs of the handicapped, will be under the regulation of Carolyn Calloway, The Director of the Division of Intramural and Campus Recreation. Calloway expressed relief at the thought of the courts finally being completed after 5 years of waiting since the project was first proposed.

The hours the courts will be open have yet to be decided,

Chamber Music Series Performance Monday

Longwood College's Chamber Music Series will present the Roxbury Chamber Players in concert on Monday evening, February 1, at 8 o'clock in Wygal Auditorium.

The ensemble performs music from the baroque to the present day and record on the Opus One label. They have commissioned and premiered nine new works.

Longwood's Chamber Music Series is sponsored by the Department of Visual and Performing Arts and the Longwood Arts Council.

The final two concerts in this year's Chamber Music Series will feature the Garth Newel Trio on February 22 and the Richmond Sinfonia Strings on April 11.

INTERNATIONAL STUDIES BRINGS THE ORIENT TO YOU

By ALISON K. MILLER

ISL continues to acquaint students with the program and to acknowledge those students attending Longwood from other countries.

This was the purpose of the banquet for International Studies at Longwood, held in the Virginia Room last night. Says ISL director Dr. Reynolds, "I'm interested in getting to know more of the foreign students on campus and am encouraging them to get in touch with me."

The banquet guest list included ISL members, foreign students who attend Longwood, and faculty members and administrators. The banquet was funded by the office of Longwood's president, Dr. George Healy.

Following the banquet was the final segment of Dr. Daniel Metraux's lecture on the History of Japan, presented in Bedford Auditorium. Other presentations included in ISL's awareness of Japanese history and culture this semester will be a program about Japanese art, aesthetics and religion, presented by Jane Griffin of the Smithsonian Institute, February 16, in Bedford at 7:30 p.m., and a Koto concert March 30.

Dr. John Reynolds has been working very hard along with student assistant Cyndi Wessels, on familiarizing Longwood's campus with the program. some of their efforts include keeping students informed about what is happening in ISL with a bulletin board located next to the foreign language lab in the basement of Grainger. They are also working on a video collection of careers in international business and study abroad information.

The international Studies program's hopes of establishing a minor will become reality in September 1988. ISL expects to be working in cooperation with other colleges and universities throughout Virginia in the near future. Longwood is already a member of the Virginia Council for Study Abroad and the Virginia Consortium for Asian Studies. ISL will be continuing its emphasis on Asian studies this fall with beginning Japanese taught by Fumiko Kinjo from the Hokkaido Foundation.

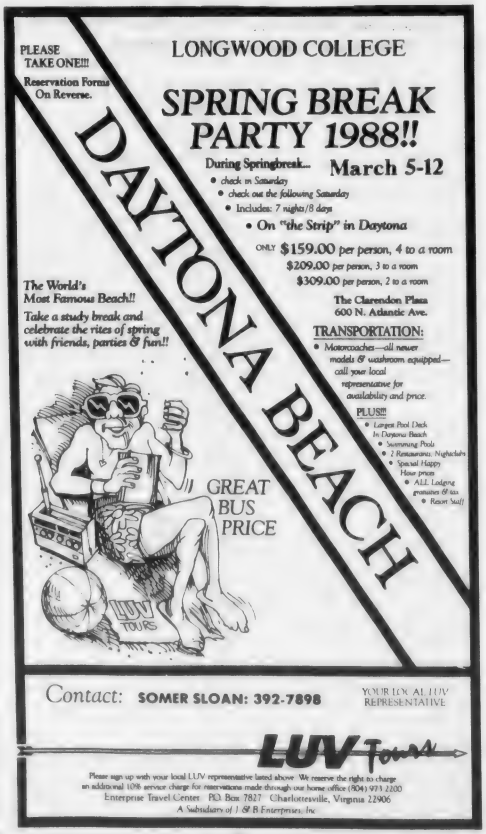
Freedom Of The Press — R.I.P.

The U. S. Supreme Court has taken a step towards the Orwellian age of 1984 with one of its latest decisions: censorship of high school papers. The seemingly small constitutional infringement, politely worded as 'giving administrators "broad latitude to suppress controversial stories'" so as not to appear blatantly restricting, is most likely the first in a series of bills and decisions which will eventually turn this country's presses into puppets of certain superiors.

Control was begun at the high-school paper level so as to be subtle. Eventually this congressional paranoia of free-minded individuals, a result of nationwide conservative tendencies which have developed over the past decade or so, will reach national news and publication levels, acting, in essence, in much the same way as Russia's KGB, allowing only what the guys in charge want us to know about to be released to public.



Control of the college press will be next, followed by small town papers and corporate newsletters. Finally, metropolitan newspapers and national news publications will fall to the hands of congressional censorship. If one looks closely the chain of events leading to the demise of the American press is as apparent as it is appalling. The public was first subjected to mass restriction when the alcohol awareness kick began the raising of the drinking age all over the place. Presently, there is a greater risk of dying as a result of a draft notice, which can affect males at the age of 18, than there is of dying as a result of alcohol, since it can't be legally consumed before the age of 21 in most places.

Then it was the seatbelts. Conservativism is written all over those suckers. Suppression at its best. People are told that seatbelts are for their own good — HA! They're a conditioning tool, employed in the creation of a submissive public who won't care about the fact that the government is taking over their presses.

". . . a listless, unopinionated generation has evolved, and they don't care."

And do you know what? This plot is working. Today's youth is the product. A listless, unopinionated generation has evolved, and they don't care. No rallies, no riots to prove a point — nothing. Nothing but Max Headroom and the Beastie Boys. Everything is done by the rules, with neon and sequins to cover up the mundaneness.

It's all just a theory, but it is a possibility, and it is scary. Why don't they just lock high school students away (until they're ready for the draft) so as to shield them from all of life's problems? Why can't high school students write about issues such as AIDS and pregnancy and the likes — issues that could potentially effect them? Issues that are alive in the same world that they themselves are? Issues that they have a right to learn about?

UPDATE OF RENOVATION PROJECTS ON CAMPUS

French Renovation – This project includes conversion of the gymnasium into four racquet ball courts and office and classroom space, renovation of locker facilities and bathrooms, and handicapped access. The project is nearing completion and "the transformation is striking," said Richard Hurley, Vice President for Business Affairs.

Brickwork – The project involves replacement of the brick walks and courtyard surrounding Lancaster Library and Jarman Auditorium and will provide handicapped access to the Library through the front entrance. Work will commence as soon as the weather is favorable.

Barlow – A complete renovation of Barlow Building will provide office space for the Registrar and her staff, plus a 24-hour study space for students. Work has already begun and is to be completed by March 1.

Chemical Storage Room – Renovation of this room on the third floor of Stevens will bring the facility in line with applicable safety and fire codes. Work is underway and is to be completed within 30 days.

INF Treaty, Pancreas Cancer, And North Korea

By MATT PETERMAN

☐ The Senate went to work yesterday on the question of ratifying the INF (Intermediate Range Nuclear Forces Treaty) that President Reagan and Mickail Gorbechev signed during their December 7th summit.

Despite conservative opposition to the treaty, it is expected to be ratified some time in April. Reagan in weekly radio address said: "Its a good treaty, a solid one with the most extensive verification provisions in history."

The treaty requires that all US and Soviet medium range missiles (300-3000 mile range) to be dismantled within three years. This ultimately eliminated an entire class of missiles.

The Democrats who back the treaty are expected to fight against amendments that may be added from conservatives. this could stall the treaty and or kill it altogether, because in it could change it in such a way that The Soviet Union would not ratify it.

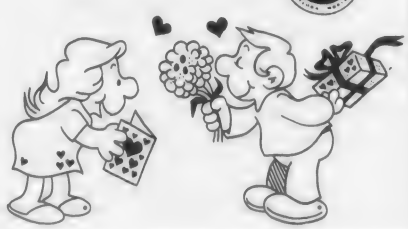
☐ In a report released in the Western Journal of Medicine, a study has linked smoking and coffee consumption to a high risk of cancer.

The cancer involved is pancreatic. In a study done in the past, studies of those who drank large amounts of coffee resulted in the same findings. However, this study indicates that there is higher risk for those who drink a lot of coffee and also smoke.

Those people drinking three or more cups of coffee per day have a four times greater chance of developing cancer of the pancreas, if they also smoke.

☐ North Korea is furious at the United States for labeling it a terrorist state, after it was revealed that North Koreans had orchestrated the bombing of an airplane.

The label could cost the nation many millions of dollars as it hurts their chances for loans in the international scene.



The North Koreans are retaliating by refusing to give the United States ashes of soldiers killed in the Korean War.

What better time than Valentine's Day to express your love to that very special person!

but "we want to leave them open as much as possible" says Calloway. "Everyone wants to see the usage" before any final decisions are made. Court time will be coordinated by a 24-hour in advance sign-up system. Walk-ins will be allowed only if those signed up don't show. Play time will be limited to 30 minutes.

According to Calloway, "some equipment will be available for check out." Balls will have to be supplied by the players. "I just hope that those who use it will have patience with us," says Calloway, speaking of the trial and error period.

The courts have an upper deck that allows viewers to watch the games from above. One of the courts features "a solid glass wall" that allows viewing from the lower deck, according to Richard Hurley, Vice President for Legislative and Business Affairs.

Administrators and faculty will be scheduled to use the courts during times that students don't tend to use them very much; morning or during dinner time, for example.

Intramurals are planned and will operate in the same manner as all other intramural events. For those who do not know how to play racquetball, classes will be offered. As to when these plans will take place, a tentative date is next semester.

students in need of assistance. A small fee is required for these services.

The senior class is looking for input from its peering concerning issues such as Senior Ball and Commencement Services in May.

President Otey has formed a new task force designed to reconstruct the Judicial Board's Constitution. The board is presently torn between becoming an entirely student or administrative run organization. The first meeting of this task force will be held February 12 in the Prince Edward Room at 12:45 p.m.

S-UN has announced that Barry Drake will speak on his involvement with the original Beatles on February 23rd in the Gold Room.

New Orientation leaders are needed more for the summer and the upcoming school year.

Lastly, and most importantly, the search for the new president of Longwood College is still in the works. A committee of 18 members is working on the screening process.

We, as the student body need to make our opinions known on what we would like to see in our new president as well as all of the other issues addressed above. The Student Government is here for you, but without your input and support SGA will only be as strong as its weakest member.

The next meeting will be held on January 28, 1988 in the Conference Room of the Student Union. Vice President Tim Hale will be presiding. All SGA meetings are held on Thursdays at 6 p.m. Everyone is always welcome to attend.

Baliles Budget Will Bolster Longwood

By MATT PETERMAN

Governor Baliles exposed his proposed 1988-90 Biennium Budget (budget for the next two years) on January 13, at the opening of the 1988 General Assembly.

In that proposal, Longwood would be given the authority to hire 19 more people. These are enrollment-driven job possibilities and could go down if enrollment drops. Only the General Assembly can give the Board of Visitors permission to hire new people.

Salary increases for faculty and staff range from 7.17% to 2.5%, depending on the status in each particular case.

The big news in the budget is that Longwood's plans for a new library are going forward quite smoothly. According to Brenda L. Atkins, Special Assistant To The President For Legislative Relations, "the Governor has recommended in his proposed budget that only planning monies be funded in 1988-89 for most capital outlay projects, with construction monies funded in 1989-90 from lottery revenues."

"The Longwood Library Construction Project ($6.8 million) is on the Governor's list of projects to be funded in 1989-90," stated Atkins.

Other points of interest include a $382,557 increase in student financial aid, approximately $300,000 for an Academic Services Center and Computer Hardware/Software Maintenance Contracts.

The budget will be decided on in the next 50 days, the time stretch known as the "long session." This session ends on March 12. According to Atkins, "During this . . . session, legislators will decide on a state budget and process approximately 2,000 bills and resolutions."

"Because it is so early in the session, very few bills and resolutions have been introduced," commented Atkins. This "long session" is the biggest moment for the General Assembly and the time where a lot of work is pressed into a limited amount of days.

Lancer Line Working Hard

By CHERYL JEFFREY

At tonight's men's basketball game, the Lancer Line will entertain Longwood students and visitors with a routine to Corey Hart's "Boy in the Box." This will be one of the last performances of the season for the seventeen member drill team whose captain is Bonita Turner and co-captains, Frances Cataldo and Suzy Monette. Dr. Marie Silveria, a Spanish professor at Longwood, is the team's sponsor.

"It's been a very productive season," said Ms. Turner. "We're not only worked as a team, but we're also friends. Everyone works hard for one goal. We've had a lot of support from faculty and friends, and we'd like to thank them for their support."

Tryouts for next year's team will be held in March. Ms. Turner says that being on the drill team is a great opportunity for public exposure, leadership experience, and development of talent.

One of the later performances will be on Wednesday, February 10, when there will be a "special" performance to Michael Jackson's "Bad" in Lancer gym. There will also be performances at the Special Olympics on February 20 and during Spring Weekend.

Faculty Follies Slated To Return

Let The Good Times Roll!!!!

YES, Faculty Follies is back at Longwood for its third appearance since 1969. Alpha Phi Omega revived the program from its 17-year rest. APO has two reasons for putting on the program with our faculty and staff. The first one is to raise money for the Domestic Assistance for You (DAY). The second is to get faculty and staff to interact with students in a non-academic atmosphere. Please help us to help others by participating in this fun and heart-warming activity. All you have to do is think up an act, i.e., singing, dancing, comedy, etc. A rehearsal will take place on Sunday March, 20 at 1:00 p.m. APO will be contacting faculty and staff members in the next week. The show is scheduled for Wednesday, March 23 at 8:00 p.m. in Jarman. Contact James Boston at 392-7471.

Please help us to help others.

Life After Longwood

"You sacrifice a lot, mostly your social calendar."

(This article is one of a series of interviews with recent Longwood graduates who have already made significant strides in their careers. The alumni tell how their alma mater's Office of Career Planning and Placement helped them get where they are. Best of all, their stories offer hope and inspiration for "life after Longwood!")

Mike O'Shea '85

MAJOR: Business Administration

CURRENT JOBS: Accountant II at MCI, Arlington, Virginia

(Q: What has been happening to you since you left Longwood?)

A: "I started working at MCI Telecommunications Corp. the day after I graduated from Longwood, and have been with the company two and a half years. MCI offers a full range of telecommunications services to business and residential customers. It is a growing company (MCI has almost doubled in size since I started) with good benefits and a good salary, although salary is by far not the most important thing in a career."

(Q: How did you experience the job market as a new college graduate?)

A: "I had several offers, which I believe were the result of hard work, although metropolitan Washington D.C. is a very good area for finding work as an accountant. I mailed out 95 resumes, and was invited for ten interviews. When the offers came, I was in the fortunate position of being able to pick my favorite."

©CREATIVE MEDIA SERVICES Box 5955 Berkeley, Ca. 94705

(Q: Briefly discuss your career path. How did you get where you are with your current employer? What do you do in your current position?)

A: "I knew that I wanted to work in the Washington D.C. area since that's where I grew up. During the first semester of my senior year I spent a lot of time in the Career Resource Center getting information on businesses and procedures. I participated in practice interviews with the Office of Career Planning and Placement, and that gave me the confidence when I had to go on real ones.

During Christmas vacation I mailed out the 95 resumes. During the second semester, I heard back from the ten companies who wanted to meet with me. I had plenty of time to pace the interviews at my own convenience. I went home on weekends and stayed over on Monday for job interviews. By the time graduation rolled around, I had my job lined up.

"After an introductory period working in payroll, I was made an Accountant I, and then promoted to Accountant II. I kept this rank when I moved to the Property Accounting Department, where MCI keeps track of its billions of dollars worth of assets. My specific area of responsibility is the switches that are vital for the communications industry."

(Q: What are your goals? Where are you heading in your career?)

A: "I don't expect to be with MCI forever. In addition to my job here, I own my own business together with my father. It is an automotive franchise and we are building a muffler shop in Richmond. Eventually, I expect to move to Richmond and run the shop on a full-time basis, but that won't be for a couple of years. Right now, it's tough. You sacrifice a lot, mostly your social calendar."

(Q: What advice or tips do you have for currently enrolled Longwood students?)

A: "Seniors, when you're at home, look at companies to see which ones appeal to you. If you start now, you are actually going to get what you want. If you wait, you'll get the leftovers. I felt sorry for classmates who waited until after graduation before they started to think about getting a job. Ideally, you should have started getting your letters of application in the mail during Christmas. You should definitely mail them before spring vacation. Practice your interviewing skills at the OCPP. I learned several mistakes to correct. Don't let your first interview be the real one."

A: "The people I was there with. The faculty, in particular, made a great deal of difference. The teachers' particular strength was that they gave very good practical advice in addition to the book learning. Because of the good teacher/student ratio, I was able to get outside help when I needed it. I keep in touch with several other Longwood graduates who are also accountants, and they are all doing well."

(If you need help with your career/continuing education goals, resume and letter writing, self-directed job search strategies or employer information, stop by the Office of Career Planning and Placement on the second floor of Ruffner.)

Red Hot Rutley Sparks Basketball Team's Surge

By MARK KIRK

Entering the 1987-88 season, Longwood's men's basketball team was looking to find an identity for itself after losing several key players from last year's squad.

However, after an early January road trip netted them three wins and improved its record to 10-6, the team was looking to challenge for the Mason-Dixon Conference championship. One of the main reasons for the Lancers' success has been the performance of junior forward, Darryl Rutley.

After a slow start, Rutley has caught on fire over the past month and has raised his scoring average to nearly 20 points per game. Included in the stretch was a 26 point effort in an 82-74 victory at Armstrong State.

One of the major reasons for Rutley's sudden scoring surge has been his move from shooting guard to small forward, with junior Bobby Dobson moving to one of the guard positions.

"I enjoy playing small forward, because it is my natural position", says Rutley, who has averaged over 20 points since the switch. "Moreover, I feel comfortable there, and I've been able to score more."

In addition to improving his scoring, Rutley has made strides in his leadership ability. He is still far from satisfied, however "I would like to become even better", comments Rutley, "by improving my rebounding and ball-handling."

Leadership would seem to come naturally to Rutley, considering he is the oldest player on the Lancers and has performed at the Division I level with Monmouth. Fortunate for Longwood basketball followers, Rutley decided to return to his home state to play.

After graduating from Trinity Episcopal High where he was a 3-time All-Prep selection and 2-time team most valuable player, Rutley signed with Monmouth. Although he did not enjoy as much success there as he has at Longwood, he was able to earn a starting position as a freshman. Moreover, he tossed in 14 points that year against eventual national champion Villanova.

Lady Lancers Face Three Tough Games on The Road

Looking to rally after three losses, Longwood's women's basketball team will take to the road this week for games at Liberty Tuesday, at Hampton Institute Thursday and at Mount St. Mary's, which beat Longwood 86-75 January 17, are top teams. Liberty, a Mason-Dixon member along with The Mount, also has a solid team.

ANGIE HILL

Longwood got 15 points from senior guard Angie Hill and 12 from fellow senior Annette Easterling Saturday. Hill was 5-11 from the floor and 5-6 from the line while Easterling hit a pair of three-point shots. Center Barbie Burton pulled down a game-high 13 rebounds. The Lady Cats were led by guard Bridget Hale who poured in a school record 38 points.

By Sunday, the Lady Lancers will have had four games against nationally ranked ball clubs in a two-week span. Both Hampton and

Shelton Breaks Record On Balance Beam

By MICHAEL PHILLIPS

Longwood's gymnasts had two three-team meets over the weekend, and despite several outstanding individual performances, came away with a record of 1-4.

The LC gymnasts will be in action next when they travel to the University of Maryland at Baltimore County Saturday for a 2:00 meet.

Friday, Longwood faced James Madison University and the U.S. Naval Academy. The deep and experienced JMU roster was too much for the Lancers and Navy to handle. Although Navy provided the top three all-around performers, led by Michelle Reyes (36.55), James Madison (171.40) walked away with first place over the Middies (166.10) and Longwood (162.75).

Lancer freshman Cindy Shelton set a new school record of 9.0 on the balance beam, topping the old mark of 8.90 set by

Dayna Hankinson in 1982 and again by Kelly Strayer in 1986. Shelton, a graduate of Manchester High School, also had a fine all-around score of 34.65 which was good for fourth place. Her 9.0 on floor placed her in a two-way tie for third place.

Lancer freshman Natalie Taylor suffered a bad fall on bars that not only scratched her from the event but prevented her from competing again that night, or Sunday. Taylor, an all-around competitor, received a bruised ankle and a strained neck. Without Taylor, Longwood was left with only five gymnasts, so every score counted.

On the positive side for LC, "the floor exercises improved and the vaulting was good," stated Budd.

Sunday afternoon, the Lancers played host to NCAA Division I Towson State and North Carolina State Universities.

Injury-plagued N. C. State (130.35) and Longwood (163.70) couldn't keep up with a healthy Towson team (179.90). N. C. State brought only four gymnasts to Lancer Hall and could do nothing but hope for good scores from all of them.

Freshman Teri Dore did her part in trying to lift Longwood's team score as she had what coach Budd called "a good meet." Dore's all-around score of 34.10 placed her fourth behind three Towson State gymnasts. Other all-around competitors for Longwood were Lynda Chenoweth, 33.8, Shelton, 33.65, and Tammy Zeller, 32.0.

LC GRAPPLERS TAKE W&L TITLE

Nine of 10 Longwood wrestlers placed in the top four Saturday as the Lancers cruised to victory in the Washington & Lee Invitational wrestling Tournament in Lexington, Virginia.

Eion Kelley at 126, John Stukes at 134 and Doug Hartley at 190 grabbed tournament titles as Longwood rolled up 79.75 points to beat second place Washington & Lee (51.5). Stukes was named Most Outstanding in the tournament.

A stronger field of teams awaits Longwood in the Lancer Duals Saturday in Farmville. Defending champ Pembroke State, which beat LC 36-6 before Christmas, returns along with Norfolk State, Virginia State, Ferrum and Washington & Lee. Action begins in the team tournament Saturday morning at 8:30. Longwood will kick-off the competition against an undetermined opponent.

Kelley upped his record to 14-8 by winning all three of his matches – on a pin, a 13-3 decision and a 12-3 decision in the finals. He also grabbed a 6-5 win Thursday in Longwood's 26-13 dual match loss to Division I Campbell. The Lancers are 1-7 in dual matches.

Hartley literally survived to win his crown at 190 and up his season mark to 12-8. With a bad shoulder and a painful ankle, the freshman got a first round bye, won a 6-0 decision and held on for an 8-7 decision in the finals.

"It was one of the guttiest performances I've ever seen," said Nelson. "Doug was in a lot of pain in the final match, but he toughed it out. He deserves a lot of credit."

Other place winners for Longwood were Tommy Gilbert, 2-2, 4th at 142; Ted Proctor, 2-1, 2nd at 150; Andy Mautner, 2-2, 4th at 158; Dave Taylor, 2-1, 3rd at 167; Tim Mason, 3-1, 3rd at 177, and Jesus Strauss, 3-1, 3rd at heavyweight.

W&L Invitational results: Longwood 79.75, Washington & Lee 51.5, Newport News Apprentice 46, Davidson 40.75, Gettysburg 38.5, Gardner-Webb 34, Johns Hopkins 27.25 and Furman 15.

Player Of The Week

Junior John Stukes turned in another outstanding week at 134 pounds for the Longwood wrestling team and has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period January 17-24. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood Sports Information Office.

Stukes won his fourth tournament title of the season Saturday (a Longwood record) in the Washington & Lee Invitational with a pin and a 10-1 decision. Thursday he beat an opponent from Campbell 10-5. Now 23-2-1 for the current season, he has an eye-popping 59-5-2 mark in three seasons at Longwood and ranks number one in winning percentage in Lancer history.

Now nationally ranked in NCAA Division II, the Deep Creek High School graduate is a strong threat to advance to the Division II National Tournament. He previously won titles at 134 pounds in the Winston-Salem State, York College and Newport News Apprentice Tournaments.

"John has dedicated himself to being the best that he can be," said Longwood coach Steve Nelson. "He is working very hard and if he continues in the direction he's headed, I feel he has a good shot at advancing to the national tournament."

JOHN STUKES

Lancers Win 4 Of 5 Road Games

Longwood's men's basketball team will be looking for a confidence-building 70-66 win at Pittsburgh-Johnstown Saturday afternoon to carry over in rugged home contests against Liberty and Mount St. Mary's this week.

The Lancers upset the Mountain Cats, minus leading scorer Tyrone Doleman, as junior Darryl Rutley scored 18 of his game high 26 points in the second half. Now 11-6 overall and 1-0 in the Mason-Dixon Conference, Longwood should be considered an underdog in MDAC tilts against the Flames Tuesday and Mount St. Mary's Friday, says LC coach Cal Luther.

Saturday, Longwood came back from a 34-31 halftime deficit to drop UPJ to 10-6 overall and 1-2 in the league. Saddled with four troubles in the first half, the Lancers used halfcourt trap and man-to-man defenses to unsettle Pitt-Johnstown in the second period. Dale Shavers, Greg Holloway and Bobby Dobson all had three fouls in the first half and sat part of the period.

"We played well in the second half," said Luther. "We played better defense and got the ball inside more."

The Lancers shot 60 per cent in the second half as Rutley, Doug Poppe and Shavers paced the comeback. Poppe haf 15 points and six rebounds, and Shavers 15 points and nine rebounds. Rutley, averaging 17.2 ppg., hit 11 of 18 field goals and four of five free throws. Holloway contributed eight points before fouling out.

Semi-Formal A Fun Success

More To Come If Interest Holds

Members of the band The Ride enjoyed the company of formal-goers in The Gold Room this past Saturday. The First Annual (??) TERRORIST GROUP SEIZES BANNER

By MATT PETERMAN

A little known terrorist organization called The Untouchables claimed responsibility for stealing the Christmas CHI banner from the dining hall in mid-December.

The CHI banner, first reported missing December 14, is assumed to have been stolen in the middle of the night the preceding weekend.

Increasing uncertainty surrounded the affair. Doubts were cast about the identity of the terrorist group, and whether the seizure occurred.

In a letter to The Rotunda, the Untouchables thumbed their noses at campus police for failing to detect the breaking and entering incident. In a sarcastic line to police, the Untouchables said "We must commend Longwood Campus Police for the excellent security around the dining hall."

The group gave no motive except to say: "When it comes to CHI nothing can stop us." The note further read, "We will treasure this banner forever."

When Campus Police were questioned about the incident they claimed they "had no knowledge" of it. ARA officials could not be reached for comment.

In a statement issued by The Rotunda, the Editors "deplore the actions of the Untouchables as one-step backward, for Longwood."

The statement continued to read: "Increased opportunities for acts of terrorism, coupled with the consequences of such acts demand that campus police provide protection of our buildings in a more adequate fashion. If they can't do the job, find someone who can."

The Untouchables, a group apparently consisting of three members, delivered the note and picture through campus mail in a plain brown wrapper.

The Rotunda traced the picture's location to 110 N. Main Street – the building that houses Woody's Video Village. No connection could be established, though The Rotunda photography staff is still analyzing the photo.

Please send any information concerning The Untouchables to The Rotunda, Box 1133, before this fiendish group strikes again.

Richmond Artist Speaks On Prints

Works To Be Exhibited

By MARY HILL

Artist/Printmaker Dennis Winston will be giving a lecture on Friday, February 5, at 8 p.m. in Bedford Auditorium at Longwood College.

Winston will speak on the best printmaking methods for producing many original prints. The lecture will also include an overview of the different types of printmakers. Slides of Winston's work will also be shown.

Winston's art has been exhibited often. His prints were most recently shown in the Black Artists of the South exhibition in Dallas, Texas.

Winston studied at Norfolk State University and received an undergraduate fellowship from the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts. He continued his education at the University, and the University of Richmond.

In 1985, Winston was named Art Teacher of the Year by the Virginia Art Education Society. He has also been honored by the Richmond Public Schools, where he is teaching at present.

Winston's visit to Longwood College is sponsored by the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts.

The lecture is open to anyone interested and is free of charge.

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to the editorial in last week's Rotunda. I agree whole-heartedly with you regarding the issue of the high school newspapers, but I felt you were way off base in the other areas.

First of all, granted, the drinking age was raised, but for good reasons. And I am sick and tired of hearing people compare getting drafted to drinking. What has drinking alcohol got to do with going into the service? I just turned 21 only five months ago, but I'm still alive. What a concept! I made it! You're barking up the wrong tree. You should be putting down the bars and clubs who won't let someone 19 or 20 in the door. What are 18-20 year olds supposed to do nowadays? You can't go to but so many movies. They want to dance and have fun too, but places won't let them in. Put a stamp on their hands for God's sake, at least they'll be off the street!

I also disagree with you on the seatbelt issue. I do not believe that this law, recently put into effect, has a Communist base or nature. It is a law designed to protect the American people. Okay, you might say, "I'm old enough to decide whether or not I want to wear my seatbelt. Besides, if I'm not wearing it, I'm not going to hurt anyone else." Fine, sing your song. But I don't hear anyone complaining about the regulations or warnings put out by the FDA or the Surgeon General. The FDA says you shouldn't eat 20 aspirin at one time. It's not illegal, but you won't be hurting anyone else if you do. So I wish these people would get off this "Red Scare" bit, and cool out. Nobody ever died from wearing a seatbelt, but people have died from smoking and drinking, and they're not even illegal!

Gail Starling

Dear Ms. Starling,

Thank you so much for responding to last week's editorial. It is refreshing to know there are still people around who don't believe and accept everything they read.

Question authority! Most of the people who have it are nuts anyway!

CG

To the Editor,

As a very actively involved, school spirited, and scholarly student at Longwood College, I feel it imperative to express my concern with GEIST, the honorary-leadership organization on campus.

For those not aware of its meaning, GEIST is the German word for spirit. According to everyone that I have talked to and everything I have read concerning GEIST, one must be actively involved, possess school spirit, and have a high GPA to be tapped for it. With these requirements, one would think that it would be a great honor to be in GEIST: I did, anyway!

However, my thoughts have changed abruptly. I have come to question the legitimacy of GEIST. Don't get me wrong. I feel that most GEIST members deserve their recognition, however I feel that quite a few members are not as qualified as they should be. I could name many students who are more involved, have higher GPA's and possess more school spirit than many students who have been tapped for GEIST in the past. I strongly question the method in which GEIST members are chosen. It only takes one GEIST member who does not like a qualified candidate to make sure that he or she does not get into the organization.

Has GEIST turned into a popularity contest? Does "who you know" or "who your friends are" get you into GEIST? I hope not! Many students have been offended by this. They work their buns off and spend many hours attending meetings, forums, promoting Longwood and earning good grades and they are not recognized.

I realize and understand that not everyone can get into GEIST. I DO NOT understand why GEIST is not more selective.

I truly respect what GEIST is supposed to stand for and I strive to be worthy of its recognition; however I strongly recommend that its selection process be reviewed by some non-biased administrator.

Versatile Actors Bring King Story To Life

By HOLLY PREBLE

Thursday, January 28, the play "I Have A Dream" was presented by Theatre IV of Richmond. This play is a part of the continuing tribute to Martin Luther King.

"I Have A Dream" captured King's goals and influences and the famous times that started the Black Movement. The play traced the 34 years of King's life from the day he was born in Atlanta, Georgia, to the day he was assassinated in Memphis, Tennessee in 1968.

From beginning to end the actors changed characters many times. Most of them also narrated the play in the midst of a scene. For example, Eloise Libron, who was the only woman in the play, acted out all the important women in King's life – with a change of a wig – his mother, his wife Henrietta, his elementary teacher, and Rosa Parks. Yet Eloise Libron also narrated the play when she was not playing a specific character.

Four out of the five actors did just that. With a change of a wig or hat or accent they played a different character in the story (except Kelvin Davis, who played King) during the whole of the play. This was a very fast-paced play and the roles of the actors were somewhat confusing, yet they still managed to make clear to the audience what character they were playing at the movement.

The background was a cardboard painted with abstract art of the sun and its rays. There were also three benchlike stools. These props only called more attention to the actors.

All of the actors wore black slacks or skirts and white sweatshirts. Most of the time the sweatshirts identified who they were playing at the time – "Daddy King," "King," "Momma King," "Henrietta," "Governor Wallace" and so on.

An interesting scene showed one actor, Tony Wallace, as a bus driver. The sounds of the bus braking and the sound of the engine running were acted out by Mr. Wallace.

Overall "I Have A Dream" was an educational play that was made enjoyable by the diversity and forcefullness of the actors.

Broadway Smash to play LC

"Purlie," the rollicking musical comedy that beat the odds to run on Broadway for more than two years, is the next production in Longwood College's Series of the Performing Arts.

The play, by Daedalus Productions of New York City, will be presented on Tuesday evening, February 9, at 8 o'clock in Jarman Auditorium.

Tickets will be on sale at the box office in Jarman. General admission is $7.00; senior citizens, youth under 18, and Longwood employees, $6.50; Longwood students free with college ID.

The play is set about 30 years ago on the Georgia estate of Cap'n Cotchipee, a miserly cracker whose sentimental longing for the days of slavery puts Gone With the Wind to shame.

Enter a charismatic black preacherman named Purlie Victorious Judson, who has come home to claim a family inheritance being "held for safekeeping" by the Cap'n.

With the help of starry-eyed Lutiebelle Jenkins, Purlie sets in motion a shaky scheme designed to recover the money, reopen his grandfather's Big Bethel church, and right the wrongs done to his family and friends.

"Purlie" won two Tony awards and was called "an exhilarating musical gift" by The New York Times.

WLCX Is Back

By TERRY TEBAULT

Longwood's radio team, WLCX, is back on beat with a full schedule for the new semester.

WLCX, located at 90.1 on the FM dial, has approximately 25 current DJ's along with 22 new DJ's in training. Each DJ is allowed to play their own kind of music, which creates a variety including anything from Classic Rock to 50's music.

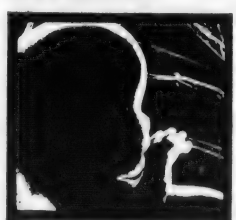
Formerly known as WUTA, WLCX has been on the air regularly since the spring of 1985. The call letters WUTA had no initial meaning, but WLCX stands for Longwood College, of course, and the x means "extra music", commented Jim Long, the station's chief engineer.

With the cooperation of WFLO, the local Farmville station, WLCX has been able to broadcast Lancer Basketball games live. "We're hoping that there will be more in the future," comments Jim Long. Also, the station presently has some good contact with record companies and is able to get material from them, so that DJ's can give listeners well-rounded musical representation.

The station had its weekly meeting this past Wednesday night, where they picked up their new DJ's for the semester and began the new DJ training session.

The station's board includes:

General Manager – Cathy Gaughran
Program Director – Dennis Morley
Business Manager – Gianni Venturi
Chief Engineer – Jim Long
Public Relations – Michelle Hummer
Music Director – Jeff Clayton
News Director – Gene Kerns
Sports Director – Scott Loving
Secretary – Cyndi Wessels
Faculty Advisor – Jan Evans



The station has come a long way and hopes to provide even more services for the students' enjoyment in the future. The DJ's do take requests and some even give prizes away. Take some time out and listen to your favorite music on WLCX.

Sesqui Awareness

By JAMES BOSTON AND ANNE SMITH

As many of you are already aware, Longwood will be celebrating its sesquicentennial (150th) birthday in 1989. This is an exciting time to be attending Longwood.

As a part of this celebration, we have decided to bring to you, the student body, a look at just how far Longwood has come since being founded in 1839.

Weekly, we will bring to you interesting stories concerning Longwood's past. We will dig through dusty old closets to bring out facts and legends that many consider to be mysterious and intriguing, to say the least. We will enlighten you on such topics as how Longwood got its name. Dr. Jarman's ghost, how Chi began, the Steven's fire, past traditions, past rules and regulations and much, much more!

Hopefully, if nothing else, you will become more aware of your school's history and just maybe, (If you don't already) you will grow to really appreciate this fine institution of higher learning.

We will be getting our information from interviews with alumni, old publications, and with a little help from our presiding Vice President for Institutional Advancement, Nancy Shelton. GET EXCITED! – WE ARE!

CONTRA AID, ARAB CLASHES, AND THOSE REDSKINS

By MATT PETERMAN

☆President Reagan will continue to push hard for more aid to the Contras, also known as the Freedom Fighters. He plans to address the nation tonight to help swing some still looming moderates to his side.

The White House has lobbied furiously for the passage of the $36 million aid package. President Reagan conceded that the Sandanista Government of Nicaragua has moved toward reform, but military pressure from the Contras is necessary for this to continue.

The Democrats feel that more money hampers the peace process. Without it though, no policy would exist, leaving an undeclared Democratic policy to fill the space.

The House will vote on the package tomorrow and the Senate Thursday.

☆Palestinian Uprisings are reported strong by many new sources. A wave of protests has rocked the Israeli occupied territories, the Gaza Strip and the West Bank, since December 8.

Thus far the Israeli reaction has been forceful crowd control. However, a peace plan is in the works to attempt to calm the protesters. The Israelis, due to U.S. initiative, have plans for Palestinian self-rule of the territories. Israel falls short concerning the sovereignty question.

☆The Washington Redskins destroyed the Denver Broncos in Super Bowl XXII with a score of 42-10.

The Broncos quickly put 10 points on the board, but after that it was Washington's game.

The Redskin quarterback, Doug Williams, was given the game's MVP Award.

All together 17 records were broken or tied during the game.

SAM, THE MAXIMAX ORGANIZATION FOR ALL

By MATT PETERMAN

Someday everyone reading this will be a manager and/or affected by the decisions of a manager.

Members of the college generation of today are learning and fighting for any edge that will allow them to excel above one another. Tools that might help achieve set goals are out there. One such tool is SAM, the Society for Advancement of Management.

"It's going to be a great year," said Ann Quattlebaum, President of SAM, speaking at the organization's first meeting. SAM is currently conducting its annual membership campaign, looking for members from all majors.

Planning what members call its "most aggressive semester," SAM will attempt to host D.T. Bradley's and The Cafe in the coming months. They will also volunteer their help in the Special Olympics which are coming to Longwood on February 20.

Speakers from E.F. Hutton and Par-Bil's are scheduled and a tour to A.H. Robbins and The Federal Reserve are in the works.

New members are encouraged to attend the meeting tomorrow, February 3, after which the organization will spend a couple of hours bowling in order for all members to get to know each other better. The next meeting is scheduled for February 10. The last day for new members has been set for February 18.

The organization agreed at the meeting that movies pertaining to management will be shown later in the semester. SAM is also planning to see the play "Grease" in Jarman Auditorium as a group on February 26.

The SAM fund raising committee will propose a campaign to raise funds at a later meeting.

If all that isn't enough, SAM will try to send a delegation to the International Conference of SAM to be held in Richmond this year. The advisers, Julian O'Neal and Harsh Luther, will accompany the SAM members to Richmond.

Longwood's chapter of SAM is one of the fastest growing organizations on campus. The resources that are available from the organization are evident at every meeting and are meant to give the student the competitive edge.

GROWTH BECOMING COMMON PLACE

By KAREN DALTON

Growing 100% in less than four years, having the second largest number of sociology majors than any other school in Va., and having distinguished professors aboard, Longwood College's Sociology and Anthropology department is thriving successfully in every way possible.

According to Dr. Kenneth Perkins, head of the Department of Sociology and Anthropology, there are 119 Sociology majors and 27 majors in Anthropology. As the department grows it carries the distinction of having the largest number of Sociology majors of any other school in Va. with the exception of the University of Virginia, which has only ten more.

"Career options are excellent," says Perkins. With a Sociology or Anthropology degree a graduate can have successful careers in Archeology, Business, Criminal Justice, Gerontology, Human services, Marketing, Mental Health, and Pre Law. These fields are only a small portion of a wide spectrum of careers that a Sociology or Anthropology degree can encompass. Dr. Perkins believes that because of the growth there are "curriculum changes that improve the marketability of our majors."

The actual growth of the Sociology and Anthropology department is not the only reason for recognition. The department professors' success also deserve praise.

Dr. Armstrong, an Anthropology professor, received the distinguished Fullbright award. Currently, Dr. Armstrong is teaching abroad in Finland. After returning home in May, she will depart in the summer to Zagrebe, Yugoslavia to present a paper.

Another Longwood Anthropology professor, Dr. Jordan, has published a book about tourism in Vermont entitled Vacation Village, Vermont: The Social World of a New England Tourist Resort. While speaking of Dr. Jordan's book, Dr. Perkins says "he may be a guest on Bob Newhart's Vermont Today Show."

Longwood's Sociology and Anthropology department offers many career opportunities for students. The department's growth and success in the job market and its distinguished faculty show that the department has a lot to offer. Dr. Perkins states, "We are proud of the opportunity we have to teach our students of Longwood College."

HOT SHOT Poll Results

NEW YORK, December 4, 1987 – Ask today's college students if winning a million dollars would alter their career plans and eighty percent would tell you no, according to the nationwide HOT SHOT Poll of nearly 500 college newspaper editors.

The new survey was conducted among more than 1,760 editors for HOT SHOT Tropical Fruit Schnapps.

"I'm frankly surprised," said James H. McKee, spokesman for HOT SHOT Schnapps. "I'm not sure we'd get the same kind of response from the post-yuppie "me" generation – those in their late thirties or early forties, who would likely want to retire immediately if they came into big money."

Idealism, the HOT SHOT Poll showed, was again a force among today's students. The major share of the college editors responding, for instance, said that the most important single thing they would seek in considering a job after graduation would be "making a difference," first choice for almost 43 percent. "Opportunity for advancement" was the option for 31.4 percent. Salary, by contrast, was picked by only 8.4 percent and "power" by less than two percent.

"The students of the 1980's are often criticized for being materialistic," said McKee, "but they appear to have more in common with their counterparts from the 1960's than we realized. More than half of our respondents, in fact, expect to earn only between $10,000 and $20,000 during their first full year in the work force."

Caution and stability, the HOT SHOT Poll indicated, were prime factors among college students today. Almost two thirds (65.5 percent), for example, said that during their first year in the real world, they would be spending most of their income on rent and living expenses. Close to half planned to rent their own apartment or house during their first year out of school; and more than 72 percent planned marriage within ten years, half the number within five years. A similar number expected to have at least two children after they married.

Societal issues are also on students' minds. AIDS ranked as "the most pressing" with 27.6 percent, well ahead of the numbers preoccupied with nuclear war and peace, which came first with 21.5 percent. Big headaches, like the economy and the federal deficit, were placed first by a scant 5.3 percent. The AIDS crisis has already had significant influence on students' personal habits. An overwhelming 86 percent said they intended to use caution in any new sexual relationship, would restrict themselves to those with whom they were involved in a one-on-one relationship, or would remain celibate until a cure was found. Only 2.4 percent, however, chose the latter.

Respondents to the HOT SHOT Poll included student editors at colleges and universities in all 50 states and the District of Columbia. The data was compiled and annalyzed by Beta Research of Syosset, New York, for HOT SHOT Tropical Fruit Schnapps.

THE BIG TEN START THE COUNTDOWN

Ten students have been chosen as finalists for the 1988 Miss Longwood Scholarship Pageant.

They are Teresa Bunn, Wanda Carter, Amy Church, Sandra Clayton, Alice Flora, Susan Holzman, Kristine Meaney, Beth Miller, Anita Washington and Holly Westenhoefer.

The Miss America preliminary will be held on Saturday, March 19, in Jarman Auditorium. Some $2,500 in scholarships will be awarded, and the winner will advance to the Miss Virginia Pageant. Contestants will compete in talent, interview, evening gown, and swimsuit.

The Miss Longwood Pageant is regarded as one of the best local Miss America pageants in the United States. Last year's pageant was a sell-out. A celebrity emcee and special guest performers will be announced soon for this year's pageant.

The 10 students who are finalists were chosen from 27 who auditioned in December.

The reigning Miss Longwood is Carla Lockhart, a junior from Chesapeake. She made the "Top Ten" in the Miss Virginia Pageant last summer. She will play the lead role, Sandy, in the Longwood Players' production of "Grease" in late February.

Baliles Contining Program

By BAKER BAKER JR.

Governor Gerald L. Baliles is pleased to announce that the Governor's Fellows Program, created in 1982, will be repeated in 1988. Fellows will serve during the summer of 1988. A. E. Dick Howard, White-Burkett Miller Professor of Law and Public Affairs at the University of Virginia, will serve as chairman of the program's coordinating committee.

The purpose of the program is to offer talented and highly motivated young people firsthand experiences in the processes of state government. As a result of their experience, Fellows may well be attracted to careers in government or public service. In addition to giving Fellows valuable experience, the program is designed to bring fresh ideas into the Governor's Office. Moreover, the program should strengthen ties between the state government and Virginia's academic community.

Students must be graduating seniors or must be enrolled as degree candidates in a graduate or professional school. The major field of study does not have to be government-related. Students enrolled in Virginia colleges or universities, public or private, may apply, regardless of state of residence. Virginia residents enrolled in out-of-state institutions, public or private, may also apply. The selection of Fellows will be based on merit without regard to race, sex, color, national origin, religion, age, disability, or political affiliations.

An applicant selected as a Fellow must be willing to commit at least two months to full-time work in the Governor's Office. The normal period of Fellowship would be from May 30 through July 29, 1988.

NO STATE FUNDS ARE AVAILABLE TO SUPPORT FELLOWS. However, in previous years, colleges and universities proved willing to offer summer grants to Fellows selected from their institutions. Applicants are encouraged to discuss this matter with school officials before application is made.

Send inquiries to: The Honorable Gerald L. Baliles, Governor's Fellows Program, State Capitol, Richmond, Virginia 23219.

Each applicant will be sent notification of receipt of the application when the information has been submitted in its entirety.

AMBASSADORS

By KELLEY COGGSDALE

The Longwood Ambassadors had their annual new Parents Phone Campaign last semester. During their week of calling, the Ambassadors phone all the parents of new students to the college, be they freshman or transfer students.

During that week the Ambassadors got 472 pledges. And raised $13,785 for an average of $29 per donor.

Top callers per night for that week were: Monday: Amy Harrell, Tuesday: Darren McCauley, Wednesday: Kelley Coggsdale, Thursday: Kathy Hedden. Darren McCauley was the top caller for the whole week.

During the first week of February, the Ambassadors start dialing again, when the annual Alumni Telefund begins, requiring 10 weeks of intensive calling. Each Ambassador donates three hours per week for the telefund.

Good Luck Ambassadors and Thanks.

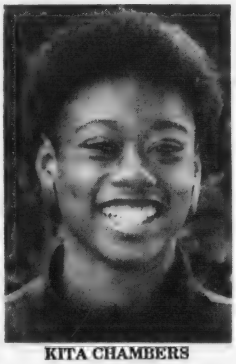
Lady Lancers Look To The Future



Longwood's women's basketball team will be looking for success the rest of the way after winning one of three games last week.

The Lady Lancers began the week on a promising note with an 87-75 win at Liberty Tuesday night. Games against second ranked Hampton University (19-0) and eighth ranked Mount St. Mary's (17-0) proved to be out of reach as Longwood fell by scores of 123-61 and 88-43.

This week, following a home game with Wofford Monday night, the Lady Lancers, 8-9 overall and 2-3 in the Mason-Dixon Conference, will visit Ferrum Thursday night at 5:30 and highly ranked Pittsburgh-Johnstown Saturday at 3:00.

"We weren't quite up to the level of our competition at Hampton and The Mount, but we have a real good chance of doing well in the remainder of our games," said LC coach Shirley Duncan.

Duncan's optimism is clouded by injuries to two players. Freshman guard Ann Callaham has a cervical sprain after a hard fall at Hampton Thursday and will be out at least two weeks. Junior forward Kita Chambers is scheduled to have arthroscopic surgery on her knee this week and may be out for the rest of the year.

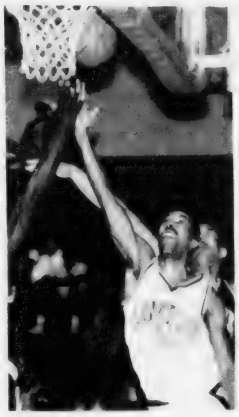
KITA CHAMBERS

"Losing Ann and Kita hurts our depth considerably," said Duncan. "Both had been playing well for us in recent games. We'll have to play harder to make up for their absence."

Senior guard Angie Hill turned in perhaps the finest performance of her career in the win over Liberty with 21 points and outstanding defense. Hill hit seven of 15 field goals, seven of nine free throws and committed just two turnovers in 37 minutes on the court. Her defensive work on Flames point guard Kristi Mercer was also a key to the win.

While Hill led the way Tuesday night, Longwood got double figure scoring from five additional players. Jill Everett, Annette Easterling and Barbie Burton scored 10 points, Sandy Rawdon 11, and Chambers came off the bench to score 12 points and grab a game-high 10 rebounds.

Hampton scored the most points ever against a Longwood team Thursday night. Turnovers hurt the Lady Lancers in both losses. Angee Middleton had 11 points and Carmille Barnette 10 points and 13 rebounds against Hampton.



Player Of The Week

Junior forward Darryl Rutley, who scored 57 points in two Longwood men's basketball victories last week, has been named Player of the Week in the Mason-Dixon Conference and Longwood College Player of the Week for the period January 24-31.

Rutley scored a career high 37 points in Longwood's 83-70 victory over Mount St. Mary's Friday night and 20 points in a Tuesday win over Liberty 60-57. For the week the 6-4 cager hit 18 of 36 field goals, six of 11 three-point field goals and 15 of 19 free throws.

With three 3-point field goals in each game, Rutley bagged 14 of 17 free throws against Mount St. Mary's including 11 of 12 in the final four minutes of the game. His point production was crucial as Longwood upped its overall record to 13-6 and took over the first place in the Mason-Dixon Conference with a 3-0 record.

Rutley, Longwood's top scorer with an 18.4 points per game average, was team MVP, second team All-MDAC and

DARRYL RUTLEY

All-MDAC Tournament last season. He averaged 14.7 points per game. The Trinity Episcopal High School graduate has now scored 747 points in less than two years with the Lancer basketball team.

A business major, Rutley transferred to Longwood from Monmouth College.

Rutley Scores Career High 37; Lancers Upset The Mount 83-70

In the aftermath of Longwood's surprising 83-70 basketball victory over Mount St. Mary's Friday night, the team that was picked last in the five-team, Division II Mason-Dixon Conference is at the top of the league standings.

Longwood, voted to finish at the bottom of the MDAC in pre-season polls, stands at the top of the early season conference race with a 3-0 record and is 13-6 overall. The Lancers have their best record at this point in the season since the 1980-81 squad stood 14-5.

Winner of six of its last seven games, Longwood hosts Pittsburgh-Johnstown Saturday at 2:00 in MDAC clash, before traveling to Liberty next Monday (February 8) for another crucial league game.

Ask Longwood coach Cal Luther and his players to explain the secret to the team's current success and you'll hear words like chemistry, hard work, defense, and team basketball.

"We have better chemistry this year," says junior Darryl Rutley who scored 57 points in wins over Liberty (60-57) and Mount St. Mary's (83-70) last week. "Last year (13-14 record) we were running on two cylinders. Now we're running on five-and-a-half and we hope to get it up to six or eight soon.

"I don't know of any team around right now that's playing harder," said the coach. "We've been playing great team basketball on both offense and defense. It's mainly a matter of hard work in practice and during the games."

In last week's wins over Liberty and The Mount, Longwood didn't shoot well, but thanks to defensive pressure and the ability to control the tempo, the Lancers were able to come out on top.

"Ernie (assistant coach Ernest Neal) did a great job with two scouting reports, and we were well-prepared for what our opponents were going to do," said Luther. "The kids have confidence in our game-plans."

In addition to solid contributions from first semester starters Rutley, Dale Shavers, Doug Poppe and Greg Holloway, Longwood has benefitted from the return of junior guard Bobby Dobson and the improved play of freshmen Joe Lowe and Keith Latimer.

Dobson is averaging 7.5 points and five assists as a starter while Lowe and Latimer have played key roles off the bench.

Grapplers Third In Lancer Duals

By SONYA HUGHES

Longwood's grapplers wrestled their way to an impressive third place finish in Saturday's Lancer Duals held in Lancer Hall.

In upcoming action Longwood faces Wilkes and Ferrum Tuesday night at 6:00 in Lancer Hall and travels to Washington and Lee Tuesday, February 9.

The final standings of Saturday's activities were: Pembroke 1st at 3-0, Virginia State 2nd at 2-1, Longwood 3rd at 3-1, and Norfolk State and Washington and Lee tied for 4th at 1-2. Newport News Apprentice and Ferrum tied for 5th place with records of 0-2.

Longwood lost to Virginia State 21-18 and defeated Ferrum, Newport News, and Norfolk State by scores of 54-3, 42-6, and 26-16, respectively. The Lancers' overall record is now 4-8.

Elon Kelley, 126 lbs., and Doug Hartley, 190 lbs, were Longwood's most dominant wrestlers of the day, destroying every opponent they faced. They both went 4-0, boosting their season records to 18-8 and 16-8, respectively. Kelley won three of his four matches by pinning his opponent. Hartley collected two pins for the day.

John Stukes, 134 lbs, Tommy Gilbert, 142 lbs., Ted Proctor, 150 lbs., and Jesus Strauss, heavyweight, collected three wins each. Stukes is now 26-3-1 on the season. Proctor (15-10-1) and Strauss (17-8) each accumulated one pin each.

Dave Taylor, 177 lbs., had a 2-0 record for the day.

Longwood Leads Mason Dixon Race

Led by junior Darryl Rutley's 37 points, Longwood's men's basketball team dropped in 18 of 23 free throws in the last four minutes and upset preseason Mason-Dixon Conference favorite Mount St. Mary's 83-70 Friday night in Lancer Hall.

The victory boosted Longwood to 13-6 overall and 3-0 in the Mason-Dixon. The Lancers are in first place in the league standings heading into Saturday's game with MDAC foe Pittsburgh-Johnstown at 2:00 in Lancer Hall.

As was the case last Tuesday night in a 60-57 victory over Liberty, the Lancers came from behind in the second half to get the win. Trailing 60-55 with 7:22 remaining, Longwood scored eight straight points to take a 63-60 edge and then made the lead stand up at the free throw line.

After a Holloway bucket at 6:11 tied the game 60-60, point guard Bobby Dobson swished a

BOBBY DOBSON

3-pointer at 5:20 to give Longwood a lead it would not relinquish.

Longwood led 33-32 at the half, after a 10-2 run turned a 23-19 deficit at 6:55 into a 29-25 edge at 3:26. Dobson, who played perhaps the finest game of his career, keyed the surge with consecutive steals and layups, and Rutley capped it off with a three-pointer.

While Rutley had a career high 37 points, Dobson came through with 11 points, two assists and seven steals. Center Doug Poppe totaled 10 rebounds and 13 points, after scoring eight points in the first seven minutes of the game, and Shavers totaled 11 points and 11 rebounds. A 6-3 guard who likes to mix it up inside, Shavers has now pulled down 29 rebounds in his last three contests.

Longwood Gymnasts Improve At UMBC

The scores may not show it, but Longwood gymnastics coach Ruth Budd felt her team improved its earlier performances in a two-team meet at Maryland Baltimore County Saturday afternoon.

While the Retrievers scored a 172.7 to 164.0 victory, Budd was pleased with most aspects of Longwood's showing. The coach felt her team had its best meet of the season.

"We really had a pretty good meet," said Budd. "We improved in some events, though the scorer don't show it."

Cindy Shelton led the way for Longwood with a first place on beam (8.9), a fourth place all-around 34.25, and a tie for third in floor exercise with teammate Natalie Taylor at 8.9.

Other top gymnasts for Longwood were: Lynda Chenoweth with an 8.8 for fifth in vaulting, and Tammy Zeller 6th all-around (33.35), fifth on beam (8.4), and a fifth place tie on bars (8.0) with Lancer Terri Dore.

Longwood will get some time off from competition this week with the next meet scheduled for Saturday, February 13 at home against William & Mary. The meet with the Indians will be the Lancers' final home appearance of the year.

Quiet Hours

By MATT PETERMAN

A new era has opened at ongwood – or has it?

Does the recently imple-ented changeover from le-ient "courtesy" hours to prac-cally around the clock quiet ours connotate educational imulus? Or will the new rules st look good on paper?

The answer is twofold, de-ending on which Longwoodi-ns you talk to. In the fall emester, a Residence Life roup, a committee consisting f educators and students, rain-stormed for ideas to im-rove the academic environ-ent of Longwood. One such lea was the new quiet hours. owever, sixty percent of those olled by The Rotunda say ey knew of no such plans in e works.

Most students admitted at the policy will not dversely affect any developed abits. Many commented that such a policy could be subject to abuse as the definition of contained noise may differ from person to person.

Others were willing to give the new regulations a chance to prove themselves, conceding that something needed to be done to foster a more educational environment. Citing no particular desire for the newly implemented changes, many made the point that they for saw no reversal of policy, so why fight it.

The old quiet hours tolerated "noise" in the week during certain times. The new policy, which went into effect Monday, extends quiet hours to cover from Sunday at 7 p.m. through 3:30 p.m. Friday. It also covers Saturdays and Sundays from 2 a.m. to noon.

The discipline procedure entails two written warings and on the third, a removal of the source of the noise, such as a stereo.

In a letter to Longwood students the Vice President for Student Affairs, Sue A. Saunders, explained: "One of the most significant challenges we face at Longwood is to create a college community that enhances and supports academic achievement."

The letter read: "I trust that students, administrators, and faculty can pursue together the creation of residence halls that will encourage students to be more academically successful and even outstanding."

The weaknesses and strengths of the policy will be tested in the months to come. A complimentary project of improving study areas is also being pushed for. Students should contact The Housing Director, David Retting, for input such as furniture and decor.

Town Bookstore More Than Just Books

By TIM BRANDENBURG and VERONICA KLARAS

The Good Ol' Girl, Farmville's newest bookstore, recently opened on Main Street. The store specializes in new and used books of all types and promotes local artwork.

The bookstore is currently remodeling and will hold its grand opening in mid February. Hours for the store are 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and will change to 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. after the grand opening. Hours will be altered later according to demand.

Best seller novels will be sold at greatly reduced prices about one to two months after they are originally distributed.

The bookstore can special order books, magazines, research books, and search for books that are out of print.

Al Millette, the store's co-owner is considering selling daily in- and out-of-town newspapers if enough customers are willing to buy them.

The Good Ol' Girl is willing to promote local artists. "Anyone who is an artist or into crafts can display their work here. We will sell it for them for a small commission," says Millette.

In addition, a booth will be available free of charge to fraternities or sororities who wish to sell crafts for fundraising purposes.

Tables are located in the rear of the store where free coffee is available. This service is provided for study purposes or for while reviewing any books that might be of interest.

Millette and his business partner, Marcia Cutler are from Massachusetts. The warm climate and size of the town attracted them to Farmville. They are now living in Cumberland.

Spring Informal Rush Taught Some Old Dogs New Tricks

By GWEN W. NELMS

This spring's Informal Rush esulted in a new tradition for uture rushees. The Panhellenic Council, a governing body of Greeks, voted to establish a orority walk during spring ush, instead of limiting it only o fall.

A majority of sorority mem-ers on the Greek council voted o establish walk during spring ecause they had pledged dur-ng Informals and felt that In-ormal Rush was incomplete ithout walk.

Informal Rush began Sun-ay January 31 at 7:30 p.m. in Stubbs dormitory with 128 girls. The majority of sororities held Coke parties which allowed them to meet the rushees and vice-versa. Rushees were allowed to attend three parties of their choice and as rush went on, rushees later attended parties by invitation only.

Charlie Warner, head of Greek affairs, believes rush is a time of dual evaluation. He says, "Rush is a period of time for a person to evaluate a chapter to find a place for herself and the period of time for a chapter to look at a rushee and see if they have a place for her."

John Dos Passos Prize Awarded To Fictionist Lee Smith

Presentation Scheduled For March 22nd

Longwood College will award this year's John Dos Passos Prize for Literature to Lee Smith, a native Virginian whose works of fiction are "distinctly American," with "characters that possess dimensions of shadow and light that instill an unmistakable humanity."

Lee Smith, who grew up in the Grundy area of southwest Virginia, is the author of six novels, a collection of short stories, and stories published in several popular magazines.

The John Dos Passos Prize, established at Longwood in 1980, annually commemorates one of the greatest of 20th-century American authors by honoring other writers in his name. The prize includes a cash award of $1,000 and a medallion recognizing the recipient's high literary achievement.

Lee Smith will come to Longwood to receive the prize on Tuesday, March 22. The presentation ceremonies and a reading by the author are set for 8 p.m. in Wygal Auditorium and are open to the public at no charge.

Smith's most recent novels are Oral History (1983) and Family Linen (1985). An earlier novel, Fancy Strut (1973), has recently been reissued in paperback.

Her other novels are The Last Day the Dogbushes Bloomed

Longwood Leaders "Surfed To The Top"

By SCOTT LOVING

On Friday, 104 students and administrators drove to Virginia Beach for the third annual Longwood Leadership Conference.

The theme for this year's leadership conference was "Surf to the Top."

In her opening remarks, Phyllis Mable, Vice President for Student Affairs, said that to "surf to the top" was to "strive for excellence".

When asked her feelings on the leadership conference, Mable said, "It's good to see this many students this loyal to Longwood."

The keynote address was given by William C. Bosher Jr., the Superintendent of Henrico County Schools. Bosher spoke on the topic of leadership.

"Leadership is getting people from where they are to where they need to be," Bosher said.

After the keynote address, conference-goers danced at a beach party, organized by Charlie Warner, Greek Affairs

Hoofers Beware!

To the Editor:

Don't dare use my name for obvious reasons. We live on the edge of campus and twice recently have come to the rescue of girls being assaulted nearby by male students after overhearing screams and shouts. Any amount of alcohol is dangerous. Heed the Turkish saying "Fear the man who fears not God."

Vandals Are Appalling

Letter To The Editor:

Since my arrival at Longwood I have been appalled at the level of vandalism. Empty beer bottles on campus, graffiti in the elevators, broken windows, and the list goes on. Recently a Shakespearean display in the English department was destroyed. This display was put together by Longwood graduate students.

Any student who engages in vandalism does not deserve to attend any place of higher education. The destruction of school property only damages the students. In the end I can guarantee every student will suffer by the expenses. Not to mention discrediting Longwood College which you are attending, or possibly graduating from.

Many students need to adjust their attitudes and CLEAN UP THEIR ACTS!

Dissatisfied With Dining

To the Editor:

As concerned students at Longwood College, we are writing in reference to the Dining Hall and its serving procedures.

We all know that the dining hall is trying its hardest to accommodate us, but many students have been giving suggestions and are being ignored.

Monday night, February first, the upper dining hall had pizza. My suite went around 5:30 and it was crazy. We got in a line and as we got to the serving counter, we were told it was a line for seconds only. This was new to us since at lunch it is a regular serving line. We had already waited in line long enough, so since there were no regular plates to be found, we got salad plates. As we got in line again, we were told we could not use those plates, so we ended up not getting pizza at all. Why not put signs up telling us this instead of waiting in line for nothing.

Why don't we have family style dinner anymore? It was much more organized.

As we went to get drinks, there were no cups, no ice, and no carbonation. (Those so-called cups you give us don't hold anything anyway.)

If the college is going to admit more students than the school can handle, then the school should provide a larger dining hall and the necessary dinnerware. We need some kind of organization.

The lower dining hall should be open on weekends or at least on Fridays. If not, then provide a more appetizing dinner.

On closing, we would like to say that all of our parents put a lot of money into our meal plan (not to mention the school), while many students end up not even going to eat or eating elsewhere because the dining hall can't accommodate us. Take a survey of how many students really eat there and see if it adds up to what we pay for. I doubt it.

WHERE DOES THE $ GO?
Concerned and Dissatisfied Students

Editorial Comment –

How come none of you "concerned students" ever reveal your identities to the common public? If you were really as concerned as you say your are you'd get up and do something about the things that are troubling you instead of writing anonymous letters to me. Stand behind your actions. It's the only way to get anything accomplished. CG

Well, last week's "editorial" did not go over as well as was anticipated. The inquiry concerning Honor Code and Honor System responsibilities of college faculty and staff members was meant to prompt replies from various points of view around campus. The editorial did not do this. Apologies to those of you who waited with bated breath for some earth-shattering story.

You can ruin a life in one stroke.

Even if you live through a stroke, you might face paralysis, loss of speech, or altered behavior. Things that can make life difficult, to say the least. Strokes occur when the blood supply is cut to part of the brain. And if you currently have high blood pressure or any form of heart disease, your risk of stroke is higher than normal. The American Heart Association urges you to control your blood pressure. By doing so, you'll reduce your chances of a stroke. And increase the likelihood of a long, happy life.

Need A Ride?

A ride board has been placed in the lobby across from the Post Office for the convenience of all Longwood students. The board was the idea of freshmen enrolled in the fall Longwood Seminar section #33. They created the board and ride cards in the hope that this system would be more efficient than placing notes on the wall.

The board is divided into general locations: Northern Virginia (NOVA), Richmond, Tidewater, Out of State, and "Other." Space is provided under each heading to hang preprinted color-coded index cards. Persons needing a ride should fill out a white card which asks for the following information: name, address, phone number, destination, dates seeking to leave and return, and whether the rider is willing to share gas and tolls. Persons offering a ride should fill out a blue card which requests comparable information. The cards should then be hung under the appropriate destination.

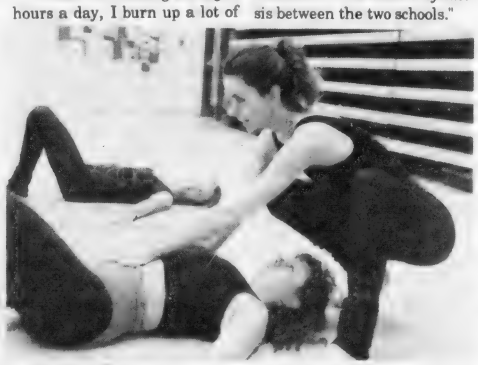
Students are asked not to remove the cards unless they are out of date. Please copy down the information you need so that everyone can take advantage of the board.

Japanese Art Lecture

By CHERYL JEFFREY

The International Studies at Longwood series continues with a presentation on Japanese art, aesthetics and religion given by Jane Griffin of the Smithsonian Institute, February 16, at 7:30 p.m. in Bedford Auditorium. She has traveled extensively throughout the Far East and is well known throughout the United States for her lectures. The main focus of her lecture will be the fundamental influence of Chinese art and religion on the Japanese culture.

There will also be a koto concert on March 30 given by Kyoko Okamoto. A koto is a six foot long stringed instrument. Koto playing is a marvel these days because there are few people left who possess this skill.



Professional dancers like sweets, too!

With her slender, well-toned body, Cynthia Reynolds looks like the professional dancer that she is.

So it was surprising when Reynolds, who spent a week at Longwood College recently, admitted that she has a weakness for sweets and, like everyone else, over-indulged during the Christmas season.

"I can sit down and eat a whole box of cookies," said Reynolds, the principal female dancer with the Erick Hawkins Dance Company in New York.

"When I'm working out eight hours a day, I burn up a lot of calories, so I can afford to eat a little more. But I avoid soda pop and I try to eat mainly proteins and vegetables."

Cynthia Reynolds, a professional dancer, shows Longwood student Stacey Noona the proper body alignment for the spine while teaching a modern dance class.

Although her diet is not one of constant self-denial, Reynolds eats "carefully" and takes vitamins. "I've changed my whole idea of what food is – it's fuel for this machine. For example, you wouldn't feed an automobile Twinkies."

Reynolds taught dance classes at Longwood the week of January 25-29 and worked with the Longwood Company of Dancers in preparation for the group's spring concert. She made a similar visit to Longwood last spring.

For the past 12 years, Reynolds has danced with Erick Hawkins Dance Company.

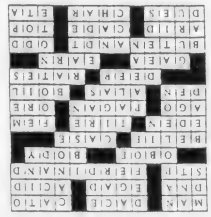
Hawkins, who once danced with the famous Martha Graham and is still going strong at 78, is one of the best known choreographers. He has developed a quality of dance movement known as "free flow" that is based on natural human movement. The technique is quite different from that of ballet and other styles of modern dance.

"Erick is always saying, 'Don't work so hard,' " she said. "Dancers are notorious overworkers. They think, 'If it doesn't hurt, I'm not doing enough.' I always tell young people that dance doesn't have to mean the stiff, unnatural movements they often associate with it."

She also is a disciple of the Alexander Technique, which was developed by F.M. Alexander. "The Alexander Technique is not dance, but a way to reduce stress and overwork. It's a psycho-physical aproach to movement. I've made a synthesis between the two schools."

Reynolds, who looks younger than her 40 years, grew up near Buffalo, N.Y. She has a bachelor's degree from the State University of New York at Brockport. She has completed a three-year teacher training program at the American Center for Alexander Technique.

"The Alexander Technique has been around since the turn of the century. An Alexander school opened recently in Charlottesville."



Through her work with the Hawkins Dance Company, Reynolds has seen much of the country. "I've traveled to nearly all the states, including Hawaii and Alaska."

In late October, she performed at the Kennedy Center in Washington. She did two performances in Florida recently and soon will go to UCLA. She also has performed for the United Nations and in Italy, southern France and London.

In Virginia, she has danced with the Richmond Symphony at the Mosque, and also at the Empire Theater in Richmond. She has taught at Virginia Commonwealth University and Sweet Briar College.

To Gena: Happy Anniversary! You and Garland finally hit the BIG 365th day! Overjoyed – Elizabeth

To those who call themselves "THE UNTOUCHABLES": I commend you. First, let me congratulate you on your capturing the CHI banner. It must have been some job for this organization to accomplish. You almost proved yourselves worthy. Second, let me also add that though your mission was quite successful your actions were that of an amateur. Being as smart as you could possibly be, you put a photo in the paper and you stated that you had no motive. Out of pity you will be given another chance. Sincerely – "THE VAGABOND"

P.S. Your group can be stopped.

The '88 Vote, Panama Troubles and Storm

By MATT PETERMAN

☆The key vote in New Hampshire for Republican and Democratic presidential hopefuls is just 5 days away. It will be the first primary of the 1988 race and promises to solidify some candidates chances while putting out the flame in others.

The first caucus, held last Monday, yielded some surprising results, as Republican frontrunner, V.P. George Bush finished 3rd behind Pat Robertson and Robert Dole.

On the Democratic side, underdog Richard Gephardt finished ahead of Paul Simon and Michael Dukakis.

The exact results of the caucuses are listed below, ranked in the order of percentage vote received.

Democrats: Richard Gephardt 31%, Paul Simon, 26%, Michael Dukakis, 22%, Jesse Jackson, 11%, Bruce Babbitt, 9%, Gary Hart, 1%, Albert Gore, 1%, Uncommitted, 6%.

Republicans: Robert Dole, 37%, Pat Robertson, 25%, George Bush, 19%, Jack Kemp, 11%, Pete du Pont, 7%, Albert Haig, 0%, No preference, 1%.

☆Last week formal charges were brought against Panamanian strongman, Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, by federal grand juries in Miami and Tampa. The charges consisted of racketeering and drug trafficking.

Noriega responded with allegations that the U.S. was looking for ways to escape from the Panama Treaty ratified during the Carter Administration. He subsequently called for all U.S. troops to leave the country. Under the treaty troops can stay till 1999.

Though extradition seems unlikely, these indictments are still more evidence of the corrupt nature under which Noriega rules.

The U.S. is hopeful that Noriega will step down so a more Democratic environment will exist in Panama. Instead he seems to be grabbing onto anything to hold him up.

☆A killer storm hit Britain yesterday with winds up to 110 mph. Nine people are reported dead with damage in the millions.

Hundreds of homes are reported without power. The storm is similar to the one that struck Britain last year.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM BELIEVE IN IT

By DREW HUDSON

The purpose of any judicial system is to promote and protect all people. The key words in that statement are: "Promote," "protect" and "all". The purpose of the SGA judicial Reform Task Force is to evaluate the present judicial system here at Longwood and make recommendations to better promote and protect all people.

Ricky L. Otey, President of Longwood's SGA and the SGA senate have formed a task force of 31 students and administrators to evaluate the student government system here at Longwood. These 31 task force members have been divided into five different sub-committees: Constitutional Revisions, Consulting Firm, Public Relations, Procedural Revisions, and Training Education.

Committees will meet individually and present final recommendations to the SGA President on March 28. Each committee meets as often as necessary and solicits outside help and opinions. The recommendations of each committee can include opinion as well as facts. The entire project is due for completion on April 15. This will enable SGA to include it in next year's Student Handbook.

The first meeting of the Task Force was held on February 2 in the Virginia Room. The guest speaker during this opening session was Dr. Annette Gibbs of University of Virginia. She elaborated on what the board should look for as the basis of a sound and prosperous judicial system.

Ms. Gibbs stated that the keys to a good system are philosophy and training. However, to make these keys successful you must implement them. The question Ms. Gibbs raised is who implements – the accused? the accusor? or the board?

Ms. Gibbs further discussed that individuals must do their A.B.C. and D's in order to be part of a successful system: A standing for adjudicate, B meaning to believe in the system, C meaning to communicate within the system, and D meaning to delegate some responsibility. In order for individuals to be successful in the judicial system they must concentrate mostly on "believing in the system."

SAM Delegation Impresses Richmond

By PETE WOLLF

From Farmville to the Capital of Virginia, SAM, the Society for the Advancement of Management's – Longwood Chapter is gaining increased influence in the professional organization nationwide.

SAM, which recently sent a delegation to Richmond to meet with the Richmond Chapter, made valuable contacts to further the aggressive goals of the organization. They also set up contacts with the VCU chapter of SAM in order to get input fromdifferent schools.

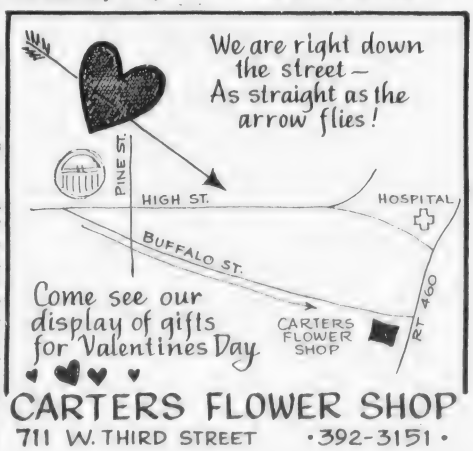
The delegation, which consisted of SAM President, Ann Quattlebaum; Vice President, Keren Rams; Matt Peterman, and Advisor, Julian O'Neal, spent four hours with the Richmond Chapter. The group listened to Robert J. Moore, Director of Community Relations, Philip Morris USA, speak on "The Manager's Role in Community Service."

One important contact made was Ellen Hamilton, who turned out to be a Longwood graduate of 1970. In welcoming the Longwood delegation she stressed the importance of representation of student chapters. A discussion of the SAM National Convention soon followed.

The convention coming up in April is on the schedule of a myriad of other activities SAM will conquer this semester.

Ralph McGill Scholarship Fund

ATLANTA, GA. – The Ralph McGill Scholarship Fund offers scholarships for the 1988-89 school year of up to $2,000 each to students with southern backgrounds who have completed at least two years of college, Jack Tarver, chairman of the scholarship fund said today.



Tarver said May 1st is the deadline for applications. He said a number of scholarships are awarded each year to students who have demonstrated a long-time interest in the news and editorial phase of newspapering.

Scholarships, he said, are limited to those young men and women whose roots lie in the south. Applicants must also convince the Awards Committee that they firmly intend to pursue a career in daily or weekly newspapering. Tarver said the Awards Committee wants to give scholarship to those who are likely to become leaders in the newspaper field.

Successful applicants will be required to maintain a "B" average in order to keep the scholarship.

A letter of not more than 500 words telling why the applicant wants a scholarship, together with a photograph of the applicant, must accompany each application. Applicants also must have a letter of recommendation from a college authority.

Application blanks may be obtained from: The Ralph McGill Scholarship Fund; Box 4689, Atlanta, GA 30302.

Forencis and Debate Tournament

By DEIDRE McKENDRY

An invitational forensics and debate tournament will take place Feb. 12 and 13 at Longwood College.

Anyone with forensics experience is invited to judge or compete. There is also a novice division of the tournament in which anyone in their first year of debating is invited to compete.

The forensics meet's categories include oratory, prose and poetry, extemporaneous, after-dinner speech, impromptu, storytelling, broadcasting, interpretation, duet-acting, and multiple reading. The meet will take place Feb. 12 from 12 to 6 p.m. The debating tournament will take place Feb. 13 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Five hundred people will compete in forensics and two hundred in debating. Twenty four high schools from surrounding areas will attend. The meet will be the largest in the state.

Over one hundred trophies will be awarded. Awards include the sweepstakes award, given to the person winning a division. Team awards are given to the school placing the most students. Individual awards are given to the person winning a category.

Three people from Longwood College are directing the meet: Dr. Nancy Haga, Associate Professor of Speech and Theatre, Gene Kearns, drama department secretary and Longwood student, and Jan Evans, drama department secretary.

Those schools attending will be: Brookville, Monacan, James Wood, Prince Edward, Central of Lunenburg, E.C. Glass, Blacksburg, Heritage, Manchester, L.C. Bird, Huguenot, Drewey Mason, Clover Hill, Bethel, Hopewell, Rustburg, Varina, Orange County, First Colonial, Appomattox, Nottoway, Fieldale-Collinsville, Mills Godwin, Staunton River, Western Albemarle, Norfolk Christian, Prince Edward Academy, William Campbell, Lee Davis, Manchester, Bethel, Broad Run, Fork Union, Douglas Freeman, George Wythe, Rappahannock, Louise, Matoaca, and Lexington High School.

Those Longwood College students working on the meet will be Gene Kerns, student director, Andy Bryan, Jeff Dingeldein, Jennifer Childton, Stephanie Dyer, Heather Herweyer, Angela Lea, Sue Martin, Adrienne Memmoli, Liz Stevens, Amie Tickle, Karen Whitely, Laura Wilson, Beth Lord, Lisa Hanzl, Kerry Laughlin, and Kim Taylor.

If any LC students would like to assist in the judging on Friday afternoon for forensics, or on Saturday for debate, come by the office in Jarman Auditorium or call 392-9361 and talk with Mrs. Jan Evans or Dr. Nancy Haga.

Saturday, the students and administrators attended interest sessions, with topics that ranged from motivation to relaxation.

The most popular interest session appeared to be one presented by Joe McGill and Sue Saunders, entitled "Can I Have Fun and Not Drink?"

In this session, students were asked to plan an event without including alcohol.

The winning non-alcoholic event, as shown by applause, was an assassination game, followed by a "come as you were killed" party.

After dinner, Diane Derrick, Student Activities Assistant for Virginia Beach City Public Schools, spoke on group dynamics.

"Group dynamics are the forces, that are everchanging and complex, that affect a group during its existence," Derrick said.

Derrick went on to explain the factors that affected a group, such as communication between members of the group.

Later that evening, students questioned alumni Paula Clay, Rudy Hull, Sheri Nunn, Benji Smith and Bob Smith on the business world after Longwood.

Saturday night, conference-goers were given their choice of entertainment.

Some students chose the movie "Crocodile Dundee", while others chose Longwood Night at Peabody's, a Virginia Beach nightspot.

At Peabody's, students and administrators alike danced to the sounds of The Willies, a local band.

The conference closed with small-group presentations, where students addressed such issues as trash, dining hall mess, and lack of participation in events at Longwood.

The leadership conference was organized by Mary Kaye Benton and Cindi Harris.

Dos Passos

(1968), Something in the Wind (1971), and Black Mountain Breakdown (1980). Her short story collection is entitled Cakewalk (1980).

In reviewing Family Linen for the Detroit News, Charles Dickinson wrote that Smith "invites the reader in and subtly intoxicates him with the chronicle of a family only slightly more bizarre than most." He concluded that this story of four generations contains "a certain amount of disorder, but that is true of family closets and family linen everywhere."

Smith has been compared to William Faulkner, Carson McCullers, and Flannery O'Connor in recording the "particulars of life" and "the voices that tell her story . . . with perfect mimicry."

In discussing how she captures the rhythm of her characters' speech so well, Smith said: "It's like I hear it all out loud. I write fast, and I almost never revise. I have a sense that I'm sort of transcribing something. But I think about it for years and years first . . . and by the time I write it, it's pretty well thought through."

Smith's first novel was published the year after she received her bachelor's degree from Hollins College. She also has studied at the Sorbonne in Paris.

She received the O. Henry Award in 1979 and again in 1981, the Sir Walter Raleigh Award in 1984, and the North Carolina Award for Literature in 1985.

A member of the English faculty at North Carolina State University since 1981, Smith also has taught at the University of North Carolina. Early in her career, she was a feature writer, film critic, and editor for the Tuscaloosa News in Alabama.

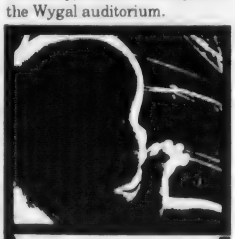
The winner of the John Dos Passos Prize is chosen by an independent jury appointed by Longwood each year. This year's jury included: Dr. Dorothy Scura, biographer, literary critic, and chair of the English department at Virginia Commonwealth University; John Edgar Wideman, recipient of last year's prize, a novelist and member of the English faculty at the University of Massachusetts; and Dr. William Frank, professor of English at Longwood and chair of the prize committee.

Previous recipients of the John Dos Passos Prize include Tom Wolfe, Robert Stone, Doris Betts, and Russell Banks.

American Musicale Auditions

Longwood College's Gamma Kappa chapter of Sigma Alpha Iota is holding auditions for American Musicale on Monday, February 15 at 7 p.m. in Wygal's Molnar Recital Hall.

Anyone on campus may audition. Jennifer Fuller, Gamma Kappa's treasurer says, "People interested can perform a song written by an American composer or a composition they have written themselves."



SAI, an international music fraternity for women, has been on campus for 39 years and has sponsored many similar concerts in the past.

Dana Wheeler, president of Gamma Kappa, says "The musicale gives American composers the chance to have their music performed in front of an audience."

Money raised at the concert through donations will go to some of SAI's national charities. " 'The Bold Note Music Program' and the 'Braille Transcription Project' are just a few of the organizations that will receive this money," adds Fuller.

Wheeler comments, "The American Musicale also celebrates the birthday of the SAI chapter at Longwood."

The musicale will be held on Thursday, March 24 at 8 p.m. in the Wygal auditorium.

HULLABALOO CAN'T STOP THOSE LANCERS

61-53 Win Over Liberty Monday Makes It Five In A Row

It has been written that the last shall be first. The Longwood College men's basketball team, picked last in the Mason-Dixon Conference in pre-season, is well on its way to finishing first.

Longwood survived over 3,000 frenetic fans to beat Liberty in Lynchburg Monday night 61-53, becoming the only Mason-Dixon member to defeat the Flames on their home courts this season. The victory, coming on the heels of a 74-71 win over Pittsburgh-Johnstown Saturday, gives the Lancers a perfect 5-0 mark in the league and a 15-6 ledger overall.

Winners of five straight and eight of their last nine games, the Lancers host Atlantic Christian Wednesday night at 7:30 and visit Pembroke Saturday night, before returning home for the game of the season next Wednesday when MDAC foe Randolph-Macon visits.

As the Longwood bus pulled away from Farmville to head for Lynchburg Monday night, Lancer coach Cal Luther told his team "Okay, now let's go to war!" The coach was right on target in his prediction of what was to come.

In a circus atmosphere of flying toilet paper, fanatic fans and scuffles in the stands and on the court, Liberty and Longwood played a no-holes-barred basketball game which was televised on the Liberty Broadcast Network, a national cable outlet.

LANCER FANS CHEER — Longwood fans had something to cheer about at Liberty Monday night. Flames supporters (bottom) were not so happy.

"We expected this," Luther, referring to the zoo-like atmosphere, told a Lynchburg News reporter. "It (the noise level) was so bad two years ago, we had to hold our timeouts out on the floor so we could hear."

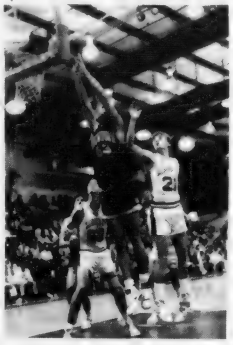
"We were prepared for coming over here. Yesterday (Sunday), I played the video from last year's game at Liberty as loud as I could get it. I turned the volume up totally. It was so loud the players had to hold their ears. Then I told them, 'You won't be able to hear tomorrow.' "

As has been the case since early January, Longwood won the game with its defense. Hampered by foul troubles (6-6 Greg Holloway and 6-8 Doug Poppe had three each in the first half). Longwood went to a zone trap for much of the second half and kept the Flames off-balance.

"We played exceptionally good defense in the second half," said Luther. "We forced Liberty to rush and take some quick shots, and our defense helped create a lot of break situations."

Longwood recorded 10 steals for the game and five in the last 10 minutes of the second half when the outcome was decided. Liberty, which shot 8-34 (23.5 per cent) in the second half, held its last lead at 10:43 on a jumper by Brad Hamersley. A steal by Bobby Dobson started Longwood on a 10-0 run which put the Lancers up 49-40 with 5:52 remaining.

A Poppe jump shot, layups by Dale Shavers and Joe Lowe, another Shavers bucket, and a jumper by Darryl Rutley gave Longwood a lead it would never relinquish.



While the Flames stayed within striking distance, they were never able to get closer than four points the rest of the way. Longwood's biggest lead came at 0:45 on a bucket by Keith Latimer which put Longwood up 60-50.

Longwood won despite hitting just 11 of 29 free throws (37.9 per cent). Liberty didn't do much better at the line, going 11-21.

Lowe came off the bench for 11 points, three assists, a steal, and a block in 17 minutes of action. The 6-1 freshman has also ignited the Lancers with 8 points in an earlier 60-57 win over Liberty in Farmville. He was 8-8 from the floor in the two contests.

It was Lowe who was involved in a "wrestling match" with LU's Charles Richardson with 2:11 remaining. Officials called a double foul, but the play had no impact on the outcome.

Rutley was the game's top scorer with 16 points and Shavers added 12 points, 10 in the second half, and 8 rebounds. Game honors on the boards went to Lancer Greg Holloway with 9 rebounds and 8 points. Poppe added 7 points and Dobson 5 points, four assists and three steals.

TOP REBOUNDER — Lancer Greg Holloway pulled off a game high 9 rebounds and scored 8 points in Monday's 61-53 win at Liberty.

It was Dobson, Poppe and Shavers who led the Lancers to a come-from-behind 74-71 over Pittsburgh-Johnstown Saturday. Dobson, a team sparkplug since regaining his eligibility in January, threw a lob to Poppe for a dunk with 1:08 left and hit two clinching free throws with 20 seconds remaining.

Dobson finished with 11 points, six assists and five steals. Poppe scored 16 of his career high 22 points in the second half and did a solid defensive job on Pitt-Johnstown's Tyrone Doleman. Averaging 26.7 points coming in, Doleman scored 18 Saturday.

Shavers scored 14 of his 18 points in the second half and hit several key outside shots when Longwood roared back from a 48-38 second half deficit. Rutley, despite being shadowed in a box-and-one defense, scored 14 points.

"We're in the midst of our best men's basketball season since 1980-81. The players and coaches have worked extremely hard. Longwood was picked to finish last in the conference, but we're in first place. We're asking everyone to show their support for the team in the final home game of the season."

"Pack The Gym" Feb. 17th

With the combined support of students, faculty, and staff, Longwood College hopes to "Pack The Gym" for the upcoming men's basketball game with Randolph-Macon Wednesday, February 17.

Longwood, which began the week with a 15-6 record and a first place 5-0 Mason-Dixon Conference mark, will play its final home game of the 1987-88 season when the Yellow Jackets come to Farmville next Wednesday. A victory over R-MC would go for a long way toward assuring the Lancers either first in the regular season MDAC standings and favorable seeding in the league tournament March 4-5.

Parents' Night will be observed with the parents of all Lancer Cagers invited to attend. Longwood faculty and staff, who along with students are admitted free, can bring their spouses and children at no charge as well for this special game. Contestants in the 1988 Miss Longwood Pageant will be introduced at halftime.

"It will be quite an accomplishment if the entire Longwood community can pull together and fill Lancer Hall," said Longwood sports information director Hoke Currie. "The only time that Lancer Hall has been filled previously was when "The Bangles" came to Farmville in the fall of 1986.

STATE CHAMP WRESTLERS HERE SATURDAY

By SONYA HUGHES

Longwood College, the 1987 state champ, will host the 1988 Virginia College Division Wrestling Championships this weekend. Action begins Saturday morning at 8:30 a.m. with the finals scheduled to begin at 2 p.m.

The six schools in this year's tournament are Ferrum, Liberty, Longwood, Newport News Apprentice, Norfolk State, and Virginia State. Awards will be given to the team championship and runner-up, the individual champions and first two runners-up, and to the Most Outstanding Wrestler of the tournament.

While Longwood is defending champ in the tourney, a strong Liberty squad is the favorite to take the 1988 crown. Returning to defend their individual titles are Lancer 134 pounder John Stukes and Virginia State 177-pounder Billy Wamsley.

LANCERS GRAB DUAL WINS

Longwood grabbed dual wins in action last Tuesday night, defeating Ferrum and Wilkes Community College by scores of 53-6 and 26-15, respectively. The Lancers took a 6-8 record into Wednesday's match against Washington and Lee.

Double winners for the Lancers were 150-pounder Tommy Gilbert, now 17-17 overall, 167-pounder Tim Mason, and heavyweight Jesus Strauss, now 19-8 overall.

John Stukes upped his season record to 27-3-1 with a pin over WCC's Wade Collins. Other wrestlers who won by a pin include: Eion Kelley, Joey Azero, Scott Hovermale, and Kevin West.

Ted Proctor, Dave Taylor, and Doug Hartley each accumulated a win by decision. Paul Rafferty and Andy Mautner, both win 1-1 for the night.

Player Of The Week

Junior guard Bobby Dobson and sophomore center Doug Poppe have been named Longwood College Players of the Week for the period January 31 through February 7. The duo played key roles in leading the Lancers to a 74-71 win over Pittsburgh-Johnstown Saturday afternoon. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

Dobson, who is averaging 7.6 points, 5 assists, and 3.6 steals per game, had 11 points, 6 assists and 5 steals in Saturday's victory. He also teamed up with the Poppe on "the play of the game."

MASTER PASSER — Lancer Bobby Dobson sets up a teammate (out of picture right) in win over Liberty.

An exceptionally skilled passer, Dobson threw a lob to Poppe for a dunk which gave Longwood a 72-69 lead with 1:08 remaining. The 5-11 guard then hit both ends of a one-and-one with 20 seconds left to clinch the victory.

Since rejoining the team in January, Dobson has helped Longwood roll up 8 wins in 10 games for an overall 15-6 record and first place in the Mason-Dixon Conference at 5-0. He is a graduate of Flint Hill Prep.

Poppe scored a career high 22 points in the win over UPJ Saturday with 16 coming in the second half when Longwood rallied from a 48-38 deficit to take the win. The 6-8 cager also had seven rebounds.

In his first year as a starter, Poppe is averaging 12.4 points and 6.2 rebounds and has hit 59.7 per cent of his shots from the floor. He also leads Longwood in blocked shots with 14. Poppe is a graduate of Osbourn Park High School.

Shavers Proving To Be A "Big Man" On The Boards

By MARK KIRK

When followers of basketball discuss the common strengths of a guard, they usually speak of passing, ball handling, and occasional scoring.

Rebounding is not mentioned in the same breath as these very often. However, Dale Shavers of the Longwood men's basketball team is blessed enough to be able to excel in all four areas.

Shavers, a sophomore from Savannah, Georgia, has teamed with Doug Poppe and Greg Holloway to form a strong trio of rebounders, while individually excelling in other areas.

Only 6'-3", Shavers has shown the ability to outrebound many of the opposing forwards and centers who have come to Lancer Hall this season. According to him, the main key to grabbing a lot of rebounds is to get better position near the basket than the opponent's big men.

"Blocking out the other team's big men is my goal when I'm trying for rebounds," says Shavers, who averages around 5 rebounds per game. "It is important to get them out of the way because they are expected to grab most of the boards."

Shavers accomplished this goal and more against two of the tallest teams in the Mason-Dixon Conference, Liberty and Mount Saint Mary's. In the two contests, he pulled down 9 and 11 rebounds, respectively.

In addition to his rebounding, Shavers has also excelled in the scoring column this year. Along with junior forward Darryl Rutley, he has been one of the Lancers' top outside shooters and 3-point threats.

Shavers has also become a major inside threat since his move from point guard to shooting guard at mid-season. The change has freed him from the "passing first, shooting second" attitude that is often pinned on a point guard, and has allowed him to become more aggressive on offense.

He also feels the move is important for the team because it allows the lightning-quick Bobby Dobson to play the point and places others in their correct positions.

"The change has allowed Darryl Rutley and myself to move to the positions we are accustomed to playing," explained Shavers, who is averaging around 12 points per game. "Moreover, it puts Bobby Dobson in the game more and he likes to make us run as often as possible."

All of the changes in the Lancers' lineup have also catapulted the squad to first place in the Mason-Dixon Conference. Shavers considers the season a success thus far with a couple moments standing out in his mind.

"Beating Liberty and Mount Saint Mary's was important to us because they were considered possibly the top two teams in the conference," he said. "Many teams had not expected us to do much this year because we were picked last in preseason."

The success enjoyed by the Lancers this year is nothing new to Shavers. In his two years at Savannah High School, his team had a combined record of 58-6 and made it to the Georgia State Tournament both years.

Moreover, he was named Regional Tournament most valuable player and team most improved player during his senior season. After his final season at Savannah, Shavers made his commitment to the Longwood basketball program.

"My high school coach influenced me to come to Longwood. He knew Coach Luther and he helped to lead me here," said Shavers, who was named to the Par Bill's Tip-Off Tournament Team this year.

He has not been disappointed with the school thus far, as evidenced by his statement that, "I am very pleased with Longwood College and I enjoy playing here."

Gymnastics Saturday

Longwood's women's gymnastics team resumes action after a one-week breathing spell, hosting Division I William & Mary Saturday at 7 in Lancer Hall.

Longwood, 1-5, lost its last meet at Maryland Baltimore County January 30, 172.7 to 164.0. The Lancers have been led by freshmen Cindy Shelton and Teri Dore in their last two meets.

The week off gave the Lancers a chance to sharpen routines in several events and especially bars. William & Mary will provide Longwood with another stiff test. The Tribe has one of its strongest teams.

Lady Hoopsters: 2 out of 3, Not Bad

Friday at 7:30 Liberty Here

The Lady Lancers beat Wofford 80-61 last Monday, Ferrum 88-73 Thursday and fell at nationally ranked Pittsburgh-Johnstown 79-62 Saturday despite a determined effort.

Now 10-10 overall and 2-4 in the Mason-Dixon, the Lady Lancers trailed UPJ by just 49-44 with 13:35 left Saturday. Longwood, however, went over four minutes without scoring as the Lady Cats took a 55-44 edge.

"We had some poor shot selection and turnovers during the cold spell," said LC coach Shirley Duncan. "You simply can't afford to have those kinds of lapses against a team as strong as UPJ. We played them tough and had a good team effort."

Pitt-Johnstown upped its record to 15-2 overall and 4-1 in the league behind 33 points from Sally Mosay.

Jill Everett scored 14 points and grabbed 8 rebounds, and Angee Middleton came off the bench to score 15 in Saturday's defeat.

Six Longwood cagers scored in double figures in Thursday's win at Ferrum. Middleton had 11 points, Annette Easterling, Carmille Barnette and Barbie Burton scored 12 and India Walton and Sandy Rawdon had 10 each.

Barnette pulled down a career high 16 rebounds for the Lady Lancers and Burton added 10 caroms.

While freshman guard Ann Callaham appears to be on the mend from a neck injury, junior Kita Chambers had knee surgery Monday and will miss the rest of the season. Chambers, averaging six points and 5.9 rebounds, had been slowed by the knee problem since the beginning of the season.

WLCX Looking For Local Bands To Promote

By STUART LONOMIUS
(staffus extramus)

The Longwood College Radio Association, WLCX, has a proposition for student bands of the Farmville/Hampden-Sydney area: You play, we publicize.

"What we plan," stated Station General Manager, Cathy Gaughran," is to sponsor a band every three or four weeks." Arrangements have been made through Student Union advisor Paul Striffolino to stage these concerts in Lankford's Gold Room.

Publicity for the concerts will be funded and distributed by WLCX, and will include radio announcements, flyers around Longwood and Hampden-Sydney campuses, and a band 'profile' in The Rotunda the week before the band's performance.

"The purposes we hope to fulfill with this program," explained Gaughran, "are to give up-and-coming bands in the area an audience to play for, and to provide an opportunity for everyone to have some fun."

Bands need not be formal, official groups: "If a couple of people who just jam together once in a while feel like going public with their sound, we want to get them out there!"

Working around the presently scheduled uses of the Lankford Building, these concerts will most likely be held on Sunday afternoons/evenings.

The Student Union has also agreed to allow bands that do not have their own amps, etc. to use the Student Union equipment: have guitar, will travel.

"This thing has the potential to be quite a blast", commented GM Gaughran; "Don't be shy, you musicians out there! We hope to present a variety of music types, and will try anything once."

Musicians interested in more information on playing the Gold Room sometime this semester should contact The Series of Neophyte Bands, c/o LC Box 381, or call 392-7391.

24 Hr. Quiet Restrictions Reviewed

'Students aren't going for the idea."

By MONIQUE VOEHRINGER
and
DINA SCHIANO

The administration of Longwood College has enacted a new law, 24 hours of quiet hours, Monday through Friday. Now that the new law has been in effect for a little over a week, a few students were polled on their opinion of the law.

The question was asked... "How do you feel about 24 hours of quiet Monday through Friday?"

Gretchen Eby, a resident of Curry replied, "I agree there needs to be a certain amount of quiet hours, but I don't find 24 hours necessary because after attending classes all day, students need to unwind."

Student Angela Loftis stated this about the law; I think it's a ridiculous idea: they had a hard enough time enforcing the quiet hours as they were." Angela is also a resident of Curry.

Tammy Mueller added, "Students will go wild on the weekends after being so restrained all week."

Eric Killinger stated his disaproval by saying, "It's an awful proposal we need some time to unwind and get our minds off school work."

Pam Brust said , "If RA's would have just enforced the quiet hours we had before, there would be no need for 24 hours."

Tom Thacker resident of Cox dorm stated, "I think a lot of people will be written up. Many students aren't going for the idea."

Tina Bebe, an RA on seventh floor Curry, is pleased with the idea, "I think it's great – I'm tired of having to walk upstairs to tell other floors to turn down their music."

There you have it, a wide range of opinions. Wait and see if students get together to try to change the quiet hours law.

American Poet to visit Longwood

Wednesday at 8 P.M.

By MICHELE CIPOLLETTI

Poet/Translator Robert Bly will be speaking on Wednesday, February 17, at 8 p.m. in Wygal Auditorium at Longwood College.

Bly will be reading selected poems from his many works. He has been a published poet for 20 to 25 years with such publishers as Harper and Row.

ROBERT BLY

Bly comes to us from Minnesota. He is considered a surrealistic writer because he is concerned with psychology and dreams. He is also an international poet who has translated European and Russian poems.

Bly is an outspoken critic of the Vietnam War. In 1968 he won the National Book award for "The Light Around the Body." He refused the $1,000 prize that the award included and put the money toward the draft resistance movement.

Dr. Craig Challender, English Professor, says that Bly is a dramatic speaker who often wears masks and performs with a zither.

The Gyre will be selling copies of three of Bly's books following the presentation. These books range in price from $5 to $10. There will also be a reception sponsored by the Literary Honor Fraternity, Lambda Iota Tau.

To the Editor

Walter Mondale was recently quoted as saying of presidential campaigns that "All the emphasis is on marketing and not substance. It's all mass media, the shtik, the "where's the beef' kind of thing." Truer words were never spoken about politics.

Americans elect their presidents the same way they buy their breakfast cereal, whichever 'brand' has the flashiest commercials is the one that finds its way to the check-out counter. As a matter of fact, presidential hopefuls are starting to be better at the 'appeal to the consumer' game than manufacturers — just think what Donna Rice could've done for Capt'n Crunch's salability!

Not many people feel confident that they buy the right toothpaste or shampoo — how do they ever expect to buy the right president?

Speaking of marketing of the presidency, have you seen Reagan lately? Finally getting a little grey around the edges there, isn't he? And just in time for November. They're going to make sure that Ol' Rip Van Winkle looks like he's been through hell right towards the end.

Don't you buy it for a minute!

Dear Editor,

We study at an institution that upholds an Honor Code. This Honor Code trusts that the people of Longwood College will not lie, cheat, steal, or engage in any other activity that will hurt other members of our college.

However, Inter–Varsity Christian Fellowship faces heavy financial responsibility due to the theft of a borrowed Longwood College VCR. IVCF is several hundred dollars short of what it needs to pay for the VCR.

IVCF serves as many as 150 people in the form of weekly large group meetings, small Bible study groups, and daily prayer group sessions as well as volleyball games and other social activities. Please do not force hardship on such a valuable organization to our campus. Return the VCR:

Japanese Will Be Offered

By CHERYL JEFFREY

Since the United States deals with Japan in many affairs, it is a benefit for Americans to learn the Japanese language.

Beginning-level courses in Japanese will be offered at Longwood in the fall. Dr. John Reynolds, head of the International Studies Program here, explains that teaching Japanese will benefit the business majors, who may conduct business dealings with the Japanese, and will provide an opportunity to expand one's cultural knowledge.

Fumiko Kinjo, who has taught Japanese as a second language for eight years, will be Longwood's Japanese professor. She currently works as a Japanese professor for the Hokkaido Foundation of Tokyo, which has arranged for her to teach here.

Due to the difficulty of learning written Japanese, Kinjo will be teaching only conversational Japanese using the Jordan method. Developed by Dr. Elenora Jordan of Cornell University, this method is designed to teach basic conversational Japanese within six months.

Japanese courses that have been offered at other colleges have proven successful. For example, Mary Baldwin College began their program in 1983. Dr. Daniel Metraux is their professor.

While speaking at one of his recent lectures at Longwood, Metraux said that of the 670 students at Mary Baldwin, approximately 65 students are enrolled in Japanese during any given semester. In addition, these students usually continue their study of Japanese for two years. After graduating, many of these students go into private industry and business and may deal directly with the Japanese.

Dr. Metraux also mentioned a Washington Post article a few years ago that stated that graduates with advanced courses in Japanese, combined with other skills, may enter certain jobs with a starting salary near $30,000. This shows that Japanese will not only provide cultural enhancement, it may also be beneficial in the job market.

For Longwood students who choose to enroll in Japanese, Mrs. Kinjo will provide an enjoyable and educational look at the language and culture of Japan.

Minority Affairs To Tutor

By SHERI LYNN STANFORD

The office of Minority Affairs is offering free tutoring for the spring semester.

Theresa A. Clark, Director of Minority Affairs, states that "the tutorial services are offered to minority students to enhance their academic performance."

Several students have already taken advantage of this service and have set-up regular schedules for weekly tutorial sessions.

The Minority Affairs office was established to help meet the advising, counseling and academic needs of minority students at Longwood.

The tutorial services are "only one of the programs presently being developed to meet the needs of Longwood's minority students in hopes of keeping them here and out of academic difficulty," says Clark.

Other programs Minority Affairs is currently involved in are it's Black History Month celebration featuring various programs throughout the month of February, and The Summit, a newsletter published each semester for students, faculty, and staff of Longwood College.

The Minority Affairs office is in need of tutors in various subjects and encourages more students to take advantage of this free service.

Minority Affairs is located in 122 West Ruffner and is open 8-5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Nofziger, Olympics, and Last Meeting South of the Border

By MATT PETERMAN

Former Reagan Administration Political Director, Lyn Nofziger, was convicted last Thursday on 3 counts of influence peddling. Peddling senior White House officials, mainly Ed Meese concerning the now defunk Wedtech corporation.

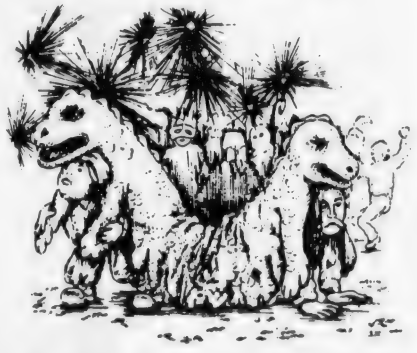
Prosecuted for violating the Ethics in Government Act of 1978. This law prohibits such lobbying of former associates on matters once dealt with in government for at least one year.

Nofziger is the second White House chum convicted in less than two months, behind Michael Deaver, formerly Deputy White House Chief of Staff. Nofziger faces a maximum sentence of six years and a $30,000 fine. He is appealing the verdict.

The XV Winter Olympics opened in Calgary, Canada, with the Olympic flame being lit by 12-year-old Robyn Perry, last Saturday. For nearly 1800 athletes from 57 countries, the biggest ever assembled for the winter games, they were finally going to compete in what they trained so hard for.

It was the beginning of sixteen days of competition that will feature 10 medal sports. The United States pulled off a victory against Austria, in the ice hockey competition. Other sports that will take place are Alpine Skating, Ski Jumping, Luge, Speed Skating, and Figure Skating.

In what should be their last meeting, President Reagan and Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid met in Mazatlan, Mexico to discuss a myriad of issues.



They spoke to improvement of economic and law enforcement relations between the two nations. On Central America, a spot the leaders don't see eye to eye they agreed to disagree.

On the subject of drugs, the two nations agreed to cooperate more to curb the massive trafficking that occurs between the two borders.

Don't Wait To Use CRC

By NANCY RUFF

Although the entire student body may have heard of the Career Resource Center (CRC), few students actually use it. Student Assistant Peggy Robertson, a Sophomore, estimates that only 25 percent take advantage of its services. Robertson adds, "The majority of those are seniors at the last minute."

The center, located on the 2nd floor of South Ruffner, is part of the Office of Career Planning and Placement (OCPP), It can help students with such problems such as choosing a major, changing one, applying to graduate schools and getting a job.

The freshman year is a good time to become acquainted with the CRC. Section 1, called Self Assessment is the perfect start for new students. Eight sections follow, all aimed at helping the student in his or her career search.

SIGI PLUS, a computerized career guidance system, aids with self awareness and connecting interests with jobs. The computer also gives job and skills descriptions.

Easy instructions guide the student through each step and will put the most computer-anxious persons at ease. A member of the OCPP staff will also help if needed.

Section 1 also contains a microfiche with current job listings throughout the state. Each occupation is outlined in detail, including physical requirements, working conditions and equipment used.

In addition, there is a small library in the section with self-help books on assertiveness, self-confidence, values and decision making. One well-known book, "When I Say No, I Feel Guilty", is very helpful with assertiveness. Students may check-out books through a member of the OCPP staff.

Secretary Linda Davenport says, "The OCPP staff is happy to help you with your career plans and job placement from 8:15 to 5 Monday through Friday."

Coming Out Of The Closet

Professor George D. Greenia from the College of William and Mary will be giving a seminar Wednesday, February 17, at 7 p.m. in the Gold Room on Breaking the Silence, Talking about Gays.

Greenia is a professor of Spanish and Medieval Studies, and a well-known lecturer on homoxexuality, history and morals. Professor Greenia is also chairman of the Catholic Diocesan Commission on Sexual Minorities, author of the book Homosexuality and Morality: A Guide for Educators, and faculty advisor for the Gay Student Support Group at William and Mary.

CATALINAS More Than A Club

By ALISON MILLER

Longwood's synchronized swimming club, the Catalinas, are working hard to turn out good performances as well as having a winning season. Although the Catalinas are still considered a club, they do participate in meets within the area. In fact, they placed first second and third in their age divisions last year. The reason that they cannot be considered a team is because they must travel to compete and they do not have the funding to participate in meets out of state, even though synchronized swimming is an official Olympic sport.

Synchronized swimming is a sport in which the movements of one or more swimmers are synchronized with a musical accompaniment so as to form changing patterns. Many people confuse synchronized swimming with water ballet. They are similar, yet water ballet is more floaty and prettier, while synchronized swimming consists more of strength, noise, agility and execution. There is also much more time spent under water. The Catalinas make up their routines at the beginning of the year and work and improve on them throughout the season. Their members are Amy O'Donnell, who participated in the 1984 Olympic trials, Heidi Greenberg, Anne Underhill, Diane Sage, Stephanie McMillan, Wendy Nenninger, Mary Ellen Andrews and Lisa Gallego. Sara Bingham coaches them every Monday through Thursday from 4-5:30 p.m. They are a strong and close team, yet they need more swimmers. Says Heidi, a member of three years, "I really enjoy it a lot. All you need is to be a strong swimmer and you can learn the rest." Those interested are encouraged to contact Sara Bingham of the P.E. department.

This weekend they will be hosting a meet here at Longwood on Saturday the 13. There will be sixty swimmers in all including teams from West Virginia, the University of Richmond and other area schools. All are welcome to come and watch. They will also be presenting their annual spring show March 30 and April 2.

Chemist Looks At Shroud Of Turin

"A Chemist Looks at the Shroud of Turin" is the title of a lecture at Longwood College on Friday, February 19, at 8 p.m. in Lecture Room 118 of Stevens Hall.

The speaker is Dr. Brian W. Moores, associate professor of chemistry at Randolph-Macon College. His lecture is open to the public at no charge.

The Shroud of Turin is a sheet of white linen fabric that bears the faint negative image of a male human figure. It has been in the possession of the Archbishop of Turin in Italy since 1576.

The Shroud is an object of veneration by Roman Catholic Christians, many of whom believe it is the burial shroud of Jesus of Nazareth.

A team of scientists visited Turin in 1977 and carried out numerous physical and chemical analyses of the Shroud to determine how the image might have been produced. Moores will discuss results and implications of these analyses.

A native of Maine, Moores is a graduate of Bates College, with M.S. and Ph.D. degrees in physical chemistry from the University of Illinois. He has taught at the University of Hartford, George Washington University, and Oglethorpe University.

A member of Randolph-Macon's faculty since 1980, Moores is on sabbatical leave this year and is doing research at the University of Virginia.

His lecture at Longwood is part of the program for the monthly meeting of the Virginia Section, American Chemical Society.

New Geisters

Geist '87 is proud to announce the tapping of the 1988 Geist members: Laura Bentti Janet Bryant, secretary; Kelly Coggsdale, president; Cathy Gaughran, Co publicity chair; Tracy Glade, vice president; Tim Hale, Biergarten chair; Susan Hilton, Co publicity chair; Scott Koenigsberg, Mike Sheffield, Co Midway chair; Ricky Stanfield, Co Midway chair; and Toni Taylor, Treasurer.

Computer Course

Dr. Allen Breckenridge, the Episcopal Chaplain for Longwood and Hampden-Sydney, will teach a basic computer course. Entitled "Introduction to MacIntosh Computing," the course will begin the first week of March. Students will have hands-on experience with MacIntoshes and receive basic instruction in word processing, graphics, and data base systems, as well as be introduced to the variety of applications available in the Hypercard system. Interested persons should contact the Continuing Studies Office for details.

Application Due

The Activities Funds Committee purpose is to allocate seed money to recognized student organizations who wish to provide a campus wide program of activity. Through the allocation of funds, more campus wide activities will procure involvement in Longwood College.

If you are interested in sitting on this committee, you may pick up an application in the Student Union Office. Applications are due by Tuesday, February 16 at 1:00 p.m. to BOX 1115. No more than two students may represent the same organization.

If you are interested in obtaining funds, the ACTIVITIES FUNDS COMMITTEE will be reviewing requests on Tuesday, February 16th and March 1st at 1:30 p.m. in Lankford. An application to "request" funds may also be obtained in the Student Union Office.

GEIST Scholarship

Do you feel that you deserve a reward for your accomplishments at Longwood? GEIST is offering a scholarship to rising sophomores and juniors on the basis of involvement, G.P.A., and need. If you are an active freshman or sophomore, don't delay in picking up a scholarship application in the information office. Deadline March 2.

Garth Newel Trio to perform

The Garth Newel Trio will give the next concert in Longwood College's Chamber Music Series on Monday evening, February 22, at 8 o'clock in Wygal Auditorium.

The ensemble is the resident trio of the Garth Newel Music Center, located in a beautiful mountain setting near Hot Springs. It is Virginia's only center devoted exclusively to the performance of chamber music.

Members of the trio are: Arlene Di Cecco, violin; Luca Di Cecco, cello; and Paul Nitsch, piano. They play a wide repertoire of chamber music spanning three centuries.

Their program at Longwood will feature: Beethoven's "Archduke" – Trio in B-flat Major, Op. 97; Schumann's Fantasiestucke, Op. 88; and Mendelssohn's Trio in C Minor, Op. 66.

Longwood's Chamber Music Series is sponsored by the Department of Visual and Performing Arts. Funding for the Garth Newel Trio's concert is provided by the Longwood Arts Council, with a matching grant from the Virginia Commission for the Arts.

The concert and a reception following it are open to the public at no charge.

Grease is the word!

By DEIRDRE McKENDRY

The musical Grease will be presented February 25, 26, and 27 at Jarman Auditorium at 8 p.m. There will be a matinee for high school students February 24 at 10 a.m.

Grease is a take-off of the 1950's teen scene a comedy and romance. It takes place in 1959 at Rydell High. The story centers on two groups of students, the Pink Ladies and the Burger Palace Boys. The main characters are Sandy and Danny.

The Pink Ladies are a "cool" group of girls who hand out with the "cool" Burger Palace Boys. Sandy is a new girl at Rydell High. The Pink Ladies think Sandy is a "nerd" after she gets sick from one cigarette. Her initiation into the Pink Ladies becomes a failure.

Sandy had a summer affair with Danny, leader of the Burger Palace Boys. They meet again at Rydell high on the first day of school. When Danny is cool to Sandy in front of his friends, Sandy thinks he doesn't care for her. For this misunderstanding, they split. However, Danny was cool because he didn't want the others to think she was "that kind of girl". He really loves her because she's just a nice girl.

When Rizzo, tough leader of the Pink Ladies, thinks she's pregnant by her boyfriend Kinickie, second-in-command of the Burger Palace Boys, Sandy offers her sympathy.

Rizzo calls her "Miss Goody-Goody" and tells her to stop offering her "sympathy crap."

After Rizzo's tonguelashing, Sandy (in tears) thinks she should change her image since she thinks others only think of her as a goody-goody. the line in her solo, "Can't they see the tears through my smile" reveals her true feelings.

Sandy really loves Danny too, so she's willing to chance for him. They get back together at the end after Sandy emerges as a cool "Greaser Girl."

The book, lyrics, and music for Grease are by Jim Jacobs and Warren Casey. The musical premiered on February 14, 1972 at the Eden Theatre in New York City.

Patton Lockwood, Professor of Speech and Theatre, says the Broadway version of Grease has "more bite to it" than the 1978 movie. Dr. Lockwood will direct Grease. He will train the actors and coordinate the play. Thom Williams will train the singers. Bruce Montgomery, Associate Professor of Music and Program Director, will rehearse and conduct the orchestra. Tammy Tipton-Nay will train the dancers.

Carla Lockhart will play Sandy and Scott Koenigsberg will play Danny. Melanie Moore will play Rizzo. Craig Brumbrach will play Kinickie.

Longwood student admission is free with I.D. General admission is $5.00.

For the past two weeks the Longwood Ambassadors have been dialing for dollars in the 1988 Alumni Annual Fund. In all, the Ambassadors have contacted 2001 donors for $51,760 in pledges.

The top callers each night are based on the total amount of increased dollars.

The top callers for both the first and second weeks of calling are as follows: Monday, Matt Sisk and Betsy Chalfant; Tuesday, Penny Dodson and Tim Hale; Wednesday, Stacey Thompson and Jim Brown; Thursday Beth Camillo and Terry Gabbert.

The caller of the week for week one was Penny Dodson, week 2's top caller was Jim Brown.

The Ambassadors would like to thank all telefund supporters.

Edmonson wins award

"Clay Basket," a stoneware vessel by Randy Edmonson, of Farmville, has received the "Best in Show, Juror's Choice" award at the 26th Contemporary Crafts Exhibition at the Delaware Art Museum in Wilmington.

Edmonson is an associate professor of art at Longwood College where he has taught ceramics, crafts, painting, and design since 1979.

"Clay Basket" is one of a series of recent pots by Edmonson influenced by aerial photographs. Edmonson draws on and stamps textures into the surfaces of wet clay vessels. The resulting "landscapes" are enhanced by a variety of subtle colors produced when the pots are fired to 1,500 degrees in a salt-vapor atmosphere.

Edmonson's ceramic vessels and paintings have been shown in more than 75 exhibitions in the U.S. and Europe. His work is included in the permanent collections of several museums and in numerous private collections.

During the past two years, Edmonson's ceramic work has been selected for the following juried competitions: "Clay U.S.A.;" "Salt Glaze '86" in Koblenz, Germany; "Spotlight '87: Southeast Crafts," the annual exhibition of the Southeast Region/American Crafts Council; "Materials Hard and Soft," a national craft competition in Denton, Texas; and the 1987 Wichita Crafts National.

Longwood Gymnasts End Home Season

By MICHAEL K. PHILLIPS

On Saturday evening, the Longwood gymnastics team ended its 1987-88 home season by hosting the NCAA Division I College of William and Mary and was defeated 170.70-176.65. But, it was a night that will be remembered forever in the minds of some LC gymnasts.

The night began with coach Budd offering a brief message of praise to Longwood's senior co-captain Tammy Zeller who competed for the last time in Lancer Hall. Budd made a point of the fact that Zeller is the only gymnast ever at Longwood to be voted by her teammate as captain for three years. Zeller made her final appearance in Farmville a memorable one as she earned scores ranging for 8.3-8.75 and finished with an all-around score of 34.05.

GYMNASTS SHINE BRIGHTLY — Longwood's gymnasts scored their top point total of the season Saturday night in a loss to William & Mary. A Lancer performs on beam in above photo.

Longwood's up and coming freshman Cindy Shelton, who may be LC's most consistent performer, recorded the third best floor exercise score in the school's history when she received a 9.1 for her efforts. Shelton placed fourth all-around with a 34.4. Another consistent freshman for LC has been Terri Dore who posted a 34.0 in the all-around competition. Dore's 8.65 on balance beam ties the third best score for that event in school history.

As all good athletes do, they set goals for themselves. As all great athletes do, they surpass them. On a night where Lynda Chenoweth was striving for a 34.0 in the all-around competition she received a 35.0. On her way, the junior co-captain set a new Longwood record of 9.1 on the uneven bars. The previous Longwood record on bars was 9.0 set by Kelly Strayer in 1985. Chenoweth's all-around score of 35.0 ties the school record set by Lisa Zuraw in 1986.

Field Hockey Coaches Cite Strickland For Academics

Longwood senior field hockey player Traci Strickland is one of 70 student-athletes recognized by the College Field Hockey Coaches Association as an all-America in academic excellence, according to a recent issue of The NCAA News.

Strickland was named to the Division I team along with other Division I and II stickers who have maintained at least a 3.50 grade- point average. A four-year starter at right wing, Strickland has a 3.71 academic average and is majoring in foreign language.

She was picked to the All-District III GTE-CoSIDA Academic All-America At-Large team last year. Longwood's career leader in assists, Strickland had a record nine assists and eight goals for the 13-6-1 Lady Lancer hockey squad last fall.

Grapplers Capture Championship

By SONYA HUGHES

Longwood totaled 74.75 points to beat favored Virginia State (73) for the state crown.

Ted Proctor, 150 pounds, was voted the Most Outstanding Wrestler in the competition.

Eion Kelley, 126 pounds, won his matches 4-0 and 12-7 to take first in his weight class. His record is an impressive 22-8.

John Stukes, 134 pounds, won several close matches to take first in his class, winning a state title for the second year in a row. Stukes won his matches by scores of 3-2 and 17-1. He won by beating his opponent in the finals 1-0 in overtime. Stukes' season record is now 31-3-1.

Doug Hartley pinned both of his opponents to win at 190 pounds and improved his overall record to 20-8.

"The two freshmen, Proctor and Hartley, did very well," boasted Nelson.

Tommy Gilbert, 142 pounds, and Jesus Strauss, heavyweight, each finished second in their weight class.

Lady Lancers Win Two

With four wins in its last five games, Longwood's women's basketball team notched victories over Randolph-Macon 85-77 Tuesday and Liberty 95-88 Friday to clinch third place in the regular season Mason-Dixon Conference standings and a first round bye in the league tournament March 3-5 at Randolph-Macon.

Longwood, now 12-10 overall and 4-4 in the conference, visits Atlantic Christian Tuesday and North Carolina Wesleyan Thursday, before hosting Ferrum Saturday night at 7:00 in what will be the final home appearance for four seniors. Guards Angie Hill and Annettee Easterling, center Barbie Burton, and forward Jill Everett will be playing their last game in Lancer Hall Saturday night.

All four are starters on the current Lady Lancer edition. Both four-year members of the Longwood squad, Burton has accumulated 441 rebounds and 471 points in her career, and Hill has piled up 516 points and 156 assists. Easterling scored 283 points and handed off 127 assists in three seasons and Everett has scored 339 points and grabbed 195 rebounds in two years. Parent-Senior Night will be observed Saturday with special pre-game ceremonies for the four seniors and their parents.

Cat-Quick Dobson Helps Lancers To The Top

By MARK KIRK

During the past few years, professional and college basketball teams have been looking for players under six feet to guide their squads.

Players like "Spud" Webb and Tyrone Bogues have brought along success for their teams and entertainment for the fans despite being labeled as marginal prospects.

In his third year with Longwood, he has used his speed, ball handling, and passing to frustrate opposing defenders and help his teammates to several easy baskets. He feels that the fast break is a key ingredient in his game, but will only use it when he feels it will help the team.

"I like to run and get out on the break. Coach Luther expects me to run, but he also expects me to make good decisions. Being the point guard, he wants me to be sort of a coach on the court," says Dobson.

The man that Dobson replaced at point guard, Dale Shavers, is now his teammate in the backcourt at shooting guard. Dobson feels that it is a good combination and is working out well.

While Dobson's insertion into the starting lineup coincided with the Lancers' long winning streak, he is quick to point out that he is not the sole reason for the string. He believes that the total team's attitude toward the second half of the season is what got everything started.

"It really began around the time of the road trip to Florida. We had lost some players, so we had a meeting and decided to play hard every game no matter what happened," said Dobson, who scored 13 points and handed out 9 assists in a game against Eckerd on the trip. "After that meeting, the season really turned around."

Dobson is used to playing hard and winning most of his game, having played prep ball at Flint Hill Prep. During his career at the nationally famous school, he was able to face many of the top players in the country, both in practice and in games.

"My senior year (at Flint Hill) was the most exciting. We went to a tournament in Las Vegas, and I got to play against some of the top point guards in the country like Quinn Snyder (now at Duke) and "Poo" Richardson (now at UCLA)", said Dobson.

"We want to win our league this year, and break into the Division II Top 20. Moreover, we want to go to the NCAA Tournament this year," explained Dobson.

As long as Dobson continues to sparkle on the court, who knows what the Lancers could do this year.

Player Of The Week

LYNDA CHENOWETH

TED PROCTOR

A record-breaking junior gymnast and a freshman wrestler who was named Most Outstanding in the Virginia College Division Tournament share the Longwood College Player of the Week award for the week of February 7-14. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

Co-captain Lynda Chenoweth broke the Longwood record for bars with a 9.1 and tied the LC mark for all-around score with a 35.0 Saturday night in a gymnastics meet with Division I William and Mary. Chenoweth helped Longwood record its highest team score of the season, a 170.7. The mark was also the second highest ever by a Lancer squad.

In setting the new bars record Chenoweth topped the previous standard of 9.0 which Kelly Strayer was awarded in 1985. The 35.0 all-around score tied the mark set by Lisa Zuraw in 1986.

Freshman 150-pounder Ted Proctor won his weight class in the Virginia College Division Wrestling Tournament Saturday and led Longwood to its second straight team title. Now 19-10-1 overall, Proctor recorded two pins and was voted Most Outstanding Wrestler in the event.

The first-year grappler also nabbed a title at the Winston-Salem State Tournament in November and was second in two other tournaments: Newport News Apprentice and Washington and Lee.

Proctor, who picked up a pin in Longwood's 36-8 victory over Washington and Lee last week, is a graduate of Osbourn High School. He was runner-up in the State Tournament two years in high school.

Lancers Can Clinch Tie For Title

When Longwood hosts Randolph-Macon Wednesday night for a men's basketball contest in Lancer Hall, LC fans will have a chance to witness one of the most important regular season games in the history of men's basketball here.

With a victory over R-MC, Longwood can clinch a tie for its first conference crown ever. The Lancers are currently 5-0 in the Mason-Dixon Conference. In addition, the Yellow Jackets are one of several teams competing with the Lancers for a berth in the NCAA Division II Basketball Tournament at season's end. A win Wednesday night will help LC move one step closer to the NCAA Playoffs.

Wednesday will also be the final regular season home game for the 1987-88 edition of the Lancers, Parent's Night, and Pack The Gym Night. All Longwood students, faculty and staff have been asked to make a special effort to attend the game and root the Lancers to their 18th win of the season against just six losses.

Spouses and children of faculty and staff will receive free admission to the R-MC game in a special edition of Faculty-Staff Appreciation Night.

Longwood, 9-2 at home this season, has compiled a 74-23 record in Lancer Hall since the facility opened in 1980. Halftime activities will include the introduction of the 10 finalists for the 1988 Miss Longwood Pageant, scheduled for March 19.

Fifties and Sixties Music Featured in Number of Week's Events

1964, a Beatles revival band, is giving Farmville the opportunity to experience what a live Beatles concert would have been like. Those who have seen the Beatles in concert have the ability to reminisce of younger years.

"We do everything we can to let people see what it was like," says the lead singer Mark Benson. "We don't want to be 'famous' Beatles impersonators. We don't even say our names on stage – we just present ourselves as John, Paul, George and Ringo."

The groups reputation speaks for itself. 1964 performs in the United States as well as Canada. Last year they won an award for the best non-recording band in all of Canada.

"It took the band two years to assemble everything", says Benson. This includes everything from their equipment to their costumes.

1964 is dedicated to reproducing every detail of the Beatles themselves.

1964 will appear Tuesday February 23, at 8 p.m. in the Gold Room at Lankford. The cost is $5 for students and faculty, $6 for others.

1964 is only one of a number of events this week that are flavored with music from decades gone by.

"Sixties Rock – When the Music Mattered" is the title of a lecture by Barry Drake, rock music expert par-excellence, which will be given on Tuesday at 8 p.m. Drake will be speaking in the Gold Room free of charge.

The Department of Visual and Performing Arts' Speech and Theatre Department will be presenting their version of the 50's-set musical "Grease" on the 25th-27th at 8 p.m.

In the spirit of the week's events, WLCX, 90.1 FM will be circulating flyers highlighting the shows on the station that play sixties rock. WLCX, WWHS, WFLO and WPAK will all be giving away tickets to 1964 as The Beatles throughout the week.

Sesquicentennial Clean-up Plan Includes Mall Facelift

By GENE KERNS

Many students may have noticed the new sign in the area outside of the Dining Hall that reads "Future site of Blackwell Plaza," but just what is the 'Blackwell Plaza'?

During meetings of the Sesquicentennial Steering Committee, it was decided that a sub-committee should be formed to work on a campus beautification project. This sub-committee chose to beautify the area outside of the Dining Hall. They also decided that this should be a student project, by the students, for the students. Finally, the "Mall Committee" was formed.

This group of students, along with REC Mark Kaye Benton and Vice President for Business Affairs, Rick Hurley, has been meeting since the beginning of the school year to get this project underway.

So far, the group has met with an architecture and engineering to develop a plan for the area. Four designs were originally presented: drawings for these were put on display in the Dining Hall and circulated to most hall councils. Elements of all four plans were discussed and considered along with the comments received from other students, and these were all combined into one plan. This plan was approved by the committee last week and has been sent back to the A&E firm for finalization.

The job now in front of the Mall Committee is to get all of the students of Longwood involved with this project. Events being considered are: A Name-the Mall Contest, Groundbreaking, A Time Capsule, and ways for individuals to contribute financially to the project.

The committee is quite happy with the plans for the area. These will be displayed in the Rotunda and dining all area. All students are encouraged to view these plans. Look for more information coming soon.

ROTUNDA POLICY

Please address contributions to the ROTUNDA, Box 1133. Letters are subject to editing. Please type or neatly print any contributions.

Opinions expressed in the ROTUNDA do not necessarily reflect those of the Longwood College administration, staff or students as a whole.

Deadline for articles is 3:00 p.m. Friday prior to the Tuesday publication date. Contributions handed in within 3 hours before deadline should be placed in the envelope on the Publications Office door in Lankford. Letters, personals, etc. are due on the office door by midnight Sunday.

The subject matter of the following letter includes (1): the Cunninghams' newsletter, NOTONLYNEWS, (2): replies made to NOTONLYNEWS' "editors" in response to derogatory statements made about contents of The Rotunda in the Cunninghams' "publication."

DEAR FRIEND OF THE ROTUNDA AND FRIEND OF THE FRIEND OF THE ROTUNDA:

The Rotunda has for 67 years been Longwood College's newspaper. Since 1920. That is a wonderful, incredible history and NOTONLYNEWS acknowledges this and congratulates the Rotunda.

During that time there have been better years and worse years, more fascinating years and more blase, mundane years. I would argue that the past two years have been among the more dull. The articles which the Rotunda has chosen to spotlight on the front page, even the articles which the Rotunda considered newsworthy, have not, in my opinion, often enough challenged the mind, sparked the imagination, or even excited the interest of the Rotunda's readers. I have a mind, and an imagination, and fairly lively interest which used to reach for the Rotunda, always expecting something . . . interesting, and got left with nothing; at least nothing which lasted. My opinion is that the Rotunda has not been doing all of its job for the students of Longwood College. All right, irate Friends of the Rotunda, just what do I consider the job of the Rotunda to be?

I consider it to be the job of a college newspaper to provide something for the students to think about, something contemporary, something of interest. The Rotunda has been doing a beautiful job of keeping the campus up-to-date about goings-on around Longwood. But it's like reading a history book. There are a few personals, and there is the letter to the editor. Keeping us up-to-date is part of the job of the Rotunda, but only part of its job. What about entertainment, what about showing us what the students of Longwood are made of? What about expressing some opinions? They don't have to be everyone's opinions and you don't have to agree with them. I refuse to believe that the students at Longwood, no matter what anyone says, are dumb, lifeless. Nor do I believe that the ONLY things worth writing about are the cold facts of the sports weekend and the various special events. But I have a hard time telling otherwise from what I see in the Rotunda.

Tell me you don't read NOTONLYNEWS from front to back and I won't believe you. Tell me you don't leave off reading NOTONLYNEWS with an opinion, angry, appreciative, interested, and I won't believe you. It doesn't really matter whether I believe you or not, though. What the staff of NOTONLYNEWS is trying to do is to get people to think, to have an opinion, and to respond. What we have been getting in the mailbox is not necessarily representative of the Cunninghams. Just as your picture and caption is NOT the opinion of Third Floor North. It is the opinion of a few residents who can think of no better way to make a point. That is your privilege. I don't agree with you. That's my privilege. NOTONLYNEWS believes it is its job to address accurately and openly the interest of Cunninghams' residents, and in many cases the interest of Longwood as a whole. We will be careful, but not so careful that we go nowhere. We will say what we think, good and bad, complimentary and not-so-complimentary. We welcome your response.

Addressing specifically the freshmen of Third Floor North, NOTONLYNEWS would like to request that you make your responses coherent, respectful, and best of all, publishable. NOTONLYNEWS had never failed to show you respect. A return of that common courtesy which you deserve so well is something we deserve, too. NOTONLYNEWS prints what it receives; we print what is contributed. We on the staff are, naturally, the most common contributors, sometimes the only contributors. Lately that's changed, although some might question the taste of recent submissions. But we are here to publish news, opinions, ideas, from whoever, though especially from residents of the Cunninghams, and we will stand by that claim. It is a good newsletter and we are working on making it better because we like Longwood and we think everything about it should be of the highest quality possible.

Martha Sellers
A Friend of NOTONLYNEWS

Dear Ms. Sellers,

I would like to thank you for your opening laudation of the Rotunda. I shall return the courtesy and say that I think it's great that you try to keep the Cunninghams informed about their home-away-from-home. Thank you also for your opinions; may I subject you to a few of my own?

One of your comments compares reading the Rotunda to reading a history book. One of the general consensus goals of the present Rotunda staff is to provide historical perspective. Maybe you, today in 1988, do not appreciate the value of the picture of the new trees in front of your humble abode which was printed a mere three or four weeks ago in the Longwood College Newspaper, but somebody 20 years from now will. The Rotunda, as you pointed out, has been around for 67 years, and there is a lot of history recorded in the old copies of this publication. Buildings and people that no longer exist, as well as the birth of parts of our campus and the very evolution of the college itself are captured on 66 years worth of yellowing sheets of newspapers. We, in the paper's 67th year of publication, wish to continue the recording of the Longwood legacy on our pages, thank you very much.

You feel that reading the Rotunda can be mundane. Yes, it can be. Why? You – that's why. Have you ever attended a Rotunda meeting or attempted to be on the paper's staff? I dare say you have not, and neither have most other members of this school's student body. Of the 2700 some-odd students that live on this campus, only about fifteen work on the paper: it is up to us to entertain the other 2685 of you. Ideawise, this paper is at the present time basically a three-person operation: Matthew Peterman, Melissa Gibbs and myself. Three on 2700, with not a bit of help in scraping up stories from most of you.

Ms. Sellers, you wish to see what students at Longwood are made of. Please see my comments on this same page about a few Alpha Sigs. There you will see what LC students are made of as far as I'm concerned right now. Would you like some pictures of people yacking at a couple of weekend parties in next week's issue to further illustrate what Longwood students are made of? It can be arranged.

It is not in the interests of real journalism, which the Rotunda attempts to practice, to express opinions in news articles. Editorials, yes; articles, no. I like to believe that I have "expressed some opinions" with every editorial I myself have written. I go overboard with my opinions, hoping for response or signs of life from the student body. I haven't seen a whole hell of a lot of either of these. I do not write an editorial every week: I do not write editorials because I feel obligated to. I write my editorials because I am compelled to – because I have something to say. Guest editorials are welcomed by any publication. Ever written one? Then don't complain.

You stated that the opinions which would be published in your utopian controversial Rotunda wouldn't have to be those of everyone who read

Pardon my use of the first-person in an editorial, but once again I have something to say (and I refuse to write letters to myself).

While eating dinner in the dining hall this past Saturday evening, I was subjected to the juvenile behavior and wanton destructiveness of a member of the Alpha Sigma Phi fraternity as he, roaring and grunting the whole time, tore up a couple of table announcements. His brothers thought this was great — I did not. I tossed a wad of napkins at the table and upon attracting their attention (short as its span may be) told this guy to cut it out. He said something like "Well, you don't have to look at me while I do it," to which I replied, "No, but I have to listen to you." I suggested that he learn how to behave in public, and that he take up his dishes while he was at it (something that Alpha Pigs are famous for not doing). I received the ultimate Alpha Pig answer to everything: "Fuuu....kkk!", screamed (grunted?) at full volume.

I hope someone reads this aloud to these fellows (who, incidentally, did not take their dishes up) so they can see what idiots some of this campus thinks they are.

In all fairness one should assume that not all Alpha Sigs are Alpha Pigs. I suggest that the more cultured members of the organization curb their not-so-tame brothers for the benefit of the whole group. If this guy is going to do things like this out in public while he's wearing his letters, people are going to see him and connect his actions with the fraternity in general. If it is only a few guys giving the whole brotherhood a bad name, then I would hope the rest of the brothers would want to see these members clean up their act.

More To The Editor

them, nor would readers have to agree with these opinions. You then turned around and stated that NOTONLYNEWS takes stabs at what the Cunninghams' joint interests are, and you put down the opinions of "a few residents." Are these not contradicting actions? Double standards? The job of editor does not include editing-out ideas or opinions which differ from your own.

I also like Longwood and would like it to have nothing but the best. Let me once again commend the intended purpose of NOTONLYNEWS. Try to hit the mark more often.

The student newspaper is what the Students make it. My job as Editor should be to sift through the stacks of stories that pour in from all over campus; not to plead with people to put their ideas on paper and submit them for publication.

Sincerely,

C. Gaughan

Editor and one of many friends of the Rotunda.

Dear Editor,

Recently, people like myself have seen a lot of posters around the school advertising "Breaking the Silence." The Breaking the Silence Lecture by Dr. George Greening seems to have gotten a lot of publicity: maybe too much.

All the posters were printed using Cunningham hall council funds, under the direction of the RA'a on third floor North and South Cunningham.

Obviously, in their haste to publicize the event, they went overboard. On 3rd floor North, one of the bulletin boards contained no fewer than 40 posters, and they were all the same. This seems to be an obvious case of Over Kill.

If Cunningham Hall Council funds are going to be used to advertise an event like this, they should be used responsibly. The Cunningham Hall council does not need to spend money to make wallpaper out of posters. In the future the Hall Council should take steps to make sure this kind of abuse does not happen again.

I am writing in an effort to convince the student body to PLEASE come out and see 1964... The Beatles.

The STUDENT UNION, your student union, works so hard to bring good entertainment to this campus. In the past two years, under the leadership of Jim Brown, they have brought to you "The BANBLES" and "John Cafferty and the BEAVER BROWN BAND," as well as many diverse talents to Lancer Cafe.

Every year, the big question is "what band will we be having for OCTOBERFEST or Spring weekend?" When the announcement is finally made, there are always one or two immediate reactions. Some students are excited while others complain "Why The BANGLES or John Cafferty?" "Why not some other band that is bigger or that everyone likes?" Well, as for as "bigger" goes, we can't afford anyone much bigger and as far as a band that everyone likes; you'll never find one!

I strongly feel that everyone should come out and support these events. They do not cost very much and it is definitely a nice change from sitting around in your rooms drinking beer and complaining about how there is nothing to do at this place. I for one am not a major John Cafferty fan, but I really enjoyed the concert. The only thing about the concert I didn't like was the attendance there. So many students who planned on attending opted to stay in their rooms and party. My question is WHY?! Why not come out and take a chance on possibly having a GOOD TIME?

Well, so much for my gripes. I just hope that the apathy will lessen in the future and that 1964 will be a success. This show is always a sell out on college campuses. I guess we'll have to wait and see if yet again, Longwood will be the exception. I can assure you that the success or failure of this show will have a major effect on future entertainment at Longwood College. I guess the real question is, "Do you REALLY GIVE a . . .?"

James E. Boston

Dear Editor:

There have been a number of letters published recently from "concerned students." Well, I am a concerned student. My concern is not with the administration or the faculty, nor is it with the dining hall workers. I feel they are doing a wonderful job considering what (who) they have to put up with. My concern is with my fellow students. What has happened to the student pride in Longwood?!

I am a Longwood Ambassador, and I give tours of the campus to prospective students. There is nothing more embarrassing than having to walk down a hallway where the bulletin board is ripped up and the hall is trashed. Is it really that difficult to find a trash can?

One time I took a group into Lancer to look at the gym. The wrestling tournament was going on, and the bleachers were not very full. Some of the parents took particular notice of this.

I also try to eat lunch with the tour group I am with. More than once I have had to clean up a table in order to have a place to sit. I do not see this as the cafeteria workers' fault. The students should be responsible for their own dishes.

And another thing, I am tired of apologizing for rude comments yelled at me when I am giving a tour, for example" "Don't do it, you don't want to come to this jail!" Please, lets act like the adults we are supposed to be!!

Longwood has its faults, but no school is perfect. Stop trying to create this "Utopian College," it is in your mind – it does not exist. Maybe if we start acting like adults then some of our legitimate concerns will be dealt with.

I attended the Longwood Leadership Conference, and there we discussed student pride. One thing we realized is that you cannot develop student pride unless the student has pride in himself. Why aren't people proud of themselves? Why are people so down on themselves that they have to take it out on someone or something else? I'm the first to admit that I am not perfect, but I do have enough pride not to destroy or ruin someone else's chances of enjoying Longwood.

I do not know about you, but I am fed up! If you are too, and you have pride in Longwood, please don't be afraid to show it!!

Missy Miller

Dear Editor,

This past weekend, my concern that racial tension was present on Longwood's campus was reaffirmed. I am referring to a "note" written on an administrator's office door expressing the author's hatred of blacks. Other evidence has revealed itself in the destroyed bulletin boards honoring Black History month, the Black History posters that have been torn down campus-wide, name-calling and racially slurred graffiti.

These expressions of racial hatred are out-dated and one would think that this age would bring about more creative thinking geared toward unity rather than separation. It angers me to know that Longwood's small community is clouded by this type of thinking.

This prejudice exists on both sides and it is time for it to stop; or at least time for us all to vent this anger and frustration through a more constructive and beneficial means.

An evironment polluted with racial tension is unable to produce anything positive and those who waste their energies promoting this form of hatred need to express themselves in a more productive manner.

I alone cannot answer the question of how to rid ourselves of prejudice, but I do know that the time for a change in thought must come about especially when more pressing concerns such as warfare, starvation and disease plague our society.

There is no reason to burden ourselves with a simple problem like prejudice when it can be easily solved by understanding our fellow-man and realizing that no one is superior to another in the eyes of God.

Prejudice is not only detrimental to the victims, but also the perpetrators, for they are the ones who must live with their own narrow-minded and destructive thinking.

Moscow Visit, Abduction and Baliles Budget

By MATT PETERMAN

☆ Secretary of State, George P. Shultz, arrived in Moscow Saturday to discuss a wide range of issues facing the two nations.

Among the main issues was getting the arms talks moving more quickly – as dozens of people concerning that topic were brought in. Pushing to complete yet another treaty, this one to reduce strategic weapons, Shultz and Soviet Foreign Secretary, Edvard A. Shevardnadze, hope to iron out all problems, so their bosses can sign the agreement during Reagan's visit later this year.

Other topics included human rights, Soviet withdrawal from Afghanistan, and an arms embargo against Iran.

☆ Another U. S. citizen was abducted in Lebanon this past week, the leader of a 76-man U. N. peace-keeping group was taken from his jeep by a group calling itself: the Organization for Oppressed on Earth. This group is believed linked with the pro-Iranian group, Hezbollah.

A search by Shiite Amal Militamen has turned up no clues. It is believed Higgins was smuggled out of southern Lebanon days after his abduction.

Higgins is the third U.N. personnel abducted in the past four weeks. The kidnapping prompted the U.N. to move 20 from Higgins' group to its headquarters in Naqovra, near the Israeli border.

☆ According to The Richmond Times-Dispatch, Baliles' budget is faring well.

"House and Senate money committees yesterday recommended small pay increases for most government workers, greater local control over a statewide sex education curriculum and more state money to local school systems.

"But most of the changes proposed by the committees make only a small dent in Gov. Gerald L. Baliles' $22.5 billion budget for 1988-90. Overall, the Democratic-controlled panels accepted virtually all of the governor's budget recommendations."

BET is coming your way

BET (BLACK ENTERTAINMENT TELEVISION) is coming your way with your help.

Town Councilman A. D. "Chuckie" Reid and Rev. James S. Williams meet with Farmville Cablevison Mgr. M. Jimmy Adams who stated that he will do all he can to help get this station aired. Petitions are being circulated so that we can show them that there is a great interest in BET coming to our viewing area. Mr. Adams also stated that your monthly payment would not increase because BET is not a pay station. And Mr. Adams also promised to air BET this month on a trial run plan to let viewers see exactly what it's about. (The weekend date will be broadcast on your local radio station.)

As you may know, BET (Black Entertainment Television) is the only cable television service providing black oriented programming. It is committed to provide a national platform that showcases the creativity and diversity of the black entertainment, music, sports and public affairs.

For those of you that would like to sign the petition (subscriber or not). See Chuckie in the bowling alley or stop by the Rotunda office.

PI KAPPS Get New Space

By GWEN NELMS

To be or not to be–was the question that the Pi Kappa Phi fraternity members faced in August of last year. On the return from summer break, Dean of Students Dr. Sue Saunders and a Fire Marshall informed the fraternity that due to unsafe conditions, their chapter room had the limit of holding only 50 people.

This information meant not only no parties in the chapter room, but also the withholding of regular chapter meetings due to the large number of Pi Kapp members.

A proposal to expand their chapter room into Frazer's television room, an action which would cost in order to leave 15x23 sq. ft. as a television room for Frazer residents.

Many of the Pi Kapps believe it was ridiculous to spend so much money to create a wall for such a little television room, especially when a much lower price was originally estimated.

Due to their chapter room closing, Pi Kappa Phi members have been holding their parties in the Commons Room, resulting in costs of over $500. This price includes campus police, supervisions which is required by the college to be present at all open parties held in the Commons room. Fraternity member Bobby Baker, a main activist in pursuing an answer to the enlargement proposal, approximately $600, was presented by the Pi Kapp members. This move was approved by both Frazer hall council and Frazer residents with Curry offering to share its television room.

After six months of horrendous red tape, contractors began the enlargement of the chapter room on Feb. 8. Instead of the proposed $600, the cost of the job has reached approximately $4,500 of student money. The price was increased because one wall was torn down while another was built said, "It needed to be done because we just didn't feel at home partying in the Commons Room."

The nearly completed chapter room has two doors used for both entering and exiting, therefore satisfying all fire regulations. The new room has a capacity of 100-200 people. A grand opening is planned for the first weekend after spring break. Before the expansion of their chapter room, says Pi Kapp Kenny Brooks, "We were just a party looking for a place to happen."

Lame Weekends Explored

By KAREN BEATTIE

Many students are not staying on campus during the weekends. Why? What compels these people to travel to other places to spend their weekends? This question was posed to several students.

The main reason given was a lack of alternatives. Sophomore Pam Kurtz says "If you don't want to get drunk, then your options are very limited."

Some students also felt that these limitations were even greater if a student was not in a fraternity or sorority.

Another reason students leave the campus is the fact that many find it difficult to study here on weekends. Sophomore Wendy Weaver says "If you live in any dorm, especially the high rises, it is nearly impossible to study past 8 p.m. on a Friday or Saturday night. No one respects the fact you may be trying to study."

On the other hand, one reason students may feel limited is that the town of Farmville itself is so small. "Since there is nothing really to do off campus everything is pretty much centered here," says junior Danny Dail. Farmville has one movie theater and one bar, neither of which is frequented much on weekends.

Things are being done, though, to change the attitudes of these students. Recently the Residency Life and Advisory Committee began a program called "What ya doin this weekend?" in an effort to keep students on campus for the weekend. It will provide alternatives to the regular Friday/Saturday night routine.

Discover 3rd Floor Cox

By DINA SCHIANO

If you haven't seen third floor Cox lately, you should go up and take a look. You'll be surprised.

The students of third floor figured it was time for some changes, so they got together during the Cox Hall Council meeting and decided to paint the hall. The new colors the students decided on are dark blue, light blue, and white.

What's interesting about the whole project is that the students are allowed to paint murals on the walls between the suites. The students have come up with some far-out ideas.

Andrew Smallwood and Steve Werts are going to put the emblem of the first Boston album up on the wall. Dan Moore, Ross Blommel, Scott Braithwaite, and Reggie Evans want to draw the Alf character between their suite doors.

If your wondering how the residents of third floor Cox feel about their accomplishments, Tamar Morris had this to say, "I think it's great that we can get together and finish something that will make the hall look better."

Lancer Baseball Team Ready To Roll

By MARK KIRK

It's time to pull the bats, balls, and gloves out of the closet. The Longwood baseball team is ready to start the 1988 season.

Coming off a successful 29-8 campaign which included a Regional Tournament berth, the Lancers are looking for several key veterans and a strong freshman class to lead it to a repeat performance this year.

As in the past, the main strength of the team this season is hitting. Leading Coach Buddy Bolding's offense will be Seniors Kelvin Davis, Robert "Pud" Jackson, and Bill Conroy, Juniors Frank Watson and Robby Smith, and Sophomore Pete Criscione. Newcomers Mark Moeller and Mike Lauffer, both graduates of Fork Union Military Academy, are also expected to add punch to the batting lineup.

"We're experienced in the hitting department, because we only lost two hitters from last year's team," said Davis, who was an All-American last year at the Division II level. "The team had a good recruiting year, and the freshmen should be able to take their place."

Pitching is also expected to be a key to the team's success this year. Blessed with a good mixture of left-handed and right-handed pitchers, the rotation is expected to be tough in all areas. Once again, Juniors Watson, Steve Gedro, and E.J. Bryant will be counted on to be the aces of the staff. Watson will be playing a dual role, since he also plays in the outfield when he is not on the mound.

"The pitching staff is shaping up nicely right now. We've got a young staff, but after getting through the fall season and gaining confidence, the freshmen should help us," said Gedro, who was 6-1 with a 3.03 ERA last year. "We all feel pretty comfortable right now."

Heading into the February 26 opener at Pembroke State, the Lancers' starting lineup is pretty much set. Returning 3 of 4 starters from last year's infield, the squad should have one of its strongest infields ever.

Davis and Criscione will again make up the double play combination at shortstop and second base, with Jackson (third base) and Moeller (first base) at the corners.

The outfield positions are subject to serious competition, with Conroy, Watson, Smith, and freshmen Eric Hutzler and Bobby Costa battling for playing time. Most likely, the pitching rotation will determine who is playing in the outfield.

Catching will also be solid with the strong-armed Lauffer and junior Graylon Rice sharing playing time. Both are considered very reliable defensive players.

The Lancers will be trying to build on last year's success. Among the highlights from last season was a three game set against Norfolk State, Liberty, and Randolph-Macon.

"We had to win all three games to make Regionals. Everyone came together and produced and we pulled them out," explained Davis, whose home run sparked a rally in the game against Liberty.

There were hints during the fall baseball season that the current edition of the Lancers will be strong again this year. Included in that session were wins over Division I foes Virginia, Virginia Commonwealth, James Madison, and Richmond. The team expects the success to continue when the spring season begins.

"Overall, I think the team will go far because we're more together as a team than last season," says Davis. "Everyone knows they must do their job, because no positions are locked up."

"If we work hard and come together as a team, we will be successful. We have good pitching and strong hitters, and that should help us go far," says Jackson.

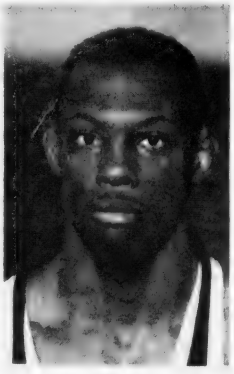
Stukes Wins Regional

Longwood scored one of its biggest ever Tuesday night, defeating Virginia Tech 26-11 and Newport News Apprentice 40-11 in a three-team match in Lancer Hall. Now 9-8 in dual matches, LC ended with its second straight winning season in dual match play.

"The win over Virginia Tech was one of our biggest victories ever," said coach Steve Nelson. "All the matches were close and hard fought, and several were decided in the final 20 seconds or less."

Longwood double winners for the night were 158 pounder Andy Mautner, Doug Hartley at 190 and Stukes. Tim Mason, 167 lb., ended his match with a 12-12 tie against Virginia Tech's Bo O'Dea. Mason was down 7-1, but came back to tie the match at the end. Mason's bout was one of the most exciting contests of the night.

Tommy Gilbert, 150 lb., got a pin over NNA's Sam Richardson. Kevin West, 167 lb., and Lino Velasquez at 118 also won their matches by a pin. Other Longwood winners included: Joey Azero, Strauss, Ted Proctor, and Dave Taylor.



Player Of The Week

Junior John Stukes became the first Longwood wrestler to win a regional title Saturday, and for his performance, Stukes has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period February 14-21. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

Stukes, who has set numerous school records this season, won the 134 pound class at the NCAA Division II Southern Regional Tournament at Pembroke State Saturday. He will be only the second Lancer grappler to compete in nationals when he travels to Omaha, Nebraska for the national tournament March 3-5.

"John had a sensational performance in the finals," said Longwood coach Steve Nelson. "He came back in the final period to get the win against an opponent who competed in NAIA Nationals last year."

With a Longwood best-ever 34-3-1 record this season, Stukes has an incredible 70-6-2 mark in three years of competing for the Lancers. Third on Longwood's all-time list in wins, the Deep Creek High School graduate has the best winning percentage (.897) in LC history. He has also won a record six tournament titles this season, including the state crown just over a week ago.

The Lancer wrestler also competed in the NCAA Division II National Championship as a freshman at Virginia State three years ago. Interestingly enough, John's twin brother Joe, a senior at Pembroke, will also be going to nationals as the Southern Regional champ at 126 pounds.

Stukes was also named Longwood Player of the Week in January.

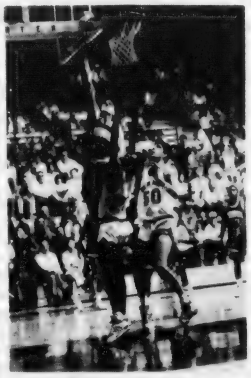
Lancer Winning Streak Ends At The Mount

With its eight-game win streak broken after a loss at Mount St. Mary's, Longwood must bounce back Wednesday night at Randolph-Macon to win the regular season Mason-Dixon Conference title outright.



Now 18-7 overall and 6-1 in the league, Longwood has already clinched at least a tie for the title with second place Mount St. Mary's (17-7, 5-2). The Lancers, and Dale Shavers in particular, played one of their best halves of the season at The Mount Saturday night, but lost an 12-point edge in the second half, falling 74-65.

Still in the hunt for a berth in the NCAA Playoffs, Longwood needs to win its remaining two games, at Randolph-Macon Wednesday and at Atlantic Christian Saturday, to reach the 20-victory mark. Only one Lancer team, the 1979-80 squad which went 28-3 in Division III, has been able to log 20 victories.

Looming on the horizon is the Mason-Dixon Conference Tournament March 4-5. The tourney has been moved from Pittsburgh-Johnstown to Liberty. Tournament pairings will not be finalized until no. 4 Randolph-Macon hosts no. 5 Pitt-Johnstown next Tuesday.

Longwood got a career high 23 points from Shavers, outshot Mount St. Mary's, and battled to a draw on the boards, but still lost on the road Saturday night before a nearly packed house of 3,200. After a magnificent first half had netted a 41-32 edge, Longwood went up 47-35 with 17.20 left, but slowly wilted under relentless pressure.

With its three-point guns blazing, The Mount went on a 15-4 run to pull within 51-50 at the 10:51 mark. A slam and layup by Doug Poppe, who tossed in 18 points, and a free throw by Darryl Rutley put Longwood up 56-52 with 8:02 left.

A four-and-a-half-minute dry spell coupled with 11 straight points by The Mount put Longwood behind 63-56 with 4:15 left, and the Lancers were unable to come back.

In a somber lockerroom after the disappointing loss, Longwood coach Cal Luther told his players to keep their heads up and get ready for the rest of the season.

"I'm disappointed with the loss, but not with your effort," Luther told his players. "We had a tough assignment tonight and we gave it everything we had. You should be proud of your performance."

Longwood stunned The Mount and its large home crowd with a surgeon like showing in the first half. With Shavers scoring 17 points and Poppe 12, the Lancers operated their offense to near perfection, getting layup after layup. Shavers scored his team's first nine points on a variety of inside moves. It was one of the finest displays ever for a Longwood team on the road.

Point guard Bobby Dobson logged many of his seven assists in the first half. Rutley, Longwood's scoring leader, was limited to 12 points after twisting an ankle in the first half and getting into foul trouble in the second half. Rutley added eight rebounds and Greg Holloway tied for game high honors with nine, plus six points.

The Mount's Mike Grimes and Alex Watson each picked up three fouls in the first half, but it was Longwood that got into foul difficulty in the second half, as the hosts were called for just four fouls, despite applying constant defensive pressure. The Lancers were whistled for 12 personals in the second half.

Mount freshman Scott Murphy led the victors with 21 points, making 5 of 11 shots from 3-point range. Mike Tate added 18 points and freshman Alex Watson added 14 points and nine rebounds. In the final analysis, 15 second half turnovers by Longwood and The Mount's 16 offensive rebounds had a big impact on the final score.

In a basketball game which figured to be close and hard-fought, Longwood surprised Randolph-Macon, and 1,002 Lancer Hall fans Wednesday night by whipping the Yellow Jackets 60-38 to gain at least a share of the regular season Mason-Dixon Conference title.

Longwood trailed just once at 2-0 with 18:15 left in the first half. An 20-4 run over the next nine minutes, featuring nine points from Rutley, put the Lancers up 20-6 and R-MC never got closer than 10 the rest of the night. Rutley and Shavers each had a 3-pointer in the run. With Rutley scoring 12 of his game high 16 points and Holloway bagging 10 of his 12, the Lancers led 37-18 at the half.

In winning their eighth straight game the Lancers used a familiar formula – tenacious defense, a controlled break and good shot selection. Macon came in as one of the top 3-point shooting teams in the nation, but the frustrated Jackets went 0-8 from bonus-land and hit just 30 per cent from the floor for the game (15-49).

Longwood also got effective play from its bench. Joe Lowe had seven assists and led the break in the second half while Keith Latimer had four points and three rebounds in 11 minutes.

Lady Lancers Clinch Winning Season; Rout Bishops, Ferrum for 14-11 Mark

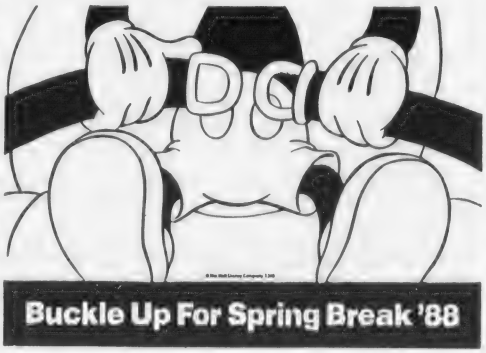
Longwood's women's basketball team clinched its third winning season in the last five years by winning two of three games last week. The 14-11 Lady Lancers routed North Carolina Wesleyan 86-72 Thursday and Ferrum 85-45 Saturday after an 82-71 defeat at Atlantic Christian Tuesday.

Coach Shirley Duncan's team will close out the regular season Wednesday with a visit to nationally ranked District of Columbia. It will be Longwood's sixth game against a nationally ranked Division II squad this season. UDC is currently 23-2 for the year.

Coming up next week is the Mason-Dixon Conference Tournament at Randolph-Macon. Longwood has already clinched third place in the regular race and will play the no. 2 seed (either Pittsburgh-Johnstown or Mount St. Mary's) in the second night of tournament play Friday, March 4.

Longwood placed five players in double figures and cruised to its 14th win of the season over Ferrum Saturday night at home. It was the final home appearance for seniors Jill Everett, Annette Easterling, Barbie Burton and Angie Hill, and all had impressive showings.

Hill scored 14 points, Everett



ANGIE HILL

15, Easterling seven points, eight assists and four steals and Burton 10 points and eight rebounds. Also contributing were freshmen Alison Walek with 12 points and 7 rebounds and Carmille Barnette with 19 points and 11 rebounds.

The Lady Lancers stormed back in the second half to win at North Carolina Wesleyan Thursday night. Trailing 45-34 halftime, Longwood got 29 points from Hill and Sandy Rawdon in the 86-72 victory. Hill finished with 22 points while Rawdon had 15 points and 15 rebounds. Easterling added 16 points, Burton and Barnette 10 each and Everett nine with 14 rebounds.

Shroud of Turin

Blood deposits on shroud are real

By HOLLY PREBLE

Friday night Dr. Brian Moores, Professor at Randolph-Macon College, talked about the Shroud of Turin. The shroud is a sheet of white linen that bears the faint negative image of a male human figure. Many people believe it is the burial shroud of Jesus of Nazareth because of the remarkable coincidences surrounding the biblical account of the crucifixion and burial of Jesus.

In the mid 1970's a group of thirty American scientists were collected to determine the origin and therefore the authenticity of the shroud through chemical and physical tests.

The shroud bears the exact image of a full length man-front and back. There are blood images from the hands, feet, head and right side of the male image. These blood spots coincide with the biblical account of the nailing of Jesus on the cross through the hands and feet. Also, in the Bible, Jesus presumably was speared by a lance in his right side. On the back of the image there are also lash marks.

There are burned areas on the shroud. At one point there was a fire where the shroud was housed. The compartment in which the shroud was kept was so tightly shut that there wasn't enough oxygen for the fire to penetrate and destroy the shroud. However the image may have developed because of the intense heat from the fire. This is one explanation the American chemists gave as to how the image got there.

Another explanation is that someone could have painted the image on the piece of linen. The researchers did infact find some iron and calcium deposits on the image. This explanation was ruled out because the image would still be there even without the iron and calcium.

Yet another explanation of how the image developed is the process of time. The oils that were supposedly used to anoint the body could have over time developed the image on the shroud.

The chemists also tested the blood images to check if they are actually blood deposits. The answer they concluded was a definite yes: whether animal or human they do not know.

After all the tests on the shroud, the conclusion is that it is very likely that the image is that of a real human being. The real puzzle is how the image got on the shroud. Eventually this question may be answered through further testing. Unfortunately, there are no tests to answer the question of is the image of Jesus of Nazareth. That can only be answered individually.

Bly Shuns Apathy

Whitmanian Poet Drew Crowd

By MELISSA GIBBS

The tall man with touseled white hair strode casually into the auditorium, removing his shoes before ascending the stage. The congenial-looking man, whose identity the audience discovered through Dr. Craig Challender's introduction, was Robert Bly, poet, editor, and translator.

Bly appeared at Longwood Thursday night as the main event of the Gyre Literary Week. During the program, which lasted well over an hour, Bly read from his own works as well as those of other poets including Etheridge and Yeats.

"Poetry must be moved from the brain to the body," the poet explained before commencing his reading. To assist with the task, "to bring the poetry into the heart," Bly accompanied his reading with music. He stressed that the instrument one chooses should not have any memories attached to it – "it can't remind you of anything at your prom." For that reason, Bly chose to accompany his reading with the bouzoulki, the national instrument of Greece. It resembles a cross between a guitar and a watermelon.

"There are two kinds of poems," stated Bly, "ones in which you talk about yourself a lot and ones in which you don't." He began the reading of his own works with three poems having subjects other than himself. The first, "Dolly," is about a dog. He also read "Anthill" and "The Bed of Tulips."

He then went on to read a series of poems which he calls his "father poems." These poems deal with Bly's shaky relationship with his alcoholic father.

Donning a red ascot and brown and beige old-fashioned style vest, the poet conjured images of Whitman. It was not surprising to learn during the question and answer period that Bly named Walt Whitman as the poet who has had the greatest influence on his own work.

A question about an essay by Bly touched a sensitive spot in the poet. Bly had written an essay criticizing poet and novelist, James Dickey, for his portrayal of the horrors of the Vietnam War. In answering the question, Bly spoke out against the political apathy of today's young people.

Bly strongly protested the Vietnam War. His volume of anti-Vietnam poems, The Light Around the Body, won the National Book Award for 1968.

Don't forget! The Rotunda staff meetings are at 12:30 each Wednesday in the newspaper office in Lankford (across from the post office).

AUDITIONS

The guest director, Ms. Melissa Johnston of the Richmond Children's Theatre Company, will hold auditions for Peter Pan next week. The play is scheduled for April 20-23. Children will audition on Sunday, Feb. 28, at 4 to 6 p.m. Longwood students will begin their auditions on Sunday, the 28th at 7 p.m. in Jarman Auditorium. On Monday evening, Feb. 29, auditions and callbacks will continue. It is hopeful that the cast will be selected on Monday with company call on Tuesday evening, March 1, at 7. Rehearsals will start on Wednesday and Thursday and continue after Spring Break.

Artist of the Month

Jason T. Craft, of Cape Charles, has been named Longwood College's Artist of the Month for February.

His winning work is "Baby #1," a torn and punched paper collage completed in an Experimental Drawing class at Longwood. The small collage pieces in the work were used for detail, with larger torn pieces used primarily for texture.

Craft received a $50 cash award, and his work is on display in the Bedford Art Building at the college.

A junior at Longwood, Craft is working toward the Bachelor of Fine Arts degree with a concentration in graphic design. He is particularly interested in illustration and typography and hopes to work for an advertising agency after graduation.

The ACTIVITIES FUNDS COMMITTEE is an organization that allocates seed money to recognized student organizations who wish to provide a campus wide program of activity. The committee is currently looking for a few new members.

If you are interested in sitting on this committee, you may pick up an application in the Student Union Office. Applications are due by Tuesday, March 1st by 1:00 p.m. to BOX 1115. No more than two students may represent the same organization.

If you are interested in obtaining funds, the ACTIVITIES FUNDS COMMITTEE will be reviewing requests on Tuesday, March 1, 15, and 29th at 1:30 p.m. in Lankford's Gold Room. An application to "request" funds may also be obtained in the Student Union Office.

Exhibit focuses on "corporate identity"

A selection of corporate logos, posters, and other print communications by Lisa Cumbey and Design Fource, Inc. are featured in Longwood College's Showcase Gallery through March 18.

Ms. Cumbey is a 1982 graduate of Longwood. She received the Bachelor of Fine Arts degree with concentrations in drawing and printmaking and graphic design.

She and three partners – Jeff Burt, Susan Crowder, and Louis Crowder – own and operate Design Fource, Inc., a growing print communications agency in Richmond.

Their exhibit in the Showcase Gallery (first floor hallway in Bedford Building) focuses on "corporate identity" materials. The display includes explanations on how a business logo is developed to establish and/or enhance a company's image. Each logo is shown in various sizes, in color and in black-and-white.

SIXTY-SEVENTH YEAR — TUESDAY, MARCH 1, 1988 — NUMBER NINETEEN

Miss Longwood Finalists Chosen

Miss America Prelim to be held March 19

Ten students have been chosen as finalists for the 1988 Miss Longwood Scholarship Pageant.

They are Teresa Bunn, Wanda Carter, Amy Church, Sandra Clayton, Alice Flora, Susan Holzman, Kristine Meaney, Beth Miller, Anita Washington and Holly Westenhoefer.

The Miss America preliminary will be held on Saturday, March 19, in Jarman Auditorium. Some $2,500 in scholarships will be awarded, and the winner will advance to the Miss Virginia Pageant. Contestants will compete in talent, interview, evening gown, and swimsuit.

The Miss Longwood Pageant is regarded as one of the best local Miss America pageants in the United States. Last year's pageant was a sell-out. A celebrity emcee and special guest performance will be announced soon for this year's pageant.

The 10 students who are finalists were chosen from 27 who auditioned in December.

Ms. Bunn, a senior from Chesapeake, is majoring in biology. She is a member of Alpha Sigma Alpha sorority and is being sponsored by them and by the Biology Club.

Ms. Carter, a junior from Hanover, is majoring in business administration. She was a finalist in the 1985 Miss Longwood Pageant and was named Miss Congeniality. She founded Longwood's drill team and served as its captain last year. Her sponsor is Phi Beta Sigma fraternity.

Ms. Church, a freshman from Springfield, is a theatre major. She appeared as Titania, Queen of the Fairies, in the Longwood Players' production of "Midsummer Night's Dream" last October. She has modeled for the Erickson Agency and Hecht's department stores. She is sponsored by the Longwood Players.

Ms. Clayton, a junior from Richmond, also is a theatre major. She was third runnerup and won the talent competition in last year's Pageant. She is treasurer of the Longwood Players and is a member of the drama fraternity, Alpha Psi

WORLD CHAMPION CLOGGER TO EMCEE

A recent First Runnerup to Miss America who is the world-champion women's clogger will perform and serve as Emcee at the Miss Longwood Pageant

The Miss Longwood Pageant has developed a reputation as one of the best local pageants in the United States.

This year's Emcee is Sherry Thrift Bradshaw. She was the 1986 Miss South Carolina and First Runnerup to Miss America. She has won the world championship in clogging four times and is a member of the World Champion Clogging Team, "The Nicholodians."

At the Miss Longwood Pageant she will clog to "Are You From Dixie?"

A 1984 graduate of Clemson University, she was Clemson's Homecoming Queen and was selected to represent Clemson in the ACC Cheerleader of the Year Contest. She has appeared in "Varsity" Cheerleading Magazine, "Sports Illustrated, "Sport's Spectacular," and "Athlon's Atlantic Coast Football Magazine." At Clemson she also was in Delta Delta Delta Sorority, and she was Sweetheart and Little Sister of Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

She earned a B.S. degree in administrative management.

She currently co-hosts a television show, "Kidd Sizzle," teaches aerobics, works with a church youth group, and owns and operates a photography store.

In 1980 she was South Carolina's Junior Miss, and honor that enabled her to model in New York for Simplicity's Pattern Book.

Title Bearing Dance Troupe to Perform

One of the South's best dance companies will perform at the Miss Longwood Pageant on Saturday, March 19, in Jarman Auditorium at 8 p.m.

The Karen Sherrill Dance Arts Troupe has won more than 50 first-place awards in dance competitions throughout the East and South. The dance company is from Mooresville and Statesville, NC.

The company consists of 15 dancers, 12 of whom hold or have held pageant titles. Titles include Carolina Dogwood Queen, Miss Statesville – Dogwood Queen of Carolinas, North Carolina Rhododendron Queen, Miss North Carolina Queen of Hearts, North Carolina Junior Dogwood Queen (two), North Carolina Queen of the Carolinas, North Carolina Cinderella Queen (three), Junior Rhodendron Queen, and Junior Dogwood Queen.

Two of the dancers were chosen from hundreds of contestants to be "Caravan Kids" with the Dance Caravan that toured the United States in 1987.

Karen Brown Sherrill, director of the Dance Arts Troupe, is a regular featured performer in the Miss Virginia and Miss North Carolina Pageants. She owns the Academy of Dance Arts and is a former dance instructor at Mitchell College.

The group also includes two singers who have won numerous vocal competitions.

"Feel the Rhythm" is the theme of this year's Miss Longwood Pageant. The dancers will open the show with the theme song, "The Rhythm Is Gonna Get You." They will open the second half with a tap/clog dance to "Born to Boogie." Later in the show, they will offer a Vegas-look with a medley of dance tunes of the 1980s.

To the Editor

Dear Editor:

After reading your column in the Feb. 22 issue of the Rotunda, I have come to some very unpleasant conclusions.

First, by using the column as a grudge match directed towards one individual, you have proven yourself very unprofessional. The purpose of the Rotunda newspaper is to inform and entertain, not to complain about the actions of another person.

Secondly, by calling a fraternity the "Alpha Pigs", you've shown yourself to be extremely unethical. I believe you're bordering on slander.

Finally, you off-hand comments about the fraternity's short attention span and their not taking their dishes up makes me wonder. Is it possible that you are everywhere at one time? Do you know the entire fraternity? Do you know any of the guys in the fraternity? It seems you've incorrectly based your opinions of the Alpha Sigma Phi's on a single experience with one guy.

If you were trying to be funny – you missed. And if you were trying to teach them a lesson, all you've accomplished is enraging an entire fraternity and lowering your readers' respect for you and the Rotunda newspaper.

Signed,
A Student

Dear Editor,

I would like to comment on your editorial last week about the "Alpha Pigs".

First, you said their behavior was juvenile. However, you did not bother calling your own behavior juvenile. Throwing a wad of napkins at a table in the dining hall is not only immature, but it also adds to the destruction of the dining hall. Could you not get up, walk over to the table and say, "Excuse me."

Second, the "pet" name you gave the Alpha Sigs can be taken as slander along with the comment about their attention span being short. I suggest that you watch what you write.

Last, I do not think you should isolate the problem of leaving dishes on the table to the Alpha Sigs. Everytime I walk into the dining hall, dirty dishes fill the tables. Other "designated" fraternity tables are just as filthy.

Your article came across as a personal vendetta and the paper should not be used in such ways. Next time, please refrain from isolating situations to one fraternity when they are not the only people who act in this manner. If you have a personal vendetta, take it to the individual personally and use the paper in better ways than for slander.

A nongreek who is fair and impartial

Mr. Chapman Kester
President
Alpha Sigma Phi

Dear Chapman:

Two students sent me the February 23, 1988 Rotunda editorial. I urge and expect you to do something about the matter described. This is the sort of activity that causes our fraternity program and Longwood to be second class.

I would be very pleased if you would advise Charlie Warner and myself about what you intend to do. I am embarrassed for you and for all of us as instances of this nature occur!

Phyllis Mable

Dear Alpha Sigs and Their Supporters,

Allow me to quickly address a couple of your statements.

First off, my comments were not meant to be slanderous. I guess my liberal-minded, northern sense of humor missed its mark. Didn't mean to totally offend anyone.

"Unprofessional": I could have written my editorial as a letter to the editor and signed some bogus name on it, taking cover behind the shield of anonymity as you have. Instead, I stated who I was, what I had experienced, and what I thought of it.

"Purpose of The Rotunda": Everyone else gripes here – should I be denied this privilege?

"Unethical": What about GDI? I'd rather be called a "P-word" than a God damned anything. You think GDI is a cute label? That's what Alpha "P-word" was meant as. I picked up on a pun that was staring me in the face, just as almost anyone else would have.

"Juvenile": I could have walked up to the table and confronted those involved. As it stands, I had profanities yelled at me – who knows what they might have done had I approached them.

I did not state my opinions on the whole frat at all. You're right, I don't know many Alpha Sigs very well. I said I thought the few members of the fraternity involved in this particular incident were idiots for doing what they did; not the whole fraternity.

I was not attempting to "teach a lesson", but to point out a trend that is potentially developing. Sorry if this "enraged" the Alpha Sigs.

From what I can see, pride and respect for any fraternity or organization while one is representing it is important and should be second nature. This should not have to be pointed out by those around you.

I would like to repeat from last week that if it is only a few guys representing the group poorly, then I hope the others will help them clean up their act.

Cathy Gaughran

Dear Editor,

I am writing this in response to the new quiet hours procedure recently imposed upon us by the Dean of Students. When I first heard of these 24 hour quiet periods during the week, I thought it was aimed at stereos that disrupted classes in Stevens and possibly Hiner during the day. This was fine with me in that I live in Curry and didn't think that this ruling would affect me to any great degree. Boy, was I wrong.

Little was I to know that this unvoted on rule would have the sole consequence of enabling power hungry RA's to harass otherwise innocent students when they're trying to alleviate the eternal boredom that curses this institution. Now I'm like the next guy who likes to have people over to my room during the week; this offers a good tension release from classes, and it's only natural that music will be a part of this. Well, according to some RA prowling the halls, my stereo could be heard outside and bingo, warning #1. So we turned it down and soon forgot about this dreaded warning. Later the same night while the stereo was still down, the door happened to be open because some of my guests were preparing to leave. As fate would have it there was another RA outside giving us warning #2 because my stereo could be heard in the hall. The clincher came on the weekend when we were issued our third and final warning 5 minutes after quiet hours began by the eagle eyed RA watching the clock.

Now as a result of these previously competent RAs' behavior, my stereo receiver has to be confined within the campus police building for four weeks. Now it doesn't bother me that this procedure wasn't properly addressed like the honor code issue last semester, and it doesn't bother me that others in my dorm make more noise than I do (including screaming and running up and down the halls) without so much as a peep from these RA's; it doesn't even bother me that now I'll probably be written up for having my TV too loud. What bothers me is that I lost the use of my own private property for a month because I irritated two people who took the new rules beyond the scope of reasonable judgment.

So use me as an example, Longwood, I don't care. But keep these thoughts in mind the next time you bitch about apathy or people going home on the weekends. I'll be leaving this weekend so I can listen to my stereo at home.

Thanks for reading,
Greg Kammer

To the Editor:

In the last three years, life at Longwood has drastically changed due to Sue and her so-called liberal views that she forces on us.

Time and time again Sue deceptively says she is for the students yet hides behind institutional policies. Since our arrival at Longwood drastic changes have occurred to restrict student growth and development. How can college students be treated as children yet punished as adults?

More To The Editor

Your so-called fair treatment across the board has only affected social griefs due to your autocratical policies. Our IFC representatives have no power at all. Why have this \organization if they have no voice at all in the meetings? Also, you now need a 2.0 GPA and first semester freshmen cannot pledge.

Social life at Longwood has been reduced to an all-time low. No wonder we have a low school spirit and a college known as a "suitcase college." Students, tell me if I am wrong, but isn't it more economically feasible to buy 4 half kegs for a fraternity party than to buy 8 quarter kegs? Are you in with Par Bil's on some secret deal to make us pay more for kegs? What is the big deal about half kegs? I guess it doesn't matter what the students want.

You initiate plans to help us grow and become mature individuals. Realistically all you are doing is driving more students off campus or to other schools. We are not a bunch of delinquent children you are supposed to babysit. Let us live how we want since it is our money that keeps this school and town alive. Are you using Longwood as a stepping stone to a better job by making your record look good? Talk to us; when is it going to end? When fraternities are forced off campus or underground? And now 24 hr. quiet hours. What can we expect next? Maybe no beer at frat. parties? Wouldn't you love that? You're taking the life out of college.

Students Concerned
With Student Rights

To the Editor:

As a Rotunda Market employee, I would like to offer some answers to the "Concerned and Dissatisfied Students". The writer of the letter stated that the dining hall is ignoring the students. On the contrary, most of the meals are suggestions made by the students.

The writer also complains that a certain line was for "seconds only" and he did not know this. During dinner, it is a well-known fact that this line is for "seconds only." If the student did not know this, he should have figured it out before he reached the beginning of the line.

The writer asks why we don't have family style anymore. This question is simple enough to answer. The reason is because there are not enough student employees to run family style. It might be of interest to state at this time why there aren't enough employees for this task. It is because many employees quit last semester after having to clean up after their fellow students. This is not, I repeat, not part of our job, although many of you "Concerned and Dissatisfied Students" seem to think it is.

In response to the size of the cups, all I can say is why don't you bring a larger cup like most other students? After all, they really don't seem to mind bringing their own cups, so why should you?

How can the writer of that letter say that the dining service has no organization? I think that any employee will agree that getting all of us to work together as well as we do (which is excellent) takes a lot of organization and preparation. If we didn't have to clean your mess, you might see our organization and energy a little more clearly.

In reference to the lower dining hall, please look at your Longwood College Policies, Procedures, and Sanctions for Alcohol and Drugs under article four (College Alcohol Procedures). Under section A it states locations and times for use of Alcoholic Beverages. If you look closely, you will notice it states Lower Dining Hall – Friday and Saturday, 6 p.m.-1 a.m. For this reason, it should be obvious that the lower dining hall cannot be open for dinner on these nights. Also, dining hall employees have to work one of every three weekends as it is now because of the decline in the number of employees. If it were possible to open tho Rotunda Market on weekends, all employees would be working at least every other weekend. As you can see, this means employees would not be able to go home on weekends for the whole semester. I hope you can see that this would cause bigger problems than what you think we have now.

Up to this point, I have been calm and have tried to understand the reasons for the ignorance of this writer, but there is something I do not understand and probably never will. How can this writer complain about the meal plan? All you have to do is visit any one of the following schools to understand the reason I have faith in our school's dining service. Food at Tech is bland, usually cold, and there is no selection. At University of Virginia, the food is overcooked, undercooked, or looks very unappealing. As for private or smaller schools, such as Mary Baldwin or Mary Washington, there are no such things as fast food, a decent salad bar, a dessert bar, or ice cream machines.

The next time a "Concerned and Dissatisfied Student" decides to write to the newspaper, please consider the following: Did you have a choice of what to eat? Could you get as much as you wanted? What time of the day did you go to this meal? After all, any cafe, restaurant, or fast food place is bound to be a little slower during rush hours when they are shorthanded. Did you clean your mess or did you just leave it for a hard-working employee to clean it up? Were you impatient or did you wait your turn with grace? In addition, before you make a quick decision about the dining hall, take a good look at the employees, the selection, the true quality of the food, and the surroundings.

A hard-working employee (name withheld upon request)

Dear Editor,

I am responding to the article in a previous Rotunda about the Dining Hall situation. The reason that the dishes were not available was the fact that they were all out on the tables. You see, the students of Longwood have this misconceived idea that the student employees are paid to pick up their (students) dishes. This is HOGWASH!! The student employees are not paid by the student's tuitions. The workers are paid to give friendly service by serving, cooking and restocking but not for cleaning tables. The student employees do not enjoy putting their hands into the mess some of the students leave on the table. We do not have any idea what diseases these people have. Maybe if the student workers were taken away and were not there to refill the condiment bars the students would realize what they would be missing. There are not enough ARA employees to help. These students are here to earn their way through college in a fun way, not a disgusting way!

Tired of cleaning up after pigs!!!

There will be no ROTUNDA on March 15. The next issue will be on March 22.

Panama Troubles, New Formula, and Lucas

By MATT PETERMAN

According to the NY Times: Panamanian.

"Military officers arrived today at the home of the ousted President, Eric Arturo Delvalle, apparently to detain him, but they found that he had fled during the night.

"Mr. Delvalle's whereabouts were unknown, but he was reportedly in hiding in or near the capital.

"Relatives of both Mr. Delvalle and the ousted Vice President, Roderick Esquivel, took refuge in the residence of the United States Ambassador, Arthur Davis.

"Mr. Delvalle, who had been a figurehead President for two years, unexpectedly announced Thursday that he was removing the country's military commander and principal leader, Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega. But the general quickly arranged to have Mr. Delvalle removed instead.

"Mr. Delvalle still considers himself the constitutional President. But the military recognizes Manuel Solis Palma, who was chosen by the National Assembly hours after Mr. Devalle made his surprise announcement Thursday. General Noriega's allies control the National Assembly."

According to the NY Times: "Secretary of State George P. Shultz flew to Jordan and Syria to discuss a package of American proposals for a Middle East negotiating formula but made little apparent headway in his quest.

"The Syrians have endorsed the concept of an international conference on the Middle East as proposed by Jordan. Although the United States has accepted a conference with a limited role, there seemed little prospect of Syrian approval of Mrs. Shultz's other ideas.

"He added that the basis for a settlement 'must be the withdrawal of Israel from the occupied territories.'

"On both these points, Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir of Israel is adamantly opposed, as he reportedly told Mr. Shultz Friday in Jerusalem.

"Mr. Shultz hinted at disagreement with Mr. Masri. 'I'm not going to make any substantive comments,' the Secretary said. 'Obviously, that's their point of view.' "

According to the Farmville Herald:

"The Reverend George Lucas may soon become familiar with the hallways of the White House.

"The pastor of the Race Street Baptist Church has just returned from a visit to the home of President Ronald Reagan and plans are underway to meet with the president in the future.

"Lucas met Friday with Dr. Gary Bower, domestic policy advisor to the president. The two men talked about the necessity for blacks to return to traditional values in order to solve their problems, said Lucas.

"Lucas gained the president's attention during a meeting last year, after which he promised to give Reagan a Bible. He hopes to present the president with the Bible before he leaves office."

Soccer Team Gets Two Recruits

By M.K. PHILLIPS

The strong soccer program at Longwood will look to a couple of incoming freshmen to help keep up the search for a national tournament bid next season. Head coach Rich Posipanko will be looking for recruits Andy Tarburton and Steve Thompson to assist the team in making it to a nationals.

Tarburton of St. Mark's High School in Newark, Delaware "is the first player we ever recruited from Delaware," said Posipanko. "He is a very strong player and will be able to make a contribution immediately. He is the kind of player that can play all positions."

Tarburton helped St. Marks win the state championship, played on the state team four years, and was voted to the All-Catholic team.

Thompson has played goalkeeper for Gar-Field High School in Dale City, Virginia. He was voted to the Virginia State Team 1985-88, All-Region 1985-88, and All-District 1985-88.

"We are real pleased to get a goalkeeper of Steve's talent," says Posipanko. "He is recognized as one of the top goalkeepers in Region 1 (from Maine to Virginia). He may be the best goalkeeper to ever play at Longwood and that is saying a lot considering we have had an All-State goalkeeper every year since 1981."

Fetal Harm Equals Child Abuse

By DEIRDRE McKENDRY

Fetal harm during pregnancy may be grounds for child abuse, said Joan Callahan, Doctor of Philosophy, at Bedford Auditorium February 11.

For example, Dr. Callahan said a California mother who deliberately took drugs during pregnancy gave birth to a fetus that was brain dead. The woman was criminally prosecuted.

Dr. Callahan's profession delves into ethics. She said an important question to be asked regarding parents' responsibility to the fetus is: Is it up to the parents to bring a sick child into this world? For example, a mother who knows she will give birth to a child with Tay Sachs disease knows the child will die before age three. Also: Is it criminal to use tobacco, use harmful birth control methods, expose the fetus to toxins, and practice poor prenatal nutrition? These practices would leave a child handicapped for life.

Dr. Callahan feels education about the fetus is the only solution to the problem. Frank sex education is also important.

A question and answer period followed the lecture. The auditorium was packed with college students. Dr. Callahan was asked what she thinks about surrogate motherhood. She called it "selling babies" and "exchanging a product, not a service." She compared it to buying a foal on a horse farm. Surrogate motherhood is extremely dangerous, she said.

The lecture was part of an Honors in Philosophy Program on ethics in the contemporary world.

Rating The Return On Your Investment: Longwood

By BILL MOORE

Having worked at a variety of educational institutions over the past 14 years, I think I can safely say that students at all kinds of colleges and universities, large and small, like to complain about their institution. It's human nature, and Longwood students are no exception to the rule; besides parking and dining hall food, the most frequent complaints seem to be about "the administration" or "administrators" (as if they were all identical clones with the same agenda: make life miserable for Longwood students) and the quality/prestige of Longwood as a college. The issue of the "administration" is an important one, but for now I'd like to address a significant topic that relates to the latter complaint: the new student assessment program.

Across the country, colleges and universities increasingly are being asked (by politicians, governing boards, parents,.....) to substantiate their claims about the education allegedly being provided. You may have noticed that college is not getting any cheaper; now serious and hard questions are being raised about the return on that investment – both from the perspective of the individual student/consumer (and his/her parents) as well as from a larger societal point of view (in the case of a public institution, the taxpayers, for instance). Virginia, like a number of other states, is now demanding that its public colleges and universities develop programs to assess their learning outcomes. At this point, unlike some other states, Virginia is not dictating a single specific test in order to make direct comparisons among the various colleges; each institution has the opportunity to define its own student goals and outcomes and figure out how to measure them. The bottom line, for the state, is that every institution assesses the learning of its students.

Which brings me back to what all of this business has to do with you, and how it relates to student complaints about the "quality" of Longwood College. If you are one of those people who enjoy complaining simply for the sake of complaining, someone who never lets the facts get in the way of his/her opinions, then you can move on and ignore the rest of my comments. For the rest of you, though, let me say that the student learning assessment program, beginning this year, is a golden opportunity for you as Longwood students (and for many of you, future Longwood alumni) to actually find out what kind of learning takes place at Longwood – to see what difference the college experience at Longwood makes in the lives of its students.

If some of the results are not positive, or not as positive as you (or your parents, or the taxpayers of the state) would like or expect, the results will help the College be able to do something about it – make the necessary improvements. On the other hand, if the results are positive, as I expect they will be, then you and the College will have concrete evidence that you have gained something from your experience here – and that is evidence you can take to the bank (figuratively and literally)!!! Either way, however, instead of having complaints about Longwood's quality or prestige, you'll have to accept having things to be proud of as well – either the demonstrated positive results or the fact that the College will take seriously its need to make necessary improvements. I know that may be tough for some of you to handle, but there it is.

So, what's the catch? (You knew there'd be a catch, didn't you??) Well, in order for this assessment program to work, you are the key; you have to be willing to participate, to complete the surveys and "tests" when asked to do so, to take them seriously and answer them as honestly and thoroughly as possible. It's another investment of your time, and I know that your time is valuable to you – mine certainly is to me, and I don't like to spend it foolishly. But if you are at all concerned about what your college degree will really mean whenever you graduate – if you are concerned about what kind of return you are receiving for the investment of your time and your money (or your parents' money) – if you are truly concerned about the quality of the Longwood education, rather than simply being content to complain about it – then the handful of hours asked of you in the assessment program will be well worth your time.

Look for more details about the Longwood student assessment program in the near future, and take advantage of the opportunity to do something other than complain, and let's see what happens.

Lucky Day

THOSE WHO POST MUST ALSO PEEL

By CHERYL JEFFREY

According to Sue Saunders, the Dean of Students, problems with posting advertisements on campus have worsened in the past year. The two main problems that have arisen are where they are posted and for how long they are posted. Ms. Saunders said that students should not post flyers, bulletins, and posters at any locations except bulletin boards. Posting them on the walls of buildings around campus has led to a problem of paint peeling from the walls. The ads should be removed within twenty-four hours of the event. It is the responsibility of the group that sponsored the event to remove the signs. If this rule is not followed, warning letters will be sent to the group that posted the ads. After a number of warning letters have been sent, that group will be denied approval for posting in the future.

To better understand the rules of posting advertisements, Ms. Saunders referred me to the student handbook. First, the ads must be approved for posting by the Dean of Students. If they are to be posted in residence halls, they must also be approved by the REC. If posted in Lankford, they must also be approved by the director of the Student Union.

Students are to post only one of each ad on a bulletin board to avoid cluttering. They must be neat, in good taste, contain all the information needed, and include the name of the event's sponsor. An ad may not in any way illustrate or suggest the sale of alcohol. Finally, if the organizations do not comply to these rules, they may lose their right to hold events in the future.

It is important for the beauty of the campus, that advertisements are posted in only the designated areas and are not left posted after the event is held. Ms. Saunders hopes that students will review these rules and follow them for their benefit and for the benefit of the campus as a whole.

Accomplished Musician Among LC's Ranks

By KAREN DALTON

There is an unknown talent on Longwood College's campus.

Erin Kelly, an 18 year old Freshman from Richmond, Va. and a graduate of Monacan High School, has many musical talents that are virtually unknown by other students on the campus. She is an accomplished violinist of five years, a pianist of nine years, a trombonist of two years, and has recently tackled the cello, which will probably soon be added to her credits as a musician.

Kelly began to play the piano almost a decade ago. She never competed but only played annually for recitals, played for church, orchestra concerts and a Forensic production. Now because of the hustle and bustle of college, she only practices thirty minutes on weekends.

Kelly began playing the violin only as an interest, which developed into a talent that has earned her awards and distinct recognition as a violinist. She started playing in an orchestra the summer before the 8th grade and received the Musicianship Award for her knowledge and talent of the violin. Kelly was during the same year awarded a seat in the Jr. All County Orchestra and received the Jr. All Regional Award.

Longwood freshman, Erin Kelly, is an accomplished violinist. She some day hopes to be a member of the Richmond Symphony.

By her Freshman year in high school, Kelly was practicing violin two to three hours a day. All of the long and strenuous practices brought Kelly a flurry of accomplishments. She was selected to play in the Jr. All County and Jr. All Regional orchestra. That same year she received the Most Improved Award and had the dubious distinction of being chosen section leader for the high school orchestra. She continued to work hard in the tenth grade as she was chosen section leader for orchestra and all county.

Kelly's high school years rolled on as she received the 4th chair 2nd violin in the Richmond Symphony Youth Orchestra, which was a step below the Richmond Symphony. Kelly attended the James Madison University Spring String and was selected as the 4th best violinist out of 75 in Maryland and Virginia. Also in her junior year, she lettered in violin and was chosen as section leader for 2nd violins in the All County Orchestra. Aside from her violin talent, Kelly was chosen as the only girl for 1st chair trombonist.

Kelly became depressed in college because of the lack of an orchestra at Longwood. Kelly says, "I worked so hard in high school and when I got here there was nothing." She remarks that "reaching one of the higher levels in life and finding there is nothing more is a complete let down." Because of her intense schedule Kelly only practices about thirty minutes a night.

Luckily, Kelly has recently started playing with the Hardy Music Foundation, which is a group who plays chamber music only for themselves. Kelly says, "I like to play for myself and not a lot of people." While playing with the group, Kelly has taken up practicing the cello.

Erin Kelly's love for music has helped her because sometimes when angry, music is a way of expressing her emotions. She plays music as a way to get stress out. Kelly states that she feels as if she is talking to a friend when playing without having to explain everything. Although Kelly does not practice regularly and does not play in an orchestra at school, music is still a part of her life and future. Kelly says that "My ultimate goal is to play for the Richmond Symphony."

Striving for Panhellenic Unity

By GWEN W. NELMS

Sunday, February 21, at 6:00 p.m., 362 girls involved in sororities attended a special meeting in Lankford's Red, White, and Green rooms.

Guest speaker, Lissa Bradford, National Panhellentic Conference Advisor for the state of Virginia visited from Tennessee to speak on Panhellenic issues.

Mrs. Bradford's topics included the history of the National Panhellenic Council and how it presently stands and its history at Longwood College.

She based her lecture on two basic themes. The first, striving for Panhellenic unity and the second, sorority rush. Rush has become an important topic because the sororities have decided to participate in a Deffered rush. According to Charlie Warner, head of Greek affairs, "Deffered rush is a formal rush during spring" and beginning in the spring of '89, this will become a standard for sororities at Longwood.

Concert Band March 1

Longwood College's Concert Band will give a concert on Tuesday evening, March 1, at 7:30 in Jarman Auditorium.

The program features four works: English Folk Song Suite by Vaughn-Williams; a contemporary work by Zeidlich that utilizes the tambours of the band in unique and innovative ways; Black Watch March by Claude T. Smith; and, in memory of Frederick Lowe, a set of selections from his musical, My Fair Lady.

The band is composed of Longwood students and residents from six surrounding counties. Ralph Mohr, Assistant Professor of Music at Longwood, directs the band.

The concert is open to the public at no charge.

Girls Take Second In Lynchburg Tourney

By KAREN BEATTIE

For some, Sunday is a day of rest. But for a group of women from Longwood, there was no rest as they took second place in the second annual soccer tournament at Lynchburg College on Friday, Feb. 21.

"I was very impressed," said coach Mitch Rubin. "The girls all came together and played well as a team."

Longwood does not officially have a girls' soccer team and therefore received no funding for this tournament. They had to provide their own uniforms and transportation in order to participate.

The team began the tournament with three successive wins in the preliminary round. They defeated Randolph-Macon, Roanoke College and Randolph-Macon Women's College. All these games were shut-outs because of a strong defense anchored by sophomore Kim Howells and excellent goaltending by senior Arita Thurman.

The games were also low-scoring offensively. Senior Chris Schup scored the game winner in the first match and sophomore Susie Baca netted two in each of the other games.

"It was tough," said Baca. "We got here not knowing what to expect, but we came through it well."

In the semi-final round the team faced Randolph-Macon for a second time. After a hard-fought, frustrating game, in which both teams missed a few opportunities, the score was 0-0.

From this, the teams went to a shootout. Longwood's girls won on goals by Baca and sophomore Laurie McCardle, but lost goalie Sarita Thurman for the rest of the tournament because of an injury.

Sweeper Howells replaced Thurman, creating a void on the defense. McCardle got the call to come back from offense to fill it.

Advancing to the final round, the team would have to play their toughest game yet.

"The girls were intimidated by Radford at first, but when the game got underway they realized that they could play on Radford's level," said coach Rubin. Radford is ranked nineteenth in NCAA Division-I women's soccer.

The game was a physical and emotional one. Radford's brutal style of play caused several tempers to flare. "It was hard because the referee wasn't calling much, and after you get shoved so many times, it kind of gets you frustrated; but it also makes you want to play harder," said sophomore Chris Anderson.

After a lax first few minutes Longwood began thwarting several offensive attacks by Radford and launching a few of their own.

At the end of the game the score was deadlocked 0-0. The team would have to go to its second shootout of the night.

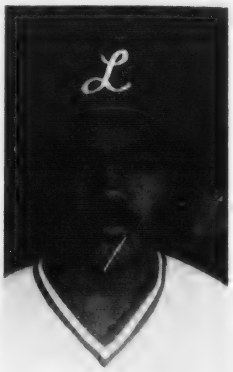
After four successive misses by both teams, Radford's last shooter scored. When Longwood's final shooter missed, Radford was victorious.

"I am very proud," said coach Rubin after the game. "The girls could have given up at any time but they never did."

Burton Named Second Team All-Mason-Dixon Conference

Longwood senior center Barbie Burton has been named to the All-Mason-Dixon Conference women's basketball second team by vote of the league coaches which was announced Sunday.

The 6-2 Burton averages 10.1 points, 8.3 rebounds and is hitting 51 percent of her shots from the floor. While helping Longwood to a 14-12 overall record and a 4-4 league mark, she led the Lady Lancers in rebounding 11 times. She also ranked among the conference pacesetters in rebounding and shooting percentage.



Pittsburgh-Johnstown guard Sally Mosay was Player of the Year in the MDAC All-Conference first team are teammates Jill Halapin plus Jenny Brown, Kim Rhock and Zena Edwards of Mount St. Mary's.

Named to the second team along with Burton were Liberty's Annetta Paraham and Kristie Mercer, Beth Dunkenberger of Randolph-Macon and Bridget Hale of Pittsburgh-Johnstown.

Davis Named Player Of Week

KELVIN DAVIS

Senior shortstop Kelvin Davis has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period February 21-28 after hitting .619 with nine runs-batted-in the first five games of the baseball season. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

Davis, a candidate for All-America honors, collected 13 hits in his first 21 at-bats with three doubles, two triples and a home run. He went 4-5 with two rbi's, a double and a triple in Longwood's 11-6 victory over Francis Marion Saturday and came back Sunday in a 9-4 loss with a two-run homer and three rbi's.

One of three Lancer captains for 1988, Davis is a .383 career hitter who has been named first team and second team All-South Atlantic Region. He hit .388 last season with a team high 35 rbi's, nine doubles and six homers.

A graduate of Halifax County High School, Davis was MVP on the State Championship team his senior year.

Stukes Heads For Omaha

Longwood junior John Stukes heads for Omaha, Nebraska, Wednesday for the NCAA Division II National Wrestling Tournament.

Stukes, the second Lancer grappler to compete in nationals, will be one of only 14 qualifiers in the 134 pound class. He won his weight class at the Southern Regional Tournament February 20 to earn the berth in nationals.

Lancer coach Steve Nelson will accompany Stukes to Omaha. The Division II championships will take place Thursday through Saturday at the University of Nebraska, Omaha.

With a Longwood best-ever 34-3-1 record this season, Stukes has an incredible 70-6-2 mark in three years of competing for the Lancers. Third on Longwood's all-time list in wins, the Deep Creek High School graduate has the best winning percentage (.897) in LC history. He has also won a record six tournament titles this season, including the state crown just over a week ago.

The Lancer wrestler also competed in the NCAA Division II National Championship as a freshman at Virginia State three years ago. Interestingly enough, John's twin brother Joe, a senior at Pembroke, will also be going to nationals as the Southern Regional champ at 126 pounds.

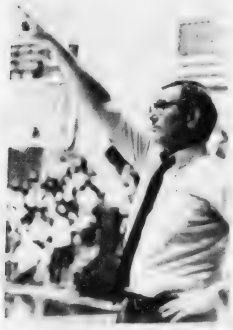
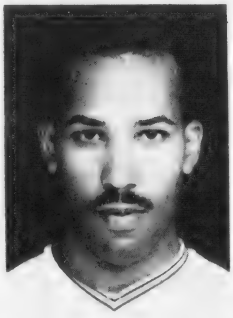
Luther Top Coach in MDAC; Rutley First Team All-Conference



Longwood basketball coach Cal Luther has been tabbed Mason-Dixon Athletic Conference Coach of the Year and Lancer junior Darryl Rutley has been named to All-MDAC first team in voting by league coaches which was announced Sunday.

The winningest coach in Longwood history, Luther led the Lancers to a share of the conference title after LC had been picked in preseason to finish at the bottom of the five-team Division II league. Longwood, 18-9 overall and 6-2 in the conference along with Mount St. Mary's compiled its best record since 1980-81.



Luther, who ranks seventh among Division II coaches in victories, has compiled a 101-83 record at Longwood in seven seasons. His overall coaching record is 387-277. He previously coached at Depauw and Murray State. He was named "Coach of the Year" once in the Indiana Collegiate Conference and three times in the Ohio Valley Conference.

Rutley, a 6-4 forward, has been Longwood's top scorer for the second half of the season. Currently averaging 17.8 points and 4.8 rebounds, he has been the team's top point producer in 12 games. He ranks among MDAC leaders in scoring and free throw percentage (.754) and has made more 3-point goals (26) than any Lancer cager.

His scoring was a key factor in an 8-game win streak which helped the Lancers gain a share of the league crown. Last season he was a second team All-Conference pick and earned a spot on the MDAC All-Tournament team.

CAL LUTHER

DARRYL RUTLEY

Player of the Year for the Mason-Dixon is Liberty's high-scoring guard Bailey Alston. Also named first team all-league were Tyrone Doleman of Pittsburgh-Johnstown, Brad Meyers of Randolph-Macon and Mike Tate of Mount St. Mary's.

Second team picks are John Moore and Mike Grimes of Mount St. Mary's, Brad Hamersley of Liberty and Todd Bowden and Charlie Boyd of Randolph-Macon.

Lady Lancers Face Pitt-Johnstown Friday in Mason-Dixon Tournament

When Longwood plays Pittsburgh-Johnstown Friday night in the second round of the Mason-Dixon Conference women's basketball tournament, the Lady Lancers will be facing their seventh game of the season against a nationally ranked team.

Longwood and UPJ will square off at 6:00 in Randolph-Macon's Crenshaw Gymnasium and at 8:00 top seed Mount St. Mary's will play the winner of a Thursday night game between R-MC and Liberty. Friday's winners play at 7:00 Saturday night for the MDAC tournament title. The pairings were determined by a coin flip after UPJ and The Mount tied for regular season honors at 7-1. UPJ lost the flip and must face third seed Longwood.

In the 21-2 Lady Cats, Longwood will be facing a team which took 98-71 and 79-62 wins over the Lady Lancers during the regular season. LC coach Shirley Duncan, however, remains convinced that her club is capable of pulling off the upset.

"We have to play well and really want it," said Duncan, "but we match up well with UPJ and I think we can beat them."

Part of Duncan's optimism stems from the fact that Longwood is back at full strength now for the first time in several weeks. Guards Angee Middleton and Ann Callaham are healthy again and will play Friday night. Middleton had been out with a sprained ankle while Callaham has recovered from a neck injury.

Longwood closed out the regular season with an 84-61 loss at the hands of nationally ranked District of Columbia last Wednesday night in Washington, D.C.

Facing its sixth game against a nationally ranked team, Longwood got 12 points from Angie Hill and 10 from reserve India Walton, but fell behind 46-26 at the half and was unable to recover. LC also got 8 points and 8 rebounds from Barbie Burton and 9 points from Annette Easterling.

Junior Sandy Rawdon tied the school record for blocked shots in a season Wednesday. Rawdon now has 42 blocks, equaling the mark Florence Holmes set in 1984-85.

Riding Team

By M.K. PHILLIPS

The Longwood College riding team placed fifth out of ten teams in an intercollegiate horseshow at the College of William & Mary. The team also competed again last Saturday at Sweet Briar College.

Placing for Longwood on the 20th were: Jennifer Smith, third in open-flat; George Schulz, sixth in intermediate flat and fifth intermediate-fences; Scott Flood, sixth in intermediate-flat and fifth in intermediate-fences; Kandi Klotz, fifth in novice-flat and second in novice-fences; Cathy Sykes, fourth in novice-flat and fourth in novice-fences; Shelly Malone, fourth in advanced-walk-trot-canter; Katherine Smith, fourth in beginner-walk-trot-canter; Sharon Kaufman, third in beginner-walk-trot-canter; Leslie Stuler, sixth in beginner-walk-trot.

Pitching Hurt Lancers

A young Lancer pitching staff ran into difficulties on the road last week as Longwood opened its 1988 baseball season with a disappointing 1-4 record.

With the notable exceptions of juniors Steve Gedro and E. J. Bryant, Longwood had little success on the mound on a four-day trip to North and South Carolina. The Lancers fell at Pembroke 6-4 Thursday, dropped a pair to St. Andrews 10-3 and 7-4 Friday, bounced back to beat Francis Marion 11-6 Saturday and fell to the Patriots 9-4 Sunday.

This week Longwood plays at Hampden-Sydney Wednesday at 3:00 and then heads to South Carolina again for twinbills at Morris Friday and Allen Sunday. The Lancers' first home games will be March 9-10 when Lock Haven visits for three games in two days.

Ailing LC Gymnasts Fall In Meet At William & Mary

By M. K. PHILLIPS

Saturday the Longwood gymnastics team was defeated by the College of William & Mary 181.50-165.95. Longwood's next meet is Saturday, March 19 at Radford University.

With the loss to Division I William & Mary, Longwood's record dipped to 3-14. Despite illness and injury, the Lancers recorded their third highest team score of the season.

Coach Budd said she feels the team "could have gotten the best score of the year if everyone was healthy." She added that the scores really were not that bad, it was just that William & Mary's scores were that good.

Top-Seed Longwood Faces UPJ-Macon Winner Friday

By virtue of a coin flip, Longwood is the top seed in the fifth and final Mason-Dixon men's basketball tournament Friday and Saturday at Liberty University in Lynchburg.

The league's surprise team at 6-2 and 18-9 overall, Longwood will play Friday night against the winner of Tuesday's first round tilt between Randolph-Macon and Pittsburgh-Johnstown. The Lancers will play at 7:00 Friday while second seed Mount St. Mary's must face host Liberty at 9:00. Winners will play for the tourney crown Saturday night at 7:30.

The Lancers have made it to the tournament semi-finals each year, but will be striving to reach the championship game for the first time.

Longwood, which had won eight straight games just two weeks ago, dropped its final three regular season contests on the road. Playing without injured scoring leader Darryl Rutley Saturday night, the Lancers fell to Atlantic Christian 77-69. Rutley stayed in Farmville to nurse a sprained ankle.

Peale to address philosophical questions

By DEIRDRE McKENDRY

Dr. John Peale, Professor of Philosophy, will give a lecture titled "The Idea of Divine Action in the World" March 3 at 7:30 p.m. in Wygal Auditorium.

Dr. Peale will address such questions as: Does God cause events to occur in human life or in the natural world? How could we determine whether God does act in our lives? Does a person's belief in God determine the actions of that person?

Such questions will be based on Dr. Peale's viewpoint of historicism. Historicism is the view that the nature of God and God's role is entirely determined by God's place in the historical process of development. For example, it makes sense that God acts in the lives of human beings. Dr. Peale agrees with that. He does not agree that God reveals himself through nature. He does not believe in nature miracles. The lecture will draw on the work of R. G. Collingwood, a British philosopher and theologian.

CHI URGES ENTHUSIASM

Longwood, through the years, has seen several secret organizations come and go. The first of these was The Mystic Three in 1897. They were followed by the I.M.M.P.S. in 1909, the Black Cats, W.A.N.K., FANGS, and Mu Omega in 1912. However, by 1930, only one secret organization existed at Longwood, CHI – and the ideals of CHI are as strong today as they were 88 years ago!

CHI, established on October 15, 1900, is a secret organization whose essential purpose is to promote and maintain a spirit of cooperation among students in every phase of college life. It is CHI's aim to foster respect for Longwood and loyalty to its academic programs and extracurricular activities. In fulfilling this aim, CHI hopes to be an organization that commits itself to recognizing the efforts of students, faculty, administration, staff and organizations of Longwood College.

Evidence of CHI's support can be seen through banners appearing at special events, signs on the sidewalks across campus, and through late night "walks". However, the real evidence of CHI can be seen in the hearts and minds of those who seek its real purpose of constructive support and cooperation. One must remember that CHI is not a group of individuals who, for one year, compose its working staff. CHI is an IDEA – never reached, but always reached for. So erase from your minds the personification of the idea, and look instead to your own sole! YOU are the spark. YOU are the flame. YOU are the CHI that Longwood respects!

CHI of 1988 encourages ALL students to take full advantage of their academic opportunities as well as their extracurricular opportunities. Support the four aspects of student life – SOCIAL, RECREATIONAL, INTELLECTUAL, and SPIRITUAL – by participating and/or supporting intramural activities, athletics, campus organizations, Student Government, Student Union, religious organizations, academic and departmental organizations (including lectures, programs, and seminars), greek organizations, and by unholding both the Honor and Judicial codes. College is a time for each individual student to learn more about himself/herself and to experience different aspects of life while learning to live and work with people of all different types. DO NOT LET APATHY RUIN YOUR OPPORTUNITIES! And remember . . . CHI IS WATCHING!

THE SPIRIT LIVES . . .
CHI OF 1988

Randolph-Macon artists

Recent work by Ray Berry, Ann Chenoweth, and Jack Witt is featured in Longwood College's Bedford Gallery through March 26.

The three artists are members of the art faculty at Randolph-Macon College in Ashland.

Included in the exhibit are paintings by Ray Berry; drawings, handcolored monotypes and etchings, and three oil paintings by Ann Chenoweth; and 11 sculptures, most of them in bronze, by Jack Witt.

Ray Berry teaches oil painting, principles of drawing and figure drawing. He holds bachelor's degrees in studio art and art history from the University of Virginia and the M.F.A. in drawing and painting from the University of North Carolina/Greensboro.

Ann Chenoweth is a graduate of Virginia Commonwealth University, with B.F.A. and M.F.A. degrees in painting and printmaking. She also has studied at the Central College of Art and Design in London.

Jack Witt's work is known throughout Virginia. His sculptures in the Richmond area include the "Fitzgerald Sundial" at Randolph-Macon, "St. Christopher" at St. Christopher's School, "Emerging Angel" at Sovran Bank, "Mr. Smedley" at Sixth Street Marketplace, and "Bill Bojangles Robinson" in Jackson Ward.

The exhibit in Bedford Gallery is sponsored by the art program of the Department of Visual and Performing Arts, the Longwood Arts Council, and the Committee for the Purchase of Art Objects by Contemporary Virginia Artists. One or more works from the exhibit will be purchased for Longwood's collection.

The public is invited to view the exhibit during the following gallery hours: Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 12 noon and 1 to 5 p.m.; Saturday and Sunday, 2 to 5 p.m.

Meaney Takes Crown In First Pageant Ever

The verdict is announced . . .

By KENT BOOTY

Kristine M. Meaney, a 21-year-old senior from Setauket, N.Y., was crowned Miss Longwood Saturday night in a Miss America preliminary before a crowd of more than 1,200 in Jarman Auditorium.

Kristine, an elementary education major who was entering her first pageant, also was the talent winner and was named Miss Congeniality. She won the evening gown competition and tied for first in the swimsuit competition.

She will compete at the Miss Virginia Pageant in Roanoke this July. Kristine receives a $1,000 scholarship provided by Golden Corral of Farmville and $650 in wardrobe expenses for the state pageant, also from Golden Corral.

Wanda Carter, a junior from Hanover, was first runnerup. She was a finalist in the 1985 Miss Longwood Pageant.

Sandra Clayton, a junior from Richmond, was second runnerup. She won the interview competition.

Anita Washington, a junior from Glen Allen, was third runnerup. She tied for first in the swimsuit competition.

Both Sandra and Anita were also runners-up in last year's Pageant. The runners-up receive, respectively, scholarships of $500, $250 and $100, all provided by Golden Corral.

Kristine is a member of Alpha Delta Pi sorority, which has dominated the Pageant in recent years. Members of Alpha Delta Pi have won five of the last six pageants.

The Miss Longwood crown was placed on Kristine's head by sorority sister Carla Lockhart, a junior from Chesapeake who was the 1987 winner. As soon as the Pageant ended, members of Alpha Delta Pi hugged Kristine on stage and serenaded her with the song, "To Thee, Alpha Delta" — just as they did last year to Carla.

Kristine was sponsored by The Fashion Post, Pi Kappa Phi fraternity, and Alpha Delta Pi. The Fashion Post also sponsored last year's winner.

For the talent competition, Kristine sang "If My Friends Could See Me Now" from the musical "Sweet Charity."

Kristine, who will graduate in December, was a four-year starter on the field hockey team. This fall, she will be an assistant coach of the team.

In addition to the two tropies she received for winning the Pageant and the talent competition, Kristine took home several other prizes provided by local merchants.

They are: a pair of pearl earrings encircled with diamonds from the Crown Collection at the Green Front; a Jantzen swimsuit from Baldwin's, a silver bowl from Cumbey Jewelers (for Miss Congeniality), a silk scarf of her choice from Travis', free manicures for a year from Tracey's "Backdoor" Salon, a bouquet from Rochette's Florist, and a sash from Caryn's Creations and Pairet's. The crown was from Martin the Jeweler.

The Pageant, which featured 10 contestants, was seen by a highly enthusiastic, capacity audience of at least 1,225. It was emceed by Sherry Thrift Bradshaw, who was Miss South Carolina 1986 and was first runnerup to Miss America.

Miss Longwood 1988

The Karen Sherrill Dance Arts Troupe, of North Carolina, was as popular with the crowd this year as last year. Members have won more than 50 first-place awards in dance competitions throughout the Southeast.

"They are one of the most outstanding and creative dance companies in the South," said H. Donald Winkler, executive director of the Pageant. "We're glad they accepted our offer to come back and perform. When one considers that many of the dancers are high school and college students, it's truly remarkable."

Karen Sherrill told Winkler that they have performed at 25 pageants and the Miss Longwood Pageant "is by far the best pageant."

The Lancer Edition, directed by John Campbell, "also was well-received, as were dancers from the Longwood Company of Dancers and the Lancer Line, who performed the Can-Can," said Winkler.

Members of the audience also were impressed by contestants, who sang, danced, played a Franz Liszt composition on the piano and did a dramatic monlogue. "Without a doubt, this was the finest group of contestants we've had in the six years I've been doing the pageant," Winkler said.

Wanda Carter sang "Going All The Way"; Sandra Clayton sang "Over the Rainbow"; and Anita Washington sang "Crazy."

The other contestants were Teresa Bunn, Amy Church, Alice Flora, Susan Holzman, Beth Miller and Holly Westenhoefer.

In one interesting twist, the judges' final results were taken on stage to Ms. Bradshaw by Caroline Webber, the 6-year-old daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Robert Webber, the Pageant's auditors.

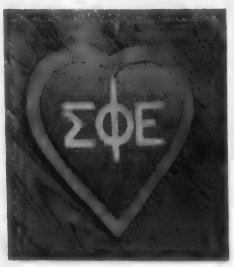
To the Editor

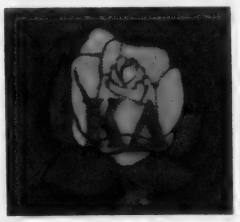
Dear Editor,



As much as I enjoy the Pi Kapp parties in their chapter room, I think it is unfair that they can enlarge their chapter room when other fraternities on campus don't even have a chapter room. I'm speaking of Alpha Phi Omega, the national service fraternity on campus. We were told that getting a chapter room would be virtually impossible because social fraternities take precedence over others such as ours. The fact that a fraternity is social or otherwise has little to do with the issues as I see it.

An APO member who didn't sign their letter to the Editor

Dear Editor,



I wish to write regarding ARA's new policy of allowing organizations to place their letters in the dining hall.

This is a ridiculous idea. The dining hall should be neutral ground, no segregations should be allowed between Greeks and certainly not between Greeks and non-Greeks. The dining hall is not the place to put "colors" where everyone comes to eat on what should be common ground.

I have heard that the SPE's were allowed to put their heart up as long as they promised to clean their dishes. Correct me if I am wrong, but it seems to me that nearly every Roundtable has the management complaining about people picking up their dishes after themselves. It seems to me that SPE's are being rewarded for what they are already supposed to do. My questions to ARA are if you noticed the fraternity not cleaning the tables after themselves why didn't you take managerial action and speak to them or offer punishment? My next question to management is: how are you going to reward the GDI's for taking up their dishes and for choosing to be an individual and not be a member of the Greek society?

All one has to do is to look at the "Greek" section of the dining hall to see dishes piled up. On a Friday evening while eating lunch I noticed where the "Greek" section, especially the "Delta" section was cluttered with dirty dishes. I asked an ARA worker, who was cleaning tables nearby, to ask a lone Delta to clean the messy table where he was sitting. She said it would probably do no good. I asked, "why not go tell management?" and she said they would not take any action either. It seems to me that most of the dirty tables are left by male Greeks and yet it is these same organizations who get a privilege which is not available to everyone. There seems to be a lack of logic in the thinking of ARA management.

I have also been behind a Greek who had left his I.D. at his room at the "cardclicker" let him into the dining hall. However, when a GDI had the same problem the same "cardclicker" sent him back to get his I.D. There were no extenuating circumstances in either case. It seems to me the Greeks are already given opportunities not available to the GDIs on campus.

However, that is not the issue at hand. The Greeks can display their colors in numerous places on campus. They do not need another area on campus for Greek publicity battles. The dining hall should be a place for all to enjoy. There have been great improvements made in the interior of the dining hall over the four years that I have attended Longwood, however the "graffiti" on the drinking area walls distract from the overall aestheticness of the dining area. When visitors come to Longwood they will see the letters but is this the proper place for them to be seen? Let's hope not, for Longwood has more to offer individuals than different Greek organizations. I feel ARA is making a mistake by encouraging segregation to take place in what used to be a place for all individuals to come together and socialize while eating. I think it would be best if ARA withdrew their permission for letters to be displayed in the dining hall and for them to realize that we as students are all equal and would like one place on campus to come and enjoy ourselves regardless of what organizations we belong to.

A Disappointed Student who didn't sign their
letter to the Editor.

Students are really fed up with the amount of vandalism at Longwood.

Every weekend students are faced with one huge mess when they walk into their dorms after a relaxing weekend. Do the students know that come the end of the year they (as all students) are going to pay for all the damage done?

Why is it that some students purposely break windows every weekend, and tear up the dorm they live in? Do the students not care about the college they attend?

Most Longwood students are proud to be here, take pride in the school's appearance, and are even participating in the beautification of the campus. However, if the vandalism of some students does not cease, the helpful work of many will go unnoticed due to all the trash, beer bottles, and graffiti on dorm walls and elevators.

We believe it is a matter of self pride and the level of maturity that some students at Longwood are lacking. If students get their act together and start taking some pride in their school, dorms, and mostly their own well being, the problem of vandalism will cut down.

To those of you this article pertains to, the next time you think of breaking a window or door or maybe even throwing trash on the ground, think also of the many students who will be paying for your stupidity.

Dina Schiano

Dear Editor,

It has recently come to this student's attention that a serious infraction of Longwood students' privacy has been occurring. Longwood employs numerous students to work in various positions in the administrative offices. They are greatly in need of these jobs and deserve them, but are working under administrations that are evidently in need of management improvement.

While working in these offices, the students have access to financial and academic records of other Longwood students. If the duties the employed students perform in their jobs require them having access to other students' records, then those duties should be altered. The administrative offices that employ the students are disrespecting all students' privacy by allowing this infraction and need to seriously review their administrative policies.

I, as a student, do not want any other students to know my financial and academic standings unless I choose to disclose the information myself, and am probably not alone on this sentiment.

LONGWOOD BUSINESS INNOVATION CENTER SEEKING NINE INTERNS

By MATT PETERMAN

The Longwood Business Innovation Center (LBIC) has announced nine openings in its internship program for next semester. As an intern, one would perform the "day to day activities of the Center and be involved in managerial and technical assistance projects," according to Dr. Larry Minks, Executive Director of the Center.

Students chosen for the internships not only participate in many aspects of management and gain valuable experience, but also earn three credit hours. Applicants should be from the School of Business and Economics and preferably be attending Longwood in the Fall of 1988 as well.

LBIC opened its doors last year to promote four primary objectives: To help stimulate economic, industrial, and community development programs, to improve new enterprise formation and development, to enhance the level of productivity and human resource development, and to improve organization development methods and processes.

Through the year, with the help of Longwood students, it has assisted new and existing organizations to become more competitive, prosperous,and has helped them expand.

According to Dr. Minks, "The Center was recently cited in a bulletin by the National Alliance for Business and U.S. Department of Commerce as one of the most innovative approaches to rural economic development established in the past year."

To demonstrate its commitment to results, Dr. Minks cited that: "the Center has serviced over 150 client requests since its opening on October 28, 1986. We have also worked with over 25 organizations in providing either project work and/or managerial and technical assistance throughout the region and state."

The Center is currently expanding in many ways. Plans are in the works to branch the Center out to various locations in Southside Virginia. This includes "the delivery of two weekend entrepreneurship courses designed for entrepreneurs and small business managers." These will be delivered around the state. Two major research programs include a Forest Products Industry Project and a Rural Economic Development Monitoring and Research Program.

The Center invites applications for internships for the FALL semester. Applications and resumés need to be submitted prior to March 30. Interns this semester include: Katherine E. Grooms, Tamara C. Jones, Laura Patrice Landers, Diane J. Sage, Somer Sloan, Heidi Greenberg, Jesus A. Strauss, Tim Tabler and Tom Maroney.

Aerobics for Heart to Start

An "Aerobics for Heart" program – a fund-raiser for the American Heart Association – will be held at Longwood College on March 30.

Groups of Longwood students will do aerobics from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. in Lancer Gym. They are currently seeking pledges.

The event is sponsored by the Physical Education Majors Club, the Therapeutic Recreation Organization, and Delta Psi Kappa, a physical education fraternity.

Several persons will take turns leading the aerobics for 30-minute segments. Registration is 6 p.m. Prizes will be awarded to the students who raise the most money.

Don't Forget About Money

GET YOUR MONEY

Any club or organization that wishes to apply for MONEY should pick up a petition in either the information office, the Student Union office or Phyllis Mable's office.

The form is due to Ricky Otey by April 3, 1988 not March 7 as stated. The SAFC will notify you of hearing times.

Forms must be turned in by April 3, 1988. Pick them up soon.

The Awarding of the John Dos Passos Prize to Lee Smith and her reading, scheduled for March 22, have been postponed because of a serious illness in Ms. Smith's immediate family.

The event will be rescheduled.

Finance Club Has Big Plans For Future

By Veronica Klaras

A Finance Club has been organized this semester. It usually meets on Mondays at 6:15 p.m. in Hiner 106.

The Finance Club has held a few meetings already. The members are trying to arrange a field trip to the Federal Reserve Bank in Richmond.

Finance Club officers are:

President – Carey Stoner

Executive Vice President – Hilary Silvera

Vice President of Promotion – Ricky Otey

Vice President of Membership – Erel Turkekal

Vice President of Programing and Meeting Arrangement – John Colangelo

Treasurer – Wendy Nenninger

Secretary – Kim Bunn

The Finance Club has big plans for this semester as well as next semester. Arrangements for finance speakers are being organized.

Students will receive hands on experience with the stock market by playing a game using fictitous dollars.

Members will also provide tutoring services for all students taking finance classes.

Job advice as well as discussions on job opportunities will be discussed, as well as advice on exams such as the Certified Finance Planning Test.

The Finance Club is interested in having speakers which will involve the entire community. These will help citizens with taxes and other related issues. The club will benefit the community as well as Longwood College.

FUNDRAISER IS BIG SUCCESS

Peoples Drug was the local beneficiary of a St. Patrick's Day fund-raising effort in Farmville by members of the Longwood Chapter of Kappa Delta Sorority.

Collegiate and alumnae members of Kappa Delta collected donations at Peoples the week of March 14-21. In addition, they sold doughnuts on Saturday the 19th. Thousands of Kappa Delta members across the country took part in the fund raiser to benefit local affiliates and chapters of the National Committee for Prevention of Child Abuse (NCPCA), the sorority's national philanthropy.

Eighty percent of the funds collected will remain in Prince Edward child abuse prevention programs. The remaining 20 percent will go to the NCPCA for nationwide public-awareness programs.

Kappa Delta Sorority began supporting the NCPCA in 1980, and began the annual, nationwide Shamrock Project in 1984. More than $410,000 has been contributed from the fund raisers to support child abuse prevention efforts throughout the country.

Central America and U. N. Peace Talks

By MATT PETERMAN

PANAMA: A general strike has been called by opposition leaders in an attempt to oust military strong man General Manuel Noriega. The strike that began yesterday could paralyze the Panamanian economy if it is as widespread as planned.

In other developments, General Noriega rejected a package entailing his exile offered by the United States. The deal included a pledge that he would not be extradited from Spain. Noriega's intentions of staying in Panama with a role in politics were not met so he rejected the deal. In the meantime a state of emergency has been imposed and protests are planned until he leaves.

HONDURAS: On the request of Honduras government, President Reagan sent 3200 troops to bases near the Honduran/Nicaragua border. The troops not sent to participate in combat were basically sent for support and a show of force against further Nicaraguan border incursions.

The Nicaraguan government sent troops in pursuit of the Contra rebels subsequently crossing into Honduras. Honduras did some bombing of Nicaraguan troop positions. Later it was discovered that the Nicaraguans were planting mines along the border. As of yesterday Honduras was doing reconnaissance flights finding that most of the Nicaraguan troops were for the most part out of their country.

NICARAGUA: Yesterday marked the first time the Nicaraguan government sat down with the Contra rebel leaders inside of Nicaragua. Past peace efforts have failed.

The Nicaraguan government still claims that none of its troops crossed the border into Honduras and put its troops on full alert to repel what it thought was an impending invasion.

Moscow's March 15 deadline on the withdrawl of Soviet troops from Afghanistan passed with no agreement in sight.

The U.N. sponsored talks began weeks ago, and according to U.N. Diplomats an agreement to have Moscow start to withdraw its estimated 115,000 troops by May 15 is almost complete.

The key snag so far has been when the U.S. should cut AID to the Afghan resistance and the Soviets to the Puppet Government of Afghanistan.

Black Greeks — Not What You Think

By JAMES HACKLEY

The presence of black Greek letter organizations can be found on virtually every American college campus. There are eight principal black Greek organizations that compose the existence.

The four major fraternities are Omega Psi Phi (founded 1911 at Howard University), Alpha Phi Alpha (founded 1906 at Cornell University), Kappa Alpha Psi (founded 1911 at Indiana University) and Phi Beta Sigma (founded 1914 at Howard University).

The existence of black Greeks on predominately white campuses is often misunderstood by non-black students, faculty, and administrators. The traditional practices of black Greeks are often feared or ridiculed because they are not understood. Non-black observers often have problems watching black pledges walk in a line uniformly dressed with serious faces. This serious dedication is often considered entirely unnecessarily or even "hazing" by spectators.

Pledging and other duties are taken seriously by black Greeks and they take pride in their actions. Uninformed opinions and biased observations only take away from the never-ending dedication that all Greeks share.

Summer Field School Going Forth

By MICHELLE CIPOLLETTI

Discover the past by joining Longwood's Summer Field School in Archeology.

Dr. James W. Jordan, Director of Excavations will hold a meeting Thursday, March 24 at 1:30 to 2:00 p.m. in Hiner, Room 206. The exact enrollment for both sessions will be set, information on how the work will be organized, and a schedule for completing registration will be discussed.

Two sites will be featured this summer, the first being a prehistoric Indian site located in the Virginia Piedmont. The Morris Field site is on the Appomattox River. It dates back to the period 7,000 years to 500 years before the present.

Dr. Jordan, director of Longwood's Archeology Field School, at Locust Grove, built about 1775, home of Revoluntionary War hero Peter Francisco.

The second site to be worked at is a colonial site located in Buckingham County; specifically the home of Peter Francisco, in Locust Grove. Students will delve into the life of this soldier of revolutionary fame. A fearless folk hero from the American Revolution, Francisco was named "Washington's one man army."

Students will learn excavation techniques and ultimately acquire decision-making processes required of all professional archaeologists.

SGA Budget Approved

By RICKY OTEY

On Thursday the Student Senate approved a figure of $4200 in expenditures for the Student Government Association for the next fiscal year. The SGA will actually request only about half of the $4200 from the Student Activity Fees due to the fact that the SGA will carry some funds forward from this spending year.

SGA President Ricky L. Otey stated that the budget represents a 30% decrease in spending from the previous year. The major expense is the Judicial reform which Otey says has been a major project for the SGA.

The budget also calls for the SGA to support two special projects: One is a basketball camp for the young people of Prince Edward County. The SGA is trying to acquire the services of Jerome Kersey for the camp. Vice President Tim Hale is heading up the committee to plan the event.

The other project the SGA will support is a "crime stoppers" program for the college. "The increase in vandalism will not be tolerated. Communication Coordinator Sebastian Volker has worked hard to set up this program and has requested that we support it. I concur with that request. There is no place in our society for this type of juvenile behavior. We must bring the perpetrators to justice," Otey stated for the Senate.

Successful Alumnae Returns To LC

Johnston to Direct PETER PAN in April

Theater owner and actress Melissa Johnston once believed "doing theater isn't really work." Fortunately the '76 Longwood graduate abandoned that philosophy to help create the Richmond Theater Company, a troupe which gave 1500 performances last year to children in Virginia and neighboring states.

Ms. Johnston described her path to success in an interview with Bonnie Angresano, staff member of the Office of Career Planning and Placement.

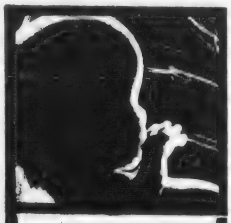
The owner of the nonprofit touring Children's Theater also starred in the local production of Top Girls. Her performance as Marlene won her the distinction of Best Actress of 1987 by theater critic Robert Merritt.

As artist-in-residence, Ms. Johnston will direct Longwood's upcoming play, Peter Pan. She will also teach a class in children's theatre.

The entrepreneur took an indirect route in achieving her career goals, but discovered that her experiences outside theater proved beneficial in her present position.

Following graduation she worked for a furniture leasing company, an employment agency, in sales and as an assistant in the Richmond revitalization program.

She said, "Even though my previous jobs had not been satisfying, I learned vital skills that I put to use in the job I love.



"I use all the marketing, management, sales, accounting and office skills to run my own company.

"We have grown in five and a half years to be a quarter of a million dollar company!"

She added, "My current position includes directing and producing plays. I not only oversee the actors, but I supervise the technical aspects, such as lighting and costumes as well.

"I am the literary manager, so I select the plays we use, which are original works by local playwrights, and work with them to adjust the script and plot so they work well."

Ms. Johnston ended her success story with some savvy advice. She said, "Do what you like and are good at. Don't be intimidated by what it's like out there. If you want to make it in New York, you can do it. Whatever you do, don't settle!"

PAGEANT AUDIENCE "PLEASED WITH THE OUTCOME"

By HOLLY PREBLE

The Miss Longwood Pageant Saturday night proved to be an exciting event. There were many highlights for the evening – including the dynamic Karen Sherill Dance Arts Troupe, the Lancer Edition and, of course, finding out who would be the next Miss Longwood.

The pageant began with a bang when the energetic dance troupe rocked with "The Rhythm Is Gonna Get You." The contestants then introduced themselves while showing their stuff in bathing suits. All of them have smashing figures.

After the sesquicentennial minute and the impressive Lancer Edition, the talents of the contestants finally got under way. When I heard Wanda Carter sing "Going All the Way" with pure emotion I felt sorry for number two; however, Beth Miller turned out a charming monologue.

Other impressively talented contestants were Kristine Meaney, who sang "If My Friends Could See Me Now," Theresa Bunn, who played the piano piece, "Hungarian Rhapsody #2," and Alice Flora, who sang "Hard-Hearted Hannah."

The second half of the show was filled with more crowd pleasers; energetic dancing, impressive clogging from Sherry Bradshaw, MC for the night, and the evening gown competition.

While showing their beautiful gowns, all the contestants told the audience of their future ambitions, except Sandra Clayton, who gave a quote from Shakespeare. Most of the contestants said something pertaining to their education or theatre major, but Susan Holzman and Holly Westenhoefer gave quite different outlooks because of their different majors. Susan is a speech pathology major and will help others to overcome their speech impediments, and Holly is a German major who wants to help our country by becoming a foreign diplomat.

Finally, the night heightened to a climax when the time came to announce the runners-up and Miss Longwood '88.

Anita Washington took third place, Sandra Clayton second place, Wanda Carter first place. Miss Congeniality, the Best Talent award and Miss Longwood '88 were all won by Kristine Meaney.

A few comments from some Longwood students: "I was definitely pleased with the outcome. The show was very organized.I was never bored – except during the sesquicentennial minutes."

"I thought the Dance Art Troupe was awesome. The Dirty Dancing theme really caught the attention of the audience."

"Carla Lockhart was very poised. I loved her speech – it was natural and sincere."

Congratulations to all ten contestants who worked so hard for the pageant and who had the guts to go up on stage representing Longwood College.

Makuck: More Than The Average Man

By CHERYL JEFFREY

Peter Makuck, who gave a poetry reading at Longwood last week, may have seemed like an average middle class man, but there's more to him than what appears on the surface.

Makuck, a Connecticut native, received a bachelor's degree from St. Francis College, in Maine, a master's degree from Niagra University in New York, and a Ph.D. from Kent State University in Ohio.

One may wonder what gave Makuck the motivation to pursue such an extensive education. He was first inspired to become a poet when he read William Faulkner's short story, "Barn Burning" during his freshman year in college. Although Faulkner was not noted as a famous poet, he did have unique use of language in all of his works. This aspect fascinated Makuck. He also gained an interest in the sounds of other languages as a result of being exposed to Polish, Latin, and Italian during his youth.

Makuck's poems deal with topics such as the outdoors, sports, his family, and his experiences while living in France. At the reading last Tuesday night, Makuck read approximately twelve poems that brought forth these topics, along with various other ones.

One of his 'outdoor' poems was about the masculine qualities found in working construction. In another poem, Makuck used tennis to unify the ideas of sports and love.

He also wrote a poem about a 26 year old man who was killed while hang-gliding in a French village Makuck lived in.

Makuck is currently a professor at East Carolina University, and serves as director of ECU's Poetry Forum. In addition to his teaching, he is editor of Tar River Review, a poetry publication.

His own publications include Breaking and Entering, which contains short fiction, Poetry: Sight and Insight, a poetry collection/anthology, and two poetry books: Where We Live, and Pilgrims.

Finnish Students To Spend Time In Farmville

By DR. NELSON D. NEAL

From March 30 to April 6 Longwood College students will have the opportunity to meet and live with 35 Finnish students who have chosen to visit our campus over Hungary or Greece. These 4th year physical education majors from the University of Jyvaskyla, Finland want to visit Virginia for their annual trip. If you're wondering why they chose to come to Longwood for a 10 day trip it's because from 1983 through 1987 Longwood had a teacher exchange program with Jyvaskyla which allowed seven Finnish professors to teach at Longwood and eight Longwood professors to teach over there. The students decided that since so many teachers had been exposed to our college and because they knew some of our teachers they would come and see Longwood and Virginia for themselves.

If you have a vacant bed in your room or suite and would be willing to have one of the 16 men or 19 women stay in your room please contact the Department of Physical Education for details. Call 392-9266 to make a new friend and learn about the life styles of the Finnish people. I'm sure you'll enjoy their company as much as I did when I lived and taught in Finland.

Ex-Lancer Star Kersey Making His Mark In The NBA

By MARK KIRK

When National Basketball Association teams search for players to fill out their rosters, they usually look to the major colleges for help.

Rarely do performers from the small college level survive the final cuts of NBA squads. However, there are exceptions to this rule. One such exception is former Longwood College star Jerome Kersey, who is currently terrorizing opponents for the Portland Trail Blazers.

Picked by the Trail Blazers in the second round of the 1984 NBA Draft, Kersey has steadily progressed since early in his career when he was considered a marginal prospect by most experts.

This year, in fact, he has taken the opportunity and put it in a stranglehold. As of March 11, he was averaging the following numbers: 20.3 points per game, over eight rebounds, nearly four assists, 51% field goal percentage, and 74% field goal percentage. All of these numbers are drastic improvements over his career averages.

Kersey has also enjoyed great success in single games this season. Take a look at some of these numbers:

— February 12 vs. Denver: 34 points and 20 rebounds in 40 minutes.

— February 28 vs. Atlanta: 35 points, sank 35-foot 3-pointer at the buzzer to win the game.

— March 8 vs. Dallas: 33 points and 15 rebounds in nationally televised game, voted player of the game.

— December 31 vs. Philadelphia: 36 points (career high)

There are two major reasons for Kersey's sudden rise into the NBA spotlight: more playing time and improved shooting.

Most of his career highlights before this season were of the dunking variety: runnerup to Michael Jordan in the 1987 NBA Slam Dunk Championship, winner of the 1986 Blazer Summer Slam Dunk Championship, and so on.

However, his fortunes began to change after his second place finish at the '87 Slam Dunk Championship. He began to score more points and gain more notoriety, as shown by his being voted "Best off the Bench" for Portland by the Blazers' fans. Moreover, his teammates selected him as co-captain of the team along with Terry Porter.

This success was closer to that which he endured at Longwood. After graduating from Bluestone High School in Skipwith, Va., the future NBA star began his dominant career for the Lancers.

His four year stay at Longwood netted him many records and honors. A small sampling of the Kersey record sheet at Longwood would include the following:

— most points scored, career: 1,756 (17.0 average)

— most rebounds, career: 1,162 (11.3 average), game: 26 twice action's leading Division II rebounder as a senior

Add to that the honors of NABC First Team Division II All-American (senior), Virginia College Division Player of the Year (senior), and Mason-Dixon Conference Player of the Year (senior). That's only telling part of the story!

However, Kersey feels Longwood helped him in more ways than in just molding him into a star basketball player.

"I've always been a hard worker," Kersey told Jaynes in the Hoop magazine article. "But being there (Longwood) really helped in that regard.

Baseball Team Takes Two

Kelvin Davis, Bill Conroy, Mark Moeller and Robbie Smith combined for seven homeruns in two games over the weekend as the Lancer baseball team routed St. Mary's Saturday 22-2 and Christopher-Newport Sunday 12-6. The Lancers had dropped a 7-2 decision at Old Dominion University Wednesday.

Now 9-6, Longwood hosts Shaw Tuesday for two, visits Bridgewater Wednesday and hosts Division I West Chester Sunday at 2 p.m. A game at Liberty, originally scheduled Saturday, has been moved to Monday (March 28) at 3 p.m.

Longwood has now clouted 24 homers this season and the long ball was crucial in the victories over St. Mary's and CNC. Davis had a record-tying seven RBIs and two homers in Saturday's victory and came back with a two-run dinger in Sunday's win. The senior shortstop is currently hitting .610 with 33 RBIs, eight homers, eight doubles, and three triples. His RBI total is just two short of the 35 leader Jeff Rohm accumulated in the entire 1987 season.

In Christopher-Newport, the Lancers beat a Division III team which had knocked off Norfolk State the day before. The Captains held a 2-0 lead after two innings as right-hander Mark Parnell fanned seven in a row, before Longwood got on the board.

Senior Robert Jackson, of Farmville, got things started with a two-out single and Davis followed with his eighth homer to tie things 2-2. When the CNC rightfielder booted his fly ball down the line, Moeller made it all the way to third. Conroy put the Lancers ahead to stay with a blast over the fence in left-center for a 4-2 lead. He also had a two-run homer in the fifth.

E. J. Bryant, of Lynchburg, picked up the win to even his record at 1-1. The junior went five innings, giving up six hits, two earned runs, walked none, and struck out five. Senior Steve Gedro picked up a save with four innings of relief. He struck out five and walked one. Parnell recorded 12 strikeouts, but gave up 12 hits.

Gymnasts Fourth In Regionals

Longwood's gymnastics team, in what coach Ruth Budd termed an average performance, finished fourth in the USGF Southeast Regional Meet at Indiana University of Pennsylvania Saturday night.

The Lancer gymnasts will next turn their attention to a meet Friday night at Radford starting at 7:00. Longwood will wind up the season in the Virginia State Meet April 2 at James Madison.

Host IUP won the team title with a 180.05 and IUP's Michelle Goodwin was the all-around winner with a 36.5. West Chester was second at 170.5, Navy third at 168.65, Longwood fourth at 166.75 and East Stroudsburg fifth at 160.45.

Budd praised Natalie Taylor for her showing. Taylor was Longwood's top place winner with a fifth on floor and a 9.15 score, best on floor for a Lancer gymnast this season. Taylor scored a 32.05 all-around for 16th place.

"I was proud of Natalie," said the coach. "She worked hard over break and had a real good meet."

LC Ties For Fourth At Peggy Kirk Bell Invitational

Senior All-American Tina Barrett started her spring season off with a bang over the weekend, winning the individual title in the Peggy Kirk Bell invitational women's golf tournament at Windermere Golf Club in Orlando, Florida, while leading Longwood to a tie for fourth place out of 16 teams.

Barrett, the two-time NGCA Division II individual champ, shot 73-82-76-231 to edge Tracy Chapman of Indiana (73-86-73-232) for the crown in a field of more than 80, mostly Division I, golfers.

While Missouri (957), Indiana (959) and Kansas (984) finished one-two-three, Longwood charged back from a first day standing of ninth to tie Iowa State and Wisconsin at 993. The Lady Lancers shot 327-346-320-993. Coach Barbara Smith's team had the second best score of the day Sunday (320) behind Indiana's 312.

Also contributing to the Longwood showing were Gretchen Pugh, 88-87-78-253, Marcia Melone 85-89-80-254, Ashley Warren 87-88-88-263 and Leigh Russell 82-89-86-257.

Softball Opens With Wins of MW

By MICHAEL PHILLIPS

The 1988 Longwood softball team opened its season in impressive fashion Thursday as it won both ends of a doubleheader at Mary Washington, 8-4 and 15-5. The Lady Lancers will be in action again when they host UNC-Greensboro Tuesday at 2:30 in a doubleheader.

Longwood was led by senior captain Tina Hall and freshman Pam Fitzgerald as they each went six for eight on the day. Hall was 4-4 with a double, two triples, and five RBIs (including the game winner) in the second game. Fitzgerald contributed three doubles, one triple, and five RBIs for the day as she went 4-5 in the second game and knocked in the game-winning run in the first game.

Going the distance on the mound for coach Loretta Coughlin were Anne Douglas Miller in the first game and Stacey Thompson in the second. Miller gave up only three hits as she struck out three and walked two. Thompson gave up six hits, walked three, and struck out one.

In the second game the Lady Lancers needed a four-run fourth inning to secure their second win. Longwood's eight runs off seven hits in the final inning was just icing on the cake. Ten LC batters came to the plate in the seventh, including senior Jill Everett who hit her second homerun of the game during the inning. Everett finished the evening going 3-6 with four runs and four RBIs.

Player of the Week

Senior Tina Barrett won the individual title at the Peggy Kirk Invitational women's golf tournament Friday through Sunday, and has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period March 13-20. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

Longwood's top all-time golfer, Barrett shot 73-82-76-231 to beat Indiana's Tracy Chapman (232) and more than 80 other competitors. Barrett led LC to a tie for fourth place out of 16, mostly Division I teams. Winnng the Peggy Kirk Bell was perhaps Barrett's most outstanding regular season tournament victory.

A three time All-American, Barrett has won two NGCA Division II individual titles and qualified for the NCAA Women's Golf Championship three years. In addition, she has been named an Academic All-American by both GTE-CoSIDA and the NGCA the last two seasons.

She recorded a stroke average of 75.3 in the fall season with tournament finishes of second, first, fifth and seventh. Last spring she led Longwood to its first national crown in women's golf as the Lady Lancers won the National Golf Coaches Association Division II title.

McDonald's To Co-Sponsor Longwood Soccer Classic

McDonald's of Farmville and Appomattox, owned by Fred Russell, will co-sponsor the 1988 Lancer Alumni Soccer Classic October 15-16, Longwood soccer coach Rich Posipanko announced today.

Now called the McDonald's/Alumni Soccer Classic, the tournament will feature Longwood, Gannon, Davis & Elkins and Shippensburg. Posipanko says the event will be one of the top three NCAA Division II soccer tournaments in the country next fall.

"We certainly appreciate the support of Fred Russell and McDonald's," said Posipanko. "With the sponsorship of McDonald's and many loyal soccer alumni and friends, we hope to make this the best tournament in the country in future years."

Longwood, ranked 13th in NCAA Division II last season, ended up with a fine 14-4-1 record.

Duncan Gets Scholarship

Longwood women's basketball coach Shirley Duncan has been selected as a scholarship recipient for the American Coaching Effectiveness Program (ACEP) Leadership Training Seminar March 29-30 in Seattle, Washington.

Sponsored by the Women's Basketball Coaches Association, the seminar is being held in conjunction with the WBCA National Convention. After completing the seminar Duncan will give WBCA/ACEP clinics in Virginia next fall.

Duncan, who led Longwood to a 14-13 record in the past season, has coached the Lady Lancers to a record of 67-67 in five years. Three of her five teams have had winning records.

Lacrosse Faces Rebuilding Year

By MICHELLE KROLIKOWSKI

Longwood's third year women's lacrosse coach Sue Finnie faces a year of rebuilding with only five returners from last season. The Lady Lancers will face two Division I teams and a variety of competitive Division II teams this season.

In its first games last week Longwood was defeated by Hollins 10-9 Wednesday on the road and beat Guilford 10-8 Sunday (see results below). This week the Lady Lancers play at Randolph-Macon Woman's College Friday and at Georgetown Sunday.

Co-captains Mary Collins and Chris Schup are expected to have their best year yet. Collins was the second leading scorer last season with 12 goals and Schup was chosen as the top defender. Coach Finnie will depend upon the leadership and experience of her captains to lead this year's young squad.

Also returning from last year's 2-6 team are sophomores Judy Flannagan, Terri Pugh and Katy Thiel. Schup, Flannagan, and Pugh will be the anchors of the defense. Top newcomers include freshmen Analise Lage, Rashel Hammond, Betsy Day, Molly McGrath and Tina Insley.

Sunday, Collins scored five goals and Pugh two as Longwood evened its record at 1-1. After a 3-3 halftime tie, the Lady Lancers scored four goals at the beginning of the second half for a 7-3 edge. Pugh and Schup had one each and Collins two in the second half string. Also scoring for LC were Insley and Lage.

Women's Tennis Team Opens Season

By ROBERT SMITH

The Longwood women's tennis team opened its season March 6-13 at Hilton Head, South Carolina in a week of tough matches. Longwood faced several Division I teams and came out with a 1-5 record.

Swarthmore, East Carolina, and Guilford each handed Longwood 9-0 defeats, while Bryn Mawr and Emory & Henry defeated Longwood by 6-3 scores. The lady netters bounced back with a 7-2 victory over Virginia Intermont. Despite the losses, the Lady Lancers believe that they are a much stronger team this year and are hoping for another winning season.

This week Longwood visits Mary Baldwin Wednesday and Bridgewater Thursday before returning home to play Elon at 1:00.

Diane Rogers, a senior and strong point of the team, is seeded in the number one position on the ladder. She finished with a 1-5 mark at Hilton Head. Diane had a fine 7-6 record last year.

Another strong point of the team is sophomore Laura Crigger. Laura finished last season with a 9-2 mark and is one of the most competitive players on the team. Currently number two on the ladder, Crigger is looking for a solid season.

Lauri Labyek is next in the lineup followed by senior Karla Boggs. These Lady Lancer netters are looking much stronger than last year and both expect to have a good seasons.

Mary Lawman, Laura Vollrath and Traci Moore finish out the top seven on the singles ladder while Rogers and Boggs are at the top of the doubles ladder. Crigger and Elizabeth Cho team up with Labyak and Linda Swe to complete the ladder. Lady Lancer newcomer Paula Bleiler is also expected to add depth to this team of netters.

"New" Building Houses Registrar and Study Room

By MATT PETERMAN

A two year old dream for Longwood has been fulfilled with the move of the registrar to the newly renovated Barlow Building.

Last week Longwood's newest facility came into service with an aura of confidence — now better able to accommodate a population of over 2800 students.

Students ready to register in one week need no longer brave long waits and cramped hallways to complete the bi-annual ritual.

Boasting a lobby and a spacious environment coupled with extra computer terminals, the students' visit should be a brief and pleasant experience. However, because of another built in option it doesn't necessarily have to be brief.

A built-in 24-hour study room is also a feature of the "new" building. Set to open April 11, the room will be equipped with 2 computers with printers, and various furnishings, like desks, sofas, ect.

The study room will be guarded with a close circuit camera monitored by campus police around the clock. Vending machines, such as a hot drink and possibly a Coke machine will be placed near the study facility.

Under the guidance of Susan Mcglamery, a registrar administrator, The Rotunda was given a behind the scenes tour in order to get a well rounded view of the "new" building.

Beyond the receiving windows there exists a new world. In comparison to "old" Barlow one would be amazed.

A new staircase tucked away in the back leads up to another wonder — spacious offices. Also located upstairs is a lounge and a conference room.

Back downstairs is located much needed storage space, the records vault, and numerous pieces of electronic equipment which is the heart of the registrar's office. The new facility is also fully equipped to handle the handicapped.

The old registrar offices are to be converted into offices in an attempt to accommodate Longwood's growing population of educators and administrators.

FUTURE LIBRARY WILL BE ABLE TO MEET STUDENTS' STUDY NEEDS

By DEIRDRE McKENDRY

A new library will be built on Longwood's Campus. Longwood will receive the money for building the library July 1988 or March 1989.

The library will be situated between the Wygal Music Building and the Lankford Student Union Building.

Longwood's "New Library: A Preplanning Study Update" states, "The present library building was constructed in 1938; an addition was completed in 1960 giving a total of 32,178 assignable square feet. Based on projected space needs, State Council of Higher Education Space Analysis Forms dated March 31, 1987, Longwood needs 55,700 assignable square feet of library space to meet guideline requirements for 1992-93 – a deficiency of 23,522 assignable square feet."

This preplanning update also states that the current library is extremely overcrowded because of the lack of reader space.

Every possible area in the current library is being put to use, the update states. The current library's 232 user seats are enough for only one-twelfth of the existing student body, not one-fourth, which is the standard.

The update states that several rooms presently house many different pieces of equipment. This limits the times the rooms are available for any one person or group.

The report also states the audio equipment is used in an area where others are reading. The noise factor from the audio equipment is often distracting to the other readers.

Regarding the state of the current library, there is not enough room in the reference extension room. This room is used to house materials that cannot be shelved. The room is also used for computer on-line searching, a system used to locate materials that are not in our library.

There are only six librarians employed by Dabney Lancaster Library. They work on two different floors, so it is difficult for them to help students.

The addition to the library, built in 1960, was designed to accommodate a student body of 1,674 students. The current student body totals 3,126. There is less space to store books and non-print items for the existing student body.

The new library will have compact shelving, which saves space. Materials that are not used often will be stored on such shelves.

Rooms where groups can view the video players will be in the new library.

Periodicals and reference materials will be located together in one area, because the most help is needed in using these.

The new library will have one circulation desk instead of two circulation desks, as the current library has.

Longwood College requested Senator Howard Anderson and Delegate Watkins Abbitt Jr. to sponsor a budget amendment for constructing the library. Longwood requested $7,002,542 for the job, as well as $63,412 for books and periodicals.

The state funds institutions for the purchase of library books and periodicals through a formula. The formula takes into account the students, faculty, and academic programs Longwood has. The governor's budget proposed that funding for books and periodicals for the library be less than 100% of the guidelines, while Longwood requested a budget amendment to raise funding for the books and periodicals to 100% of the guidelines.

"Follies" Benefits Go To Local Charity

By TIM BRANDENBURG

Alpha Phi Omega's (APO) Faculty Follies, held Thursday night in Jarman Auditorium, raised $431 for Domestic Assistance for You (DAY). DAY is a local non-profit organization that helps victims of domestic abuse.

After the performances were made, the check was presented to the President of the Board of DAY, Kathe Taylor, and Executive Director for DAY, Carlys Taylor.

The last Faculty Follies for a long time were performed in 1969 and were not put on again until 1986. That year Colleen Vaughan, Service Vice President for APO, resurrected the Follies. Junior James Boston, Senior Page Pence and Vaughan led the committee this year.

"Each year I wanted to increase our goal," Vaughan said. This year's Faculty Follies doubled the profits of last year's.

"The Faculty Follies have two goals," Boston explained. The first is to raise money for DAY and the second is to "intermingle faculty, staff and administrators in a non-academic atmosphere as well as to promote school spirit."

The Faculty Follies were made up of nine acts, which included comedy, dancing, lip-sync, singing and other displays of faculty talent.

After the show Vaughan said, "I hope that Faculty Follies will live on."

To the Editor

GREEK PLAQUES: She likes 'em . . .

Dear Editor,

I wish to write a letter in reply to the ridiculous letter criticizing the Greek plaques recently placed in the dining hall, written in the March 22 issue of the Rotunda.

Firstly, the plaques are not a reward for us, the Greeks, for keeping our tables clean. We were given permission to put them up, but were warned that we would lose that privilege if our tables were not clean, because busing our own tables is our responsibility as much as it is that of the GDI's.

As the author of that letter may not have noticed, the "independent" area is always littered with dishes, napkins, and the like. Perhaps the author needs some incentive to stop acting like a pig.

As far as the Deltas and the SPE's having a privilege which is not available to everyone, that is entirely untrue. Independents are allowed this privilege, if they choose to join a Greek letter organization. What would the independents like to post in the dining hall? I'm certain ARA would allow it!

Secondly, the author is obviously blind to the fact that the Greek System is the backbone of Lonwood College. Although we are a minority, perhaps making up 25-30% of the total student population, Greeks are the most vivid aspect of student life at our college. Look at the staff of the Rotunda, for example. Several of them are Greeks. Who do you think runs SGA? Well, one of the officers is one of those "messy" SPE's, and many of the other members are also Greeks.

Who do you think sponsors all those social activities that both Greeks and GDI's attend? Well, AXP sponsored Farm-Aid with the help of the sororities on campus. What about SPE's pig roast? ZTA's Best Man on Campus Contest? Who do you think planned the midwinter's dance? Who participates in Oktoberfest and spring weekends with booths and activities? Largely, THE GREEKS. And who enjoys all of this? The GDI's. Only those GDI's who go home every weekend and never go to the snack bar on Tuesdays (hosted by ΠΚΦ) and D.T. Bradleys on Wed. and Thurs. (hosted by Greeks) can say your social life is not affected by Greeks. Like it or not, Greeks sit on Judicial Board and take active roles in everyday student life. We are proud of our school, of our individual organizations, and of the Greek system in general, and taking advantage of privileges like putting our plaques in the dining hall is simply a way of showing it.

I would like to apologize to those independents who feel comfortable with their status at Longwood and don't feel the need to make waves. It is too bad that a minority, such as the author, can cause such problems as to make the whole look bad.

In direct address to the author, if you feel so strongly about your position, why can't you sign your name? In the future, I ask you not to criticize what you obviously cannot understand. To use an old cliche', "don't knock it 'till you try it." We have as much right to this school as you do, and we're not going to hide our Greek pride because you choose to remain non-Greek affiliated. I am as much as an individual as you are, but I am also proud to be a member of a Greek letter organization, which has been an enriching and satisfying aspect of my college years. I'm proud to see my letters wherever I go, because I know what they stand for and mean to me. And if Longwood College tells me we can paint them on the building walls, we'll do that too.

Thank You,
Anne Meade Stockdell,
Sister of Zeta Tau Alpha

. . . but she doesn't

Dear Editor:

I am writing in response to last week's "Disappointed Student" who complained of the segregation of the Dining Hall by Greeks vs. Non-Greeks.

The Fraternities and Sororities are permitted to display their letters as an incentive program in exchange for cleaning up their dishes. As a dining hall worker I have seen improvement in their habits. You may recall that the SPE heart was taken down one day because they did not take up their dishes. As any psychologist would confirm, such positive reinforcement by giving privileges is more effective than negative reinforcement – in the long run.

In my opinion, this program is working well, and it has been the most effective as yet. If you or anyone can come up with a better idea to encourage people to clean up their dishes, then please submit it to Sheri Nunn in the dining hall. As always, ARA is open for suggestions. Please be patient; however, and stay tuned for developments on a similar incentive program for non-Greeks as well.

As far as visitors to Longwood are concerned, I feel they will benefit from the preview they will receive of the Fraternities and Sororities before attending Longwood. I myself was totally in the dark about Fraternities and Sororities when I began at Longwood. Alpha Sigs? What are they? Was my bewildered response. Where else can Fraternities and Sororities show off their colors and letters but in their individual chapter rooms? The segretation, however, has always been there. Why not turn it into something positive?

Tracey McGregor

Campus is green, but dark

To the Editor,

I'd like to state, first of all, that I like all the new landscaping that is popping up all over campus. It looks really nice and it is much needed. All this is fine and great, until we fall over it at night. Longwood is very poorly lit, if you haven't noticed. Why can't they use some "tree and bush" money and put up some lights?

I despise walking across campus at night. I don't like to go to the library or walk to classes, or go see friends in other dorms. There is not sufficient light between Frazer and Curry and anywhere else on campus unless the tennis court or Iler Field lights are on.

Now, let's face it, the tennis court lights stay on for hours at a time whether or not anyone is playing. If Longwood will stand for this, why won't they put up more cost efficient night lights at the campus's dark spots?

Another thing that is in the way of Longwood's students traveling by foot on campus, is the new deck outside of Lankford. Lankford is the center of Longwood and every student on campus goes there at least once a day. This new deck is right in our way. When walking from Frazer, Curry or any building on that end of the campus to the other side of campus, people usually take a straight shot. This line is now intersected by our new deck!

So we walk around it, on the grass. Did anyone bother to notice that when it rains, as it so often does here, this area is nothing but mush?

Now, in case of rain, we will have to weave in and out of the deck to get where we are going. Why didn't they build the deck over the marshland? The deck is built over a foot high over concrete. By George, why couldn't this be put over ground that gets mushy every time it rains, thus establishing some desperately needed solid ground.

If there is so much money to plant trees, tear them out of the ground and build decks, why can't we have just a few lights to see where these new additions are at night?

A Frazer Resident who is in the dark.

Peace, '88 Vote and Shultz

By MATT PETERMAN

• A tenative peace agreement in Nicaragua between the ruling Sandanista government and Contra rebels developed this past week.

The peace could end the 7-year old civil war between the two parties. The agreement comes as Nicaragua appears to be intiating some democratic reforms.

The Reagan Administration is pushing forward for more aid to the Contra — both lethal and humanitarian. Basically based on the theory that aid will make the Sandanistas keep their word.

Analyzing the situation, the peace appears to be a delay tactic on the part of Nicarguan President Daniel Ortega. Delaying real action against the Contras until Reagan is out of office.

• In Saturday's Democratic caucus in Michigan, Jesse Jackson swamped his rival, Gov. Micheal Dukakis with 54. of the popular vote. Dukakis' showing was 281.

With this latest Jackson victory, he comes within 12 delegates of taking the "front-runner" position. Dukakis seems to be winning the support of the "anyone but Jackson crowd" and probably will pick up many of the Gephardt supporters.

Richard Gephardt decided to drop out of the race Monday winning only 131 of the popular votes in Michigan. He must file his papers by today in order to declare himself a candidate for re-election to the House of Representatives.

• Secretary George Shultz met with two representatives of the Palestine National Council (PNC), the legislative body of the Palestine Liberation organization (PLO) over the weekend.

The meeting located in the State Department touched off much protest. Israel claimed that the U.S. violated a promise not to meet with the PLO or any afflitive groups. The U.S. claims it met the two men as American citizens.

Shultz discussed the peace initiative in Israel — seeking some insight into the other side of the story. Shultz is preparing for another visit to the Middle East on Easter. The State Dept. was quick to point out that the meeting means no shift in U.S. policy.

Discovering Eating Disorders

(Falls Church, VA, March 17, 1988) – A recent government study estimates that one out of every 200 young women is likely to develop signs of anorexia nervosa in her lifetime, and 15 to 20 percent of all college-age women suffer from bulimia. In an effort to reduce these alarming statistics, Dominion Hospital and other mental health facilities have declared April 10-16 to be Eating Disorders Awareness Week.

Anorexia nervosa is a condition in which women and men have grossly distorted views concerning their body size, seeing themselves as fat when they are as much as 25% below normal body weight. This belief leads them to drastically cut their caloric intake and to exercise obsessively to shed unwanted pounds, leaving their bodies undernourished and susceptible to disease.

Bulimia is a condition where the woman or man is trapped in a cruel cycle of gross overeating followed by a purging of the food from the digestive system through self-induced vomiting or excessive use of laxatives. The body does not retain the food long enough to extract the nutrients and vitamins that it needs.

Both conditions are illnesses that can have serious health consequences.

Early diagnosis and treatment are important in keeping an eating disorder from having long-term effects on the body. Over time, the detrimental behavior will intensify and the person may lose control over her of his actions. Left untreated, serious health problems will develop such as malnutrition, damage to the internal organs, fluctuations in heart rate, deterioration of teeth and gums, and even death.

Everyone should be familiar with the signs associated with eating disorders:

Anorexia Nervosa

•intense fear of becoming obese;

•incorrect perception of body image, e.g., claiming to look or feel fat when very thin;

•weight loss of at least 25% of original body weight;

•eating very little, not eating in front of others, playing with food at meals rather than consuming it, eating very small quantities of low calorie foods;

•obsession with exercise.

Bulimia

•frequently eating large amounts of food in a single sitting;

•no noticeable weight gain (even when overeating has been observed) or obvious fluctuations in weight;

•consumption of large quantities of sweets, foods that are considered "forbidden" or foods that are easily purged later such as ice cream, pizza, chocolates, or foods high in carbohydrates.

Lancers Move Win Streak to Five; Face Liberty, St. Augustines, UMES

Rebounding from a 1-4 start, Longwood's baseball team has won 11 of its last 13 games, heading into a rugged week of action. The Lancers will seek to extend their five-game win streak at Liberty Monday, at St. Augustine's Thursday and at home Saturday against Maryland Eastern Shore (1:00).

Solid pitching and timely hitting helped Longwood win three games last week as the Lancers edged Bridgewater 4-2 in a 12-inning cliffhanger Wednesday on the road, and swept a twin bill from visiting Shaw Tuesday 7-5 and 11-1. A single game with West Chester Sunday was rained out.

Longwood, now 12-6, got solid pitching from Frankie Watson, E.J. Bryant and Steve Gedro and a big hit from shortstop Kelvin Davis Wednesday in the win over Bridgewater. A bases-loaded single by Davis in the top of the 12th gave the Lancers a 4-2 lead, but Davis almost went from hero to goat in the bottom of the 12th.

After Gedro retired the first two Eagle batters on infield grounders, Davis made two straight errors to keep Bridgewater's hopes alive. A walk loaded the bases. Fortunately for the Lancers, Gedro got the next batter to fly out to Eric Hutzler in right field, preserving the win.

Watson, who has fanned 27 batters in 27 innings, started for the Lancers and turned in a masterful performance. The sophomore struck out 10, walked two and allowed just three hits and two runs in seven and one-third innings. Bryant, who has an earned run average of 2.76 came on in relief with one out and runners at second and third in the eighth.

The Eagles scored one run on an infield out and got another on a base hit to tie the game 2-2. Gedro came on in the 10th and shut down the Eagles on one hit over three innings while moving his record to a team best 4-0. He has a sparkling ERA of 2.59.

Gedro also got a hit in the 12th inning rally, scoring from second on Davis' game winning single. Hutzler had opened the inning with a walk and scored what proved to be the winning run ahead of Gedro.

It was Jackson who delivered the key hits Tuesday in Longwood's sweep of Shaw. The third baseman had a two-run homer in each game, along with a triple and a double, and went 4-7 for the day with seven RBIs. A four-run first inning gave the Lancers a lead they would never give up in the opener. Watson and Bill Conroy drove in two of the runs.

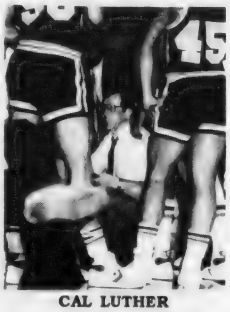
Freshman Matt Carlisle pitched a complete game for the victory. Now 2-2, Carlisle allowed seven hits and five runs, while striking out four and walking four.

Another freshman hurler, Butch Trent went the distance in the second contest. He allowed just three hits and one run, struck out three and walked three in six innings of work. Trent is now 2-1.

Longwood, hitting .333 as a team has been led by senior Kelvin Davis. Davis tops the team in at-bats (70), runs (26), hits (40), RBIs (36), doubles (8), triples (3), homers (8) and batting average (.571). The shortstop already has more RBIs than 1987 leader Jeff Rohm got all last season (35).

Jackson, also playing a solid third base, is close behind with a .387 batting average, 24 runs, 24 hits, 16 RBIs, four homers, and 10 stolen bases in 10 attempts. Freshman first baseman Moeller is hitting .364 with 24 hits, 16 RBIs and four homers, with second baseman Criscione is batting .346 with 14 stolen bases in 17 attempts.

Outfielder Robbie Smith, who missed the last three games with a pulled hamstring, is hitting .385 with a pair of homers in nine games. Designated hitter Bill Conroy had driven in 12 runs with four homers and four doubles.



NABC Names Cal Luther Top Coach In District

Longwood basketball coach Cal Luther has been voted Kodak Division II "Coach of the Year" in the South Atlantic District it was announced today by the National Association of Basketball Coaches.

"I share this award with our players and assistant coach Ernest Neal, who played major roles in our success this season," said Luther. "We had an exceptionally hard working group of players and coach Neal did an outstanding job as well. I am very grateful for the honor."

The winningest coach in Longwood history, Luther led the Lancers to a share of the Mason-Dixon regular season title and a runner-up spot in the league tournament, after LC had been picked in preseason to finish at the bottom of the Division II league. Longwood, 19-10 overall and 6-2 in the conference along with Mount St. Mary's, compiled its best record since 1980-81.

Luther, who ranks seventh among Division II coaches in victories, has compiled a 102-84 record at Longwood in seven seasons. His overall coaching record is 388-278. He previously coached at Depauw and Murray State. He was named "Coach of the Year" once in the Indiana Collegiate Conference and three times in the Ohio Valley Conference.

CAL LUTHER

Last year he was inducted into the Murray State University Athletic Hall of Fame.

Luther, who had earlier been named Mason-Dixon Conference Coach of the Year, expressed gratitude to his fellow Division II coaches for voting him the honor.

Shelton, Chenoweth Lead LC

Freshman Cindy Shelton and junior Lynda Chenoweth turned in standout showings for the Lancer gymnastics team Friday night, but it wasn't enough as Radford took a 177.55 to 170.30 victory on its home floor.

Longwood turned in its top team score of the season at Radford, but the Division I Highlanders had too much depth down the line for coach Ruth Budd's squad. The Lancers, 3-15 for the year, will wind up their season Saturday at 1:00 in the Virginia State Meet at James Madison. Also competing will be Division I's JMU, Radford and William & Mary.

Shelton placed third all-around (35.25), fourth on beam (8.7), third in vaulting (8.75 and tied for second in floor (9.0) Friday night. Chenoweth was fifth all-around (34.25), fourth on bars (8.7), fifth on beam (8.5) and tied for fifth in floor (8.75).

Room Sign-up Guidelines

Room Sign-Up for the Fall semester of 1988 is here. The following are important items of information that you may use to help you through the process.

General Policies

1. Student Fee Deposit of $150, Readmission Fee of $10, and Damage Deposit of $100 must be paid before Room Selection. Fees paid after March 25, 1988 are considered late payments.

2. Students taking the professional semester with Student Teaching are considered resident students and must pay all fees before participating in Room Selection. Students engaged in out-of-town experiences for an entire semester are considered day students and may NOT sign up for residence hall rooms.

3. The College reserves the right to designate the capacity of each room and make changes when deemed necessary, and to fill available vacancies after the Selection Process.

4. All students are considered resident students unless they have been released from the residency obligation prior to the Room Selection Process. Those with pending requests should select a room and roommate(s).

5. Following the completion of the Room Selection Process, all assignments for the fall semester are FIXED. Changes will be considered only in extreme circumstances and may be completed only by the Housing Office.

*NOTE: More students can be satisfied, if everyone follows the procedures. Students who do not adhere to this schedule, or who attempt to gain unfair advantage by misrepresenting themselves in any way, will forfeit any priority they may have, and their requests will be accepted only after all other students have been accommodated.

How would you like to save 25% off of your Housing bill for next fall? You can do this if you are willing to share a standard double room with two (2) other students. Upperclass students who voluntarily live in expanded occupancy rooms will be eligible to receive this rebate.

F.A.R.: Find A Roommate — If you are looking for a roommate for next Fall, please come by the Housing Office to complete a Roommate Search Card. On April 11, there will be a meeting to help match people together. We will have a specific person to suggest for you and we would like for you to meet each other before you live together.

Cotillion Club "goats" a thing of the past

By JAMES BOSTON and ANNE SMITH

One of the many organizations that have come and gone since Longwood began is the Cotillion Club. It was, in fact, very similar to our present Student Union.

The Cotillion Club, organized for social purposes, really fulfilled them, for it gave the two main social events of the year – the fall and spring Cotillion dances.

At the beginning of the fall semester, 40 upperclassmen were invited to join the Cotillion Club. For a week, these girls proudly wore their traditional green and yellow ribbons around their ankles.

The fall "goats" were joined by new spring "goats" in March, freshmen and transfer students. The dawning of "Goat day" found the "goats" running to and fro, doing errands, and carrying out small tasks expected of them. The tired but happy "goats" finished their day of initiation by appearing at "goat court" that night. As a final task, the "goats" decorated the gym for the spring dance.

The big day of the annual Cotillion Club dance came in April. That night, happy couples entered the gym, which was beautifully decorated. The dance was one to be remembered always. After the dance, there was still much in store at the after-dance party, which made the weekend complete.

To sum up what the Cotillion Club was, we will close with an excerpt from a yearbook from the 1950's.

"What price fun – goats unfashionable and unattractive in appearance – made to do the meanest of tasks – all for the glory of dance. But this humiliation is soon forgotten upon the first thrilling strains of a really good orchestra. Low lights reflecting graceful silhouettes – shimmering chiffon – silvery satin – corsages – "best beaux" – spectacular transformation of the gym – that is Cotillion, climaxing the social events of the fall.

That gay scene appears once again, ever more brilliantly in the spring, to top all social activities of the year - with an afternoon dance and a graceful formal figure at the evening dance. These gloriously typical college events were made possible by the Cotillion Club. Organized for social purposes, it completed with vividness the school year."

Psych Club

By TERRY TEBAULT

The Psychology Club at Longwood is well under way in full force and ready for a powerful semester.

Activities for the semester include a raffle for a prize of $100. The drawing was on March 4. Another fundraiser the club is working on is a flea market. If anyone has anything to donate contact the club's president, John Parsons, at 392-5007.

The dues are $2 a semester and one doesn't have to be a psychology major to join. "Anybody who wants to join, please come to the meetings," says Parsons. Club officers are:

President—John Parsons

Vice President—Norma Gillespie

Secretary—Michelle Pointer

Treasurer—Kirby Moore

Club Sponsor—Phyllis Wacker

The next Psychology Club meeting will be March 30, 7:00 p.m. in the Red, White and Green rooms in Lankford. After the meeting the members plan to bowl a few games. All are welcomed to join in on the fun.

"Winds of Color"

The Longwood College Company of Dancers will present a concert on Thursday and Friday evenings, March 31 and April 1, at 7:30 in Jarman Auditorium.

The program, entitled "Winds of Color," will feature 10 numbers, including ballet, tap, jazz, and modern dance. "It's definitely a versatile and colorful program," said Tammy Tipton-Nay, director of the 11-member Dance Company.

The dancers also will perform an improvisational piece by Cynthia Reynolds, the principal female dancer with the Erick Hawkins Dance Company in New York City. The work was developed during Reynolds' one-week residency at Longwood in January.

Dr. Nelson Neal, director of Longwood's dance program, will perform a dance he choreographed with Susan Hanks, president of the Dance Company.

Another feature of the concert will be music by Pat Cook, instructor of music at Southside Virginia Community College. She will play the ukulele and sing.

The dance performances are open to the public free of charge.

Koto and Flute

A concert of Japanese music featuring a koto – a traditional instrument that resembles a long dulcimer _ will be presented at Longwood College on Wednesday, March 30.

Kyoko Okamoto will give the concert at 8 p.m. in Wygal Auditorium. It is free and open to the public.

Okamoto will be accompanied on the flute by Wendy Palmore, a Longwood student.

The koto is a six-foot-long zither with 13 silken strings that are plucked with ivory picks fastened on the right thumb and the index and middle fingers. It originated in China about 200 B.C. and made its way to Japan, via Korea, by about the eighth century.

Okamoto, who lives in Silver Spring, Md., founded the Washington Toho Koto Society in 1971. She performs as a solo artist with the Society, which consists of about 60 koto players.

ANOREXIA FATAL

By TERRY TEBAULT

One of the major concerns students have, especially females, is how they look. So much emphasis has been put on being thin that people are doing everything possible to be accepted into the "thin" society, even if it means taking dangerous routes.

Anorexia Nervosa is an eating disorder that could be fatal. Reports have indicated that more women are considered anorexia than men. These people consider themselves fat and therefore will eat very little or none at all and exercise constantly. Soon anorexics are wrapped up in their obsessions and don't realize just how hazardous it has become.

According to the American College Health Association, an anorexia could display some of the following characteristics:

— extreme weight loss

— low self esteem, depression

— hyperactive exercising practices

— weighing several times a day

This is a problem that needs medical attention. Once given help these people could overcome their compulsive behavior, otherwise it could lead to their deaths.

Step Show Takes State Theatre Stage

By SHERI LYNN STANFORD

For many students, the high point of spring semester is Longwood's celebration of Spring Weekend.

One of the many different activities going on during this Spring Weekend is the Black Greek Step Competition being held on Saturday, April 9 at 4 p.m. at the State Theatre on Main Street.

The six black greek sororities and fraternities competing in the show are: Alpha Kappa Alpha; Delta Sigma Theta; Alpha Phi Alpha; Kappa Alpha Psi; Phi Beta Sigma; and Omega Psi Phi.

The step shows have usually been held in the Commons, located between Curry and Frazer Dorms. This year, "we'd like to try something different," says Lisa Redding of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority.

"The theatre allows a bigger stepping floor, and the use of a stage gives each group a chance to add theatrics and props to their performance if they choose," Redding adds.

Due to the growing popularity of step shows, the theatre will also provide more audience seating than the Commons as well as the use of lighting and sound equipment.

Another new twist to this semester's step show is that each group will be competing against one another.

Each group will be judged on appearance, precision, creativity, crowd appeal and difficulty.

There will be nine judges, six of whom will be an advisor or graduate member representing each sorority or fraternity, and three members of faculty and staff.

Stepping has been a tradition among black greeks for decades. Members of each sorority or fraternity perform chants, songs or raps and combine them with synchronized dance-like movements called "steps."

Many of the steps performed by each sorority or fraternity have been done for years, but many chapters choose to add some special aspect to the step to make it unique.

Many groups are known for some characteristic of their stepping techniques. For example, the members of Kappa Alpha Psi make use of canes in their routines.

"A lot of students really look forward to the step shows, this year more than ever because it's going to be a competition," says Gary Austin, a member of Phi Beta Sigma. "It's an opportunity for each organization to showcase their talents."

Because this is the first step show competition, everyone is working hard to win the trophy. Some put in more than 4 hours of practice per day.

Stepping can be physically demanding. A routine can become exhausting after performing for a half an hour, which is the maximum length of each performance during this year's competition.

Not only is stepping demanding physically, but also mentally, "You have to totally relax or you will most likely make mistakes if your concentration isn't focused on the performance," says Tracy "Bone" Fisher of Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity. "Lack of concentration can lead to total mental breakdown," Fisher goes on to say.

The black greeks take their stepping very seriously. Not only are they entertaining an audience, "we are carrying out a part of our tradition," say Michelle Pointer of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority.

This may be the reason why the step shows have become popular among everyone, not just Longwood's black students.

If you're looking for some unique entertainment during Spring Weekend, stop by the State Theatre and watch Longwood's black greek organizations play out one of the many aspects of their very

First Neophyte Band Series Performance Coincides With The Weekend's Festivities

By SCOTT LOVING

Sophisticated Noise, the first group participating in the WLCX Series of Neophyte Bands, will perform on Lankford Mall Sunday, April 10, at 3:30 p.m.

The band consists of Kevin Cox and his brother, Darrin Cox, who both alternate between guitar and bass; Graham Davis, keyboards; and Phred, the group's drum machine. Vocals are shared by Kevin and Darrin.

The group boasts a variety of rock and roll sounds, including a few songs by the Police and several original works.

Sophisticated Noise formed as an artistic outlet for when the band members are not playing "serious stuff". Kevin played in a jazz band over the summer, but missed rock and roll.

The event, sponsored by WLCX, is free to the general public.

Fraternity and Sorority Housing: To be or not to be?

As at many other colleges, fraternities and sororities have played a role in life at Longwood College for many years. Unlike most other colleges, however, these organizations have also gone without off-campus housing separate from non-Greeks at Longwood for several years.

The argument against this type of housing is that it would upset the peace for local residents, but there are many advantages that offset this excuse.

First, these houses would be bought by the school and rented out by the fraternities or sororities. Second, there would be more open residence and study rooms on campus for non-Greeks, since many Greeks would be moving.

Third, Greek parties would be easier to arrange off-campus, since there would be more space. Moreover, all of the noise created by fraternity parties, etc. would be kept out of the campus dormitories.

Finally, a fraternity or sorority could also hold more fund-raising events, such as movies or no-cost attractions like dinners for under-privileged people.

Of course, there is the noise problem for Farmville residents. This could be solved if the houses were placed in an area which would not disturb residents. If all parties involved met with each other, it is likely a logical plan could be finalized. After all, the college makes this town what it is and its students deserve something in return.

When smoke gets in your eyes. . .

It has happened to almost everyone. You enter an elevator and you are greeted by a milky haze and putrid tobacco odor. These signs tell you one thing: smoker on board.

It is bad enough that these people are creating a fire hazard and breaking a law. But what about the personal harm being done to the non-smoking faction at Longwood College?

Riding the elevator from one floor to the next takes about 10 seconds, but it only takes three seconds for cigarettes to cause harm, even to non smokers. Being in a small area like an elevator for that amount of time with someone with a lit cigarette has several harmful effects. It increases heart rate and blood pressure and replaces oxygen in the blood with carbon monoxide — not to mention the smell it leaves in your clothes and hair.

Also, there are people who have allergies to tobacco smoke. Just riding in an elevator with a lit cigarette can cause any number of reactions.

To smoke or not to smoke, it's personal choice. But smokers, have a heart, take consideration when riding the elevator. Put your cigarette out before you get on or light it up when you get off.

When you see someone puffing away on an elevator ride, ask them to stop. Point out that it is a fire hazard and a law violation. Do what you have to, but have them put out the cigarette. It may only be a 10 second ride, but it's your life.

Poor planning affects turnouts

Dear Editor:

I am writing due to the fact that because of poor campus-wide planning, the Student Union lost a total of $6000.00 on Feb. 27, 1988. This is extremely unpleasant news, because the S-UN budget for 87-88 was only $5000.00.

Feb. 27, 1988 was the Saturday that the 1964 concert, the production of Grease, the AXP Beach Party, and the ROTC Ball at Hampden-Sydney were all planned for.

There is supposed to be an understanding that on nights that S-UN has arrangements to provide some form of entertainment for the student body, no one may start activities until after S-UN is finished. This would be a nice agreement if it was followed exactly, which it was not.

First of all, the production of Grease was planned after S-UN already had authorization to go ahead with the 1964 concert.

The next problem arose when it is taken into consideration that the AXP Beach Party, while not officially started, had a group of party goers there sometime before 10:30. This probably had a detrimental affect on the outcome of the concert.

And, although the ROTC Ball was held at Hampden-Sydney, it may have greatly reduced the number of potential concert-goers.

In order to schedule any event as it now stands, it is necessary to go to the head of the department, or person in charge of the organization that it is to be presented by to get authorization. In many cases, such as this one, much confusion is created by this process. This time the problem happened to be too many events on one night, but the reverse is often demonstrated when there are absolutely no events on others.

Because scheduling tends to be so poorly planned, many of the campus activities fail. It seems that a logical solution would be to institute an office expressly for the purpose of deciding who may provide what activities at what times. This way there would be a largely reduced amount of over and under scheduling. This may not affect any off-campus activities, but it will decrease much wasted time, effort, and money on unattended and underattended events for all organizations.

Oops! Apologies to Tracey McGregor for falsely labeling her as an "anti-placquer" last week.

Greek plaque conundrum lives on. . .

To The Editor:

I've been reading a lot about 'Greek Plaques' recently in The Rotunda. It strikes me, after seeing the name-calling put forth in an unsigned GDI letter, and in Ms. Stockwell's letter, that the issue isn't whether or not Greeks can put up their Letters, but rather whether or not GDI's are better than Greeks or vice versa.

I'd like to attempt to answer some of the arguments raised on both sides, both of which I deem ridiculous (and therefore get some of my own name-calling in).

First, on the GDI side: why do you consider these plaques (and perhaps the Greeks as well) garbage? The plaques (and the Greeks) do add a bit of color and flavor to this college. The Greek System provides a 'family away from family'; i.e. something 'special' to its members.

More To The Editor

In making border distinctions, you sometimes have to let everyone else know LOUDLY, that you consider yourself different from the masses. There is absolutely nothing wrong with this—it's natural.

It seems as though a section of GDI's are frightened of being 'outside' a Greek group. My word on this parallels Peter Gabriel's: "there's safety in numbers/when you learn to divide," meaning if you're scared of being 'outside', make an effort to get 'inside'.

Finally, think: What will plaques, Greeks, or GDI's matter to you in 5 years?

Next, to the Greek side. Definitely not all, maybe not most, but many Greeks' attitudes I've run across are that, "if you ain't Greek, you're excrement." This is fairly apparent in Ms. Stockwell's letter. she points out that "the Greek System is the backbone of Longwood College." This idea holds about as much water as the one about the Earth being flat. As much as some Greeks would like this to be, it simply isn't.

Since the intended purpose of coming to Longwood is to learn, and not to party, it seems to me that the "backbone of Longwood" is the student body and the professors, working together.

As to GDI's reaping the harvest of the Greeks, this is only partly true. In my time here, I have seen a large number of Greeks at GDI 'functions' (which may or may not have been legal parties, but since they do happen, so there's no point in ignoring their existence).

To those Greeks who think that Longwood will fall apart without them, I offer a quip from Frank Zappa: "Just remember, there's a whole lot more of us UGLY mothers out there, than there are of you BEAUTIFUL people."

In closing, I offer the thoughts that both GDI's and Greeks have their strengths and weaknesses, and more importantly, an organism, at war with itself, cannot accomplish much.

of my friends involved in those groups I will admit that some do a lot of good around our fair campus.

Not every organization was presented with an offer of putting up a plaque. Yes I'm a GDI. I think we should make the walls student activity oriented. Oops I forgot, the service fraternity was told there was no more room on the "walls". Guess the Longwood Players (my group) don't stand a chance of getting up there, and we have a cute plaque. While I have your attention I want to complain about a few other things. Let's hear it for faculty and staff driving on the sidewalks. Do these people know where the road is? I think I found a solution to the parking problem, just park on the sidewalk. Maybe we can't get away with it because we pay the school and not visa versa.

A Concerned Student Finally Signs A Letter!

Well Hot Damn, it's about time Longwood had some good controversy going on! I haven't heard such gabbing since Jeff Abernathy was editor of this fine paper. Remember when he put cows on the cover right after the Miss Longwood Pageant?

I don't like the Greek Plaques. I think it's biased. Not everyone wants to pay $300 a year to an organization so they can know what to wear on Wednesdays. But for the sake sounding sarcastic.

As far as "hosting" a local drinkery is concerned, all I've seen is the organization associating within themselves: their night out. I thought hosts were supposed to mingle and make everyone comfortable and happy. I'm just glad that when I attended these hosted events I went with a group of friends I didn't have to buy.

About cleaning the tables — the situation has gotten better over the years and I'm sick of reading about it. Maybe we could read about the Honor Code instead, or the correct way of putting toilet paper on the dispenser. Maybe someone could complain about the filthy goldfish pond outside Stevens. DOESN'T ANYTHING BUT near death and having one of our learned educators complain that your coughing and sneezing are distracting.

I won't even mention teachers that are never in their office during office hours or advisors that make you take unnecessary classes. Remember preregistration a few years ago? I was late to rehearsal (a student activity) because I had to attend a lecture on student activities in order to pre-register.

I would, as a senior, also say good riddance to Rick "do we have a building called South Cunningham" Weible; to Financial Aid Office (Wall Street they ain't); to campus police who were out giving parking tickets when the Deltas and Pi Kapps started fighting.

Long ago I said goodbye to a thing called mixers in the Lower Dining Hall. There used to be more than just eating going on down there.

I miss not seeing Jan Greenwood at school functions. I did see her pass through Lankford Mall last year during the graduation party. I felt the need to hide my beer.

For those Greeks and GDIs that are so in favor of non-conformity, I like to ask why so many people label themselves "concerned student" when they write to the paper. Have some guts and some pride in being an individual. I really do like Longwood, but I bet I fooled ya

To The Editor:

Should the student body be denied privileges to an athletic facility which has ample space and is much in demand?

Longwood possesses a generous-sized weight room which could easily provide the student body with the facilities needed to maintain a health regime, yet the weight room is open only at odd hours and only for a few hours at a time.

By opening the weight room to students at various hours, the college is providing an outlet by which students can find a release for all the built-up pressures of the day and at the same time build their physical stamina.

On the other hand, Longwood has to provide and pay someone willing to watch and possibly assist all who use the weight facilities. Student safety is one of the main concerns any campus faces.

It seems that a compromise could be reached in this situation. The college could allow students to run the facility, and instead of receiving money, the students could be allowed to use the weight room as a type of payment.

Last year 105,000 Americans under age 65 died of heart attacks. In fact, 45 percent of all heart attacks happen to people younger than 65. If you're old enough to be concerned about heart disease, be wise enough to take the steps recommended by the American Heart Association to reduce your risk. Don't smoke. Reduce the fat and cholesterol in your diet. And control high blood pressure. Act now. Because it's never too early to start taking care of yourself.

Softball Team Win Six in a Row

Longwood got its sixth win in a row in the third game against Coastal Carolina, but the Lady Lancers needed another extra inning to do so. Again tied 3-3 after seven, Longwood went to work and got three runs in the top of the eighth. Coastal Carolina got one run in the bottom of the inning as Longwood held on to a 6-4 victory. Hall proved to be Longwood's best performer in the tourney as she hit 3-5 with two RBIs, including the game winner against Coastal Carolina.

Despite out-hitting UNC-Wilmington 12-7 and committing fewer errors (1-2), Longwood fell 5-4 in its final game of the tourney and finished third. The Lady Lancers came to bat in the bottom of the seventh down 5-3. Hall started things off right with her second homer of the season, but Wilmington retired the next three LC batters to get the win and move to the tourney championship.

Coughlin and her team will have another chance to capture a tournament title this weekend at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Music Recital Packs Wygal

By MARY HILL

On Sunday, March 27 at 4 p.m., the Wygal Recital Hall was full of expectant students, faculty and parents waiting for Wendy Palmore and Paul Dembowski to present their music recital.

Palmore, a senior music major, demonstrated her talents on the flute, while Dembowski, a junior music major, played the euphonium. The unique mixture of instruments helped to make an interesting concert.

A Bach sonata for flute began the afternoon's performance. Palmore played with confidence and showed obvious enjoyment in her music.

Dembowski followed with a euphonium composition by David Uber entitled "A Delaware Rhapsody." This piece was full of rich tones and produced many colorful images in the listener's mind.

Another piece played by Dembowski was "Largo al Factotum" from the opera "The Barber of Seville." The audience was favorably responsive to the familiar piece as well as the excellent performance.

The last piece of the recital, Claude Bolling's "Suite for Flute and Jazz Piano," disproved the myth that all solo flute music has to sound classical. The blues professions and jazzy rhythms in the song support this.

Mrs. Nancy Sherman accompanied every piece with the exception of Palmore's presentation of "Syrinx" by Claude Debussy. Sherman's excellent piano performance added to each piece without detracting from the students.

The combined talents of Dembowski and Palmore made this recital one of the best this writer has ever attended at Longwood College.

Here's Looking At Longwood Stop Complaining

By MONIQUE VOEHRINGER & VERONICA KLARAS

So often one can hear students complaining, "What has Longwood done for me?" To answer that question, just take a look. Many displays of Longwood's efforts in its plans to beautify the campus and accommodate its students are now in effect. To mention a few projects:

1) A sitting area has been added on the corner of the Student Union, across the street from South Cunningham. Benches to read, sleep, study, or just relax, have been placed in a bed of stones. An information kiosk is being placed in the middle of this quaint resting ground. The area is perfect for the beautiful spring days to come.

2) The newly added walkway to the student mailboxes have been lined with shrubs and wooden railroad ties.

3) Trees have been planted alongside Curry Residence Hall, adjacent to the physical plant. This addition adds color and flair to one of the main entrances to the campus.

4) Auxiliary parking is being added across from the Wynne Building.

5) Curry is in the process of installing new washers and dryers. Redecoration of the wash rooms is also in planning.

Not only is Longwood currently enhancing our campus, but the school has also made future plans for additional projects. The largest of the projects planned involves a new library that will cost between 7 and 7 1/2 million dollars. The state will vote July 1 on funding the project, according to Mr. Wadi Williams of the physical plant.

The library will be located in the day student parking lot; stylewise, it will tie the new architecture on campus in with the old. The lost parking places will be compensated for with a parking lot south of the high rises.

The basement of Coyner has been subject to severe dampness. Waterproofing of the building is scheduled for early May.

Longwood is concerned with the improvement of campus facilities and beautification. So the next time you ask "What is Longwood doing for me?" stop and ask yourself "What can I do for Longwood?"

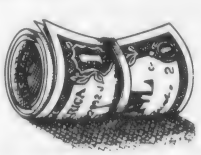
Middle East, Edwin Meese, and Postal Increase

By MATT PETERMAN

Secretary of State George Shultz arrived in the Middle East yesterday to hold talks with Arab and Israeli leaders in order to achieve "A Little Progress – measured in small increments."

This is the third trip Shultz has taken to get a peace process started, in the Middle East, which consequently will probably not be his last.



"I feel in my bones that there's an answer out there if you can only find it," Shultz was quoted in The Washington Post. "If I didn't feel there was an answer, maybe I wouldn't have the energy to keep trying,"

According to the Post: "The U.S. peace proposal is based on a "land for peace" formula that calls for Israel to surrender territories to Jordonian control in exchange for recognitions by its Arab neighbors."

Attorney General Edwin Meese III has rode out the latest controversy which began with two top aides of Meese resigning, claiming with Meese around the Justice Department can't function properly.

A big factor, Meese's firmness not to resign came when the independent counsel investigating Meese had no plans to indict Meese in events in Meese's past.

Reagan remains solid behind Meese and will probably do so unless a scandal should bring Meese down.

The increased revenue, the postal service will bring in – predicted to cost the average American an extra ten dollars a year – will go toward preventing the service from going into the red line last year.

Beginning last Sunday, postage rates in first-class letters rose from 22 cents to 25 cents. The cost of a post card rose from 14 cents to 15 cents.

Summer In Salzburg

The AUSTRO-AMERICAN SOCIETY in cooperation with the Goethe Institute has organized the Salzburg Summer School in Austria sponsored by the University of Salzburg. This program is offered to all those interested in German as a foreign language whether it be a major or a minor. The program will run six weeks from July 3 through August 13, 1988. Part of the program is a six week intensive German course with seminars in music, history, art, and literature. This program also includes leisure time programs as well as Festival tickets. All of the above with room and full board on campus is at a fixed price of $1,600. If you are interested in learning more about this opportunity, see Dr. J. Reynolds in the English, Philosophy, and Modern Language Department in Grainger Room 12. Spy To Speak

By NANCY RUFF

A former spy, who bills himself as an author, physicist and muckraker, will speak Wednesday, April 6, at 8 p.m. in the Gold Room.

Peter N. James will present James VI, a program on international espionage, combining elements of his previous lectures on such topics as Soviet weaponry, government competition and weaknesses in national security.

James, trained in physics and employed by Pratt and Whitney for nine years, traveled extensively and was also involved with the CIA and Air Force Intelligence. Under the guise of attending scientific conferences, he claims to have met numerous Russian scientists, engineers and espionage agents.

In an 800-page document for the Air Force Intelligence, James pointed out Russian capabilities to reload their ICBM launch silos, the existence of a space shuttle program, and military plans in space. He also met "Father of the Sputnik," Leonid Sedov and Nikolai Beloussoy, the KGB agent who engineered the Christine Keeler affair.

In 1971, Pratt and Whitney fired the outspoken engineer after he revealed plans to expose corruption within the military-industrial complex. However, his quest for truth paid off when Congress and the media focused attention on his findings.

James also assisted Senator Sam Ervin's Watergate Committee, Senator Frank Church's Select Committee on Intelligence, and the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in their efforts to expose questionable government operations.

More recently, Nicaraguan nationalist Eden Pastera requested James to represent him in the Iran-Contra hearings.

James has called for a congressional investigation to determine the U.S. role in the attempt on Pastera's life in Costa Rica, which led to the death of a journalist.

The ex-spy also wants to know if the U.S. tried to turn Costa Rica voters against President Oscar Arias in the '86 election. The incumbent was not supportive of U.S. Central America's policies.

Longwood Student Bound For London

By MICHELE CIPOLLETI

London bound Betsy Chalfant will graduate this spring with a BA in Anthropology and a minor in Sociology.

During her four years of study she has been a Resident Assistant in North Cunningham for three years, an Ambassador for two years, a member of the Honors Program, and is soon to be an initiate of Alpha Kappa Delta, the International Sociology Honors Society.

The Summer of 1986 found her in Petra, Jordan for a six week archaeological dig. She went with students from the University of Utah and met students from Belgium, Germany, and Switzerland.

This coming October she will take on a graduate study at the University of London. After a year she will graduate with a master in Museum studies.

She has always had a fascination with London and would like to remain there and work in a British Museum.

She emphasized the fact that she loves the Departments of Anthropology and Sociology. "The people are friendly. They care about you, and I will miss them."

Alumni Agree Liberal Arts Degree Is A Plus

By CHERYL JEFFREY

On March 29th, the social sciences department presented an alumni panel, the members of which discussed their job search and careers since graduating. The majors represented included anthropology, sociology, political science, and psychology.

Most of these Longwood alumni entered the job field soon after graduating, although some went on to graduate school. One alumni on the panel is currently a student at the University of Richmond Law School.

Professions these panel members have entered into include such positions as an archaelogical field director, a worker's compensation analyst, and a juvenile probation counselor.

A main point stressed by many of the graduates was the flexibility of a liberal arts degree. The panel members felt that employers like the possibilities a liberal arts degree presents because they can train employees with such a background for work in a variety of positions.

The successful careers of the graduates can be a reassurance to present students pursuing a social science degree.

Lee's Greatest Triumph Reenacted

Members of the STONEWALL BRIGADE, Living Historians for Virginia met this week with the staff of Fort A. P. Hill to finalize arrangements for the reenactment of the Battle of Chancellorsville. The event will take place at Fort A. P. Hill on Sunday, May 1st, 1988 at 2:00 p.m., rain or shine.

Over 2600 reenactors will take part in this recreation of General Lee's greatest triumph and will reenact the Flank March around "Fightin' Joe" Hooker's troops and the wounding of General Jackson by the North Carolinians, Units from throughout the country, including California, Texas, the Mid West and Canada have already registered and include infantry, cavalry and artillery units.

On Sunday, the gates will open at 9:00 a.m. and the public is invited to spend time before the reenactment viewing Living History Programs or attending the review of the troops. Non-denominational services will be conducted at 10:00 a.m. by the Reverend Alan Farley. Rev. Farley, a minister and founder of Ministries for Reenactors, portrays a Civil War Pastor, complete with authentic garb, period tracts and furnishings and conducts services in an authentic facsimile Civil War tent.

Food and drinks will be available and advance tickets to this event may be purchased by calling 703/266-3632. Tickets are $2 per adult and $1 per child under twelve. A special express lane will be set up for advance ticket holders.

Fort A. P. Hill is located just outside of Bowling Green, Virginia, approximately 15 miles south of Fredericksburg via I-95 and Route 2 and 30 miles north of Richmond via I-95, Route 207 or Route 301. Entrance to the post is through either the Main Gate on Route 301 or at the Ville Boro Gate on Route 2.

Living Historians for Virginia is a non-profit organization dedicated to the preservation of sites connected with events of the American Civil War and to promoting a better understanding of the historical events and people who contributed to the State of Virginia. The organization also supports related community activities and preservations-efforts through charitable contributions and donations.

SCEB Cites Decline in Teachers

In most Southern Regional Education Board states, the number of students graduating from teacher education programs today is a fraction of what is was in the 1970s. In a few states there are signs that this is changing. Declines in teacher education graduates have leveled off in Georgia and Virginia; Louisiana and Oklahoma have had increases since 1983; and Alabama, Arkansas, and Maryland have shown recent gains.

Several SREB states rely on other states for substantial numbers of their teachers-almost half of the initial teaching certificates issued in Florida, North Carolina, and South Carolina go to out-of-state graduates.

SREB states are taking actions to expand the pool of teachers. Teacher salaries have risen by more than 40 percent (a faster rate of increase than that for the nation) in a majority of the SREB states since the early 1980s. Other efforts involve loan-scholarship programs, incentive programs for teachers, and alternate teaching certification for liberal arts graduates.

There is evidence that admissions to teacher education programs are increasing and recent national surveys of high school seniors planning to attend college show that about one of 14 plan to prepare to teach. This is up from approximately one of 25 earlier this decade.

•14 of the 15 SREB states have implemented alternative certification programs that allow college graduates with liberal arts degrees to qualify to teach. The Tennessee Higher Education Commission and the State Board of Education have approved policies to develop such a program as a part of a teacher education reform plan.

•In 12 of the 13 SREB states that have loan-scholarship programs for prospective teachers, funding and the number of scholarships available increased last year.

•Five states (Arkansas, Georgia, North Carolina, Tennessee, and Virginia) have task forces to propose solutions to the problem of decreasing numbers of minorities entering teaching. The reports from the task forces sponsored by the National Governor's Association are expected to be completed by June 30.

•South Carolina supports a joint school-college Teacher Cadet Program to interest high school students in teaching. Students participate in teaching-related activities, including a course for three hours of college credit.

•Florida, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Virginia have special programs to retrain teachers for science and mathematics. Funding last year ranged from $1 million to $10 million per state.

•Florida, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, and Virginia have established state centers to assist in recruiting teachers.

•In Mississippi, the University of Southern Mississippi offers a half-tuition rebate to state-certified teachers wishing to become re-certified in mathematics, science, foreign languages, or special education.

•As a part of a five-year education reform plan, the governor of Alabama recommended an appropriation of $125,000 for 1988-89 to boost the alternative certification program.

SREB's A Progress Report and Recommendations on Educational Improvements in the SREB States (1987) recommends that:

States should develop alternative certification programs to allow liberal arts graduates to become fully certified as teachers. The programs should be joint, systematic, and structured school-college efforts with closely supervised internships during the first full year of employment.

Expanding the pool of potential teachers through loan-scholarship and retraining programs should be continued. States that are not carefully monitoring loan-scholarship programs should do so to determine if the programs are successful in getting teachers into the classroom.

More detailed information will be found in SREB's new "Alternative Certification Programs: Are They Working?" Copies are available from the Southern Regional Education Board, 592 Tenth St. NW, Atlanta, GA 30318.

Jackson, Cricione Boost LC Win

Homeruns by Robert Jackson and Pete Criscione helped Longwood win three of five games last week on the diamond, but looming ahead for the Division II Lancers are games against three solid Divisional I opponents.

Longwood, 15-8, will be tested by single games at Virginia Commonwealth Tuesday, at Richmond Friday and at Christopher-Newport Saturday, plus a mid-week twin bill at Radford Wednesday.

The Lancers, hitting .338 as a team, exploded for 38 runs to win their final three games last week, after falling at Liberty 9-6 Monday and at St. Augustine's 4-3 Thursday. Longwood buried the Falcons 15-10 in the second half of a doubleheader and then blistered Maryland Eastern Shore 9-4 and 14-0 in five innings at home Saturday.

Jackson, a .380 hitter with 29 RBIs, belted a three-run dinger to propel Longwood to its first game win over UMES Saturday. Mark Moeller drove in two runs and Bill Conroy three to give freshman Dennis Hale all the support he needed.

Hale moved his record to 3-0 with a complete game performance, but missed a chance for a no-hitter and a shutout in the seventh inning. Hale was touched for three runs on three hits and three walks in the final frame, after holding UMES hitless for six innings. The righthander had allowed just one runner to reach base until the seventh.

Sophomore Bobby Johnson pitched five shutout innings in the nightcap to pick up his first win of the season as Longwood won 14-0. Benefitting from 11 walks, Longwood was led by Mike Lauffer's three RBIs and two hits. Lauffer and Conroy had two-run doubles in a nine-run first inning.

Criscione, a sophomore second baseman, equaled last year's homerun total in one day at St. Augustine's, blasting a homer in each game and driving in four runs. Moeller also homered for the Lancers in game two, and Frankie Watson plated four runs with a pair of hits.

In the opener, Steve Gedro pitched well, allowing just two earned runs on eight hits, but Longwood failed to support him at the plate.

The Lancers almost squandered a big lead in the second game, but freshman Keith Covington came on to shut-out the Falcons over the final two and one/third innings. Covington, who has a sparkling earned run average of 0.97, picked up his first career victory.

While he only drove in two runs for the week, senior shortstop Kelvin Davis kept his batting average up. Davis is hitting .562 with 38 RBIs, nine doubles, four triples and eight homers. Jackson is next at .380 with 29 RBIs and equals Davis' run total of 32.

Moeller, a consistent hitter all season, is batting .354 with 21 RBIs, seven doubles and five homers. Criscione is hitting .343 with 15 RBIs from his leadoff spot. Robbie Smith is batting .371 and Conroy has boosted his average .296 with 19 RBIs, six doubles and four homers.

Pete Criscione turns double play for Lancers. He had two homers Thursday.

Lancer Edition

Longwood College's Lancer Edition will give a concert on Thursday evening, April 7, at 7:30 in Wygal Auditorium.

The program will feature music from the 40's, including "Tuxedo Junction," "This Joint Is Jumpin'," and "Sentimental Journey;" a selection of Beatles' tunes and other pieces from the 50's and 60's; a medley of Rodgers and Hammerstein works from their Broadway hits; and several contemporary songs.

The Lancer Edition is composed of eight voices and two keyboardists. John Campbell, instructor of music, directs the ensemble and plays one of the keyboards.

The Lancer Edition entertained recently at the Miss Longwood Pageant and the Farmville Rotary Club's 50th anniversary dinner. On March 30, they performed at Bassett and Salem high schools. They will go to the Tidewater area on April 12 for performances at Lake Taylor High School in Norfolk and Ferguson High School in Newport News.

The Lancer Edition concert is open to the public free of charge.

Player of the Week

TINA HALL

Senior rightfielder Tina Hall helped Longwood to three wins in the UNC Wilmington Softball Tournament and five wins total last week. For her performance, Hall has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period of March 27-April 3. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

In the Wilmington tournament Hall batted .529 as she collected nine hits in 17 at-bats, scored three runs, knocked in eight, and hit two doubles, a triple, and a homer. The Lady Lancer co-captain also stole one base in her only attempt as she helped the team to an overall record of 9-3, the best start ever for a Longwood softball team.

Hall, the number three hitter in the Longwood line-up, currently leads the team in at-bats (45), hits (21), RBIs (16), doubles (3), triples (3), stolen bases (4-4), fielding percentage (1,000), and batting average (.467). Hall, who last year was nationally ranked tenth in batting (.453) and seventh in homeruns (4 in 19 games), has been consistent thus far this season and should again rank among the batting leaders in NCAA Division II softball.

A graduate of Dinwiddie High School, Hall is majoring in physical education at Longwood. Co-MVP of last year's Lady Lancer softball squad, she played softball and basketball at Dinwiddie.

Lady Lancer Golfers Tie Deacons, Minnesota For Third At Duke

Red-hot Longwood broke the school record for 54-holes and tied Wake Forest and Minnesota for third place in the Duke spring women's golf invitational at Duke University Golf Course in Durham, North Carolina over the weekend.

Solid play from all five golfers enabled coach Barbara Smith's team to shoot 312-307-306-925 and beat the Longwood record of 928 set in 1984 at the LC invitational. Tied for fourth at the Peggy Kirk Bell tournament two weeks ago, Longwood turned in its second straight impressive showing in a predominantly Division I field.

While Duke won easily with a 296-298-301-895 on its home course, North Carolina carded a 920 to finish just ahead of the Lady Lancers, Minnesota and Wake Forest.

Tina Barrett took her accustomed spot as Longwood's tournament leader with a 72-77-77-226 for sixth place in a field of more than 60 golfers. The Lady Lancers' No. 1 had an abundance of help. Marcia Melone turned in a career-best performance with an 82-71-75-228, good for an eighth place tie in the individual race.

Melone's second round 71 was three-under-par and tied her with Duke's Sarah LeBrun and Minnesota's Kate Hughes for the event's best 18-hole score. Gretchen Pugh was just a shade behind with a consistent 77-78-75-230 – another career best. Sophomore Ashley Warren shot 81-86-79-246 and senior Leigh Russell 85-81-81-247.

"We played out of our minds," said a delighted coach Barbara Smith. "I couldn't be more pleased, and the thing I'm happiest about is that each member of the team contributed to our showing. Our seniors have played at Duke for four years and they were determined to do well."

Longwood will be playing this weekend at North Carolina Wilmington's Azalea-Seahawk Tournament. The defending National Golf Coaches Association Division II champs will play in the William & Mary Invitational the following week, before starting preparations to defend their title at the NGCA Small College Nationals May 2-4 in Dubuque, Iowa.

Baseball Loses By 3

By MONIQUE VOEHRINGER

The Longwood Lancer Baseball team suffered a heartbreaking loss to the Liberty University Flames 9-6, Monday afternoon. The Lancers were down 1-0 in the first inning. By the third inning they jumped to a 3-1 lead.

In the middle innings the Flames took a 6-3 lead, but once again the Lancers bounced back to tie the game at 6-6 in the seventh inning.

In the top of the eighth inning the Lancers failed to score a runner from second base.

The Lancers are now 12-7.

This failure enabled the game to gain momentum and in the bottom of the eighth inning the Flames rallied to score three more runs. This made the score 9 to 6 and this time Lancers were unable to catch up in the top of the ninth.

Leading the Lancers in hitting were junior catcher Greylin Rice with two singles, Bill Conroy with two singles, Mark Moeller with a double and Jackson, Davis, and Criscone also adding a hit apiece.

Pitching were E.J. Bryant, Butch Trent and finishing the game, Steve Gedro.

Gymnasts End Season

The win-loss record may not show it, but Longwood's gymnastics team ended an improved season with a solid showing in the Virginia State Meet at James Madison Saturday.

In competition with three Division I teams, Longwood was fourth but trailed second place James Madison by just four points. William & Mary with a 179.45, while JMU was second at 172.55, Radford third at 170.70 and then Longwood 168.55.

"Our team did really well," said Lancer coach Ruth Budd. "Everybody pulled together and we had a pretty good meet. The team scores were close, after William and Mary. We were hoping to get above a 170, but we didn't quite do it."

While The Tribe's Jeanne Foster ran away with all-around honors (37.1), several Longwood gymnasts performed well. Lancer Cindy Shelton was fourth all-around with a 35.20 and finished third on beam (8.65), seventh on floor (9.15) and eighth on bars (8.7). Lynda Chenoweth was ninth all-around (34.40) and fourth on beam (8.6).

Freshman Natalie Taylor turned in the second best floor score in LC history, a 9-2, and finished fifth.

"Natalie did a really good job," praised Budd. "She was having problems with her back, but had a great routine anyway."

While Longwood finished with a record of 3-15, Budd is quick to point out that it isn't fair to evaluate her team on its win-loss record when the competition is 90 per cent Division I teams.

"It bothers me that most people talk about our poor record," said the coach. "They don't realize that we had a pretty good season. We improved our scores from last year and we broke several school records (all-around, beam and bars). It's just that our competition is much stronger."

Budd feels Longwood should have a solid team next season also, but she will miss Tammy Zeller's skills and leadership.

"The State Meet was Tammy's last competition. She will be missed very much. She was a captain for three years and a solid all-around gymnast," said Budd.

Softball Wins 3

The Longwood softball team poured it on Saturday in the UNC Wilmington Tournament winning three of four games by a total of 27-12. Longwood bettered its record to 9-3 by beating Campbell 4-3, Radford 13-0, and Coastal Carolina 6-4. LC's only defeat in the tourney came at the hands of host UNC Wilmington 5-4.

In other action last week, Longwood took two from visiting Gannon Wednesday, winning 7-1 and 6-0 behind pitchers Stacey Thompson and Anne Douglas Miller.

This week the Lady Lancers will be on the road Tuesday for a doubleheader at Ferrum College. Friday, coach Loretta Coughlin will take her squad to UNC Greensboro for another tournament and will continue home play Tuesday, April 12 against Virginia Wesleyan at 2:30.

Longwood needed eight innings to get by Campbell in the first game of the tournament. With the score tied 3-3 after seven, Longwood retired the Camels' first three batters in the eighth. In tournament rules, the offense places a runner on second base to start an extra inning and Longwood needed a single by Pam Fitzgerald and a double by Jill Everett to bring the runner home along with a 4-3 win.

In game two sophomore pitcher Cheryl Scharr got her first start of the season and shut-out the Highlanders 13-0. Leading the offense was junior shortstop Mary Dailey who went 5-5 with four doubles and three runs. Senior rightfielder Tina Hall went 2-4 with four RBIs.

Final program for series Tues.

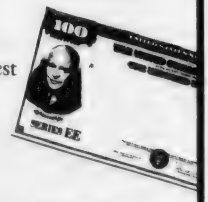
The Virginia Opera will present its popular BUFFA! program on Tuesday, April 5 at 8 p.m. in Longwood College's Jarman Auditorium.

The program is the final offering in this year's Series of the Performing Arts at Longwood. General admission is $4.50; the discount rate for senior citizens, youth under 18, and Longwood employees is $3.50; Longwood students free with college ID.

"Buffa" is an Italian word meaning comic or funny. The Virginia Opera's version features talented young artists in a fast-paced program that presents a contemporary story through famous operatic excerpts. Everyday concerns – humorously familiar situations – are set to witty, original dialogue and lyrics.

Organized in 1975 in Norfolk, the Virginia Opera has expanded its programming in Hampton Roads to four performances each of four mainstage productions each season, in addition to a four-performance series in Richmond.

The company tours extensively throughout Virginia and the Southeast, and its productions have been seen in principal theaters around the country from San Francisco to New York City. National Public Radio and BBC broadcasts have introduced the Virginia Opera to opera-lovers worldwide.



NBC "Nightly News" has labeled the Virginia Opera "one of the nation's very best regional companies," and The Detroit News praised the Opera as "a model of community involvement to which all regional opera companies can aspire."

In addition to its performance schedule, the Virginia Opera offers a variety of educational programs for Virginia schools. More than 60,000 young people are reached each year.

New this season are three additional programs: a graduate Opera Studio in collaboration with Virginia Commonwealth University; an open-to-the-public course in the operas of the 1987-88 season through Old Dominion University; and a Young Artist Apprentice Program.

Sun Worship Commences

By KAREN BEATTIE

Hey, People! Spring is here, and with it comes the chance to get into outdoor activities. Playing softball, hackeysack, and tennis are a few of the more rigorous things one can do. But another activity ranks right up there with the others – sunbathing.

The roofs of the high rises are open, and, although it is only the beginning of April, people are pulling out the suntan oil and towels and trekking somewhere, anywhere, to worship the sun-god.

The sunbathers have various reasons for their worship. Sophomores Amy Harrell and Beanie Felch say: "You go to Florida for spring break and get a decent tan; you don't want to lose it all before summer." Sophomore Diane Brown comments, "You need to get a base before you subject yourself to summer sun."

Others do it for looks. Sophomore Susie Baca says, "When you have a tan you look and feel healthy!"

Some, though, don't think that it is quite late enough to lay out. Sophomore Audra Smith says "Being so early in the season chances are the weather will turn bad again." Others had academic reasons. "I don't have any time," says sophomore Cheryl Jeffrey, "I have so much homework I can't do much of anything."

Also, several people expressed the need to shed a few pounds before putting on a bathing suit.

Junior Amy King sums it up by saying, "It doesn't matter what you do. Just make sure you have a good time!"

New lake

By RYAN GILLS

Now that the weather has decided to stay springlike, the Longwood student body has been bitten by a case of cabin fever.

Students fall into a state of exasperation when they break from classes and have nowhere to go. Then again that lovely town we call home, Farmville, recently purchased a lake which is maintained for private use. Permits to use the lake, which has facilities for boating, sunbathing, cookouts, and just general fun are obtainable through the Farmville town office for a small fee.

Help fight off the springtime blahs with a dose of sun and fun. Get your permit today.

Easter Egg Hunts Abound

By GWEN W. NELMS

Peter, Peter Cottontail, hopping down the Easter trail, was the central figure in everyone's mind as the Panhellenic Council sponsored an Easter egg hunt for community children at Longwood House March 31.

Of the 1,200 children invited, 300 arrived at 4:15 Thursday afternoon from Prince Edward Academy, Prince Edward County Grade School, Methodist Church Nursery School, and Longwood College Nursery School, and spent approximately 35 minutes hunting for several thousand candy eggs which were hidden earlier by members of the Panhellenic Council.

The children, ranging from pre-schoolers to fourth graders, were given a helping hand by 33 sorority women who volunteered their time to help find the eggs on Dr. and Mrs. Healy's huge lawn.

According to Charlie Warner, head of Greek Affairs, Mrs. Healy was the perfect hostess and helped to provide refreshments for both the kids and the adults.

Mr. Warner said, "Besides this being an annual service project for the community, it is an enjoyable time for everyone who participates."

On Thursday March 31st Frazer Residence Hall on the Longwood Campus held an Easter Egg Hunt for the Head Start and Special Education children of the Farmville community.

The children played games in the lobby and were then escorted on to the individual floors to search for eggs. Each of the floors had been decorated with an Easter theme.

This event was organized by the Residence Education Coordinator and Resident Assistants, Donna Armento, Stacey Lee, Danielle Felch, Michelle Woodbury, Joyce Lamond, Tim Hale, Tom Marony, Mark Shelton, Mike Plum, as well as Frazer Hall Council officers Shari May and Andy Sadowski.

Frazer Residence Hall would like to gratefully acknowledge the following local establishments for their donations: Revco, Hostess, Roses, Dominos, Merle Norman, Classie Cuts, Rochette's, Woody's, Book Nook, Longwood Bookstore, Eddie's Supermarket and Video Plus.

The generosity of these local merchants helped to make Frazer Hall's Easter Program a huge success for the children as well as the Longwood Students.

Students Show Pride in Campus

Beautification discourages vandalism

By RYAN GILLS

Vandalism and its side effects have sickened the Longwood campus, but with groups against vandalism spreading and commitments to help in the fight by students and faculty, the disease is in remission.

Less broken glass and paper have been strewn across campus. Sophomore Dana Alston says he believes he knows several reasons for the decrease in vandalism. Alston states, "Longwood is spending more money on beautification and students are taking more pride in their campus."

Alston also believes that the warmer weather has turned excess energy, which might be one possible cause of vandalism, into energy spent on recreational type activities.

School pride, fresh air, and a positive commitment to beautification by the college are helping Longwood fight the dreaded disease, vandalism.

LAVA to wage war on vandals

By DINA SHIANO

A new organization has erupted at Longwood this semester. LAVA, Longwood Against Vandalism Association, is going to make some changes around campus.

It's not a social club or an academic club, rather a very serious group of students joining together to fight one of Longwood's toughest problems: vandalism.

Sebastian Volcker thought of the idea of an organization to stop vandalism. With the help of Tom Richards, Assistant Director of Housing, (and advisor to LAVA,) and some of his friends, Volcker has come up with a good sized group of students who are not only concerned with the amount of vandalism, but are also willing to put their pride in the school to work by reporting the vandals.

Tom Thacker, senior and co-founder of LAVA, reported, "The purpose of LAVA is to show those students who choose to destroy school property that they can't get away with it. And they won't get away with it!"

LAVA is backed by campus police, but wants to stress the fact that students reporting any act of vandalism will be the backbone of getting rid of vandalism altogether. Mark Williams stated at the last meeting of LAVA, "It's an attitude change that will do it. Instead of telling your friend he is cool for breaking a window, state the opposite, tell him what a jerk he is."

Any students interested in joining the fight against vandalism are encouraged to attend the next LAVA meeting Tuesday at 6 p.m. in the Lankford building.

The Bible story of Adam and Eve does not say, as popularly believed, that they were driven from the Garden of Eden as punishment for eating the forbidden fruit. The punishment was pain and sorrow in childbirth for Eve, and thorns and thistles to make Adam live by the sweat of his brow. Afterward, the Bible says the Lord feared the two would also eat of "the tree of life" and live forever, so He drove them from the Garden of Eden to sweat and toil outside its boundaries.

Need a roomie?

Having trouble finding a roommate for fall of '88? We have a sensible solution in the Housing Office.

If you are not sure that you have a roommate for the fall then please take a minute, and come by the Housing Office to fill out a Roommate Search Card.

We will match your card to another that we consider to be compatible. You will meet this person on April 11, 1988 in the Red, White and Green Room at 7:00 p.m.

Should the two of you not feel harmonious together then we will still have time to look for someone else. These cards are due April 6, 1988.

On April 12, 1988 there will be an information meeting in the Housing Office for anyone with questions relating to the sign-up process. This meeting will take place at 7:00 p.m.

Reminder: Greeks, Special Interest Houses, and Saved Floors (if pre-arranged) — your housing sign-up sheets will be due on April 13, 1988. Please start discussions and arrangements as soon as possible so that all of you can get what you need in housing accommodations. If you are having trouble deciding then please come to the Housing Office so that we can find a way to solve the problem.

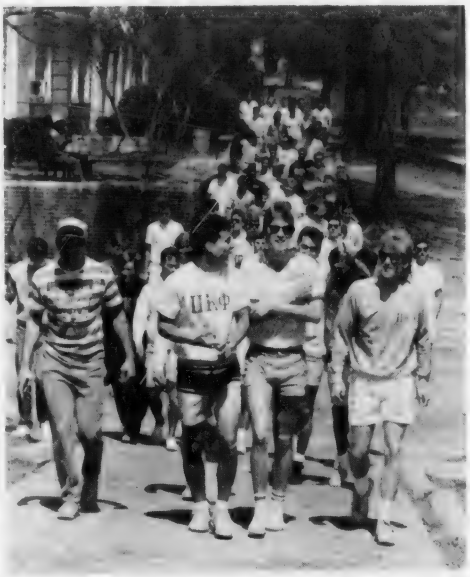
APO To Host Conference



By TIM BRANDENBURG

Alpha Phi Omega's (APO), Longwood chapter will hold the annual Sectional Conference here on April 15-17.

APO representatives from the chapters at Emory & Henry, Radford University, The University of Virginia, Virginia Tech, and William & Mary will be attending. Representatives from chapters in Mayland and North Carolina will also be attending.

The Conference's speakers will be Dr. George Healy, Dr. Sue Saunders, Dr. William Harbour, MaryKaye Benton, and Section Representative Steve Wilson.

The Conference has the goals of education of the Conference's attendees, interaction of APO members from different chapters and to solve problems that the chapters may have.

Campus fraternities kicked off GREEK WEEK 1988 on Sunday with song and games and a joint effort stroll about campus.

Finnish Students Came and Went

A group of 35 Finnish students came to see professors they'd met while the instructors were teaching at the University of Jyvaskyla in recent years.

By NANCY RUFF

Thirty-five fourth-year Finnish students visited Longwood March 30-April 6. The students, physical education majors, on spring break, from the University of Jyvaskyla, traveled 13-20 hours via Helsinki and Frankfurt before arriving at Dulles National Airport. After another four hours by bus, the Finns reached Farmville.

Dr. Nelson Neal, who taught dance at the University of Jyvaskyla for five months, escorted the group to Nags Head and Kitty Hawk over Easter weekend. He also gave them a tour of Richmond, and Charlottesville.

The students were impressed with the geographical variety in such a small area, in contrast to Finland, which has few nice beaches and no mountains.

The athletic, tanned visitors also saw the Catalinas, Longwood's synchronized swim team and the dance program, "Winds of Color."

Monday night the Finns performed the "Liikunailta" to a full house in the dance studio. The entertaining show combined modern dance, comedy acts and Finnish songs.

The guests wrapped up their visit with a party at D.T. Bradley's Tuesday night before leaving the following day. One student, holding up a giant piggy bank, instructed his fellow Finns to deposit coins so that Longwood students might visit Finland.

Tuition Holds Next Year

PARENTS DANCE IN THE STRETS

There will be no tuition increase at Longwood College next year for Virginia residents.

In a rare departure from the national norm of recent years, tuition for in-state residents for the 1988-89 academic year will be $1,488, the same as this year. About 90 percent of Longwood's undergraduate students are Virginia residents. The college's Board of Visitors set the new tuition and fees Friday.

"This is very rare; it might be a first for Longwood," said Richard Hurley, vice president for business and legislative affairs.

Dan Hix, finance coordinator for the State Council of Higher Education for Virginia, agreed that the decision was "unusual." The only similar cases in recent years occurred at Virginia State University, where tuition and fees for all students remained the same in 1984-86, and with the state's community colleges, where tuition dropped slightly last year.

"Tuition at Virginia's colleges and universities held steady for a few years in the mid-1970s, but has been going up ever since," he said. "Increases in tuition have been averaging between eight and 10 percent in recent years."

Last year, tuition and fees increased by an average of 7.6 percent at state-assisted colleges and universities, and increases also averaged 7.6 percent at private institutions in Virginia. Longwood's overall increase last year was 4.2 percent for Virginia residents and 5.9 percent for out-of-state students.

Next year, at Longwood, the overall cost for a Virginia student living on-campus will increase by only $100 – from $5,398 to $5,498, or 1.8 percent – for those on the 15-meal plan. About 70 percent of the students choose this meal plan.

The $100 overall increase reflects a $140 increase in room and board and a $40 decrease in the comprehensive fee. About 85 percent of the students live on-campus.

Tuition for out-of-state students at Longwood will be $3,274, a $298 increase. The total cost for out-of-state students living in residence halls will rise from $6,886 to $7,284, or six percent.

The decision to hold the line on in-state tuition was prompted by optimism over projected enrollment for next year.

"For the first time since I've been here, we feel comfortable in our enrollment projections. We've had two strong years of enrollment, and everything looks good for the coming year."

"The registrar's office has scheduled about 1,900 students for preregistration for next fall, as opposed to 1,700 last year," said Robert Chonko, director of admissions and enrollment management. "That's an initial sign these students will be back. That rate probably will be the highest in our history."

Longwood expects to enroll about 2,823 full-time undergraduates this fall. About 720 will be freshmen and 197 will be transfer students.

Longwood expects to receive 4,000 applications – a 17.2 percent increase over last year – and probably will close freshman admissions June 1, several months earlier than usual. A waiting list will be used for subsequent applicants. Because of increased applications, Longwood has been more selective in the students it accepts, Chonko said.

He also noted that Longwood's percentage increase in applications is "one of the highest of any I have seen reported by any public college or university in Virginia." This reflects a continuing trend at Longood, where each year for the past six years the College has had the largest number of applicants in its history.

To the Editor

People are people are people. . .

Dear Editor,

I am writing in response to the letter in the March 29 issue of the Rotunda, submitted by Anne Meade Stockdell. I am not writing to criticize Miss Stockdell's views, but to point out some things to the entire student body that come to my mind after reading this letter.

Firstly, why is there a constant battle between Greeks and non-Greeks? Each student on campus is an individual with different needs and different talents. Each satisfies his needs and uses his talents in different ways. The Greek system is a very important part of campus life, but I do not think by any means it is the "backbone" of Longwood College. Miss Stockdell, the Greek organizations might be the "backbone" of your life, but I think Longwood would survive if they did not exist.

Included in Longwood's goals, and for that matter any other college's goals, is to be an institution that offers a variety of opportunity for each individual. Students choose to be scholars, athletes, SGA members, ambassadors, spirit leaders, members of military programs, artists, performers, etc. A student can be every one of these things and be Greek.

The fulfillment that students get from being a member of a fraternal organization is very important to those involved, but Miss Stockdell, you should realize that just because you are Greek does not mean you are among the select. You chose to be Greek to satisfy your needs. Others of us find fulfillment in other organizations around campus. I pride myself in being a good student, a collegiate athlete and a Longwood Ambassador and I am very "satisfied with my status."

As for social activities, snack bar. D. T. Bradley's, etc., let me ask a question. Are there other forms of entertainment on this campus? What about athletic events, dance performances, drama and music presentations, lecture seminars, art exhibits, and clubs? Yes, Greeks are involved in these things: not simply because they are Greek, but because they are talented individuals just like the rest of us.

Miss Stockdell, we "GDI's" do enjoy the "special activities" that you sponsor and can also appreciate the hard work you do within your organizations and for charities.

Don't the Greeks also enjoy events that non-Greeks sponsor such as sporting events? Can't you also appreciate the hard work and dedication that we do?

You seem to consider independents privileged to be allowed to participate in Greek-sponsored events. Don't be so narrow-minded as to think that those activities are the only forms of entertainment we can find.

I could continue, but I think my point has been made. I hope the entire student body, Greeks and non-Greeks, realizes that each organization and each individual on campus is vital to the "Longwood Experience" and that we are all proud of our affiliations. Let's try not to pretend that our own organization alone holds Longwood together!

Respectfully,
Lynda Chenoweth

Have some pride!

Dear Editor,

I have come to the conclusion that many students are not happy unless they have someone or something to bitch about. This, my friend, is a shame because we all know that what one gets from something is equivalent to what he contributes to it.

Is it fair to assume that their contributions are bringing them an abundance of joy? I hope so because it really annoys those of us who do like Longwood and we are sick and tired of students' unfounded complaints.

As a Longwood legacy, over spring break I had the opportunity to attend an alumni chapter meeting, and was ashamed of some of my peers as I watched this group of ladies, some from classes as early as 1929, proudly reminisce about their alma mater.

I have to wonder if seventy years from now will we have the same pride in our school that these ladies shared, or will we still be searching for petty faults and flaws?

Jarman not to blame for S-UN's lack of gain

Dear Editor:

I am writing to respond to the editorial in last week's issue that cited "poor campus-wide planning" as causing a low turnout to S-UN's 1964 concert. Ms. Justis felt that certain events conflicted and caused the low turnout. This is quite possible, but several of her facts were a bit off.

First of all, the production of "Grease" was held on the night of the concert. Last week's editorial stated that "the production of Grease was planned after S-UN had authorization to go ahead with 1964." This is not true. All plays are scheduled the year before they take place. In fact, the production was noted on the Handbook calendar.

Secondly, the ROTC was mentioned. This event took place at Hampden-Sydney. How can Longwood have any say about what takes place on another campus?

Finally, Ms. Justis said it would be "logical" to have an office that coordinates campus events. It is quite logical, and we do have such an office. All major campus events are scheduled through Phyllis Mable's office. Representatives from various organizations and departments meet with her in the spring to schedule the next year. The meeting for next year took place on March 28.

It is quite important to schedule things properly. I am sorry that there wasn't a better turnout for the concert, but it was hardly any one group's fault.

Stop Cox Slobs!

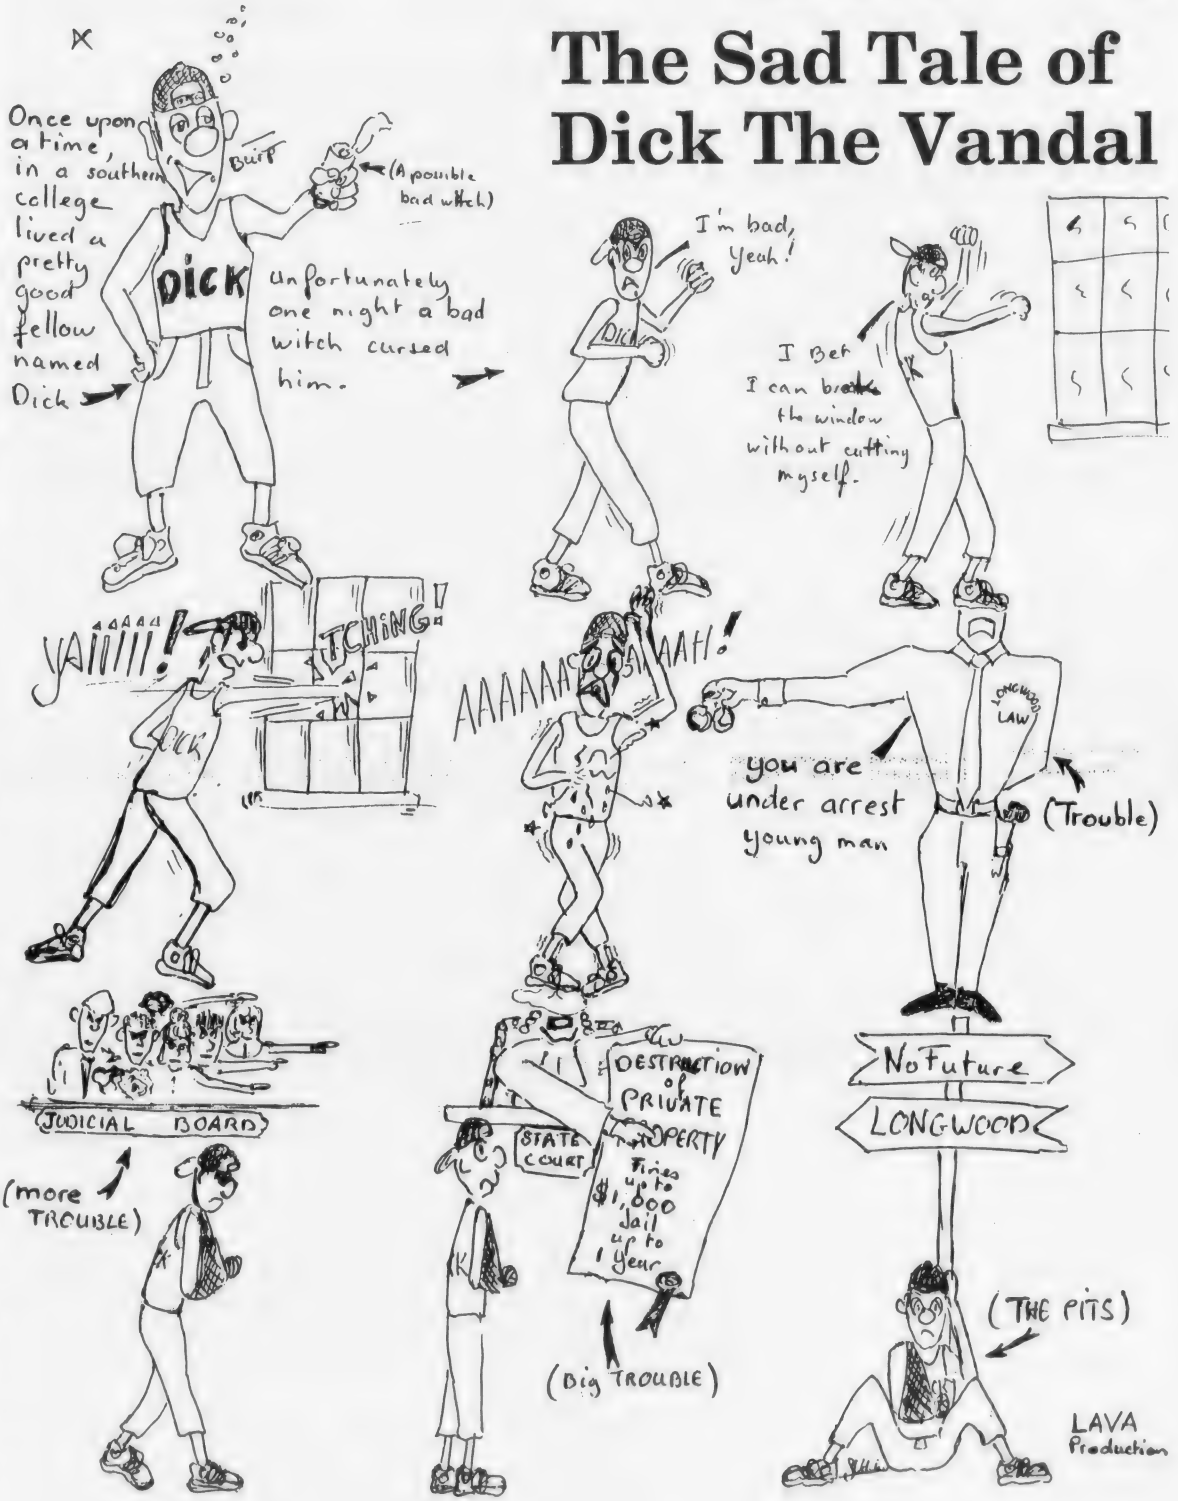
Dear Editor,

I am a very unhappy resident of Cox dorm. I would like to express by displeasure at the broken vending machine in the downstairs lounge, that, by the way, was just fixed one week and two days before this writing. Not only was the vending machine broken, but the cigarette machine as well.

What is this place coming to? It is very disturbing to walk into the lounge and find that the vending machine that was just restocked and the glass replaced is broken again. There was glass scattered all over the floor, and of course the candy was stolen. This is no way for Longwood to make money!

Rumor has it that the Deltas who live in Cox on the ground floor are responsible for this act of vandalism. It is also rumored that the Deltas will be charged for the damage to both machines.

I do not believe that it is the Deltas who are responsible for the damage. There is no proof that a member of their fraternity broke either of the machines, therefore I do not think the Deltas should be charged.



I do have some suggestions that will keep the vending machines in working order all year round. If the machines were placed in the front foyer or study lounge, near both the front office and the REC's room, there would be less chance of the machines being broken. Many residents have discussed this and think it is the best possible solution.

Even though I'm disgusted with the quantity of vandalism in this dorm, I believe in justice and I don't think the Deltas should be blamed for everything that happens in Cox.

If anyone does have information about the vending machines in Cox, please, please, please, notify campus police or LAVA (Longwood Against Vandalism Association): they can and will do something about it!

Signed,
An unhappy resident of Cox,
Dina Marie Schiano

Hall, Barret Share Player of the Week

A pair of seniors, softball player Tina Hall and Lady Lancer golfer Tina Barrett share the Longwood College Player of the Week honor for April 3-10. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

Hall led her team to a second place finish in the UNCG Invitational Softball Tournament and a total of six wins last week. In the tournament Hall batted .636 with 14 hits in 22 at-bats. A co-captain for the Lady Lancers, she collected nine runs, 12 RBIs, four doubles, three triples and a grand slam homer, with five stolen bases in five attempts.

Hall had the best game of her career in a 20-19 win over Greensboro, hitting for the cycle. She went 4-4 with five runs, a grand slam homer, a triple, a double, a single, and eight RBIs.

Chosen Player of the Week for the second consecutive week, Hall currently leads the team in at-bats (72), runs (21), hits (37), RBIs (29), doubles (7), triples (6), stolen bases (12-12), and batting average (.514). The team's 15-5 record is the best in Longwood history.

A 1984 graduate of Dinwiddie High School, Hall is majoring in physical education at Longwood. Co-MVP of last season's 10-8-1 LC softball team, she played softball and basketball at Dinwiddie.

Barrett carded a career best 73-76-74-223 to win the individual title and lead Longwood to a second place finish in the Azalea-Seahawk Invitational golf tournament Friday through Sunday in Wilmington, North Carolina. She had won the Peggy Kirk Bell Tournament title in March to net her first Player of the Week award of the spring.

A three time All-American, Barrett has won two NGCA Division II individual titles and qualified for the NCAA Women's Golf Championship three years. In addition, she has been named an Academic All-American by both GTE-CoSIDA and the NGCA the last two seasons.

She recorded a stroke average of 75.3 in the fall season with tournament finishes of second, first, fifth and seventh. Last spring she led Longwood to its first national crown in women's golf as the Lady Lancers won the National Golf Coaches Association Division II title.

A graduate of Perry Hall High School, Barrett has a 3.48 overall academic average while majoring in business administration. She had a 3.75 GPA first semester this year.

Lancer Rides Compete in Maryland

Longwood's riding team competed in an intercollegiate horseshow, April 2, at Goucher College.

The following riders placed for Longwood: Jennifer Smith, 4th open flat and 5th open fences, Scott Flood, 6th intermediate flat, Kandi Klotz, 6th novice flat, Tanya Metria, 3rd novice flat, 4th novice fences, Nancy Rooney, 3rd advanced walk-trot-canter, Shelley Malone, 1st walk-trot-canter, Sharon Kaufmann, 2nd beginning walk-trot-canter, Katherine Smith, 5th beginning walk-trot-canter, Leslie Stuler, 5th advanced walk-trot.

The following riders qualified for Regionals April 10, at the University of Virginia: Shelley Malone, walk-trot-canter, Ann Lawson, novice division, and Lauri Wilkins, walk-trot-canter.

Barret Takes Title, LC Second

Senior All-American Tina Barrett won the individual title and led Longwood to a second place finish in the Azalea-Seahawk Invitational women's golf tournament Friday through Sunday at Echo Farms Golf Course in Wilmington, North Carolina.

Barrett shot a career-best 73-76-74-223 to finish first in a field of more than 50 golfers. Longwood recorded a 327-313-320-960 to come in second out of 10 teams behind UNC. Wilminton's school record 310-323-302-935.

Also contributing to Longwood's showing were Marcia Melone 85-77-78-240, Gretchen Pugh 85-79-83-247, Leigh Russell 896-81-85-252 and Ashley Warren 84-86--86-256. Kim Poirier, playing as an individual, shot 84-92-85-261.

Longwood will play next in the William & Mary Invitational Friday through Sunday in Williamsburg.

Men's Tennis Gets First Win

In the win over John Jay Lancer singles winners were No. 2 Bill Milby, No. 3 Vince Osborn, No. 4 Mike Pugh, No. 5 Scott Wassenberg and No. 6 Carrington Tate.

In doubles No. 2 Pugh and Osborn won a three-set match 4-6, 6-3, 6-1 and Tate teamed with Troy Loveday for a 6-0, 6-0 victory at No. 3.

This week the Lancers visit Greensboro Monday, host Randolph-Macon Tuesday and Liberty Thursday.

Longwood's men's tennis team got their first win of the season last Monday, beating John Jay 7-2. The Lancers fell at VMI Tuesday 9-0 as their record dipped to 1-6. Matches with NC Wesleyan and Mary Washington were rained out.

Lacrosse Team Falls To Eagles, Roanoke

The Lady Lancer lacrosse team met defeat at the hands of Mary Washington 9-8 and Roanoke 19-3 last week as the season record dipped to 2-6. Longwood plays at Virginia Tech Wednesday and hosts Bridgewater Saturday at 2:00 in action this week.

Katy Thiel, Mary Collins and Karen Carreras scored two goals each in last Monday's tough loss to Mary Washington. Analise Lage and Chris Schup added one goal each. Longwood led 7-4 at the half, but scored just once more after the Lady Eagles went to a zone defense in the second period.

The Lady Lancers were unable to stay with Roanoke, one of the top teams in the state, in Wednesday's contest.

Pitching Woes Plague Lancers

Jolted by three losses to Division I opposition, Longwood's 15-11 baseball team will seek to rebound this week with two road dates, a home game with Hampden-Sydney Tuesday and a pair of home twin bills Saturday and Sunday.

The Lancers lost on the road to VCU Tuesday 3-1, to Radford Wednesday 9-6 and to Richmond Friday 11-8. A game scheduled at Christopher-Newport Saturday was canceled.

After visiting Virginia State Monday for two, Longwood hosts H-SC Tuesday at 3:00, visits VMI Thursday and comes home to play St. Augustine's and Bowie State Saturday and Sunday.

Longwood, which collected 13 hits, blew a 6-0 lead in Friday's loss to the Spiders. The Lancers sent 10 batters to the plate in the fourth as five hits, Longwood, which got two-run homers from Watson and Bill Conroy, came back for two runs in the seventh. A Radford error and a single by Eric Hutzler put two men on base, and then Davis delivered a two-out double to plate both runs. Mark Moeller walked to keep the threat alive, but Conroy struck out to end the game.

Watson went the distance for Longwood, taking his third loss against one victory. He struck out eight, walked five and allowed nine hits. He had a triple to go with his two-run homer.

Davis, a senior shortstop, continues to lead the Lancers with a .520 batting average, 43 RBIs, nine homers, 11 doubles and four triples. Watson was Longwood's hottest hitter last week going 6-12 with two doubles, a triple and a homer while boosting his average to .295.

a sacrifice fly and an error put LC up 6-0. Greylin Rice drove in two runs with a single and Robert Jackson plated another with a double.

Richmond got four runs in the fourth off Lancer starter Dennis Hale and battered reliever Steve Gedro for seven runs over the final four innings. Homeruns by Robbie Smith and Kelvin Davis completed LC's scoring.

Radford, which beat the Lancers for the first time after six straight setbacks, shook loose from a 4-4 tie in the bottom of the sixth inning, using four hits and three walks to score five runs off Longwood pitcher Frankie Watson.

Also hitting well for Longwood are: Jackson, (.359, 5 homers, 30 RBI), Smith, (.362, 5 doubles, 10 RBIs), Pete Criscione (.342, 7 doubles, 3 triples, 15 RBIs).

Lady Netters Seek to Bounce Back

By Robert Smith

Virginia Commonwealth University and Randolph-Macon Woman's College handed Longwood losses last week as VCU took a 7-2 decision Tuesday and RMWC won a 9-0 match Thursday. The Lady Lancers, now 3-9, will try to improve their record Tuesday at Randolph-Macon. Longwood hosts Ferrum Wednesday at 3:30 and visits Roanoke Friday.

Laura Crigger is looking good for the Lady Netters despite her bad knee. Heading into Thursday's match at RMWC she had compiled a 4-5 singles record and a 3-5 doubles record with teammate Laura Labyak.

Traci Moore is also swinging a mean racket for the Lady Lancers. Traci had compiled a 4-3 singles mark and 1-0 doubles mark along with teammate Paula Bleiler before Thursday.

Wilderness Leadership Recreation 375

"Leadership Development Through Wilderness Pursuits" is a three (3) credit elective course offered for students who are interested in developing leadership skills. Students will learn various outdoor skills such as backpacking, rock-climbing, rappelling, orienteering, outdoor cooking, and ropes course initiative activities.

There is no background experience necessary to participate in this course. Students must be in good academic standing and have a genuine interest and enthusiasm for learning about leadership in the outdoors.

This course is open to any major or area of study where an elective course such as this may fulfill a general education requirement. Students who are interested in this unique course need to contact Ms. Rena Koesler before registering for the course.

If you have not registered for classes, consider this class as an enjoyable and experiential means for developing leadership. If you have already registered and would be interested in signing up for the course, see Ms. Koesler in Rm. 131 of Lancer Hall or call 392-9266 before adding the class in August.

Softball Wins 6 of 8 Finishes Second in UNCG Tournament

By MICHAEL K. PHILLIPS

The Longwood softball team traveled to Greensboro, North Carolina, last weekend and won five of six games to finish second in the UNCG Invitational Softball Tournament. Coupled with a split at Ferrum Tuesday, the Lady Lancers won six of eight games last week, boosting their record to 15-5.

Longwood played its fourteenth consecutive road game at Averett College Monday of this week and hosts Virginia Wesleyan Tuesday at 2:30 on the Farmville Armory Field.

The Lady Lancers started tournament play Friday with first round wins over Baptist (8-7) and St. Augustine's (8-5). Saturday morning brought the final first round game, a 20-19 win over Greensboro, and the start of single elimination. Coach Loretta Coughlin and her squad eliminated Ferrum in the quarterfinals 9-4 and host UNCG 3-0 in the semi-finals before being shut out by Baptist 10-0 in the championship game.

Longwood co-captain Tina Hall again led the team as she raised her batting average to .514. Hall forced opposing outfielders to play on the warning track. The senior rightfielder hit 14-22 (.636), with nine runs, 12 RBIs, four doubles, three triples, a homerun, and five stolen bases in five attempts. She made a name for herself and Longwood softball at the UNCG tournament.

After three scoreless innings in the opener against Baptist Longwood's Pam Fitzgerald broke the ice with an RBI single in the fourth inning. Baptist tied it in the fifth and the Lady Lancers appeared to have iced the win with three runs in the seventh but Baptist fought back to get three in the bottom of the inning.

Longwood's two runs in the top of the eighth again looked to be enough, but a strong Baptist team refused to fold as they knocked in two also. Hall's ninth inning triple drove in two more and Baptist only managed one more. LC pitcher Anne Douglas Miller, who pitched all nine innings, got the 8-7 victory.

Stacy Thompson went the distance to earn an 8-5 win over St. Augustine's in the second game. Thompson allowed only five hits as she struck out two and walked one. The junior righthander also hit 2-3, scored two runs, and knocked in a run. The fifth inning provided six runs for Longwood as everybody in the lineup made at least one trip to the plate. The inning also provided all five of St. Augustine's runs.

Saturday started with a 5:30 a.m. wakeup call for an 8:00 game that will stay in the record books for years to come. In the final game before single elimination started, both Longwood and Greensboro wanted to conserve their pitching. A slugfest ensued, producing 39 runs.

Freshman Amanda Whitby, who previously had only seen action as an infielder and designated hitter, started on the pitching rubber for LC. Despite only giving up two hits, Whitby was touched for six runs and was replaced after a third of an inning by Fitzgerald, who had only seen playing time at first base. Fitzgerald went 6 and 2/3 innings to get a 20-19 win. Thompson came onto pitch the eighth to insure that the seemingly endless game would end.

Hall Hits for the Cycle

While nearly destroying Longwood's outstanding defensive statistics, the game provided offensive stats that went through the ceiling. Hall had the best game of her career, going 4-4 and scoring five runs, but that was just the beginning. She walked her first two times up and then decided she would rather hit. In her third trip to the plate, in the third inning, Hall faced loaded bases with no outs and jumped on the first pitch, and as they say in the big leagues, it was "going, going, gone." Hall hit a triple, a double, and a single in her next three at-bats, hitting for the cycle and finishing with eight RBIs.

Whitby went from the mound to right field and proved she could hit, going 4-6 with four runs. Dailey also scored four runs, adding two RBIs and two stolen bases. Sophomore Melissa Gwinn went 3-6 with three runs and freshman Kelli Sheimreif went 3-5 with two RBIs including the game winner.

In the first game of single elimination Longwood ousted Ferrum 9-4. Although out-hit 11-10, LC and pitcher Stacey Thompson pulled out the win. Chris LeBel hit 3-4 with four RBIs, the first RBI on a second inning double which proved to be the game winner.

Against host UNCG in the semi-finals Longwood was again out hit (7-5), but again won. Miller was on the mound as she lowered her ERA to 2.19. Hall had two of LC's five hits with a triple and a double.

Despite a dramatic loss, Longwood accomplished a lot last weekend, leaving Greensboro with its head held high. Coach Loretta Coughlin now posts a 15-5 record, the best ever for a LC softball team. The team's 15 wins are five more than last year's 10-8-1. The Lady Lancers have eight games remaining and, with the coaching, desire, depth, and ability that they possess, should win approximately eight. Throughout the season and especially in two tournaments, Longwood has established itself as a team to be reckoned with. LC is not the team to beat.

There's Something Drooling. . .

By NIGEL SMITHERS

I haven't read this book. I haven't even bought it yet. There are good reasons for this.

When I bought my copy of Bill Watterson's first Calvin and Hobbes comic strip anthology, fittingly titled Calvin and Hobbes, I made myself promise that I would not run home and read the whole thing in one sitting right off the bat (as I have with every Far Side and Bloom County book I've purchased). No, this time it was going to be different: I was only going to read one page each day.

I got home, read one page, put the volume down and walked away, came back fifteen minutes later and finished the thing off like gangbusters.

I'm afraid of this happening again, I tell you. Especially now, as the end of the semester creeps up on me – I can see it now:

Prof.: "Nigel, where is your term paper?"

Me (Nigel): "Well, see, I read There's Something Drooling Under the Bed instead of War and Peace. Tolstoy just doesn't do it for me, sir . . ."

Prof.: "When is this going to end, Nigel? You failed your midterm because you just had to watch "Alf" the night before the test. And you're always late to class because you've been up watching Dave Letterman to the wee hours of the morning!"

Me (Nigel): Sorry, sir. I promise it won't happen while I'm taking this class over again next semester . . ."

Exactly what is it about this little kid and his sometimes-stuffed, sometimes-live tiger that appeals to so many people? You'd think we'd have had enough of kids in the comic strips: Peanuts, Dennis the Menace, Family Circus – the list could go on. These little people and their antics have been around for years, and suddenly some new kid on the block comes along and more or less steals the show. How? Why?

Perhaps Watterson has hit upon the winning combination, taking the finest assets of each of our favorite comic kids and rolling them all into one. Calvin act smart with mom and dad (but they still love the little bologna loaf), won't eat their lima beans, and fear the monsters under the bed the minute the lights go out.

It sounds so typical, like it's all been done before. Yet Calvin is so good at doing what he does (Hobbes, too), and is so cute while he does it, (Hobbes too), that even the oldest gags are fresh and funny in the can go from a Linus-esque comment like "Hobbes, I have a conjectural moral question. Maybe you can help . . ." to Menace-ish guffaws about his friend Tommy laughing milk out of his nose during school lunch.

No one who has read a Calvin and Hobbes strip can deny that this whirling-dervish duo could take on the Family Circus any day of the week and win. As they zoom by Mom in one strip, she commands them to "quit charging around the house!" When they upset a table, a lamp and a few other household items, she yells "What did I just tell you??"...In the final frame, Calvin looks up at her and says "Beats me. Weren't you listening either?"

The stuff that kids are made of.

Calvin and his tiger fish, watch television shows with "Idiots, explosives and falling anvils," carry on at bathtime, hands of these two.

A little bit of credit for their success should go to Bill Watterson, I suppose. His drawings are simple, yet he catches the precise angles, gestures and moods of his subjects to make the strip work. His choice of dialogue; "Woof! what did you eat for breakfast? Cement?", for instance, when Calvin tries to wear Hobbes as a fur stole, combined with bugging out eyes and a big wide open mouth is perfect for such a disaster. Sound effects like "Glik, Glik, Glik" suggest that Calvin is drinking his soda pretty quick (and you're not surprised by the gigantic burp in the next frame). Sometimes these written in sounds are half the funny stuff in the strip.

I could go on listing Calvin and Hobbes' good points all day, but I'd feel like a bit of a hypocrite since I haven't read the new book yet. You should. I will! – just not until after finals are through.

Simkins Lecture

Sam Maloof, a furniture designer and woodworker who has set a standard for his craft in North America and the world, will give this semester's Francis Butler Simkins Lecture at Longwood College.

The lecture is scheduled for Wednesday evening, April 13, at 7:30 in Wygal Auditorium. The public is invited to hear Maloof discuss his work.

Maloof also will conduct a workshop during his visit to Longwood. The workshop will be Thursday, April 14, from 9 a.m. to 12 noon and 1 to 4 p.m. Space is limited in the workshop; to make reservations, call Longwood's Department of Visual and Performing Arts.

Dance Co. Applause

By NANCY RUFF

"Winds of Color," a high-energy performance by Longwood's Company of Dancers hailed the coming of spring with a kaleidoscope of colorful costumes, backdrops and lighting.

The show, held March 30 and April 1 in Jarman, was the troupe's second production of the school year.

Under Director Tammy Tipton—Nay's guidance, the students showed professional ability in choreographing their own pieces as well as in interpreting existing ones.

Dance Minor, Hilary Silvera choreographed "The Awakening," a modern dance piece. Silouettes circled a goddess-like figure on the darkened stage to the music of UTFO's "Master Baby."

The spiritual "Jacobs Ladder" was the inspiration behind a modern dance choreographed by Ted Shawn during the 1920's. Pat Cook, instructor at SVCC, sang this old and well-known hymn as dancers horizontally "climbed the ladder."

An unusual and unexpected dance, "Bits and Pieces" was an improvisational work by Cynthia Hawkins of the Erick Hawkins Dance Company and guest of the college in January. Each dancer was required to move in some way and then establish contact with another person "in a clump," as the dance was explained by company of Dancers President, Susan Hanks.

Lisa Ham and Jill Hart choreographed and performed "Beats and Rhymes," a snappy jazz piece complete with flashing lights, vivid costumes and hot pink ribbons.

"Just Going," a dramatic piece by Dr. Nelson Neal and Susan Hanks, conveyed the idea of moving with the fluid sounds of Mannheim Steamroller and R. Lynch and T. Channing. The dance, with its mixture of fast movements and sometimes slow, almost motionless ones, seemed to evoke the times when one must take brisk, decisive action or slowly struggle to take the next step.

"Out and About," a Rockettes-like tap dance was a fresh departure from existing dance forms. The work, choreographed by Tammy Tipton-Nay was set to "Figleaf Rag" by Scott Joplin.

With contagious energy and enthusiasm, dancers in "Winds of Color" established a direct link to a responsive audience.

Creation Not A Science

By SCOTT LOVING

Dr. William A. Shear gave the final Faculty Colloquium Lecture for this year on Wednesday, April 6.

In his lecture, Shear discussed the rivalry between the supporters of Creation Science and those of Natural Selection.

Shear then went on to explain that Creation Science was not a science at all, but only existed through the manipulation of scientific data.

Shear stated that Creation Science was originally set up as a counterweight to Charles Darwin's ideas about Natural Selection, otherwise known as Evolution.

Supporters of Creation Science argue that man was placed on Earth by a Creator, as opposed to the arguement that man evolved through Natural Selection.

Shear wrapped up his lecture by saying that Creation can be argued on religious grounds, but cannot be argued as a science.

Shear is a professor of biology at Hampden-Sydney College.

PETER LEROY IS BACK!

Longwood's sophomores should find just the book they want to take with them on summer vacation at the college bookstore this week. Eric Kraft, whose serial novel was the featured work in freshman English last spring, has just published another volume in his ongoing history of Peter Leroy's hometown, Babbington, N.Y.

Herb 'n' Lorna, the fictional biography of Peter's grandparents, Gumma and Guppa, has just been released by Crown Publishers, who announce: "From the author of the critically acclaimed serial novel, The Personal History, Adventures, Experiences, and Observations of Peter Leroy, here is a funny, poignant, and sexy story about two people so well and thoroughly coupled that the heat of their union fuses the word and into 'n' when it comes between their names."

Last year at this time Longwood freshmen were nearing completion of the eight installments in Peter's story published by Warner Books (New York) and Apple-wood Books (Cambridge, Massachussetts). In this series, Peter grows from infancy to young adulthood, becoming in "Call Me Larry" the author of Larry Peters adventure stories for boys.

In Kraft's latest work, Peter tells the story of his grandparents' romance, beginning at "the upstate New York mill town of Chacallit, Lorna's birthplace on the bank of the Whatsit River, to Babbington, Long Island, where Herb runs the local Studebacker dealership, to Punta Chachazuda, Florida, where the couple finally settles."

Their history also traces the birth and development of the erotic jewelry business in the United States. Unknown to Peter, his grandparents had second careers, in addition to selling Studebakders and working in a slide rule factory.

An added feature are photographs from the story included in the middle of the text. The book is an alternate selection in the Literary Guild this month and is already receiving enthusiastic reviews (as in Publishers Weekly, 26 February 1988).

WLCX Tops Charts

Little Station Has Lots Of Listeners

By MARY HILL

Statistics show that Longwood students choose WLCX over all other radio stations in the area.

Longwood's Broadcasting Class, under the direction of Dr. Patton Lockwood, designed and conducted a radio listener survey several weeks ago, and the results were recently released.

Out of 390 total responses, WLCX received 103 votes for the most listened to station within 60 miles. WRVQ (Q94.5) came in second with 75 votes. Other leading stations were WRXL and WFLO.

Another question on the survey asked for students' music preferences. Top 40 was the most listened to type of music, while Progressive Rock and Classic Rock were a close second.

The most popular days to listen were Saturday and Friday, however, most of the students surveyed listen to the radio everyday.

The most chosen time when students listen to the radio were the study hours between 6-11 p.m. The hours of 2-6 p.m. followed closely and the next most popular time to listen was between 10-2 p.m.

Kuwaiti Hijacking, Better Meat Packing, And The Masters

By MATT PETERMAN

Sandy Lyles swept the Masters, a golf tournament, with birdies on the 16th and 18th holes. The British born golfer landed on top for his second major golf title.

Several deadlines have been missed in the hijacking of a Kuwaiti airliner now stranded in Cyprus. The hijackers are threatening to kill the members of the Kuwaiti royal family if the plane was not refueled.

In a move of solidarity, factors in Lebanon holding American hostages say they will kill all of them if the plane is stormed. The ordeal begun 8 days ago.

The Federal Government released a study last week indicating a reduction of fat present in meat of all kinds. Among some of the reasons cited were better breeding options and better management.

The meat packers say that animal products can be part of a healthy diet as advances in meat processing continue to improve.

Room Selection Rundown

On Thursday, April 14, 1988 at 7:00 p.m. the Room Selection Process begins!

At 7:00 p.m. the Saved Floor groups will be able to select their rooms, if they have not chosen to participate in the pre-arranged room selection.

The starting time for In Residence Hall Room selection is 7:30 p.m. The current seniors with the lowest lottery numbers will be first and the lottery numbers will determine the order of the rest of the class.

Current juniors, by lottery number, will go second; current sophomores, by lottery number, will choose next and then the current freshman, by lottery number.

If you wish to remain in the residence hall that you now live in, In Residence Hall Room selection is for you. Please make sure that you are on time so that we may avoid unnecessary problems.

To bring in someone from another residence hall you will need to participate in the In-Hall with Outsiders section of the process. This part of room selection begins at 8:00 p.m. on April 14. You can utilize this program if you are moving in with a friend in another residence hall.

All three of these programs will take place in the lobby of the residence hall that you choose to live in.

April 18, 1988 is the date for Change of Residence Hall Room Selection. It will take place for current seniors, by lottery number, at 7:00 p.m. Current Juniors, by lottery number, will go next and then the current sophomores, by lottery number, and then the current freshman, by lottery number. If you wish to change to another residence hall without being tied to a person that lives there, then you will need to use this room selection time.

The correct date for Late Room Sign-Up is Fri. April 22, 1988 not April 20, 1988 which was incorrectly printed in some of the Housing Card packets.

SGA Elections This Week

SGA elections will be held on Wednesday April 13, and Thursday April 14 from 11:00 p.m. to 6:00 p.m. in the New Smoker.

The addition of one extra day of voting should help enhance voter turnout by making voting available to people that may have busy schedules. If someone still has a conflict during the day, ballots will be available in the SGA office Wednesday night until 11:30 p.m.

All a student needs to vote is a current Longwood I.D.

New Library In The Works

Architecture of Building to "Blend the Two Parts of the Campus"

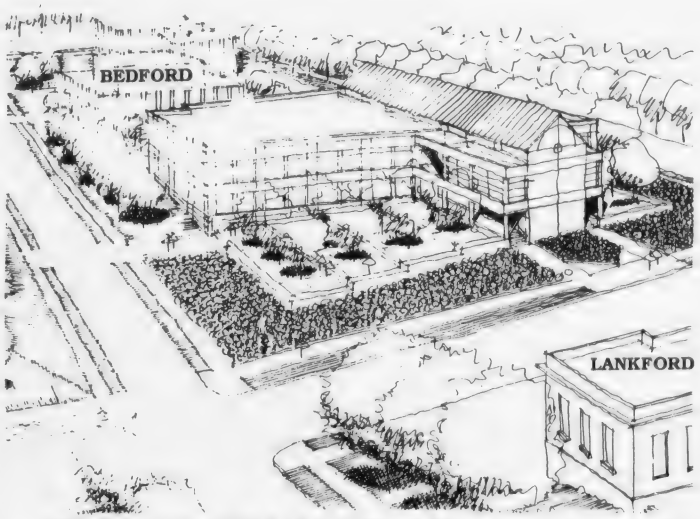
By MARY HILL

Three years of preparation and thought are finally starting to show as the blueprints for the new library are nearing final approval.

The library has been designed to "blend the two parts of the campus" by combining old and new architectural styles, says Brenda Atkins, Special Assistant to the President for Legislative Relations.

The building itself will consist of two floors and a partial basement. There will be columns on both the inside and the outside of the building. A high open foyer will run the length of the building, providing an atrium-like effect. These features will give the library a historic look.

These details will be counterbalanced with large glass walls. One side of the library will be terraced and landscaped to provide a place for students to relax outside.



Some of the features the new library will have are group as well as individual study rooms. The individual carrels will be glassed-in rooms with doors. Compact shelving will also be used in the basement to store books that are infrequently used.

A stoa is also in the plans. This room will house "vending machines, restrooms and a lounge," says Atkins.

The new library will have 55,700 useable square feet, which is 23,000 square feet more than the Lancaster Library has now. There will be more reading area, and separate areas for computers and video machines.

The building, which will be bidded on in July will cost $7,002,542. $6,027,542 has already been funded by the General Assembly. Next year another $975 thousand dollars will be funded for furnishings and equipment, says Atkins.

The construction is proposed to begin in the early fall and be completed in the summer of 1990.

Sketch of proposed plans for the new library. Clearly visible here are the terraced area on the Lankford side of building and the high foyer, which will run parallel to Pine Street along the back of the plot.

Construction was almost postponed a year when Governor Baliles provided no funding in his budget for construction projects. His plan was to wait and use the lottery revenue to pay for the building costs.

With "the lottery not even up and working yet" the General Assembly worried the revenue would not be enough to cover the costs. Funds were therefore given to Longwood and four other universities for building projects.

The Lancaster Library's two floors will be converted into a Fine Arts Center. The basement will be used as office space for the Dean of Students, Housing, Career Planning and Placement, Counseling, and Student Development.

The area in South Ruffner, Tabb and French where these offices are now will be made into dormitory space.

PETERMAN SELECTED AS 1988-89 EDITOR

By NIGEL SMITHERS

After much careful deliberation, the Longwood Publications Board has found it in their best interests to select Mr. Matthew Peterman to serve in the capacity of Rotunda Editor-in-Chief for the 1988-1989 school year.

Selection of an editor to serve during the newspaper's 68th year took place Wednesday of last week.

The Publications Board consists of the Editors, Business Managers and Advisers of the campus publications, the Rotunda, Gyre and Virginian, Vice President of Student Affairs Phyllis Mable, and SGA President and Secretary. Editors are non-voting members of the Board.

Present to partake in applicant interviews and considerations on Wednesday were Gyre Editors Kim Talley and Beth Camillo; Gyre Business Manager David Parrish; Virginian Editor Jeff Dingledein; Rotunda Editor Cathy Gaughran; Rotunda Advertising Manager Somer Sloan; Virginian Adviser Mr. Otis Douglas; SGA President Mr. Ricky Otey, SGA Secretary Patrice Landers; and Ms. Phyllis Mable.

Publication Board representation at Editor Selection has not been this complete in many years.

Applicants for the position in question were Matthew Peterman and Susan Miller.

Peterman, a rising Senior Business major has worked on the Rotunda in some capacity or another since his Freshman year.

Mr. Peterman began writing for former Editor Frank Raio in 1985 and continued this as-

Peter Pan To Play This Week

The Longwood Players will present Peter Pan on Wednesday through Saturday evenings, April 20-23, in Jarman Auditorium on the Longwood College campus. Curtain time each evening is 8 p.m.

There also will be two matinee performances for students from area schools on Tuesday and Wednesday, April 19 and 20, at 10 a.m.

Guest director for the production of Peter Pan is Melissa Johnston, a 1976 graduate of Longwood who is co-owner and director of the Richmond Theatre Company. The company tours in seven states and produces about 1,500 children's theatre shows each year.

Doug Mumaw, a professional actor, will play the role of Captain Hook. He is a member of the Society of American Fight Directors and will choreograph the four fight scenes in the play.

The cast of 33 is headed by Teresa Kliner in the role of Peter Pan. She is a Longwood freshman from Sterling.

Four of the characters – Peter, Michael, Wendy, and John – will fly on stage, thanks to a machine devised by Moffatt Evans, technical director of the production.

U.S. IN FOR RUDE AWAKENING UNLESS. . .

At one point in time, the United States was a glorious place. We had it all. Cars, a house, kids, the dog and so on. Most of what we had was made by our own culture. Not only did we make almost everything for ourselves, but we also produced goods for the entire world. We were on top and we knew it.

Today we own some of the same things, but most are not made by our own culture. These goods are made by others in other countries who are paid much less than we would ever take for any job. We buy and buy things made in other countries instead of our own because we have failed in two areas: quality and price. If we do not fail in one, we fail in the other.

Automobile manufacturers in this country are some of the worst hit on both lines. The quality has yet to catch up with that of the Japanese even though the price is not about the same. One of the reasons is that the Japanese auto makers were pushed and given quotas by their government as to how many exports they were to make. Another is that their government has almost always had restrictions on how many automobiles were imported.

In the seventies, when the U. S. Government put restrictions upon Japanese imports, it gave them a chance to move their attention from the compact car market, which they already dominated, to the larger mid-size car market. After the restrictions were lifted, the Japanese had the machinery in place to take the larger car market and they did.

In other words, the Japanese were and are having an economic war against the United States, who is watching money flow into the eager hands of Japan. Not only with automobiles, but with electronic audio and video components. Japan now has a well-organized aim at conquering the world microchip market, which is presently dominated by the United States.

Whenever we buy a Japanese product, money flows mostly to Japan. When this happens we have a trade deficit which is well into the billions. This deficit is in turn paid off when the government borrows money from anyone who wants to lend it to them. The banks of Japan have been and will continue to be the good friends that they are and lend us the money to pay it off.

What this is in simple terms is that they sell and make money which we have to borrow from them. With our debt increasing, we will have the chance of seeing Japan, as we do with nations that are in debt to us, begin dictating to our government what it will do with regards to foreign and domestic policy.

This outcome is almost inevitable unless we do something to curb the buying habits of the U. S. population away from Japanese and other foreign products and towards our own.

One way to achieve this would be to increase our competitiveness through higher quality products. This is a good idea but it is time consuming and it might not effect brand loyalties which have already been established for Japanese products.

A second and more realistic way would be to restrict liberty in order to keep it. This would involve raising tariffs on imports to make their price equal to or above that of their American counterparts. The money from this could go to private research laboratories whose goal would be to sustain or attain United States domination on all fronts of technology. These laboratories would be highly secretive and sell their achievements only to United States companies.

If this plan or a similar one were to be implemented, the United States might save itself the horror the Japanese government went through over forty years ago: Unconditional surrender. One thing is sure; we must act soon before they do have the power to devastate us further.

Chill On Going Public With Roomie Spats

Letter To The Editor,

I am writing in response to a 'personal' in last week's edition of the Rotunda. Being a reader as well as a student, I find it ridiculous to read malicious slander involving roommates in the personals.

Although one cannot consider this act vandalism, it again raises the issue of "pride" in Longwood. The Rotunda's personals section was not designed as a battlefield for roommate disputes. I like to believe that Longwood students have more respect for each other, and will not be so blunt about their problems.

To the authors – your floor of residence and telephone number was tacky as hell! In addition, if you're that desperate to rid yourselves of this person, why did you give 10th floor Curry's hall telephone when you live on 5th?

If your roommate is so "ready, willing and able to fight", then why are you so vengeful as to resort to the campus newspaper? It seems absurd, since the year is almost over, to advertise such grievances. Your demonstration of hostility only discredits your accusations!

GAIN A LITTLE RESPECT

Dear Editor and students,

I just want citizens and students to know of an incident that occurred on Saturday, March 26 at approximately 5 p.m. as my step-son and I were leaving work at the college to go to dinner.

A young black female and her child were crossing the crosswalk at Redford and Franklin St. when four white males speeded across the crosswalk yelling "Hello Nigger." I followed this vehicle to Lancer Gym where they parked. I pulled directly behind them and questioned the ignorant poor fellow on why he yelled "nigger" to this young lady who was minding her own business and was it necessary to yell "Hello nigger"? (He could not give me a clear answer to either question.) So like I told you, it's not needed. And it only takes a few bad apples to give the rest a bad name at Longwood.

So to those, who enjoy getting drunk or high, and then ride around raising hell, you need to learn or your parents need to inform you that the word "nigger" could get you seriously hurt, and if you don't believe it, try calling one of the brothers on the street a "nigger" instead of an innocent young lady and her child. And I know you could feel the heat coming from me, but I remained calm. We have enough problems going on in Farmville and we don't need so-called future teachers to be yelling racial and obscene words to children that you may one day be teaching. And believe me if I see your face in our school system, I will let it be known that you, the only one I saw yelling, is lack of home training and filled with prejudice.

So if you want to gain a little respect during your years at Longwood. "Be Cool".

Platforms Fall, Hijacker's Stall, And New York

By MATT PETERMAN

The U.S. Navy destroyed two Iranian oil platforms in the Persian Gulf yesterday. The first was destroyed by gunfire, the second was boarded by Marines.

The strategic move was taken after mines in the Persian Gulf, one of which struck a U.S. vessel, were identified as Iranian.

In response, an Iranian gunboat tried to attack an American warship but was set on fire. Other reported attacks were on a U.S. and on a British oil tanker.

Senator John Warner of Virginia supported President Reagan's command to shoot back by saying: "The U.S. forces are there to protect freedom of the seas."

The hijacking of the Kuwaiti Airliner reached its 14th day today, making it the longest highjacking ever.

The plane landed in Algiers six days ago with the hijackers threatening to take off and kill all the hostages.

It is speculated that they will stay in Algiers indefinitely. So far the situation remains deadlocked with no end in sight. The hostages are caught between the terrorists demand to release 17 prisoners and Kuwait's refusal to bargain.

Today's primary in New York promises to either name a candidate or stymie the Democratic race for months to come.

Massachusetts Governor Michael Dukakis needs a sweeping victory to become the dominate frontrunner. Senator Albert Gore is also vying for votes as well as Jesse Jackson.

10 New Scholars Join Ranks

Ten high school students came to Longwood on March 17 and 18 to participate in the on-campus interviews for the Longwood Scholars Program. The students were welcomed on Thursday evening, March 17, at a reception and dinner in the Virginia Room. Individual interviews were held on Friday with members of the Faculty Selection Committee — Dr. John Peale, Dr. Kenneth Perkins, Dr. Jung Ra, and Dr. David Stein.

Four Longwood Scholars and two alternates were chosen. The scholarship recipients are: Todd Deaver, of Atlanta, GA; Stephanie Neely, of Newport News; Rebecca Perry, of Fredericksburg; and Staci Sandler, of Chesterfield. First alternate is Kathleen McMahon, of Vienna, and second alternate is Sharon Bryant, of Chesterfield.

Exam Schedule

Night classes will take their examination from 7-10 on the regularly scheduled night during examination week.

Students having three examinations on one day may take one of the examinations during a scheduled makeup period. The instructor works out the arrangements with the student.

Election Results

By TIM HALE (V.P. SGA)

Longwood students are finally realizing that their involvement does make a difference. A total of sixty candidates ran for class offices, Judicial board, and Honor board positions. A record 742 votes were tallied for the final results.

The elections for SGA offices will be held in November. We encourage even more participation for these extremely important positions. Remember that your voice does make a difference. If you have a concern or something important to say; we welcome your input at the SGA meetings every Thursday at 6:00 p.m. in the Lankford conference room.

Here are the final results for this year's elections:

Results are not final until confirmation of grades and disciplinary eligibility.

Sorority Shirt Causes Quite A Stir On Campus

By KAREN BEATTIE

Greek Week was disrupted on Wednesday, April 13 when a non-Greek student was seen wearing letters of a sorority to which she does not belong.

Her name is Maria-Kelly Chris Roulidis and she wore the letters of the Delta Zeta sorority. She obtained the sweatshirt she wore from her sister, who was a Delta Zeta at the University of Virginia. Her sister gave her the sweatshirt with the instructions never to wear it at college. What compelled her to wear the letters?

Ms. Roulidis says "I don't like anyone telling me what I can and cannot wear." She felt that to make her point clear she should wear the letters during Greek Week.

Sophomore Delta Zeta Beanie Felch does not agree with Ms. Roulidis' reasons for wearing the letters. She says "She does not have the priviledge to wear the letters, she did not earn it. It's just not right, for any sorority. A lot of my sisters feel the same way."

Even though she wore the letters, Ms. Roulidis has a negative attitude towards sororities in general. She also concedes that the wearing of the Delta Zeta letters was a one time thing. "I won't wear the Delta Zeta sweatshirt at Longwood again being that I never want to be a DZ or in any other sorority just so I can wear Greek letters on a sweatshirt."

Finally, Ms. Roulidas is open for discussion with anyone who cares to talk about what she did. She says "If anyone wants to talk to me then fine, but I won't look for a DZ: they know where I live."

APO Conference A Success

By TIM BRANDENBURG

Alpha Phi Omega (APO), the Service Fraternity, held its annual Sectional Conference last Friday through Sunday in the Lankford Student Union.

Representatives from the chapters at Emory & Henry, James Madison University, Roanoke College, University of Virginia and Virginia Tech attended the Conference.

President Robert Taylor of the Longwood Chapter who hosted the Conference said that "Sectionals more than adequately served their purpose."

"I feel that everyone that attended learned a great deal, had a good time and got a good impression of Longwood," Taylor added.

You Can Help In Fundraiser

By BETH MILLER and VERONICA KLARAS

With the help of Alpha Delta Pi sorority, the Scott Paper company has begun a fund raiser for the Ronald McDonald Houses.

Scott will donate 5 cents for each UPC symbol collected from their products. ADPI will be collecting these symbols in their chapter room. This sorority is asking that Longwood contribute to their efforts in this 1988 national promotion.

Keep on the lookout for display posters, which will appear in grocery stores and at McDonalds. In addition, television commercials including ADPI representatives should be broadcasted soon.

ADPI is a sponsor of Ronald McDonald houses. On April 1, 1988, a pledge named Sherry Connaster delivered Easter presents to the Ronald McDonald House in Richmond. At that time the hospital contained many adults but only two children. The baskets were designed to suit the needs of everyone who received them. Not only were the traditional gifts given but also products such as cake mixes.

Although this is a national promotion, since the ADPI's are a National sorority, everyone needs to get involved. Let's work together and come to the aid of those persons less fortunate than ourselves.

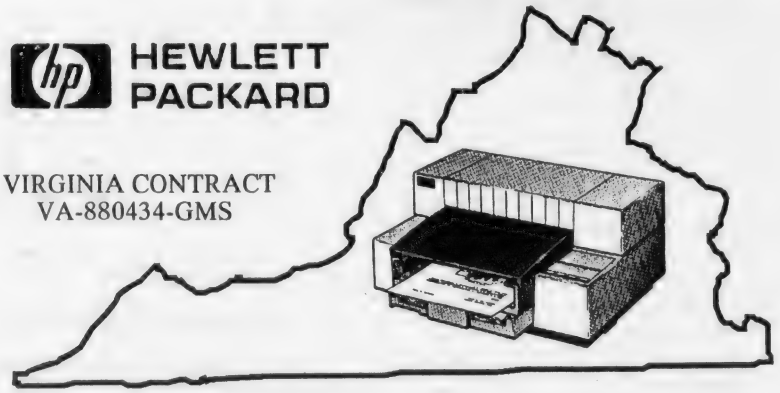
signment during Barrett "Mick" Baker's editorship. With the selection of Editor Kim Setzer came appointment to News Editor, in which position Peterman has now served the publication for three semesters.

Ms. Miller, a rising Senior English major/Art minor has some experience with graphic art from her art classes here and with editorial writing from working with her high school paper.



Ms. Phyllis Mable, who presided over the meeting, has high hopes for the campus newspaper during the college's sesquicentennial year. Mable also expressed hope that perhaps Ms. Miller would consider working with the paper's staff to create, as Susan herself put it during her interview, "a fresh look for the Rotunda."

Current Rotunda Editor Cathy Gaughran was overheard by this reporter as the Board left the selection meeting saying, "I'm pleased with the outcome here today – I have all the faith in the world in Matt's talents, abilities and judgment. He knows the job well and I think he'll do a kick-ass job."

Thrills chased away Chills

"Drive-In" Chilly But Fun

By SHERI LYNN STANFORD and KAREN BEATTIE

On Saturday night, April 16, a crowd of almost 200 gathered to watch "Horror Film Night" on the mall between Lankford and Stubbs.

The hall councils and resident life staffs of Curry, Stubbs and Cox dorms sponsored two horror movies, "Happy Birthday to Me" and "The Shining" starring Jack Nicholson along with a classic Bugs Bunny Cartoon.

The double feature was projected on a large white cloth attached to balcony columns at the rear of the Lankford building.

Over 100 people assembled on the grass of Stubbs Mall to watch the movies under the stars and under heavy blankets to shut out the cold night air. Many brought other comforts such as chairs, back rests as well as food and drink. Some even huddled in large innertubes to add comfort to their viewing.

As the movies rolled the air got colder and the crowd thinned out considerably. Most of those who stayed seemed pleased with the production itself.

The "Drive-In Theatre" was a great attempt in trying to keep students here during the weekend and in destroying the "suitcase college" label that has been given to Longwood.

"I think it was a really good idea," said sophomore Ronnie Miller. Freshman Victor Lopez added, "I hope they'll do it again, especially when the weather gets warmer.

At the end of the night raffle tickets were distributed to all movie goers for a drawing to win one of two $10 gift certificates from the Longwood College Book Store.

Batman and The Joker meet again

By SCOTT LOVING

Holy comics, Batman!

Well, not exactly. The newest chapter in the life of Bruce (Batman) Wayne has just hit the stands, and Batman will never be the same again.

In their graphic DC Comics, Batman: The Killing Joke, Alan Moore and Brian Bolland take two old characters, the Batman and the Joker, and redefine them.

Moore and Bolland break the Batman out of the mold he has fallen into recently, and show that underneath his cold-as-stone exterior, the Batman is actually a sensitive person. This is shown when Batman comforts victims of the Joker's lunacy.

This is not to say that Killing Joke is strictly a Batman story. Writer Moore does an excellent job of retelling the origin of the Joker, which was first told almost fifty years ago in Detective Comics.

The story is enhanced by the artwork of Brian Bolland who also worked on Camelot 3000, another graphic novel. Bolland captures even the smallest of details. Neither the Batman nor the Joker have ever looked better.

The most fitting comment so far on the book has come from Dennis O'Neil, in his editorial last month in Detective Comics.

O'Neil said, "If you're thinking of buying The Killing Joke for yourself, be aware that it is absolutely nothing like what you've seen on the tube."

Artist of the Month

By MARK KIRK

Keith Covington, a freshman from Hurt, Virginia, has been named recipient of Longwood College's Artist of the Month Award for April.

Covington captured the award with a conte crayon drawing entitled "The Knee of Man." According to Covington, the drawing is a study of the human skeleton, with the major focus on the knee.

"I was trying to arrive at a good composition without having a traditional drawing, which has the head as the main focal point," said Covington, who received a $50 cash award for winning the contest.

A transfer from the prestigious Corcoran School of Art in Washington, D.C., Covington is currently pursuing a Bachelor of Fine Arts Degree in graphic design. He is interested in the areas of typography and illustration, and wants to work for a major magazine or advertising agent designing magazine covers, posters, and logos after graduating.

"The Knee of Man"

Since coming to Longwood, Covington has received a partial art scholarship from the Virginia Mountain Craft's Guild and has also earned a spot on the Longwood Baseball Team.

Neophyte to Play Pig Roast

BY SCOTT LOVING

The second band in the WLCX Series of Neophyte Bands will play on Sunday, April 24.

The band, Social Disorder, will be one of several bands performing at the Second Annual Pig Roast. The Pig Roast is organized and sponsored by the fraternity Sigma Phi Epsilon.

Social Disorder consists of lead guitarist and vocalist Lang Smith, drummer Billy Phelps, guitarist Tom Epperson, and bass player, George Thomas.

The band, which hails from Buckingham County, will be playing a variety of hardcore and punk songs, including several works by bands such as the Dead Kennedys and the Ramones.

Dr. Gordon Van Ness, Assistant Professor of English, will give a Departmental Lecture on Wednesday, April 20, in French Lounge; refreshments will be served at 4:15 p.m. and the lecture will begin at 4:45. His topic is "Books and Bombing Missions: The Education of James Dickey." Dr. Van Ness says that his paper "attempts to show Dickey's development and apprenticeship as a poet, the notion that he was fashioning a myth of and about himself in order to overcome the emotional dislocation of the Second World War." All are invited to attend the lecture.

Furniture Fit for a President

By TIM BRANDENBURG

Last Wednesday, as a part of the Simkins Lecture Series, woodworker Sam Maloof held a slide presentation and discussion in Wygal Auditorium about his hand crafted furniture.

At the age of 32 Maloof quit his regular job to begin a career in woodworking. His goal was to make "the best furniture I possibly could," Maloof said.

Maloof now lives and works in his home which he built room by room in Alta Loma, California.

Presently, Maloof produces about 50 pieces of furniture a year. During his more than 40 years of woodworking he has built furniture for President Jimmy Carter and other reputable figures.

SAM MALOOF

In the past, Maloof has traveled to El Salvador, Lebanon, and Iran where he worked for the State Department's village industrial program.

Maloof produces for individual buyers for commission only and uses no mass production techniques. He now designs about five new styles of furniture a year.

Randy Edmonson, who introduced Maloof, on Wednesday proclaimed that he was "one of the major artistic persons of this century."

Maloof's book entitled Sam Maloof: Woodworker is available in the Longwood Library.

Record-Breaking Homerun Barrage Sparks Lancers to Four Wins

Longwood's baseball team unloaded the heavy timber last week, smashing 17 homeruns in five games and taking four wins in the process. The 19-12 Lancers outscored the opposition 56-23 in a week which saw both individual and team homer records fall.

Virginia State fell victim 14-0 and 10-2 Monday, but VMI spoiled an otherwise perfect week with an 11-8 victory over the Lancers Thursday. Coach Buddy Bolding's squad bounced back Saturday to stop St. Augustine's 13-6 and 11-4.

Longwood's big week at the plate upped the team batting average to .341, the runs per game mark to 8.9 and buried the old record for homers in a season. The existing homerun mark was 42, set in both 1986 and 1987. The Lancers have blasted 51 homers thus far in 1988.

Senior All-America candidate Kelvin Davis had an average week for him but broke the Longwood record for homers in a season. Davis ripped four homers, giving him 13 for the year and topping the season record of 11 which he held previously with Jeff Mayone and John Sullivan.

The shortstop, who now has 33 career homers, hit .474 for the week with six RBI's, and is now batting a phenomenal .512 for the season. He has also driven in 49 runs while notching 12 doubles and four triples.

Jackson, Moeller, Davis and freshman Mike Lauffer hit solo homers in Thursday's loss at VMI. The Keydets overcame a 7-6 Lancer lead with five runs in the seventh.

Saturday, Jackson, Davis and Moeller had first game homers as Longwood scored in every inning but the fifth. Moeller cleared the sacks with a bases — loaded double in the fourth and hit his homer in the sixth, following a two-run shot by Davis.

Second baseman Pete Criscione went 4-5 and Moeller 3-4 to pace a 16-hit Lancer attack. Pitcher Steve Gedro went the distance to move his record to 5-4. The lefthander gave up just one earned run in seven innings of work.

Watson pitched four-and-one-third innings while notching his second win against three losses. He struck out four and walked four. Lauffer belted a three-run homer in the fourth and Killinger went 3-3 with a double and two RBIs. Bill Conroy hit his sixth homer.

Another Lancer who did well last week was designated hitter Robbie Smith. Though hampered by a pulled hamstring all season, Smith is hitting .393. He went 5-9 with a double and an RBI.

Lancer Riders Compete in Regionals

Three members of the Longwood riding team competed in the Regional Intercolligiate Horse Show Sunday, April 10 at the University of Virginia. Shelley Malone placed 6th out of 17 in the walk-trot-canter division and Ann Lawson was fifth in novice over fences. Robin McGowan failed to place in the walk-trot division.

The Lancers riders concluded their 1987-88 season in the regional show.

Lancer Netters Stop Greensboro

Longwood's men's tennis team won four singles matches, two doubles and got two forfeits in an 8-1 victory over Greensboro College last Monday afternoon on the road.

Posting singles wins for Longwood at Greensboro were No. 2 Vince Osborn, No. 3 Mike Pugh, forfeit, No. 4 Scott Wassenberg, No. 5 Carrington Tate and No. 6 Troy Loveday. Doubles wins were turned in by Bill Milby and Osborn at No. 1, Pugh and Tate at No. 2 and Wassenburg and Loveday (forfeit) at No. 3.

Women's Tennis Notches 5th Victory

Longwood scored a 9-0 knockout of Ferrum in women's tennis action at the Lancer Hall courts Wednesday afternoon.

The 5-10 (not counting Roanoke match) Lady Lancer netters got singles wins Wednesday from no. 1 Diane Rogers, No. 2 Laura Crigger, forfeit, No. 3 Mary Lynn Lawman, No. 4 Elizabeth Cho, No. 5 Traci Moore and No. 6 Karla Boggs. Doubles victors were Rogers and Boggs at No. 1, Crigger and Lauri Labyak, forfeit, at No. 2 and Laura Yollrath and Linda Swe at No. 3.

Longwood hosts Roanoke Friday for a 3:00 match in its next action.

Co-Players Of The Week

Longwood baseball players Mark Moeller and Frankie Watson sparked the Lancers to four wins in five games last week, and the duo have been named co-recipients of the Longwood Player of the week award for the week of April 10-17. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

Moeller, a freshman, hit .563 with four homers, 8 RBIs and 3 doubles last week as Longwood scored 56 runs and hit 17 homers in five games. The first baseman is hitting .374 with 9 homers, 10 doubles and 29 RBIs. In Saturday's 13-6 win over St. Augustine's he went 3-4 with a homer, two doubles and four RBIs.

A graduate of Fork Union Military Academy and James W. Robinson High School, Moeller has started every game for Longwood at first base this season. He was MVP and winner of the Jackie Jensen award last year at Fork Union.

Watson, a sophomore centerfielder-pitcher, boosted his season average to .311 with a .444 week including two doubles, a triple, a homer, and 5 RBIs. He also came through with spectacular defense in center field and picked up credit for Saturday's 11-4 win over St. Augustines with a solid showing on the mound. Watson pulled off a rare feat when he stole home in the same game.

The first Longwood player ever to pitch and play every day in the field, he has drawn comparisons with the best centerfielders in Lancer history. In addition to driving in 24 runs, he has collected 6 doubles, 4 triples and 2 homers while stealing 14 bases in 15 attempts. He has a 2-3 record as a pitcher while facing many of Longwood's toughest opponents.

Watson has a fielding percentage of .983 with just one error in 59 chances. In Saturday's 13-6 victory over St. Augustine's, he ended the game with a spectacular running catch and banged into the fence. Though stunned by the collision, he came right back to pitch four-and-one-third innings of the second game and pick up the victory.

Longwood Softball Too Hot To Handle

By MICHAEL K. PHILLIPS

The Longwood softball team continued to etch its name in the record book by defeating Radford Friday in both ends of a doubleheader 5-2 and 8-3. The Lady Lancers will close out the regular season Saturday when Virginia Tech comes to town for two games.

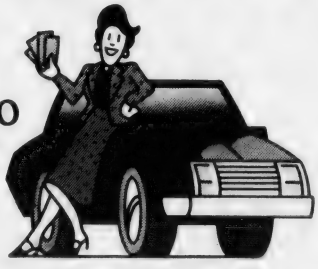
In the first game against Radford Anne Douglas Miller pitched three shutout innings and gave up only one hit before she handed the ball over to Cheryl Scharr in the top of the fourth. Scharr allowed five hits in four innings to get her first save of the season as Miller received credit for the 5-2 victory.

Senior Annette Easterling hit 3-4 with two RBIs and senior Jill Everett hit 3-3 with two runs to lead coach Loretta Coughlin's squad, nearing the end of its best season ever. Sophomore Melissa Gwinn provided Longwood with two runs and two RBIs.

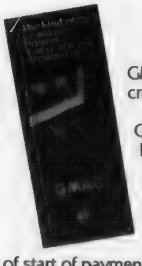
In the second game senior Tina Hall lengthened her hitting streak to 19 games with a sixth inning solo homerun. The co-captain and rightfielder finished the game with two runs and one RBI.

Senior co-captain Chris LeBel had her best game of the season as she hit 3-3 including a triple and a three-run homer. LeBel totaled three runs and four RBIs in the game in addition to picking -off two base runners. Junior shortstop Mary Dailey went 2-3 with three runs in game two.

Stacey Thompson went the distance to get her tenth complete game of the season and the 8-3 win upped her record to 9-2, the best ever for a Longwood pitcher. Thompson also let her presence be known on offense as she went 2-2 and increased her batting average to .441.



Lady Lancers Second At Fords Colony



Senior All-American Tina Barrett won her third tournament of the spring and the second in a row to lead Longwood to a second place finish in the William & Mary Invitational women's golf tournament at Ford's Colony Golf Course in Williamsburg over the weekend.

BLOCK PARTY WILL HOLD SOMETHING FOR EVERYONE

By WALLABY DERNED

The Hall Councils, Student Union and Resident Live Advisory Board are presenting the First Annual All-Campus Block Party on Friday, April 29. The Block Party, which will be dinner and fun on the last day of classes, will take place in front of Curry and Frazer Residence halls from 3:30 p.m. to 11:30 p.m.

The schedule for the day includes volleyball and frisbee football between 3:30 and 5:30. Dinner will be served "alfresco" for one hour starting at 5:30. There will be a lip-sync contest with $100 in prizes at 6:30, which will be followed by live music until 11:30 p.m.

Cars should be moved from Spruce Street (in front of the high rises) to the Day Student parking lot by 3:30 Friday. Vehicles will be left at risk of damage and/or ticketing.

Parties interested in forming a volleyball team for the day should contact their Hall Council for more information.

Sign-up sheets for the lip-synch contest will be available in the New Smoker during meals on Thursday. Acts are limited to five minutes.

Block Party coordinator Greg McMahan anticipates a good turnout and a great time. "People will want to get some fresh air, relax and unwind before they have to start studying for finals," states McMahan.

The event's organizers hope to promote increased inter-Hall Council relations. They believe this event could be the first step in the right direction.

Groundbreaking Ceremony To Begin Mall Facelift

By TIM BRANDENBURG

Ground breaking ceremonies for the new Blackwell Mall project will be held this Thursday evening at 6:15 p.m. in the area behind Grainger and beside Blackwell Dining Hall.

Interim President George Healy will be performing the ceremony, which will follow that night's birthday dinner. Dessert will be served outdoors before the ceremony.

The Mall project is scheduled for completion by Oktoberfest and for next year's Sesquicentennial Celebration.

The Mall Committee consists of Chairman Gene Kerns, administrators Rick Hurley, MaryKaye Benton and various other students.

Kerns said that the project's purpose is "to design a student area by the students and for the students, and to generate student involvement in the Sesquicentennial."

T-Shirts will be given away in a drawing to people who paid a dollar to sign the Mall's Memory Book.

The Mall's memory book will be available for signing with a donation of $1 in the New Smoker today and tomorrow. This book will be placed in the Mall's time capsule.

The Sparkplugs will play at the ceremony.

CHI Secret Still Contemplated

Enthusiasts Wait for Wednesday

By JAMES E. BOSTON

With the Chi Burning closely approaching (Wednesday, April 27), great anticipation is sparked in many Longwood students. Chi is one of the many traditions which are interwoven with the spirit of Longwood.

Although many of us think that we know about and understand Chi, there is very little that we actually know.

Chi is an organization whose real purpose remains known only to its members. Sure, we see the external glimpses of Chi through their late night walks, their chants, their banners, their dolls, their Christmas balls, their commendation letters and finally at their burning, but is this what Chi is all about? Every year, the questions arise: Who is in Chi? What do they do? The students are ever seeking to find the identity of those friends who call themselves a member of this organization.

Chi is a word that brings excitement and wonder to Longwood College students. But WHY? Let us look into the mystery of Chi and see what we find.

It all began in the Fall of 1900 (October 15 to be exact). A group composed of girls who were considered to be influential leaders in various circles were chosen to become members of a newly formed organization to be called "Chi" – THE NEW ORDER. Their plan was to work in coordination with the Honor System trying to prevent breach of rules.

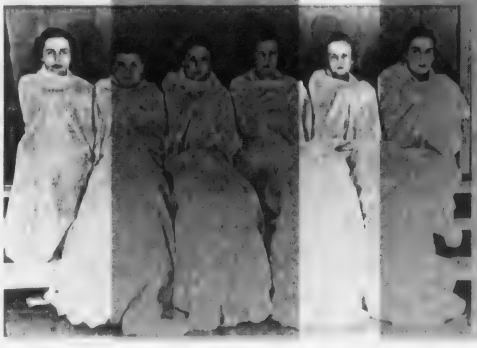
These individuals were very different from the Chi we see today, as they were feared by all. These girls worked in all ways to preserve high standards in the college.

Undercover, they warned those girls whose conduct had been disloyal to the ideals of the school.

They were clad in white robes and brewed well to the tune of "Chloe".

Occasionally, they took late night walks.

Their symbol was that of a skull and two cross bones.



A quote from a 1949 yearbook says the following: "We donned our robes over our skeleton frames and took a walk on the colonnade one night. It was raining, so they say, but we were unaware because as you know, no discomfort could ever dismay Chi."

Chi was said to "hear all, see all and know all."

As time and Chi progressed, many positive things began to develop. Chi gave the corner stones to the Edith Stevens Hall as well as to Jarman. It was also responsible for the landscaping of the dell at Longwood Estate, the floor in the "old rec" and the directional finder behind the library.

On many occasions, the Chi banner watched over the crowd

The staff of the Rotunda would like to state its appreciation of a number of people who, directly or indirectly, have made invaluable contributions to the paper and its purpose this year.

First, our supporters. Many of you out there have taken time to go out of your way for us during the year — students, faculty members and administrators all alike. Your words of encouragement and your show of interest have kept us going and won't soon be forgotten.

Next we would like to acknowledge those who have offered their criticisms — constructive or otherwise. The only way a newspaper can serve its readers appropriately is if readers offer personal response to its contents. You have done this verbally as well as in writing, and none of your contributions have ever been made in vain — taken with a grain of salt, maybe, but never disregarded.

Finally, we thank and congratulate those of you who have grown because of something — anything — in the Rotunda this year. You have made our efforts worthwhile if you have benefitted as a person from them.

The interest and care all of you have taken with your endeavors have benefitted the paper and therefore its readers. We thank you on their behalf, and hope you will continue to read, respond and learn in future issues of the Rotunda.

Longwood Speakers Lack Chutzpah

How many of you can say you're seen at least one great public figure speak during your lifetime? How many of you think you ever will?

If you attended another institution of high learning, your answer could be quite lengthy. But, since you go to Longwood, let's see what the list probably looks like after this year:

Phyllis Golden-Gottlieb

Whew! That's one to slap into the ol' scrapbook, isn't it?!

A student from the State University of New York at Binghampton recently spouted off a list of speakers and entertainers he has seen on his campus during the past year. It went something like his:

Dr. Ruth Westheimer
Gary Hart
Jessie Jackson
Jorma Kaukonen
The Alarm

Two presidential candidates ! Ack! Culture! Whoa! Exposure to the world! Gott in Himmel! New and different ideas! Egads! Controversial issues! Sacre Bleu!

Which list do you think would be more memorable and have more effect on a person's life: one like that above, or one that includes 6 magicians, a TV show scripwriter and a self-professed muckraker? Perhaps if the campus activities and speakers scene were viewed as a once-in-a-lifetime deal each year instead of as a "what can we give the kids this month" sort of thing, the events planned would be more fully attended and appreciated by students.

Instead of remembering campus events as "what I did last week", people who attend them will be able to look back on their lives and, if nothing else, say "I saw four great speakers during my life: the one my freshman year, the one my sophomore year, the one my junior year, and the one my senior year at Longwood."

Local Pie Joints in for Another Hard Summer

Farmville — the small rural town; not the college town — is bloated with pizza parlors.

How can owners pay the help in the summer when the town is dead because of the loss of money-spending college students? The fact is they can't.

More established restaurants like Pinos and Perini's have rolled with the punches and established year round customers who come for the varied quisine offered in both places.

Domino's (pizza only) struggles even during school and it is a proven fact that they can't stay open during the summer.

Pizza Hut is well established, but the off-season puts a crunch on them as well.

Where does that leave the soon to be Little Caesars? College students hold the answer to that, shall we say, in the pit of their often hungry stomachs.

To the Editor

LEARNING FOR LEARNING'S SAKE

To the Editor, the students, the teaching faculty, and the Administration:

Why am I here? This is a question I have often asked myself, especially now that I'm back in college. In the past four years, I've attended three colleges (Northern Virginia Community College, Mary Washington College, and Longwood College), and I've ran across a prevalent attitude of apathy toward the learning process at each school. It seems to me that most of the student body is more interested in getting the piece of paper with the word "bachelor" on it than learning and developing a meaningful philosophy of life.

Recently, at this campus, I've heard now a few complaints from different academic corners on this lack of interest. Apathetic students are ruining academic opportunities for the rest of us. A lot of dissention is coming from the relative unavailability of facilities for academic pursuits.

A prime example can be found in the recent superconductor experiment going on in the chemistry labs in the Stevens Building.

Through no fault of the Science staff, the Stevens Building is generally open only during classes. Perhaps this is to keep certain vandalous youngsters, who masquerade as students, from destroying delicate and expensive equipment. It is a shame, because the students who were working on the superconductors had such little access to the labs that their experiments were in that the experiments could not be done accurately.

The computer lab in Coyner, the rest of the academic buildings, and the Library all close too early to be of practical use to the academically inclined

At other schools, academic buildings are open nearly 24 hours a day. A possible solution to this would be to issue keys to areas where students have legitimate business. This would have solved some of the problems that the chemistry students had in their experiments.

Another example of this apathy is apparent in the Student Union's attempt to keep Buckminster Fuller's World Game from Longwood College. Buckminster Fuller's World Game, for those who don't know but are interested, is an opportunity to become more socio-politically aware of the world in which we live. It is a giant-sized "war game" map, on which socio-political situations are worked out, by students, in hopes of stimulating thoughts of cooperation and peaceful resolutions.

The World Game has gone over well with more than just Poli-Sci majors on many campuses in America, as well as with corporations in management training programs; in fact, there were many students at George Mason University who were delighted with it.

Members of the Student Union here deem it more "culturally satisfying" to get Spanky McFarland (Spanky of the "Little Rascals"). While I believe that Spanky is entertaining, something like the world game would have a longer lasting and much more beneficial effect on us as students. It would seem that entertainment has a higher value placed on it than does education.

Education is the reason we're all here — not to "get a good job". A "good job" is a latent benefit of education. Education is a tool to help us think critically and analytically, so we can think for ourselves in the "real world". The sad truth, however, shows that "75.6% (of nearly 290,000 college freshmen surveyed) were interested in being well off financially... while 39.4% (supported) developing a meaningful outlook on life," according to a recent survey reported by Patricia McCormack of UPI.

Money is an important commodity; of that there is no doubt. However, the secret to getting a "good job" is not so much in the piece of paper that you hold as it is in the abilities you have. Critical thinking is a valuable asset. It could, someday, mean the difference between being the "manager" or the "managee". Of course, in the long run, job satisfaction is primary: if you start at $35,000 a year, but you hate what you're doing, is it really worth it?

Finally, to the students who have experienced the same frustrations I have (e.g. computer lab hours), and are concerned about learning for learning's sake, I exhort us to do something about it, because together we can do something about it.

Any response is, of course, welcome. If you are interested in making constructive changes, get in touch with me at PO Box 311, c/o Eric Franklin.

Racism Has To Stop

Dear Editor,

This letter is in response to last week's letter from "Chuckie" Reid. Mr. Reid should be commended for the manner in which he handled the situation he faced on Saturday, March 26. I'm sure it was difficult to remain calm after witnessing an innocent woman being insulted. It was probably even more difficult to accept this type of behavior from one of Longwood's "scholars."

Because we attend an institution centered in an area with an infamous history of racial prejudice, we as students should try to insure that a rift of this kind does not occur on campus. Unfortunately, some of us do not care to see this happen.

I am sure that if this student could so easily call a member of the town a "nigger", then he will be just as easily able to use this racial slur against a fellow student who is black.

We cannot continue to live like this. We must all wake up or we'll never achieve unity among the races. At present, there is a black presidential candidate with a strong chance of achieving his goal, blacks are in high-ranking positions of government making major decisions, and there are numerous members of the black race who have contributed their talents to other fields such as science and medicine, the arts, athletics, entertainment and academics.

As we approach the end of the academic year, I hope that during the summer we will all evaluate ourselves and determine what we can do to help promote a sense of unity not only on campus, but everywhere we leave our mark. It takes a greater amount of effort to isolate ourselves than to simply join together.

Those of you who make "nigger" and other racial remarks, whether geared toward blacks or whites, a part of your vernacular must realize that you are the true effect of the ignorance and separation that have strangled our society for more than three hundred years. Remember that you will eventually become the target for a stronger awareness and need of change in race relations here and abroad. It is you who will be left behind once this change begins to occur.

I have a strong faith that racial equality will take place, for we as a people have been making major strides in our thinking and in our actions. But we cannot become complacent and believe that unity will be achieved without each one of us putting forth a serious and conscious effort.

Let us all move forward and leave those oppressed by negative opinions to be lost consumed by the whirlwind of their own prejudiced thinking.

I would like to thank Mr. Reid for his efforts in fighting racism. Your peaceful confrontation with ignorance is an example for us all to follow. I hope you have not lost faith in all of Longwood's students because I am sure that the majority of us are going to make sure that racism does not become a permanent part of this campus.

FRAZER FINES TOO HIGH

Dear Editor,

Summer vacation is fast upon us, and just like everybody else during this time I look forward to getting mail from my Longwood friendships while I'm at home. However, there is one piece of mail that I'm sure no one likes to receive. It is the thick envelope from the Longwood Housing Office which contains the annual list of damage assessments.

For some, this may not seem like that big a deal, but I live in Frazer. For Frazer residents this list is not one or two items long; it is one or two pages

We have already been made aware that we are responsible for two missing couches and a broken table – damages which are estimated to be $1785. This total is already almost half of last year's total of $3967.59.

Some of the ridiculous charges contributing to last year's total were nine broken window panes, excluding the time a golf ball was thrown through a window, costing $65 to repair.

Also, Frazer's front doors were broken at five different times last year, and each time a $260 fee was charged to the entire building. Chances are that it wasn't even a Frazer resident that broke them.

Who then, if not Frazer residents, is responsible for these damages? The answer is simple.

Many of these damages may be attributed to the numerous people from everywhere on campus who drift into our building to fraternity parties. Unlike any other residence hall, Frazer houses three different fraternity halls and each one's chapter room. I'm not saying that it is the fraternities' faults that this vandalism happens, or even that their members are the individuals responsible, but it is not fair for Frazer residents to be held responsible for all the damages which occur during these parties.

One solution to this problem would be to find somewhere else to put these fraternities – either their own building (like Stubbs) or off-campus houses.

I feel like these people who are responsible for this vandalism are infringing upon my personal rights. Maybe a good analogy would be to say that people from my neighborhood come into my house and break things that I eventually end up paying my parents for.

In the damage assessment letter it says, "Common area damage assessments are made against this group of residents because they were most likely to know who was responsible for the vandalism/damage." So many people float in and out of the building; how can damages be pinpointed unless there is a guard posted on every hall, in the elevators or every five feet of the lobby/commons room? That answer is simple, too. It can't be done.

It is true that there are nine floors of residents who are capable of contributing a fair amount of damage to the building. Then again, doesn't Curry house the same number of students as Frazer? It does, yet, they have a much lower rate of vandalism than Frazer does. You can draw your own conclusions as to why, out of two buildings which are exactly the same, one has an outlandish occurrence of vandalism and the other has next to none.

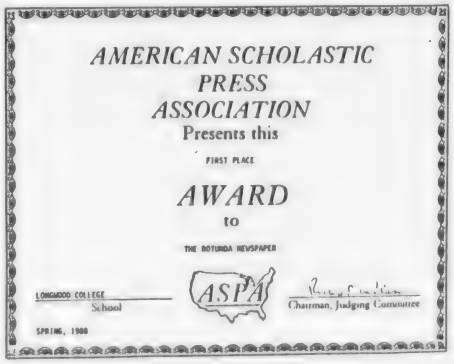
Students Lose Sleep Over Laundry Woes

Dear Editor,

I have found that it is a real job to find washing machines and dryers that are available or are in proper working order.



I live in Main Cunningham and in the laundry room there are 2 washers and 2 dryers. Most of the time they are occupied or are not working. I end up having to take a portion of my clothes to the South Cunningham washers and dryers.

Last Monday it took me practically all day to wash and dry one load of clothes. I have been up sometimes at 1:00 in the morning finishing up my clothes.

The school charges the students enough money to have a few more washers and dryers installed on dormitory halls. The school needs to start thinking more about students' needs than beautification of the grounds. Longwood needs to get its priorities straight.

It is a job just to get your clothes washed. I have been going through this all semester and I hope by next fall Longwood College can buy a few more washers and dryers.

All washed up

Iran Will Pay, Gore Won't Play, And Israel's Birthday

By MATT PETERMAN

President Reagan in his weekly radio address said terrorist attacks on nonbelligerent nations would not be tolerated and would "be costly to Iran and its people."

Reagan condemned Iran's "resumption of mine-laying and continued aggression against nonbelligerents."

According to The Washington Post: :

"The Defense Department informed Congress last week that U.S. forces in the gulf would begin defending some neutral shipping, a departure from a policy of limited protection for American-flagged ships. The decision follows the April 14 attack on the Roberts and the subsequent battle between U.S. and Iranian forces in which two Iranian oil platforms were destroyed and six Iranian vessels were severely damaged or sunk."

Senator Albert Gore announced the end of his presidential bid, but will retain the delegates he has won along the way.

According to Edward Walsh of The Washington Post::

"Gore technically 'suspended' his campaign, but stressed that he expects to play no role in determining whether Massachusetts Gov. Michael S. Dukakis or Jesse L. Jackson is the party's eventual nominee.

" 'I want no part of a stop-Jackson or stop-Dukakis movement', he said. 'The only man I want to stop is George Bush.' "

According to The Washington Post reports on April 22:

"Israel celebrated its 40th birthday with parades, picnics, dancing and an elaborate military show – plus a massive security alert to forestall any attempt by Palestinians to retaliate for last weekend's assassination of senior Palestine Liberation Organization leader Khalil Wazir.

"Israeli troops sealed off the territories for the third consecutive day, confining nearly a half-million Palestinians to their homes in 23 refugee camp[s, towns and villages and others to their communities in the rest of the area.

"Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir celebrated by signing a memorandum of agreement with President Reagan that for the first time formalizes the already intimate military and economic ties between Israel and the United States."

Language Students Got It Good

By SEBASTIAN VOLCKER

On Monday April 11 The Language Majors, and Minors and interested students had the opportunity to listen to Janet Allen Paulovich, a Longwood Alumni (grad '81). The topic was: the career opportunities offered by the Federal Government to students with language skills.

The Federal Government is the largest single employer in the United States. It offers to its employees job security, a decent income (A typical college graduate with a B.A. or B.S. degree can expect to begin work at $15,000 up to $19,000 a year), and of course insurance benefits, retirement program and paid vacations.

In the particular field of Languages many of the recruiting agencies belong to the intelligence sector and therefore offer overseas employment (and adventure). When you have the skills the agencies are more than willing to retrain you in other languages and even pick up the cost of a post-graduate degree.

The requirements for the job are numerous, but if you are an American citizen with no skeletons in the closet, you have a good chance at getting a positive answer to your quest.

This lecture was made possible thanks to the efforts of Dr. Orth and Dr. Silveira from the English, Philosophy, and Modern Language Department and of Androniki "Niki" Fallis Director of Career Planning and Placement.

Ms. Fallis has all the information you might want on this employment opportunity will be more than willing to help you.

Longwood's Newest Honor Society

By GWEN W. NELMS

The first Theta Chi Chapter of Order of Omega, a National Honor Society for Greek Letter Societies, has opened at Longwood.

Charlie Warner, head of Greek Affairs, petitioned the National Office because he wanted "to bring some recognition to excellence within the Greek system."

The Order of Omega, represented at 50 other colleges and universities around the United States, limits its chapters to only 3% of the total Greek population.

Each sorority and fraternity on campus nominated people for this honor and noominees filled out applications.

Monday, April 18, at the Greek Awards Banquet, the 24 individuals of the first chapter of this prestigious group were introduced to the other members of Greek Life.

Greek Awards Banquet Results

By GWEN W. NELMS

The annual Greek Awards Banquet was held Monday, April 18.

President of Interfraternity council, Jack Tynch, and President of the Panhellenic Council, Judy Flannagan, presented awards which, according to Greek Affairs Coordinator Charlie Warner, "recognize excellence within the Greek Letter organizations."

Committees consisting of Greek participants and faculty members nominated and voted on the winners.

Although there were many different awards presented and different individuals recognized, the four main awards given and their winners include: The Brotherhood Award (Phi Beta Sigma); The Sisterhood Award (Alpha Sigma Tau); Academic Award (Tau Kappa Epsilon and Kappa Delta); Leadership Award (Tau Kappa Epsilon and Delta Sigma Theta); and the Service Award (Alpha Chi Rho and Kappa Delta).

Special recognition of Greek Man and Woman of the year were given to Derek Lilly of Pi Kappa Phi fraternity and Somer Sloan of Zeta Tau Alpha sorority.

Camptown Races To Run Once Again

The 25th running of the Camptown Races by Camptown Charities, Inc. is set for Saturday, May 14, 1988 at scenic Graymont Park near Ashland, Virginia. Gates open at 11:00 a.m. with post time at 2:00 p.m.

The eight-race event will include two quarter-horse races, four thoroughbred races and a hunter's relay with $15,000 in total purses. The eighth and final race will be a mule race, the winner being the first rider to snatch the $500 purse at the finish line.

Tickets are now available on a pre-sold basis only since ticket sales at the gate are prohibited. General admission tickets for ages 13 and older are $20; and tickets for ages 12 and under are $10.

Tickets can be purchased at businesses in the greater Richmond area including all locations of Movie Mania, C. P. Dean Sport Centers, Ski Reliance locations, Reliance Marine, and Green Top Sporting Goods. Also tickets can be purchased by mailing checks to Camptown Charities, Inc., PO Box 709, Ashland, Virginia 23005. Additional ticket information is available by calling 804-798-5314.

Those interested in entering horses for the race should contact Donna Dennehey, Racing Secretary, at 804-798-7216.

Graymont Park, located three miles north of Ashland east of U.S. Highway 1, has 150 rolling acres, a new 1/2 mile dirt track and stable accommodations for 80 horses. Up to 10,000 spectators can enjoy the natural amphitheater layout which affords an excellent view of the entire track and beautiful spring weather always accommodates picinic lunches and tailgate parties on race day.

The event will be the second running of the races after their revival in 1987 following a ten-year break and benefits local charities and public service organizations. The races are sponsored by Camptown Charities, Inc., a tax-exempt, non-profit corporation formed by the Hanover Association of Businesses in 1986.

Symposium Offered On Crisis Varieties

WASHINGTON, D.C. – The Washington Center, a nonprofit educational organization, will offer a two-week symposium titled CRISIS AND CHOICE IN AMERICAN FOREIGN POLICY on August 14-26, 1988. It will take place in Washington, D.C., and is offered for undergraduate and graduate students. Featured speakers include: William Colby, former Director of the Central Intelligence Agency; Dr. Lawrence Korb, former Assistant Secretary of Defense; The Honorable Charles M. Lichenstein, Distinguished Fellow at the Heritage Foundation.

The CRISIS AND CHOICE IN AMERICAN FOREIGN POLICY symposium is designed for students interested in exploring careers in foreign affairs, or for those who simply enjoy following foreign affairs. The above mentioned list of foreign policy experts and others will share their expertise on such topics as: Arms Control and Defense Policy After the December 1987 Summit; Economic Development in the Third World; International Debt; and Terrorism.

An optional third week on AMERICAN-SOVIET RELATIONS will be held from August 7-13, 1988. During the week, students will review the recent summits of President Reagan and General Secretary Gorbachev. A highlight of this optional week will be a foreign policy making simulation in which each symposium participant plays an active role.

The CRISIS AND CHOICE IN AMERICAN FOREIGN POLICY symposium is made possible in part through contributions from Chevron U.S.A., Inc., Hallmark Cards, Inc. and Unisys Corporation.

The registration deadline for this symposium is May 2, 1988. Colleges typically award 2-3 academic credits for participation, and low cost housing is available to all participants. Limited scholarship awards are also available. For program and registration information, contact: Loretta Hawley, Program Coordinator, The Washington Center, 202-289-8680.

Students Love New Washers and Dryers

By TIM BRANDENBURG

Solon Automated Services which recently replaced ARA's laundry equipment service is remodeling the laundry rooms across campus as well as replacing all of the washers and dryers.

The laundry rooms in Curry and Frazer are almost complete and the ones in the Colonades have just begun to go under the remodeling process.

The laundry rooms when completed will have paneling, new washers and dryers, chairs, tables and other accessories.

The approximate projected cost to Solon Automated Services is $100,000 to install 115 pieces of new equipment all over the campus.

Acquaintance Rape and College Students

By KAREN DALTON

According to a brochure by the American College Health Association, acquaintance rape is "faced, manipulated or coerced sexual intercourse by a friend or an acquaintance." It is an act of violence, aggression and power. A woman is forced to have sex through verbal coercion threats, physical restraint and/or physical violence. Her protests are ignored by the assailant.

The ACHA says that acquaintance rape can happen anywhere, at anytime to anyone. Studies show that this rape occurs more frequently among college students, particularly freshmen. According to a survey, one in two college women reported being the victim of some form of sexual aggression. One in four women were victims of rape or attempted rape. The ACHA states 84% of their assailants were dating partners or acquaintances. ACHA says that in the same survey it was found that one in four college men admitted having used sexual aggression with women. Many occurrances are not reported so the figures are probably greater.

Many women do not report this occurrance because she feels ashamed, guilty, betrayed and frightened after someone she knows rapes her.

According to the ACHA there is no single solution to preventing acquaintance rape. Men and women need to be aware that it can happen. These tips can help you avoid acquaintance rape.

Women need to know your sexual desires and limits; communicate your limits clearly; be assertive; be aware that your nonverbal actions send a message; pay attention to what is happening around you; trust your intuitions; avoid excessive use of alcohol and drugs.

Men need to: know your sexual desires and limits and communicate them clearly; being turned down when you ask for sex is not a rejection of you personally; accept the woman's decision; don't assume that just because a woman dresses in a "sexy" manner and flirts that she wants to have sexual intercourse; don't assume that previous permission for sexual contact applies to the current situation; avoid excessive use of alcohol and drugs.

Medical Aids In Town

By RYAN GILLS

Lehigh Valley Respiratory and Medical Aids, Inc. has announced its opening at 310 South Street, Farmville (behind McDonald's). Their goal is to provide support to healthcare professionals by providing equipment to patients in the home setting that will aid in their comfort and optimal level of well being. LVRMA is dedicated to helping people help themselves.

Kary Pinkerton Reynolds is overseeing the operations at LVRMA; secretarial work is handled by Kim Kelsey. The company has two technicians in its employment as well.

"When you're exploring the home care alternative, give us a call. We help make home healthcare a successful and pleasant experience for the patient and the family," Kary Reynolds.

Swap Shop Sensensation

By TIM BRANDENBURG

Alpha Phi Omega (APO) Service Fraternity will be holding a textbook Swap Shop in Lankford Conference Room Two next semester from August 22 to 31. There will be a charge of twenty-five cents per book whether it is sold or not.

Swap Shop will help the book owner save time by not having to post notices around campus. It will also save the buyers time by eliminating the problem of going from place to place in search of a bargain.

The Swap Shop will be held for eight days. On the first two days, the Swap Shop will collect books and for the remainder of the time it will sell the books. The 25 cent fee will be collected with the books.

On September 1, the Swap Shop will allow the book owners to collect their money or unsold books.

The Swap Shop's hours will be:

Collection dates:

Monday through Wednesday 8/22-24 from 3-5, 6-8 p.m.

Selling dates:

Wednesday 8/24-25 from 3-5, 6-8 p.m.

Friday 8/26 from 3-5 p.m.

Monday and Tuesday 8/29-30 from 3-5, 6-8 p.m.

Return of money and/or books:

Wednesday 8/31 from 3-5, 6-8 p.m.

Double-Header Before Exams

By MARY HILL

The Longwood College Department of Music is presenting two concerts this week before exams begin.

The first of these concerts will be the Flute Ensemble Performance on Tuesday, April 26.

The second performance is going to be the Concert Choir Recital. This is to be presented on Thursday, April 28.

Both the performances will be held at 8 p.m. in the Wygal Recital Hall, Longwood College.

All students, faculty members and the general public are welcome to attend free of charge. All you music appreciation students who do not have all your write-ups done, here is your last chance!

Taking A Look at the Attendance Policy

By KAREN BEATTIE

The Attendance Policy at Longwood has been the subject of some controversy.

Many students don't like it. Sophomore Gwen W. Nelms says "If our parents trust us enough to go to college, then each student should trust him or herself enough to know whether or not they should go to class."

Some students don't see the point of the policy. Sophomore Sharyn Klix says "I think it should be up to the student. We pay for the school, and the teachers get paid whether or not students attend class. We should be responsible enough to attend class."

Sophomore Hank Kim says "I think the attendance policy is good to a point. Yet, when students miss class because of athletic reasons, and are counted unexcused, that's when I begin to disagree."

Teachers have mixed reactions. Dr. Jennifer Apperson, a psychology professor who has no attendance policy in her upper level classes, says "By the time a student takes an upper level course he or she should be able to take on the responsibility of attending class."

Dr. Gordon Van Ness, an assistant professor of English justifies his use of the policy by saying "Human beings are essentially lazy, they take the path of least resistance." Students don't learn anything by not coming to class. They have to understand that to get something, they have to give up something."

It's Time to Light Up Our Lives

By KAREN BEATTIE

In the past students have walked across campus at night without any problems. But now many students, especially females, will not walk across campus during darkness for a variety of reasons.

According to students the biggest problem is lack of lights. "Sometimes I am discouraged from going to the library at night because I don't like walking by myself. Some of the money that they are using for beautifying the campus should be put towards the purchase of new lights," says sophomore Michelle Meeler, a resident of Frazer dorm.

Others won't walk alone because of previous incidents they know about. Sophomore Amy Chilson says "I've heard of too many people that have been harassed while walking alone. Something should be done to make this campus safer."

But what? Sophomore Cheryl Jeffrey suggests "Larger schools, such as VCU, have escort services for students who need to walk alone at night. Perhaps something like that could be put into effect here."

All agreed that something drastic needs to be done to help implement the feeling of security a student should have while walking on campus.

Lava and the Honor Code

By DINA SCHIANO

The word is out about LAVA (Longwood Against Vandalism Association), and the group has gotten off to a very good start. Already, two vandals have been caught and are currently working for the benefit of Longwood and LAVA.

LAVA wanted the student body to know just how much we the students are paying and have paid in the past for vandalistic acts.

Did you know that last semester alone well over $7,000 worth of vandalism was done throughout the residence halls? The number has almost doubled for this semester and it's not even over yet. We pay for all of the damage that is done to the residence halls that we live in. That is too bad for those students who do not contribute to the vandalism in their building.

It is predicted that by the end of this year the total cost of vandalism will be around $9,000. With the help of LAVA, the students, and campus police, we can cut these costs in half.

A new subject arises while speaking of vandalism: the Longwood Honor Code. Reporting vandalism goes right along with the Honor Code: therefore, it is the students' duty to report any seen incident. As stated before, this is merely a matter of self pride in oneself and one's school.

With the help of all students working together we can diminish vandalism and enjoy the ever growing beauty of our campus.

Exam Schedule

Night classes will take their examination from 7-10 on the regularly scheduled night during examination week.

Students having three examinations on one day may take one of the examinations during a scheduled makeup period. The instructor works out the arrangements with the student.

Valued Student to Graduate

By KENT BOOTY

There isn't much that Teresa Bryant hasn't accomplished in her four years at Longwood College.

Bryant is a senior from Roanoke who is double majoring in chemistry and biology. In the classroom and in the laboratory, she has excelled.

She is a Longwood Scholar, is in the Arts and Sciences Honors Program, is a member of Phi Kappa Phi honor society, is president of Beta Beta Beta, an honorary biology society, and was president last year of Geist, a leadership society. Last summer, she did research on a natural product synthesis at Virginia Tech, and she presented those results at a professional meeting in November.

Bryant has been accepted to graduate school at Virginia Tech and will be receiving a full-tuition scholarship and a teaching assistant stipend.

She did a 14-week research project last summer in which she used a new method to synthesize Retigeranic Acid, which is found in the lichens that grow in the Himalayas.

She did the research in collaboration with a graduate student and Dr. Tomas Hudlicky of Virginia Tech's chemistry faculty. She will work under Dr. Hudlicky in graduate school at Tech.

TERESA BRYANT

"She is truly an exceptional student," said Dr. Maurice Maxwell, assistant professor of chemistry. "Students like her don't come around every day."

Bryant, 21, said she has been "intrigued by chemistry ever since high school, especially organic chemistry. Something about organic chemistry is more exciting than other forms of chemistry."

Bryant has received only one "B" at Longwood — in the first part of Honors Calculus her sophomore year. She is one of the leading candidates for the Sally Barksdale Hargrett Prize, which is given annually at commencement to the graduating senior with the highest grade-point average.

"I've loved it here," she said of her days at Longwood. "There's plenty of research opportunities available for students majoring in the sciences. If there's no ongoing research on something you're interested in, you can start it yourself. Longwood is a school where you receive a lot of individualized attention."

Be Careful in the Sun

By KAREN BEATTIE

For some, sunbathing is a soothing experience resulting in a dark, luscious tan. But for others the experience can be a painful one, with the bather ending up beet red. What can a person do to prevent getting sunburned? And if the sunburn has already occurred, what can be done to lessen the pain? Also, what are the hazards of sunbathing?

According to Student Health Services one must always use protection when sunbathing. Sunscreens containing PABA (para-ameno benzoic acid) absorb ultraviolet rays and allow gradual tanning. Sunblock (i.e. zinc oxide) allows no tanning and is recommended for lips, nose and other sensitive areas.

Sunscreens are rated by their SPF (sun protection factor), which indicates the amount of time that sun exposure can be extended when you use the product. For example, if an individual would have developed a sunburn from a 30 minute exposure a sunblock with an SPF of 15 extends that time to 7.5 hours (0.5 hours x 15).

If sunburn occurs it is okay to take aspirin or tylenol for the pain. Vinegar baths and soaks may help also. But if fever, chills or blisters are present, seek medical attention.

The main hazard of laying in the sun is getting skin cancer. People who have fair skin, blonde or red hair are susceptible to this type of sun damage. Also, some antibiotics and medication can cause the skin to burn easier.

The early warning signs of skin cancer are: a sore that does not heal, change in size or color of a wart or mole, and if unusual pigmentation occurs (i.e. brown spots).

Finally, even though being tan makes people feel healthier tanning is actually your skins' response to injury — the substance "melanin" that surfaces when you became suntanned is your body's protector against harmful ultraviolet rays.

All the information in this article, along with other interesting facts can also be found in the pamphlets: Lifestyle: Health News For All Seasons and Self Care for Ticks, Bites and Burns. Both are available at Student Health Services.

Mall Committee Needs Help

Hopefully, you have already heard about the future plans for the "Blackwell Plaza" area. The Mall Committee has finished its brainstorming sessions with the architects and landscapers and has come up with the final plans for the plot of land between Grainger and Hiner.

The Mall Committee would like to include as many students as possible in the project. They feel this will encourage the student body as a whole to respect the area and think of it as their own. There are plans underway to allow groups and organizations to get in on the action, as well as individual students.

Financial donations of $25.00 or more will be recognized by inscription of the name of the donating organization on a plaque to be prominently displayed on the mall.

For $1.00, individuals can place their signature in a record book which will be included in the Mall Time Capsule (which will be sealed on October 10, 1988). This contribution will also include the donor's name in a drawing for one of 50 specially designed Mall T-Shirts.

Individuals who choose to volunteer time to work on the Mall Committee in the next few months will have their signatures in the record book as well, and will be in a group photo of the committee, which will also be included in the time capsule.

Questions, etc. should be directed towards Vice President for Business Affairs Rick Hurley or his secretary on first floor South Ruffner.

Donations should be sent to Cathy Gaughran at Box 381. Please make checks payable to Longwood College.

WLCX to Broadcast after Reading Day

The Longwood campus radio station, WLCX, will be ending its broadcasting year on Sunday, May 1. The station will air on reading day from 2 p.m. till midnight and on Sunday from 1:30 p.m. till midnight.

The schedule for reading day includes Jazz music with Harron Falls from 2-6 p.m., Classic Rock from 6-8 with Teri Acors and Ann Lawson and Tamy Dawson with Variety from 8-10. Scott Loving will finish the evening with more Variety from 10-midnight.

For the first time in the station's history there will be broadcasting after reading day.

The station will start off on Sunday at 1:30 p.m. with the syndicated feature "Powerline." At 2 p.m. Troy Loveday will come on with variety music, and from 4-6 will be Jeff Clayton with "the study session" featuring Classic Rock.

Get into a progressive music state of mind after that with Charles Lindauee and Hugh Calder from 6-8. Jim Long comes on from 8-10 p.m. with New Music, and Tim Brandenburg has the last show of the year with progressive music till midnight.

Students Honored at Luncheon

By TIM BRANDENBURG

More than ten students were awarded prizes and scholarships at the English, Philosophy and Modern Languages Honors Banquet held last Tuesday during lunch in the Virginia Room.

Board of Visitors Distinguished Professor Rosemary Sprague and Professor Marie Silveria presented the awards.

The Sprague award went to Ashley Smith. Burnella Gilbert won the $400 Helen Draper Scholarship.

Buffi Jones won the Frank award, Susan Alonso won the Spanish Book Prize and the Ernouf Prize was awarded to Traci Strickland.

The German Book Prize went to Julia Polvent, the Simonini Award went to Martha Hundley and the French Prize was awarded to Melissa Little.

Amy Roderer was recognized for receiving the $660 Stark Scholarship and Melissa Gibbs for the $350 Hiner Scholarship.

The banquet ended with the recognition this year's new members of the English Honor Society Lambda Iota Tau.

Chamber Music Performance Spectacular

By RYAN GILLS

On April 11, the Richmond Symphony's Chamber Music section gave a spectacular performance in Wygal Auditorium.

Guest conductor David Commanday led the group in a flawless performance. The sinfonia was headed by Concertmaster Jonathan Mott on violin. Mott and the other performers played to a packed audience and received ovations after each piece.

Whether you were a music lover or were assigned to see the concert you received a great show. When great performers team with an up and coming conductor the results can be nothing short of fantastic.

Van Ness is a "Dickie Nut"

Last Wednesday, English professor, Dr. Gordon Van Ness presented a study on poet James Dickie.

In front of a large audience assembled in French Lounge, Van Ness attempted to show how Dickie's military experiences in World War II greatly affected his writing.

Van Ness, who calls himself a "Dickie nut" began his study on the poet while attending graduate school at the University of Richmond in 1982. Through his study of James Dickie, Van Ness not only wanted to know the "man as a writer" but also the "writer as a man." He also wanted to understand Dickie's belief that poetry is a transfer of human experience.

Much of Van Ness' presentation consisted of the study of war letters Dickie wrote to his parents from training camps and bases in the Pacific. He told how the poet loved the service and felt as if he were doing something for the first time in his life. But, Dickie became emotionally shaken as a result of confrontation with actual combat.

Dr. Van Ness told of the profound effects war had on the poet. In one letter, Dickie tells his parents, "If I can get through this, I will never take a chance again."

When the war was over, Dickie returned to the U.S. with the "feeling he had lost his youth," according to Van Ness. The poet entered Vanderbilt in 1946 now experiencing "a heightened awareness of life."

Dickie's extensive reading while in the service, "stimulated him to go further than he would have ordinarily once he reached Vanderbilt," said Dr. Van Ness.

Van Ness, a 1st year professor at Longwood, gave the 3rd and final presentation in the series of departmental lectures sponsored by the Department of English, .Philosophy and Modern Languages.

Performer Sported a Pig's Nose

By MARY HILL

Claudia Stevens, a classically trained pianist, singer, and actress performed "Panoply" last Monday night.

Stevens, who has performed contemporary music at Carnegie Hall, brought her talents to Longwood College through the Series of Performing Arts concerts.

Various props were used in many of the pieces such as the work "How to Tell the Birds from the Flowers" by Richard Becker. In this piece, Stevens wore bird masks and beaks, as well as ate carrots and smelled flowers. Her over-dramatic playing and singing lended greatly to the comic puns and rhythms in the lyrics.

This piece described how to tell the difference between such similar items as the pansy and the chim-pansy and the parrot and the carrot.

Another interesting piece was "Baudelaire's Uncle" by Francis Schwartz. Stevens described this piece as something the audience might find "shocking." She wore a pig nose and sang nonsense sounds while playing atonal chords. At one point in the piece, Stevens played the piano with her nose while growling. The audience was also asked to participate in making some of the sounds from time to time.

Perhaps the most dramatic piece of the evening was "Carreno," a music-theater piece written by Judith Shatin Allen. The work was a personification of the Venequelan pianist and opera singer, Teresa Carreno. Stevens portrays Carreno alone in rehearsal, remembering her past. The music used was actual parts of the opera singer's repertoire.

Other pieces included "Es Regent"; "Mon Ami, ariette variee a chanter-jouer"; and "A Miscellany for Claudia."

The audience reacted with spontaneity to the relaxed atmosphere of the performance. One person there stated that Stevens' music helped to "take the formality out of the recital because it mocked itself."

LC Grad Offers Advice

JANET PAULOVICH

Janet Allen Paulovich, a 1981 Longwood graduate, returned to her alma mater recently to discuss career opportunities in foreign languages.

Paulovich, who majored in French, spoke to a luncheon meeting of modern language majors and minors about possible careers for students who don't want to teach.

She worked as a language analyst for the Department of Defense for seven years. She resigned recently to be home with her five-month-old son, Mark.

Paulovich, who studied at the prestigious Defense Language Institute in Monterey, CA, said there are several government agencies that employ foreign language majors: the State Department, the FBI, the CIA, the Department of Defense, the Agency for International Development, and the International Monetary Fund.

While at Longwood, she also studied Spanish and German.

in the College Shop and on the athletic field. Bright red skulls began to appear around campus on sidewalks.

This staunch group of girls was held fast by undying loyalty, strong bonds of friendship and a firm purpose.

The year ended with what was termed a "coming out party". This was a bonfire which was said to cast its glow to reveal the identities of the Chi members. Over the years, it became customary at this ritual for the members to circle this bonfire and commend those whose spirit and loyalty to the college was felt by all.

With the 70's came changes. A new group was formed as a takeoff on Chi. This group was composed of campus clowns or "fun troublemakers" who called themselves "Cahoots". They did a comical version of Chi which included mock walks. The group died out sometime during the late 70's-early 80's.

Chi of 1970 presented the Blue and White songbook which was a collection of class, color and college songs, as a reminder of Chi's essential purpose. This purpose was said to be "not inscribed upon paper, but could be found only in the hearts and minds of those who sought it."

Today, with a new symbol, that of the Rotunda, CHI WALKS ON, AND THE SPIRIT OF LONGWOOD WALKS WITH IT!!! Its activities have changed over the years, but its aim to uphold the spirit of Longwood has remained constant.

Today, students still get chills when they read letters to the student body encouraging support of college functions and academic excellence. They still look forward to the Chi burning, where recognition is given to students, faculty and administration who have made outstanding contributions to the college community. It is here, at the burning, that the combination of individual flames come together to form one.

As for the question "exactly how does one get into Chi?" – That will probably never be known for sure. We do know that they are chosen for their outstanding contributions to Longwood College.

The important thing to know and understand about Chi is that it maintain the spirit and traditions of this fine institution. Without spirit, Chi would have no reason for being. Realizing that the spirit depends upon each student, Chi strives to kindle the flame and keep it burning in the hearts of all.

(The following is an excerpt from an old yearbook)

"Chi is an organization comprised of individual members, but the individuals are NOT Chi. Chi is an ideal spirit which could never exist in only one person. The spirit is boundless selfless giving and sacrifice. To maintain this spirit is exemplary of god-like virtues. We are NOT gods. We are very definitely human. And through this humanism, we are crippled by our desire, our actions, our emotions. Look not to the people, look not to the shortcomings, the failures, the disgrace, the humanity. Reach for the ideal and forget the faces, the shadows soon to fade by a noonday sun. We, the mortal members of Chi, challenge you, our fellow classmates and friends, to wipe from your memory the personification of the ideal. Instead, look to your own souls. YOU are the spirit, YOU are the glory, YOU are the Chi to whom we burn."

Jen, – Have a blast at Maryland. I hope you find a nicer roommate. Beware of S.B.'s. Your favorite Dork.

Believe it or not . . .

There were times at Longwood when:

– It was lights out at 11:00 p.m. for the freshmen, so they hid in the bathrooms to study.

– You couldn't drink within the town limits of Farmville – taxi loads of students would go to "Leo's" (a beer place at Dowdy's Corner), just outside the town limits.

– There was no Oktoberfest – only "Circus" a homecoming weekend for alums.

– Girls were required to wear a hat to church (Yes, everyone had to go to church).

– There was no McDonalds, Hardees or even Macados . . . Can you imagine?

– Freshmen were known as "rats" and had to wear beanies.

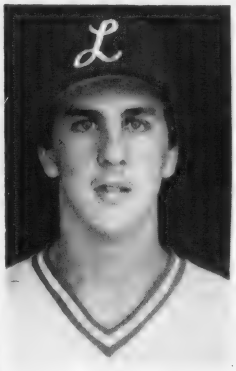
– Raincoats were worn over nightgowns to breakfast and class.

– The dorm room had to be open and feet had to be kept on floor when you had a visitor.

– The students lived with the college president, and he was the legal guardian.

– Girls sunbathed on the roof in dyed underwear and bras.

– A date had to come calling for his girl at the Rotunda, and wait for her in the parlor.



Co-Players of the Week

By HOKE CURRIE

Freshman Dennis Hale and sophomore Anne Douglas Miller pitched no-hitters Sunday for Longwood's baseball and softball teams, respectively. Hale and Miller have been named co-Longwood College Players of the Week for the period April 17-24. Player of the Week is chosen by the LC sports information office.

Hale ran his record to 4-0 with Sunday's no-hitter as Longwood took a 15-0 victory over Mount St. Mary's in the second game of a doubleheader. The righthander struck out eight and walked one. The game was stopped after the top of the fifth inning on the 10-run rule.

Hale had earlier pitched a one-hitter against Allen and had a no-hitter through six innings against Maryland Eastern Shore. The Dinwiddie High graduate has recorded two shutouts and has an earned run average of 3.75 for the season.

DENNIS HALE

ANNE D. MILLER

A physics major, Hale compiled a fine 3.70 grade point average in his first semester.

Fourth No-Hitter

Miller pitched only the fourth no-hitter in Longwood softball history against Virginia Tech as Longwood took a 5-2 victory. She notched her tenth complete game of the year and raised her record to 9-3. The righthander finished the season with a 2.06 ERA. She holds the Longwood record for career winning percentage with an overall record of 13-7.

Anne Douglas is a graduate of Douglas Freeman High School and is majoring in therapeutic recreation.

The Longwood softball team won its last six and 11 of its last 12 games to end the year with a best-ever record of 21-5.

UMBC, Lynchburg End LC's Season

A 21-10 loss to Maryland Baltimore County Monday and a 14-6 defeat at the hands of Lynchburg Thursday closed out Longwood's 1988 women's lacrosse season. Coach Sue Finnie's squad ended up 2-10.

Longwood leaders against UMBC were Mary Collins, who totaled four goals for the second straight game, and Terri Pugh, who also scored four.

Coach Finnie singled out Collins, Pugh and Chris Schup, who scored one goal, for their play in the loss.

1987 Champion Lady Lancer Golfers Seek Second Division II Crown May 2-4

Longwood's women's golf eam will seek to defend its Di-ision II National title May 2-4 t the National Golf Coaches ssociation Division II and III 'ournament in Dubuque, Iowa, ut first the Lady Lancers have o tackle spring semester exms.

"My players have been spending most of their time recently getting ready for exams," said Longwood coach Barbara Smith. "Since the tournament falls during our exam period, the golf team is taking most of their exams this week. We'll be leaving Saturday morning for Iowa, but we won't have much time to practice golf before then."

After winning last year's Division II Tournament Dr. Smith and her team are well aware that they'll be cast in the favorite's role at this year's event.

"We're ready," said the coach. "We understand that everyone will be out to beat us and we'll have to be at our best."

The 54 hole tournament, which crowns national champs in Divisions II and III (Methodist is the defending Division III winner), will be played at the Dubuque Country Club course. Challenging Longwood in Division II will be Troy State, Air Force, Briar Cliff, Mankato State, and Northeast Missouri State. Division III qualifiers include Methodist, host Loras College, Central, DePauw, Luther and Mount Holyoke.

Longwood, which features four seniors and a sophomore in its top five, has had an outstanding year to date with consistent scores in four fall and four spring tournaments. With a stroke average of 320, the Lady Lancers will look for two-time Division II individual champ Tina Barrett to lead the way.

Barrett, Melone, Pugh and Warren earned All-America honors at last year's Division II Tournament.

Softball Ends Record Season as Miller Pitches No-Hitter

:y MICHAEL K. PHILLIPS

The 1988 Longwood softball ason ended Sunday on a od note as the Lady Lancers at Virginia Tech 5-2 and 15-5. ead coach Loretta Coughlin's uad finished the season with 21-5 record, the best ever at .

In the first game against ch Longwood's Anne Dou-is Miller pitched the first no-:ter of her career and the irth in Longwood history. ller, the career winning per-ntage school record holder, ished the season with a 9-3 ord and is now 13-7 in her o years on the mound for ngwood. Miller pitched her ith complete game of the son against the Hokies.

While Miller held down the kies she got support from eral of her teammates. en Longwood batters hit ely. Tina Hall lengthened school record hitting streak 20 games. The senior All-erica candidate finished the son with a record .500 bat-g average. Co-captain Chris el went 2-2, scored two runs, and with a fifth inning triple, hit the game-winning RBI.

Again in game two, seven LC batters hit safely. In the first and fifth innings Virginia Tech looked on as 10 Lady Lancers made trips to the plate. With a sixth inning double, LeBel knocked in the fifteenth Longwood run of the game to end the contest on the 10 run rule, 15-5.

Junior Stacey Thompson pitched her eleventh complete game of the season and upped her record to a Longwood best-ever 10-2. Thompson, a righthander, continued to show her offensive skills as she hit 3-3, scored two runs, and ended the season with a .486 batting average, the second best on the team.

Senior Jill Everett went 3-3 with two runs and a third inning homer. Everett's homer was her fifth and set a school record for homeruns in a season. In game two Hall stole three bases in three attempts to give her a season total of 19 in 20 attempts.

Hale No-Hitter, Eight Homers Help Lancers Sweep The Mount

Freshman pitcher Dennis Hale tossed a 5-inning no-hitter and Longwood unloaded eight homers for the day as the Lancer baseball team swept a twin bill from visiting Mount St. Mary's Sunday 10-3 and 15-0.

Longwood stands 23-12 for the year with Sunday's sweep and a pair of forfeit wins over no-show North Carolina A&T Saturday. The Lancers can compile 30 wins if they can win seven of their final eight games. Still scheduled are twin bills at Shaw Tuesday, at N.C. A&T Friday and at Maryland Eastern Shore Saturday, plus a home doubleheader with Bowie State Wednesday which had been listed as an away date.

Rain forced cancellation of last Monday's contest at Randolph-Macon.

With its record season home run total at 59 and counting, Longwood could boast eight homers from eight different players in Sunday's sweep. Greylin Rice, solo, Pete Criscione, solo, Mark Moeller, one on, and Robbie Smith, one on, accounted for four homers in the opening 10-3 victory. The Lancers came back from a 3-2 deficit with eight runs in the bottom of the sixth.

Moeller hit his 10th homer and Smith his fourth to spark the uprising. Robert Jackson, who hit a two-run homer in the nightcap, cleared the bases with a 3-run double. Lancer pitcher Steve Gedro was the beneficiary of the outburst, going the distance to pick up his sixth win against four losses.

Hale needed just one run to win the second game as he held The Mount hitless over five innings while striking out eight and walking one. The freshman moved his record to 4-0. It was the fourth no-hitter in Longwood baseball history.

Moeller's two-run double in the first sewed up the win, but Longwood proceeded to build on its first inning, 4-0 cushion. Nealan Chandler hit a solo homer in the second, while Kelvin Davis, Jackson and Frankie Watson ripped dingers in the 8-run fourth inning.

Longwood, which has scored 300 runs in 33 games, upped its team batting average to .347. Davis is batting .504 with 51 RBIs, and 14 homers. Jackson has nine roundtrippers and 41 RBIs to go with a .395 batting average, and Moeller is hitting .389 with 33 RBIs and 12 doubles.

The Lancers have now won 20 or more games for eight straight seasons, and 260 during coach Buddy Bolding's 10 years at the helm.

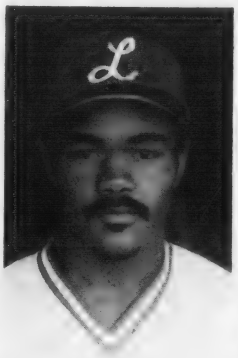
Luther, Smith, Davis, Barrett Take Awards at Athletic Banquet

By HOKE CURRY

Senior student-athletes Tina Barrett and Kelvin Davis and coaches Barbara Smith and Cal Luther won the major awards as Longwood College held its 10th Athletic Banquet Monday night.

Barrett, a 3-time All-American on the women's golf team, was named Female Athlete of the Year. Davis, Longwood baseball's top all-time hitter, received the Male Athlete of the Year award.

Luther was voted Male Coach of the Year for leading the Lancer basketball team to its best season in seven years, 19-10. Longwood women's golf coach, Dr. Smith was tabbed Female Coach of the Year for the second year in a row and the third time overall. She led Longwood to the National Golf Coaches Association Division II title last May.



CAL LUTHER

Longwood's top all-time golfer, Barrett has been named All-America for academics as well as golf. She won four tournaments in her senior year while compiling a 75.3 stroke average in the fall and a 76.0 in the spring. She'll be trying for a third straight Division II National title May 2-4.

Davis was batting .504 heading into the final week of action. He is Longwood's career leader in batting average (.415), hits (202) and triples (9). He hit a record 14 homers and drove in 51 runs Longwood's first 33 games this season.

Luther was named "Coach of the Year" in both the Mason-Dixon Conference and the South Atlantic District, after the Lancers finished as MDAC regular season co-champs and tournament runner-ups. Longwood was picked to finish last in the league in preseason polls. Seventh among Division II coaches in victories, Luther's overall record is 388-278. His Longwood teams are 102-84 over seven seasons.

Kelvin Davis

Recognized as one of the top college golf coaches in the nation, Dr. Smith has been coach at Longwood for 22 years. She will lead her Lady Lancer golf team, the defending champs, into the NGCA Division II Tournament next week, marking the seventh time in the last 8 years LC has qualified for a national tournament. Dr. Smith has coached nine All-Americans while leading her teams to more than 130 victories in tournament and match play.

Also presented were awards for Male and Female Freshman Athlete of the Year and the Henry I. Willett Scholar-Athletes. Soccer standout Ray Jones was named as top freshman male while softball star Pam Fitzgerald was voted top freshman female. Field hockey player Traci Strickland and golfer Kevin Hare, both seniors, won the Willett Scholar-Athlete awards.

Jones, MVP on the 14-4-1 soccer squad, had a record - shattering freshman season. He totaled 29 goals and 10 assists while making first team All-American, All-Region and All-State. Fitzgerald, a graduate of Lee-Davis High, was a key performer on Longwood's best-ever softball team which ended up 21-5. The first baseman batted .357 with 18 RBIs, five doubles and a triple.

Strickland has compiled a 3.71 academic average while majoring in foreign language. She was named as an all-American in academic excellence by the College Field Hockey Coaches Association last fall and was picked to the All-District III GTE-CoSIDA Academic All-America At-Large team last year. She had a record nine assists and eight goals for the 13-6-1 Lady Lancer hockey squad in 1987.

Hare has earned an overall grade point average of 3.112 while majoring in business. A four year member of the men's golf team, he has been a consistent performer for coach Steve Nelson's Lancer golfers.

Most Valuable Player honors were handed out for Longwood's 14 sports team.

Netters Beat NC Wesleyan

By HOKE CURRIE

Five singles wins and one doubles victory propelled Longwood's men's tennis team to a 6-3 triumph over North Carolina Wesleyan last Monday in Rocky Mount, N.C., but the Lancers fell at Randolph-Macon 8-1 Wednesday as the season ledger dropped to 3-8.

Longwood's season ends with a match at Liberty Tuesday. A home match with Greensboro last Tuesday was cancelled because of rain.

Barrett Proves Herself on the Golf Course

By MARK KIRK

There is an old saying that "practice makes perfect". Longwood's women's golfer Tina Barrett has proven that statement to be correct, and not just on the golf course.

Constantly striving for perfection in everything she does, the senior from Baltimore has proven to be a perfect example to what student-athletes can accomplish when they put their minds to it.

In a short span of nearly four years, Barrett had received a lifetime's worth of awards. Among her accomplishments are being named a Division II All-American three times, Academic All-American twice, and winning the Division II Individual Championship twice. She also won the Eastern Amateur Tournament last June. She feels good about her accomplishments thus far, but is far from being completely satisfied.

"My main goal in golf this season is to be named All-American again, because being recognized four times would be a great accomplishment," says Barrett, who was ranked 18th out of 707 Division I-III golfers after the fall season. "As far as academics are concerned, being named Academic All-American is not really a major goal. However, it allows me to be recognized as more than a golfer, which is important."

Barrett's success in golf and in the classroom have not come without hard work, though. Her coach, Dr. Barbara Smith, feels Barrett's attitude and excellent work habits have been the main keys in her rise to prominence.

"Tina is a very good golfer because she had the drive and determination to excel," explained Smith, who has taught Barrett all four of her years at Longwood. "She couldn't be a nicer person to her opponents and herself, and she's always humble. Moreover, her skill and attitude make her a good player and all-around person."

Most people believe it would be difficult to fit academics, athletics, and social life into their routines and still be successful in all of them. Barrett thinks differently.

"You have to budget your time in order to be successful. If I do it right, there is time for everything; I've proven that," she said. "I have goals I want to accomplish, and I have to give up some things if I'm going to reach them."

Thus far this season (fall and spring), Barrett has been budgeting her time quite well. In the fall, she ended up with a stroke average of 75.3 and finished among the top five in three of four tournaments. Moreover, she has won individual titles in three of four tournaments Longwood has played in this spring, finishing first in Peggy Kirk Bell, North Carolina Wilmington and William & Mary Invitationals.

Still ahead are the National Golf Coaches Association Division II tournament May 2-4 and the NCAA Women's Golf tournament May 25-28.

"I'm having my best year so far. I'm very pleased with my performance, because a goal of mine was to improve my stroke average," said Barrett, who also 'slightly' improved academically with a 3.75 grade point average last semester. She has a 3.48 overall GPA. "I felt much more comfortable this year as well because I've removed the pressure off myself."

The pressure of collegiate golf was something that Barrett hoped would come in her direction when she was younger. As a member of the men's golf team at Perry Hall High School, she worked her way up to the number one seed. However, she was not sure whether she could play golf as a freshman in college.

"My goal in high school was to play college golf, but I was not heavily recruited. I thought I might play my sophomore year, but I played well the summer before my freshman year and that helped a lot. Ever since, my game has progressed," said Barrett.

Coach Smith has also noticed improvement from the days when Barrett's potential was only beginning to be realized.

"Tina came in with good skills and has steadily improved them ever since," said Smith.

Barrett has one major goal that she wants to accomplish after her career at Longwood is over: qualify for the LPGA Tour. If she is unable to fulfill her dream within five years, she plans to put her business finance major to use. Her coach, however, believes Barrett's dream will come true.

"She's probably the best player we've had at Longwood in terms of consistency in scoring," explained Smith. "She wants to improve and with her continued dedication, I think she will make it as a professional golfer."

Davis Ranks At Top of the Charts on Longwood Baseball Hit Parade

By MARK KIRK

If Longwood qualifies for the "hit parade" of college baseball, the batting record of senior shortstop Kelvin Davis must be close to Number One on the charts.

The Lancers have ripped the opposition for 59 home runs in 33 games this spring and Davis has hit 14 of those homers while sporting a .504 batting average and 51 RBI's. Whether it's hitting for power or average, or driving in runs, Davis can do it all. He's hit well enough over the past two seasons to make first or second team All-South Atlantic Region.

The proof is there in his career statistics: .415 batting average (best in school history), 202 hits (1st), 41 doubles (2nd), 9 triples (1st), 34 home runs (2nd), and 161 runs-batted-in (2nd). The outstanding numbers he has put up this season, including a record 14 homers, have helped him accomplish some long-standing goals.

"I was finally able to break the Longwood record for homers in a season, which I've been shooting for the past two years," said Davis, who led Halifax County High School to the AAA Virginia State Championship in 1984 against J.R. Tucker. "Plus, I have a chance to hit over .370 for the fourth year in a row, which is a major accomplishment for a college baseball player. My good start this year has helped me to stay up to date with my stats."

According to Davis, Longwood coach Buddy Bolding has been the key to his hitting ability since he was "stolen" from such Division I powers as Old Dominion, Georgia, and Virginia Tech.

"Coach Bolding is a very good coach, and he has been a major influence on my game," says Davis, who has also improved his fielding this season. "When he recruits players, he looks first at how well they can hit because he strives for good hitting. His coaching philosophy places an emphasis on scoring runs, which is a lot of fun."

Division II colleges with limited scholarship funds, such as Longwood, are not able to recruit many Roger Clemens-type pitchers. Therefore, these schools have to look more for hitters. Davis feels there is not as much difference between the two divisions as some people think.

"Pitchers in Division I are more skillful in placing the ball, choosing pitches and keeping batters off stride. In my opinion, however, there is not as much difference in the two levels except that you run into a good Division I pitcher every once in a while who makes you think in the batter's box," explained Davis.

Davis says his decision to attend Longwood was based on its location and the opportunity to play right away.

KELVIN DAVIS

"I wanted to play close to home and Longwood was close, and I knew someone on the team from my hometown (season RBI record holder Allen Lawter)," he said. "Moreover, the year before I arrived, Longwood had lost an All-American shortstop in John Sullivan. I really wanted to come straight out of high school and help the team right away, and coach Bolding gave me that chance."

It was a chance that did not seem possible when Davis was younger. He had always had fun playing baseball, but he never played organized ball until he attended junior high school.

"When I was little, we used to go in the backyard and play stickball or watch the Major Leagues on television. I also enjoyed softball before I started playing organized baseball," said Davis, who also enjoys hunting and fishing in the off-season.

Once Davis arrived on the Longwood campus, he had no problem adjusting to the college level. During his freshman campaign, Davis battled .378 with 31 RBIs in 42 games. Help from teammates Lawter and Mike Haskins was one of the main reasons for Davis' easy adjustment.

"When I was a freshman, Allen Lawter (senior captain that year) helped me on every possible baseball skill," said Davis. "He always pepped me up and kept me in the game." Lawter is now assistant baseball coach at Halifax High.

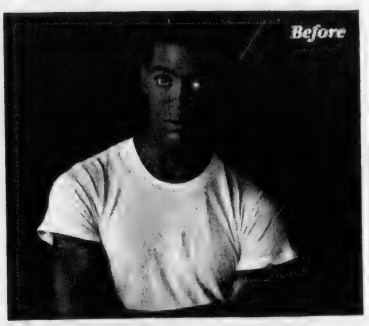
"Michael Haskins (another captain), who was my roommate the next year, was also a major influence," he continued. "He really helped me with my hitting, and always took me aside and told me what I was doing wrong. Along with coach Bolding, those two have been the main influences on my career at Longwood."

Carrying on the tradition, Davis and fellow captains Robert Jackson and Steve Gedro have helped this year's freshmen adjustment to the college game.

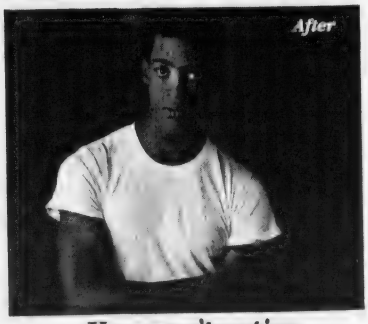
"From day one when I got to Longwood, I admired the way Allen acted," said Davis. "He was a good leader with excellent leadership skills. I always wanted to help the team the way he did."

Davis has earned the respect of his teammates. He has been a leader and motivator on a young Lancer squad which had a 23-12 record as of April 25.

"K.D. (Davis' nickname) has served as a role model and motivator this year," said slugger Mark Moeller, one of 10 freshmen on the 1988 team. "He really picks you up when you're down. You can always count on him for a big hit. It will be hard to find someone to fill his shoes after he leaves."



Davis will be leaving behind many great memories. One such moment that stands out is a game against Liberty University in 1987, which the Lancers won 6-3.



"That contest was a big one for us because it had a major effect on whether or not we would go to regionals. Late in the game, we were trailing by one or two runs and I hit a 3-run homer to put us ahead for good. After that, I started hitting well and we were able to advance to the regional tournament," said Davis.

The Lancer shortstop had hoped to get another crack at the NCAA Tournament this season, but Longwood's hopes for post-season play are slim, at best. Despite his individual accomplishments, Davis feels the current season has been a nightmare he would like to forget. Yet, he maintains a positive outlook on his past and future.

"I would like to get a shot at the majors," says Davis, who has drawn interest from some Major League scouts. "If not, I always wanted to coach baseball at the high school level. As far as my career at Longwood, I would like to be remembered as a team player, a good leader and someone who tried his hardest and did his best for the team. It has really been a great experience being able to play for coach Bolding and Longwood the past four years."

Davis needn't worry about how he'll be remembered. Coach Bolding says he is probably the finest all-around player in Longwood baseball history, and Monday night, at the College's Athletic Banquet, he was named Male Athlete of the Year and MVP for baseball.

Curry residents live in fear of break-ins

By ANGELA KOUSSOGLOU

Hearing the door open, Jane awakened. She thought it was her roommate.

"Want me to get the lights?" Jane asked.

Hearing no reply, she assumed her roommate had already gotten into bed so Jane fell back to sleep. Little did Jane know that she'd awaken the next morning to find her roommate gagged and strangled to death in the bed just five feet away from her. On the mirror by the bed, the words: Aren't you glad you didn't get the lights, were written in lipstick the shade of blood.

This is fiction . . . a story used on campus across the country to scare students into protecting themselves against crime. It's time Longwood read the fiction and heard the facts.

On September 2 at 1:15 a.m., Curry resident, Donna Hedge, was in the shower while her roommate and suitemates were in bed asleep. Unfortunately, someone forgot to lock the door. In the few minutes Donna was out of her room, her gold necklace, two watches, and three silver chains were stolen. Also stollen was a box of earrings, a checkbook, and a wallet belonging to her roommate.

Not more than fifteen minutes later, Curry resident, JoAnn Sayko became the next victim. JoAnn was alone in her room when over $200 worth of jewelry was stollen off of the dresser by her bed. She slept through the incident. JoAnn says that the door to her room was unlocked. She isn't sure whether her suite door had been locked or not but she says that a hanger was found in front of the suite door the next morning.

Minutes later, a Curry resident, who prefers to remain unidentified, was awakend to the sound of her roommate ordering someone to leave their room. The roommate who also prefers to remain unidentified, came into her room and found someone standing in front of her open closet. When she demanded that he leave, he told her not to be worried and that she should remember him from D.T.'s. He then left taking with him a few items of gold jewelry. The girls described him as being a clean cut, black, male. One girl said, "He was so calm . . . as if he owned the room and we were the ones breaking in."

Sergeant A. Rhodes gave lecture on how to protect oneself to 10th floor Curry residents.

Campus Police were notified in the morning. Sergeant A. Rhodes came to get a full report from Donna Hedge the next day and later that week came to a 10th floor Curry Hall meeting to lecture on "how to protect yourself." He informed the residents that a strict security was being kept on the dorms and that only dorm residents and registered guests could enter the dorms after midnight. He said to report all suspicious persons and to always keep your doors locked. Should you come in contact with a stranger in your room, calmly ask him to leave. If he refuses, you try to leave the room and call Campus Police immediatly. Under no circumstances should you question or aggravate the person.

Because the ratio of Longwood students to Campus Police Officers is 273:1, the students need to support the police in order to make the fight against campus crime effective.

This became evident last Tuesday night. The desk aid noticed two suspicious persons in Curry lobby. She called Campus Police who arrived less than five minutes after the call was made. Ten minutes later, both persons were arrested for trespassing.

With this kind of support from the students as well as an increased awareness to protect one's self, the Longwood Community can become a safer environment for all to live in.

Gallery is a weekly column that will feature the many men and women that have worked in the past to build the college we all know as Longwood.

By MATT PETERMAN

Dr. J. L. M. Curry was born on his father's plantation in Georgia; however, he spent his early years on a plantation in Alabama. According to Charles Burrell Dr. Curry was "graduated from the University of Georgia at the early age of eighteen, then studied law at Harvard University, graduating when twenty years of age" (315). "At the age of twenty-one he became a member of the United States Congress from 1857 to 1861, when his fine gifts of oratory attracted much favorable attention" (315).

After the Civil War he took the job as President of Howard College in Alabama which he held for approximately a year. For the next thirteen years he made his home in Virginia teaching at Richmond College as a professor. During these years he also held the position of President of the Board of Trustees at that College. "He often occupied the pulpit as preacher, although he had no regular charge. He [also] was at one time President of the Foreign Mission Board of Southern Baptist Convention" (315).

APO goes to Camp Friendship

By DONNA L. FERRIER

On September 2-3, Alpha Phi Omega, the co-ed service fraternity, ventured to a place called Camp Friendship in Palmyra, Va., where the members experienced some interesting challenges. Probably the most challenging activity was a low ropes course, during which the fraternity brothers helped each other through a series of obstacles.

"The basic goal for the low ropes course is not adventure," says Gene Kerns, Alpha Phi Omega's Vice President of Service, "It is to promote group unity. One activity we have done is 'The Spider Web,'" he describes. "The group is placed on one side of a rope web and must get all of its members to the other side. Each hole in the web can only be used once and you may not touch the web. Through these activities the group learns to adapt to its strengths and weaknesses (physically) and to use each person's abilities to their most. Hopefully the group learns something about itself that can be applied to all types of challenges in the future, such as teamwork, minimizing weakness, using personal strengths and abilities, and working together to accomplish a goal."

The fraternity brothers also participated in a wide range of other activities, such as archery, rifle shooting, horseback riding, and canoeing.

Camp Friendship is just one of the many activities Alpha Phi Omega has to offer. This fraternity is also dedicated to participating in and sponsoring service activities to raise money for various causes such as Cystic Fibrosis and Heart Disease. The fraternity also provides campus entertainment each year by sponsoring Faculty Follies each spring, and donating the money made to worthy causes. If you would like to be a part of Alpha Phi Omega, informal rush meetings will be held on September 13 and 15 at 8:00 p.m., in Lankford Conference Room 2.

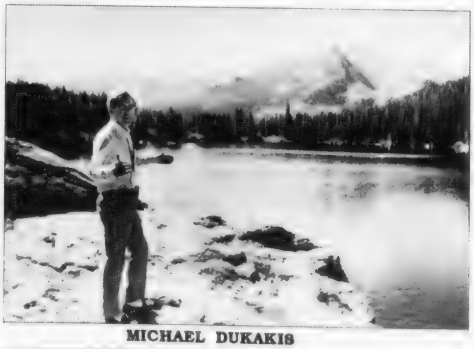
Troubles Plague Dukakis Education Policies



By JULIE LANZA

AMHERST, MASS (CPS) — If he's elected president in November, Gov. Michael Dukakis will take with him education policies that have left students in Massachusetts with more financial aid and campuses with more buildings, but that have also gotten the state's public colleges in deep budget troubles.

This fall, for example, some schools are turning away students, replacing teachers with computers and raising tuition 8.5 percent — a higher price hike than the national average of 4 percent — to cope with deep budget cuts.

In general, the Dukakis administration has been both a boon and a bust for colleges and universities.

Campus Police take a bite out of crime

By TRISHA OGDEN

Where do Campus Police concentrate their efforts? Many students believe that the Campus Police spend the majority of their time writing tickets for parking violations.

This misconception should have been almost eliminated with the promising news of new parking spaces, announced last semester. Evidently this is not true. Officers JK Moore and W Oertel claim they are issuing twice as many tickets this semester than last semester. This is odd considering we have an estimated 1200 new spaces available.

Most of these parking spaces are located in dirt lots, with 150 allocated for faculty and staff. These spaces extend from Madison to High Street.

In addition to issuing parking tickets, much time and effort has been spent writing reports for the robberies occurring in the dormitories. Officers Moore and Oertel explained that 95% of these robberies arise from students leaving their rooms unlocked. The thefts involve mostly jewelry, portable radios, and small pocketable items.

Officer Moore explained that many students misplace their keys and as an alternative leave their doors unlocked. Already this year several keys have been turned into Campus Police, which still remain unclaimed. If a key is lost the cost of a new lock is cheaper in the longrun.

Meanwhile, students can help to combat the crime by locking their rooms while unattended and continue reporting any suspicious persons in the halls. As a result of some calls, arrests have been made for trespassing.

ISI comes to Longwood

By JEAN TAYLOR

The Intercollegiate Studies Institute, an organization dedicated toward the improvement of college education, is coming to Longwood this Fall. ISI will expose students and faculty to the basic principles of Western Civilization through publications, guest speakers, seminars, and organized group discussions.

As pointed out by ISI, principles like individual liberty, limited government, respect for the common good and others have come under attack in recent times, especially in colleges and Universities. ISI seeks to rectify this wrong through its publication The Intercolligate Review, which is free of charge to students and faculty. Other publications include the Hillsdale Review a highly acclaimed commentary published Quarterly. ISI also has a host of other programs and services available.

The organization, suggested by Dr. James Helms of the History and Political Science department, will prove to be an invauable part of the Longwood community. It will give students and faculty the opportunity to express themselves and receive information on a wide range of topics.

Sociology/ Anthropology Club a Success

The Anthropology/Sociology Club held its first meeting of the semester Wednesday, September 7, 1988. Officers for this semester are: Michael Sheffield, president; Debbie Cwetna, vice-president; Dana Wilcox, secretary; Charisse McGill, treasurer; and James Green and Julia Simmon as publication officers, with Mrs. Robinson serving as the Faculty Adviser.

Whether its Sociology, Anthropology, or Biology the club is for students of all majors. The association would like to do many activities this semester such as: fundraisers, invite guest speakers and host Lancer Cafe'. The organization is always open for new members. The next meeting is scheduled for Wednesday, September 14, 1988 at 7:00 p.m. in West Ruffner, Room 227.

New Look for residence halls

By DENICE EIDSON

Due to the over capacity of people, Longwood is still housing a few people in the Longwood Motel. The students will be moved on campus as soon as the final moving around is finished. The problem is not in the over acceptance of students this year. Fewer freshman came in this year but more transfers were accepted.

The 1988 summer brought an abundance of remodeling for Longwood College. South Cunningham received completely new plumbing; and North Cunningham got fire retardent mattresses and new furniture. All bath fixtures were replaced and fire retardent mattresses added to Stubbs. Wheeler was completely rekeyed. Along with individual dorms, new furniture was distributed throughout the campus to twelve different study lounges and t.v. rooms.

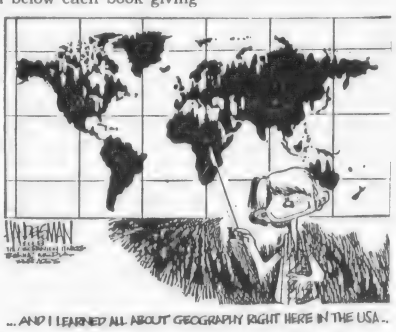
The plans for this school year include new locks on Cox and Stubbs and more new furniture in nine additional lounges. French front lobby and the commons room between Curry and Frazier will receive changed and improved lighting.

Students on the Hall Council for the dorms get to review the plans and made additional input. This helps with student involvement. If anyone has a problem contact David Rettig. "I am certainly open to anything; although I may not be able to accommodate because of lack of resources", David says.

More plans are in store for next summer. More new furniture and mattresses will be added. Longwood is really working to improve itself.

Bookstore under new management

By DENICE EIDSON



Many students returned to Longwood with a sigh of relief. The newly remodeled bookstore, under the management of Dale Bolt, provided a much easier method of obtaining books.

The contract drawn up in June of 1988 gave the chain bookstore out of Lexington, Kentucky the option to remodel as they needed or chose. This included painting all the walls, laying new carpet, and rearranging the entire store to better suit the students.

There is now a separate section for clothing and Longwood articles. The books are all in one area, a much larger area. "The traffic problem is not as bad", says Dale Sutton, who is in charge of textbooks. The Alpha-numeric system along with a card below each book giving class, section, teacher and whether the book is required or not made the buying easier and faster. The bookstore provided assistants to help students find books as well.

During the rush hours there were three registers going at all times which made waiting in line only a five or ten minute time span. The hours were also extended to nights and weekends rather than the regular eight to five Monday through Friday. Students should be aware that the new bookstore buys back books everyday instead of just once or twice a year.

Dale Bolt, the manager, foresees the outside bookstores as being "no problem with competition." Visit the expanded Longwood bookstore. Students will see, things are running very smoothly.

Dining Hall changes

By KRISTIN L. HOSIER

The Longwood Dining Service recently put into effect one of its most successful changes yet: mandatory use of trays. Simply put, if you don't take a tray, you don't eat, which adds up to a rather generic form of incentive. But, taking a tray doesn't guarantee a person will then return it to a cart when they're done eating; after many months of disregarded propaganda to keep the dining halls clean, however, the results of the new rule have been impressive.

Since the phase-out of family style dining, the problem of dishes stacking up on tables has been an increasing and controversial one. Clean tables aren't just a matter of enjoying your own meal, but allowing someone else to enjoy theirs; "We wanted that for the other students," commented Rich Johnson, Director of Longwood Dining Service. Stacked-up piles of dishes and leftovers aren't just an inconvenience for those eating, either;, for those who work in the dining halls, the unpleasant extra hours of work created depleat money that could be spent on suggestions for improvement submitted by the students themselves.

For years, carrying a tray has been equated with "looking like a freshman", so the idea was simply reversed; with the help of the dining service, orientation leaders, and over 900 new, impressionable students, most people have had little trouble adjusting. Old habits are hard to break, though, and more than a few returning upperclassmen have found the change a little awkward. "We've had very good cooperation from the students," said Johnson with regard to the clearing of trays and returning them to a cart; the money and work saved by helping out create a better dining system for everyone.

The Changing Campus

"Blackwell Mall"

By ROCCO TRICARICO

Detours, dust, and dirt has started with the construction of the new Blackwell Mall. This small part of the five-year campus beautification project is costing the students $200,000. The focus of this project is a lighted three tiered fountain. Six Oak or Maple trees will accompany two grass and one larger brick courtyard. The two grass courtyards will have a 3:1 slope dividing them into the middle accentuating a decline to the fountain as well as stairs from the larger brick area. Traditional benchs will be in the courtyards and the colonial lighting will make it a beautiful place for an evening conversation.

The completion and dedication of this project is to take place on Saturday, Oct. 15, at 12 noon. The cerecmonies activities will include the burying of a time capsule.

The new mall: bounded by Pine Street, Grainger Building, the dining hall, and the service drive.

SESQUICENTENNIAL

Symposium to kick off September 20th

By CHERYL JEFFREY

Many events are planned throughout the year as a celebration of Longwood's Sesquicentennial. One such event is a three part symposium series. The first part of this series is entitled "The Future Of Education," which be held on September 20th and 21st in Jarman Auditorium.

The first speaker is Dr. James E. Blackwell, professor of sociology at the University of Massuchusetts, Boston. Blackwell will speak at 1:20, and will direct his remarks to the students and faculty of the School of Liberal Arts and Sciences. At 3:00, Dr. Lawrence E. McKibbin will speak to students and faculty of the school of Business and Economics. McKibbin is from the University of Oklahoma, where he is Professor of Management and Director of the office of International Programs.

At 4:30, Dr. Barbara A. Sizemore, Associate Professor in the University of Pittsburgh's Department of Black Community, Education, Research, and Development. Sizemore will speak to teachers from local schools and to students and faculty of the School of Education.

The final event of the day will be a lecture given by Dr. Ernest L. Boyer. Boyer is "President of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, Senior Fellow of the Woodrow Wilson School, Princeton University and Education Columnist for The London Times." In 1987, he was chosen by his colleagues to be the Man of the Year in Higher Education.

"The Future of Education" will continue on Wednesday, beginning with a lecture by Dr. Hoke L. Smith, President of Towson State University. Smith is on the Board of Directors of both the American Council on Education and the American Association of State Colleges and Universities.

At 1:30 p.m., there will be a public panel discussion, with Dr. Blackwell, Dr. Boyer, Dr. McKibbin, Dr. Sizemore and Dr. Smith as the panelists. Dr. Gordon K. Davies will be the moderator. Dr. Davies has been Director of the Council of Higher Education for Virginia since 1977. This panel discussion will conclude the two day symposium, "The Future of Education."

The second part of the symposium series is entitled "Educating for the Future," which will be held on February 6th, 8th, and 9th. Art Buchwald will address the public on February 6th. Dr. Rhoda M. Dorsey will give an address on the 8th. On the 9th, there will be an address by the Honorable A. Leon Higginbotham, Jr.

The final part of the symposium series, on March 15th, will be a Longwood Panel consisting of "The Academic Vice President," one faculty member from each of the three schools and two students. This panel will be moderated by Edwin Newman, of NBC News.

This informative symposium series is just one of the many events planned which will make this year an interesting one. Be sure to set aside time to hear these noted speakers, as an opportunity to increase your knowledge outside the classroom setting.

NOTE — Much of this information was derived from the Longwood booklet, "Anniversary Activities."

DUKAKIS

The boons have been considerable: since beginning his second term in 1982, after a four-year absence from the governor's office and a stint teaching at Harvard, Dukakis has raised student aid, faculty salaries and the budgets of other programs on public campuses to promote his high tech agenda for the state's economy.

As the federal government reduced aid to students, the Dukakis administration picked up the slack: since 1983 the state's scholarship fund, for example, jumped from $19 million to $84 million.

Earlier in 1988, moreover, Dukakis signed legislation to initiate more than $400 million in massive construction, maintenance and repair projects on several campuses, a bill that was a top priority for education officials.

"I think we were treated reasonably fairly," said Franklyn Jenifer, chancellor of the Board of Regents of Higher Education.

Yet Massachusetts students and administrators maintain they're frustrated by what they see as a bias toward private institutions, by scandals that pushed several campus presidents out of jobs and by Dukakis's failure to maintain adequate operations budgets for state colleges.

Jenifer, for one, said operating budget cuts have almost paralyzed the state higher education system.

Public campuses will receive $638 million this year, $21.3 million less than last year. Current operating budgets are "not conducive to maintaining programs," Jenifer said.

Fitchberg State President Vincent Mara called the reductions the most severe blow to public institutions since the state's fiscal crisis during Dukakis's first term in 1975.

Several schools say they'll accept fewer students this year because of financial woes. To save money, they'll cut back on teaching assistants, freeze faculty hiring and tap maintenance funds to try to provide the same level of services as last year.

The University of Massachusetts at Amherst, the state's flagship public university with more than 20,000 undergraduates, is charging students a special one-time $230 fee to raise emergency cash.

Students throughout the state public system face an 8.5 percent tuition hike in the coming year and a substantial increase in dormitory fees.

Many University of Lowell students will receive instruction from computers, instead of faculty members, in order to cut costs. Those students will have to pay a $100 fee to use computer labs.

"Without the faculty we have to do something," said President William T. Hogan.

It could get worse. State campus budgets, Dukakis said during a March hearing on college savings bonds, "cannot be expected to continue to grow at anything like the rate they have over the past few years."

Some students, however, are upset most by Dukakis's support of a measure that would allow schools to keep excess revenues generated by tuition hikes. The "tuition

New freshman rush policy

By CHET AHN

Why can't Freshmen Rush? Well, for the first time here at Longwood, freshman students are not allowed to rush or even atend Rush parties until the spring semester. Even so, they are not allowed to Rush without at least a 2.0 GPA, so, Rush during this semester will only be opened to transfers and upperclassmen.

The reason for this new policy is to abolish the so called "Hold-Over" Pledges. That is, students who pledged for a fraternity or sorority but failed to get initiated because they did not obtain a 2.0 GPA, so, now they would have to wait another semester until they achieve grades. In addition, this policy is to help freshmen students adapt to college life without having the pressures of both pledging and trying to survive their first semester in college.

This new freshmen policy was passed by both Panhellenic and Interfraternity Councils. There might be some debate on this policy, but this debate was not persuasive enough to prevent the Longwood Board of Visitors from approving and passing this policy.

According to Charlie Warner, the Greek Affairs Coordinator, he is very optimistic and thinks that this new policy will have an overall positive effect upon the Greek system here at Longwood. However, he also cautions this new idea because this is the first time this policy is being implemented. Furthermore, for the first time, all male potential prospectives must sign up to attend Rush parties. As part of the new policy, every prospective will have their names and grades checked in order for them to Rush.

Commentary Welcome Back

By BRIAN KAVA

The brothers of Pi Kappa Phi would like to welcome everyone back for another school year. We had a successful year last year, and hope for continued success. We hope that your year will be just as successful. We are making a few changes in our fraternity. One of them is working harder on outside activities, especially with community services.

Our social blasts are doing fine, but that's not what being greek is all about. Being greek means getting involved with school activities, as well as with community and outside projects.

Being greek is not for everyone. Really be sure its for you. Take the time to choose the Fraternity or Sorority that is for you. And remember this, Pi Kappa Phi is more than just a Fraternity!

ASA rumors prove false

By CHET AHN

The Alpha Sigma Alpha Sorority is still alive and going strong according to Charlie Warner, the Greek Affairs Coordinator. This past summer, rumors began surfacing that this particular sorority had gone bankrupt and had folded. Another rumor surfaced that the Sigma Kappas had brought and taken over Alpha Sigma Alpha. Be assured, all these rumors are false.

Who and where these rumors started are still a mystery. Hanzel, President of ASA, these rumors began over the summer, and quickly began to spread nationwide. After contacting her nationals, they reassured her that there was no truth to these rumors. The Alpha Sigma Alpha Sorority is financially stable and continuing to function on a national level.

So, be aware that the Alpha Chapter of the Alpha Sigma Alpha Sorority, as well as their other chapters, are still going strong and retention" plan, student leaders say, encourages colleges to raise their prices.

"We all think he's not sensitive enough,' said Michael Ferrigno, director of the State Student Association of Massachusetts. "It pains us. This policy, we believe, is really a Republican policy."

And Vincent McGrath, president of the State College Faculty Association and a Salam State College professor, said tuition increases are often determined by what private colleges charge, even though private schools "can't keep their own costs down."

McGrath also thinks Dukakis tends to bow to the traditional dominance of private colleges in Massachusetts.

"We aren't California, we're not Texas and we're not Michigan," Dukakis said during a 1986 Boston Globe interview. "We do happen to have some of the finest (private) institutions in the world. And I don't think it makes sense for us to duplicate that (by building up public colleges)."

The remark infuriated many educators and students. Stanley Rosenberg, a Democratic state representative from Amherst, said the UMass community still feels betrayed.

"The governor has clearly done and said things over time which have given rise to concern and annoyance among people in western Massuchesetts,' Rosenberg said.

Yet, he quickly added, the Dukakis terms have been "a good time" for UMass, noting that $141 million of the recently signed capital improvements bill will go to the Amherst campus alone.

Rosenberg credits Dukakis with saving the multi-million dollar capital outlay proposal from a legislature that had doomed it.

But in a letter circulated to fellow educators and published in the Chronicle of Higher Education earlier this year, Wesleyan University Prof. Robert Wood, a long-term Dukakis foe, credits the Massachusetts legislature alone with providing real support for higher education in the Bay State.

And critics, including the Bush campaign, have noted a certain "sleaze factor" on the state's public campuses.

While former Dukakis education advisor Gerard Indelicato was sentenced in July to 30 months in prison for fraud, two Westfield State College presidents have fallen to scandals in the last three years.

Administrators, moreover, think Dukakis will interfere in campus affairs if he feels his authority is threatened.

For example, they say Dukakis forcibly reshuffled the state Board of Regents in retaliation for naming Amherst Rep. James Collins, who he didn't like, as head of the public education system. The realigned board then fired Collins and hired Jenifer, a Dukakis loyalist.

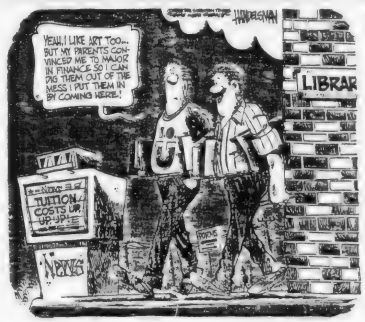
Politics and the Environment

The stakes for the environment are high this year because the man who will be elected President will have to address the issues of a very sick Earth.

Ocean dumping, acid rain, air pollution, toxic waste, and the many other forms of pollution contribute to the spoiling of much of this planet on the ground while contributing to the ever present greenhouse effect that continues to warm our planet ever so slowly.

What are the candidates saying? Michael Dukakis says that his environmental record stands in sharp contrast to the past eight years of the Reagan Administration and yet serves as Governor of a state with one of the filthiest waterways in the country: Boston Harbor.



George Bush who visited the Harbor last week reaffirmed his stance on the environment as one who has a long history of supporting the environmental cause. It is too easy to simply say that if the Reagan Administration handled environmental issues one way George Bush will do the same. George Bush the President will act differently from George Bush the Vice-President just as Truman from Roosevelt and Johnson from Kennedy.

However, both candidates need to address this issue in a more complete manner. Politicians steer away from the environment because they know that to clean it up will be expensive, complicated, and involve much sacrifice.

The theme they should endorse is one of waste reduction as a basis for a policy. This would involve more recycling and conservationist activities such as developing cleaner energy sources. Also, they need to concentrate on stopping the pollution at its source with sound regulatory policies that are both practical and cost efficient.

So, while George Bush works towards specific environmental policies to better the United States if elected, Michael Dukakis says that his record of doing nothing stands in sharp contrast of President Reagan's policy of doing virtually nothing. You decide.

COMMENTARY

Living in a material world

By P.J. WERNER

It is quite evident that we are living in a material world. Amongst a college student's many treasures is the one thing that he or she may not be able to live without. No, it's not the teddy bear that's lived through sticky jelly doughnuts and several spins in the Kenmoor washer, nor is it the old, torn and faded jeans that are finally just right for wearing. I'm speaking of that one piece of equipment that can cause a student to grin or bring a sneer to an REC's face. Yes, I'm talking about the every popular stereo. Most students have one, be it large or small. But why?

Music seems to play an important part in keeping one's sanity. After class, one may like to blow off steam by popping a favorite CD or tape into their stereo and cranking the sucker till the floor vibrates. This has been known to be a great tension reliever. However I must mention that it has been, on occasion, a tension increaser, in such instances where a neighbor has been blown out of bed at 9:30 a.m. or a roommate's phone conversation drowned out to the tune of Mony Mony.

I guess in an effort to try to understand why stereos are so important to most college students, we must look at the basic purpose of a stereo.

Most people would think a stereo is used to play the types of music that one wants to listen to. However, on a college campus, one must take that definition a step further. For some unknown reason the volume knob is quite popular and thus, used frequently. Therefore you

Let's Check The Record

This commentary is reprinted because a rather significant portion was erroneously omitted last week.

By MICHAEL WHITFORD

I am sure that everyone knows what is happening on November 8, 1988. On that Tuesday the eligible citizens of the United States will choose the forty-first president of our nation.

We have come to a crossroads in our history. For eight years we have been involved in a passionate romance with President Ronald Reagan. President Reagan has given us a reason to be proud of America. The Reagan-Bush administration has bolstered our defences, re-animated our staynant economy, and provide good jobs at good wages to the American people.

Now, after eight years of romance what does our nation need? To quote Alexander Haig, "Our nation needs safe sex." By Safe Sex I mean that we do not want to elect an unknown quantity to the highest office in the land. We should not turn our backs on the progress we have made since 1980. Our choice for President should be the man who will continue the policies of the Reagan-Bush years.

Let's look for a moment at Governor Michael Dukakis. He may be competent, as he claims. But I have known many competent idiots.

Take for instance the "Massachusetts Miracle". The "Miracle" was the economic rebirth of a state that had fallen upon hard times. Michael Dukakis would have the American people believe that he brought about this fabulous Phoenix trick; but look closer. You will discover that the companies that moved to Massachusetts and invigorated the economy of the state are all defense research and development companies. These companies have money to open shop in Massachusetts because of something Michael Dukakis had nothing to do with, the Reagan-Bush defence build up.

Now, upon even closer examination, these companies aren't building tanks, jeeps, guns, or ships. These companies are testing lasers, particle beams, and satellite defense systems.

To this bit of information add the fact that Governor Dekakis wants to cut most (if not all) of the money going to testing lasers, particle beans, and satillite defense. Does this make sense to you?

The man wants to get rid of the very programs that caused his state to prosper economically. Think about it. Is that a smart thing to do? If it is, does cutting your throat with a razor sound just as smart? Any competent individual can cut his/her throat; but only a smart person would know that cutting your throat is not a wise thing.

Let us talk some more about defence. Governor Dukakis wants to scrap the SDI system (Strategic Defence Initiative); and replace it with his own CDI (Conventional Defence Initiative). This says something about Governor Dukakis' aptitude for foreign policy.

Do the words: first-strike Capability and Nuclear Blackmail mean anything to you all? First-strike Capability is, put very simply, the ability of a Nuclear Superpower to destroy a high percentage of another nation's ICBMs (Intercontinental Ballistic Missile) before the other nation can retaliate. If your nation as a superior First-strike Capability, your nation can engage in Nuclear Blackmail.

Nuclear Blackmail is difficult to explain so let me give you an example. The United States lost its First-strike Superiority over the Soviet Union around 1977. In 1979 the Soviet Union decided to invade Afganistan. President Jimmy Carter warned the Soviets that a war in Afganistan may provoke the U.S. to intervene in the region. Intervention may include use of nuclear weapons.

The Soviets knew that they, and not the U.S., had a superior first-strike capability. This act let them know that if Carter had decided to use nuclear weapons; they (the USSR) would have been able to destroy most of the U.S. ICBMs before they could be used. From this the Soviets concluded that Carter was bluffing. The Soviets called our bluff. We lost.

Now, to get back to Governor Dukakis. He would like to get rid of SDI. The only chance we have to truly negate, or weaken, the Soviet First-strike Capability. Conventional weapons are no substitute for SDI. Governor Dukakis could put us in a situation where we say, "Hey we have 1000 tanks on your border; if you don't do what we want we'll invade." The Russian reply could easily be, "So what. Our one bomb can destroy your thousand tanks in a minute." Who would win in that senario?

As far as our nation's defence is concerned there is no must not only play your music loud, you must play it loud enough to be heard over your neighbor, who is doing the same thing (and so on . . . and so on...).

Most stereos can broadcast at a fairly loud, yet tolerable volume level. Obviously some are louder than others, but for the most part they all range from loud to louder. There are of course, exceptions.

Every year, a select few decide to engage in "stereo wars." To these music maniacs it's not enough to buy a moderately priced, compact stereo. Instead, tactics such as "watts per channel," "feature comparisons" and "brand name dropping" flood their game plan. However, the final test is not who has "Cerwin-Vega", "Yamaha" or "Denon." It's who can entertain their entire floor as well as send the hall shaking to earthquake proportions.

A classic example is a case in which "Student W" had a "snowstorm" in his room when his ceiling tiles began to flake and fall. This happened when the volume level was set on four, and the set of 85-pound speakers cranked out a booming rendition of "Dumb Girls" by the Fat Boys. When one needs a large moving truck just to carry a stereo, is it really worth it? Sure the stereo could broadcast halfway across campus . . . but what good is it when you become half deaf and your fillings shake loose?

Sure we all have favorite things that mean a great deal to us. Stereos seem to fall into that category, because music is hard to live without. Could we live without stereos? If the 24 hour quiet hours ever became strictly enforced, we just might get the chance to find out. Until then, follow the advice of singer, Eric Carmen and, "turn the radio up for that sweet sound."

STUDY: Kids are poorer

(CPS) — Young people today are the most — but not the best — educated in history, and are taking longer to become self-supporting adults than earlier generations, a new government report asserted.

Americans in their 20s are living at home longer, delaying marriage, and living on declining salaries, the U.S. Dept. of Education found in its "Youth Indicators 1988" paper released August 22.

"One of the questions that leaps out at me is: How does a kid in America know when he's grown-up? The transition from childhood to adulthood is taking longer than it used to, and it has more pitfalls," project director Emily Wurtz said.

"Youth Indicators 1988," compiled from government data dating back to 1950, found that almost 54 percent of the nation's 18-to-24-year-olds are living with their parents, up from 43 percent in 1960.

"American young people seem to be staying younger longer," said Assistant Education Secretary Chester Finn. "They seem to become autonomous, self-supporting individuals at a slower rate than was once the case."

But Matt Kissane, a 22-year-old Columbia College senior who lives with his parents near Chicago, says economics play a greater role than immaturity.

"I have to live at home for economic reasons. I work. I pay my own tuition. I pay for my own transportation. Growing up doesn't have anything to do with it. I'm not dependent on my parents. I am dependent on their house."

The report also discovered that the median annual income for men age 20 to 24, after adjusting for inflation, fell from $18,792 in 1970 to $14,152 in 1985.

"Overall, the tendency in the country has been to assume that when you graduate from high school, you're on your own, you're headed for a life atleast as good as your parents or maybe better," said Samuel Halperin of the William T. Grant Foundation, which has conducted research on the status of youth.

"That just isn't true anymore... It's a lot harder for young people to be successful in the world and raise a family."

The median age of women to enter their first marriage climbed from 20.3 years in 1950 to 22.8 years in 1985.

"Kids are becoming adults later and having sex sooner, getting married older and getting pregnant younger," said Wurtz.

Alcohol and some drug use are down, according to the report, but cocaine use has increased among high school seniors. Suicides are up, while deaths by accidents and homicide are declining.

Wurtz noted such problems are self-inflicted.

"Medicine has brought disease increasingly under control. Polio, for instance, has disappeared. For anyone who lived through the 1950s, that's enough to bring tears to your eyes. But what do today's kids suffer from? Sexually transmitted disease, drug abuse, suicide; in other words, the things they are suffering from are behavioral, not inflicted by the outside world."

The precentage of college graduates among Americans age 25 to 29 increased from 7.7 percent in 1950 to 22.4 percent in 1986. The 1986 total of those with some college, 44 percent, is greater than the percentage with only a high school education, 42, percent, for the first time in American history.

But Finn said falling standardized test scores, plus the last-place ranking of U.S. students in recent international science and math tests, are reason for concern.

"I have to say that while a lot more kids are getting more education in the numbers of years of schooling, they don't know very much," he said. "They make me worry about the future of a country that's raising up people with a number of years in school but that don't know anything."

But American youth are doing better than many believe, Finn said. "Overall, it's not as gloomy as most people believe. The younger generation is not going to the dogs... but it's a very mixed kennel."

Monticello Trio will perform at Longwood

The Monticello Trip, from the University of Virginia, will give the first concert in this year's Chamber Music Series at Longwood College.

The concert is scheduled for Monday evening, Sept. 19, at 8 o'clock in Wygal Recital Hall and is open to the public free of charge.

The program will feature a Haydn trio, the Beethoven "Archduke" trio, and the Ravel trio.

Members of the Monticello Trio are Mark Rush, violin; Mathias Wexler, cello; and Tannis Gibson, piano. They are musicians-in-residence at the University of Virginia and have performed throughout the nation and on national public radio.

The ensemble has received grants from the National Endowment for the Arts and the Virginia Commission for the Arts. For the summer of 1988, the Trio was chosen to be ensemble-in-residence at the Banff Centre for the Arts.

Funding for their concert is provided by the Longwood Arts Council and with a matching grant from the Virginia Commission for the Arts.

The other five concerts in the 1988-89 Chamber Music Series will feature:

The Richmond Camerata (Oct. 10), a flute, cello, and piano trio whose program will include George Crumb's intriguing work, "Voice of the Whale;"

Richmond Renaissance Singers (Nov. 21), an ensemble of nine professional vocalists who will present their annual Advent-Christmas concert;

Western Brass Quintet (Jan. 23), who have performed throughout the U.S. and Canada and toured the People's Republic of China last fall;

Ciompi String Quartet (Feb. 20), from Duke University, one of the nation's finest chamber music ensembles; and Phyllis Bryn-Julson, soprano (April 3), who has received international acclaim performing both the traditional and contemporary repertoires.

The Chamber Music Series is sponsored by Longwood's Department of Visual and Performing Arts.

Little Shop of Horrors to open tomorrow night

For Fall 1988, Daedalus Productions will present a new national tour of LITTLE SHOP OF HORRORS. This New York Theatre smash, based on the popular B-movie of the same name, has been called the most successful off-Broadway musical since GODSPELL, running five years, and grossing over 14 million dollars. Since winning all the major critic's awards for Best Musical, LITTLE SHOP OF HORRORS and its leafy star, a giant, man-eating plant affectionately named Audrey II, have made their way onto the stages of every major city in the world. In 1987, Audrey II made her comeback to the silver screen, co-starring along with Rick Moranis and Steve Martin in the Hollywood version of her outrageous hit.

It was 1960, when Roger Corman, "King of the B Movies", introduced Audrey II to American Drive-ins and theatre balconies in the film LITTLE SHOP OF HORRORS. Little did anyone know that this 6-reeler, made for under $100,000, and shot in two days, would become a classic cult spoof of the B-Film/Horror genre. LITTLE SHOP OF HORRORS, which ironically introduced a young Jack Nicholson to Hollywood (23 years old and thirty seconds of dialogue), was touted by critics as "the worst film ever made." Now a standard late night T.V. feature and video store rental, the man-eating plant with the big appetite is internationally known for her first cinema words: "FEED ME".

Despite the cult-fame of the movie, Audrey II would have to wait until 1982 for her debut as a Broadway musical star. With the aid of Howard Ashman, the author and director of the original New York production, and Alan Mencken, who wrote the score, Audrey II's story was transformed into an early 60's musical complete with street-urchin back-up singers, bouffant wigs, and a cunning new ending to give fresh blood to this hip morality tale. Now, Audrey II not only talks, she sings and dances as she conquers the world, one plant-lover at a time.

LITTLE SHOP OF HORRORS takes place on Skid Row in the early 60's. This gleefully gruesome tale follows the life of Seymour Krelborne, a poor-schmoe florist's assistant who allows his itch for fame and fortune to seduce him into playing nursemaid to a man-eating plant from outer space. A clever twist on the Faust legend, Seymour's popularity grows as does his plant, Audrey II. And the bigger she gets, the bigger her appetite for human blood.

What will Seymour serve to quiet the cries of "FEED ME"? Will Audrey II devour both him and his girl? Will the audience get out alive? The wild spiralling insanity which resolves these dilemmas is the ultimate kick of "LITTLE SHOP".

Heading up the talented young cast of this new Daedalus tour is actor Todd Sherry as Seymour Krelborne and Mary O'Neill as Audrey, the damsel in distress. Mr. Sherry, who hails from Meadville, Pennsylvania, has been featured in numerous leading roles of the American musical Theatre repertoire, including BLACK ALICE, in which he made his off-Broadway debut. This is Todd's second portrayal of Seymour, having performed the role in Florida last summer. Mary O'Neill, a native New Yorker, is both Model and Actress with professional experience ranging from Radio and Cabaret, to Children's and Regional Theatre productions.

Not to be overlooked is the talented duo that will bring Audrey II to life: actor/singer Michael Wooley and puppeteer Kevin Kiley. Michael, who was recently seen in two regional productions of DREAMGIRLS and performed in Daedalus' hit tour of PURLIE last season. A rising talent in the world of New York Cabaret, Michael is also known for his unique song stylings and piano skills. Puppeteer Kevin Kiley has worked steadily in the theatre as Actor, Pianist, and scene Designer – experience which has broadened his abilities as a master puppeteer. Mr. Kiley has his own puppet production company and has also performed throughout the Northeast with various puppet troupes.

A Terrible Calamity

By JENNIFER A. MEELER

A terrible calamity has befallen Longwood College; effecting both the student body and the faculty. This dreaded offender lingers everywhere and will let no one escape its fearful grasp. What is this horrible plague? — a scaly monster from the depths of the Falls? — the reincarnated form of Elvis Presley? — No, it is — the Common Cold.

Yes, the common cold has assaulted our prestigious institution full force as a result of recent wet and chilly weather. What can be done to avoid this fearful curse from the very gates of Hell?

For one thing, try to avoid anyone that sounds as if he is talking through a pillow! Also, dress appropriately for the weather and be sure that your diet contains all the necessary nutrients. Other than these tips, there is not much else one can do to prevent catching a cold.

But what if you have already felt the clammy hands of "the cold" upon you? What then? Well, the following suggestions may help you survive your illness:

1) Drink 8 to 10 glasses of liquid a day (alcoholic liquids don't count)

2) Get plenty of sleep (an excess of 4 hours!)

3) Take aspirin or other cold remedies as directed on the package.

NOTE: Should symptoms continue more than 7 to 10 days, or if symptoms are accompanied by a high temperature, seek the assistance of the Student Health Services, Graham Building.

Students learn about 'Old Age' on trip

2nd in a Series of 3

By Tana Knott

Students from Buckingham and Nottoway participating in the Longwood College Summer Institute for Gifted and Talented went on a field trip last Wednesday. They traveled to a remote section of Buckingham County, near the Appomattox-Buckingham State Forest, to the Morris Farm, which is located at a junction of the Appomattox River and Holliday Creek.

In all, they probably traveled thirty miles; but, the trip took them back some ten thousand years. The students visited Archeological Site 44 BK212. Now, to the casual observer that might not sound impressive; however, the ninety students participating in the field trip couldn't help but be impressed — impressed with the reality of an archeological dig, and with the realization of how much history is revealed within a few inches of the earth's soil.

Tour guide for this field trip into the past was Dr. Jim Jordan, Director of Longwood College Archeology Field School. Jordan, with the same acuteness that his students use in troweling dirt in their 5 by 5 grid sections, uncovered the past, exposing the lives of Indians that roamed in the area. According to Jordan, the Morris Site evidences Indians from 7,000 years ago who were "hunters and gatherers," and "farmers" from 3,000 years ago. The farmers actually made their home in the area while the hunters and gatherers were a very mobile people.

Before the young students were even aware of what was happening, they were learning about the basics of archeology and anthropology. They watched as Jordan loaded up the arms of one of their classmates with Indian artifacts. As he explained the usage of each item and placed them in the young girl's arms, the weight began drawing her body to a slumping position, almost aging her while Jordan described how sleeping on the ground caused chronic arthritis and rheumatism; how her teeth would be destroyed by bits of sand and stone from grinding her food in stone from grinding her food in stone bowls, eventually causing the tooth's pulp to be exposed, setting her up for infection and even starvation.

"By the time she was 21, it was all down hill, by 24, she was an old woman," said Jordan to the moaning and wincing audience.

After their introductory lecture, the students were taken out into the adjacent field where they learned how a site is marked for identification and measurement, how the items that are found are identified and then catalogued, and possible hints of finding such sites. Although, Jordan was quick to point out that most sites are not found by archeologists, instead they are discovered by farmers, wood cutters, and others who come in contact with the land.

When students questioned Jordan as to what had happened to the Indians that lived on the site, Jordan explained that they had found pieces of clay pipe. "By measuring the size of the hole in the pipe we could determine that they were made in England." The pipes were possibly traded to the Indians who then brought them to the settlement, since the colonists did not pass through the area until 1702.

They were also getting blankets from the colonists which had been brought from England, and along with the blankets they were getting diseases like measles," said Jordan as he told how the blankets were often from hospitals in England. The students sympathetically listened as Jordan explained that the 'white man' may not have intentionally killed the Indian, as in battle: but, instead he destroyed them in other unintentional ways.

During the last four weeks, the twenty-seven students enrolled in the Archeological Field School have uncovered 500 links to the past. Jordan explained that all artifacts in such a dig belong to the landowner; however, in the last few years that the Field School has been working at the Morris Site, the family has donated the "finds" to the Field School.

During archeological dig, according to Jordan, only forty percent of a site can be excavated, sixty percent is reserved for future archeologists. All information recorded and catalogued is sent to the Virginia Research Center of Archeology which is headquartered in Yorktown.

When the young students boarded their buses they may have left the site behind in a cloud of swirling dust, but their trip into the past will help them as they travel into the future.

CURRY

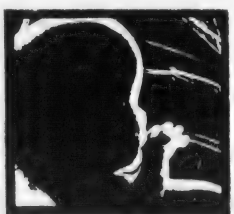
the Peabody Education Fund. This very important fund consisted of 3.5 million dollars donated by American businessman and philanthropist, George Peabody. The sole purpose of this fund was to advance education in the south. Dr. Curry became known as a champion of education through his efforts to use this fund to educate the children of the south.

The managing of the Peabody Education Fund was extremely important, for the civil war had left its people too poor to be taxed for educational purposes. According to Dr. Curry "there were in the ex-confederate states two million children and youth within the years of instruction. In the effort to organize and put in successful operation, a new and untried system of . . . schools adequate to the needs of the entire population, the southern states, were under a weight of debt beyond their ability in their impoverished condition to pay. To add the expense of . . . education to this crushing weight was in their financial condition a perplexing and almost impossible task." Dr. Curry further believed that "to impose voluntary, heavy burdens on scant property which survived the demoralization of the war, so as to educate gratuitously their children. . . was a task of patriotism, of humanity, civic duty which no people ever encountered." Dr. Curry also administered a similar fund called the Slater Fund, which was used solely for the education of the negro for twelve years.

According to Burrell, Dr. Curry ". . . had more to do with the organization of the common school system of the south than any other man" (315). "While agent for these two funds, Dr. Curry was twice sent to represent his country at a foreign court; first as Minister of Plenipotentiary to Spain by appointment of President Cleveland, and afterwards as representative at the coronation of the Spanish King" (315).

Instrumental in founding the George Peabody College, (set-up ". . . for the special purpose of training teachers. . .") Dr. Curry also advocated establishing these institutions in other southern states (Bradshaw 482).

"Dr. Curry's recommendation aroused the imagination of some in Farmville, notably Dr. W. W. H. Thackston, then mayor, and Rev. James Nelson, then pastor of the Baptist Church" (Bradshaw 482).



"It was under Dr. Curry's leadership that the establishment of State Normal Schools was inaugurated in the South. It was he who originally drafted the bill for the Virginia School at Farmville (now Longwood). He was elected the first President of its Board of Trustees" (Burrell 315).

As stated last week's Gallery, "to Dr. W. H. Ruffner, and to J. L. M. Curry, undoubtedly belongs the credit for the Normal School idea in Virginia . . ." (Burrell 306).

Dr. Curry should be remembered for his untiring work to educate the children of the south. He was a statesman and a leader in educational matters at all levels. He organized what we know as Longwood more than one hundred years ago and remained committed to it until his death some nineteen years later in 1903.

Conner sweeps series

By STEVE EVANS

In San Diego last week, Dennis Conner won his third America's Cup. After defeating away New Zealand 2-0, the final decision of that series will go to the courtroom once again.

Michael Fay, the owner of New Zealand monohull, claims that the America's Cup rules forbids a match between Conner's much faster 60-foot catamaran and Fay's 132-foot monohull.

Fay accused Conner of sailing his stars and stripes well below its top speed, to avoid Fay's statement that a race between catamaran and the monohull is illegal and a mismatch under the cup rules.

Regardless, Conner the first American to lose and regain the cup, replied that if Fay wins a couple of cups, he then can tell Conner how to do it.

The final decision on the race, with the first catamaran competing for the cup and a bitter rival, will be decided later.

Intramural "88"

The '88 Fall Intramural Season started off well this semester. Participation is increasing as larger team sports begin.

Volleyball is proving to be popular in both weekly and weekend events. The weekend 2-on-2 tournament consisted of seventeen teams. The weekly tournament almost doubles that with 33 team entries. The next weekend volleyball tournament ("outdoor", co-ed) will begin Sept. 24. Entries are due Sept. 22.

Men's flag football also had a large number of entries. There are 21 teams in all, 11 in the 'A' league, 10 in the 'B' league.

Women's bowling also has a strong turnout, with a total of 17 teams.

Coming up soon will be 3-on-3 basketball, women's flag football and men's bowling. Look for more info. around campus or stop by the Intramural Office in Iler if you have any questions.

Jones repeats as Player of Week

Sophomore forward Ray Jones (Smith's Parrish, Bermuda), who scored six goals in two Longwood soccer victories last weekend, has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period September 4-11. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

Jones, a first team All-American last season, is a repeat choice as Player of the Week. He tallied three goals in the Lancers' 4-1 win over North Carolina Wesleyan Saturday and came back with three goals and two assists Sunday in an 8-1 win over Atlantic Christian.

"Ray had an awesome first half against Wesleyan," said Lancer coach Rich Posipanko. "They (N.C. Wesleyan) have a first class facility and I think the atmosphere got him charged up. Their coach was raving about Jones' performance. Wesleyan double—teamed him and he still burned them."

With his weekend showing, Jones has collected seven goals and four assists this season. He tied second place career goal scorer Tim Brennan, who totaled 36 goals in four years. Jones has 36 goals in a little over a season. The sophomore has now scored three or more goals six times in his career.

Jones has a record 29 goals and a team high 10 assists last season while claiming Most Valuable Player honors for the Lancers. He helped Longwood to a 14-4-1 record and a national ranking of 13th in Division II. He also had a record five goals in one game.

Longwood was ranked 12th in a preseason ISAA-Gatorade Division II poll.

Lady Lancers finish fourth in Invitational

Longwood's reign as champ of its own women's golf invitational came to an end Sunday when James Madison won first place in the 12th Longwood Invitational Tournament at Longwood Golf Course.

With a veteran team JMU put together rounds of 306-315-316 Friday, Saturday and Sunday for a 937, 17 strokes better than second place North Carolina Wilmington. Methodist College was third at 957 while Longwood was fourth at 965 (See complete results on back).

While Longwood coach Barbara Smith would like to have seen her squad win its third straight title, the veteran mentor was pleased with the performance of her young team.

"Considering it was our first tournament, I was pleased," said Dr. Smith. "I expect we'll improve with each tournament. Of the top four teams in the invitational, we probably had the most inexperience. I was especially pleased with Ashley's play," she said referring to junior Ashley Warren (Pinehurst, NC).

The most experienced of Longwood golfer, Warren rebounded from a slow start to tie for fourth place in the individual standings. She finished with an 82-76-236. After shooting a 44 on the front nine Friday, she came back with a 38 on the back and played steady golf the rest of the way. Her 236 was a career best for 54 holes and her final round 76 was also a top mark.

Freshman Daphne Sole (Cape, South Africa) also placed in the top 10 with a 74-76-89-239 for eighth place. Sole, the tournament leader after two rounds, was unable to get her game going Sunday.

Also scoring for Longwood's top five were freshmen Ami Schonauer (York, PA) 78-80-82-241 (tied for 11th), Angie Monro (Sherwood Park, Alberta, Canada) 83-87-79-249 and senior Kim Poirier (Wakefield, MA) 85-89-96-270.

Playing as individuals for the Lady Lancers were freshmen Sherry Evans (Jonesville) 83-87-94-264, Beth Plecker (Ellicott City, MD) 86-89-89-264 and Laura Lyons (Boardman, OH) 97-100-100-297.

Next up for Longwood is the Lady Tar Heel Invitational at the University of North Carolina's Finley Golf Course in Chapel Hill, N.C. Friday through Sunday.

Graf makes history

By STEVE EVANS

After Steffi Graf had won the Australian, French, and U.S. opens also along with Wimbledon, everyone asked her how it feels to win four major tournaments in one year. Her reply was "I'm very glad to have the talk over about the Grand Slam." "It's a nice relief."

Graf, the world's No. 1 player joins (1970) as the only women in history to accomplish this feat.

In order for Graf to complete the slam, she had to overcome Gobriela Sabatini, the fifth seed of the tournament. With a thunderous forehand after forehand winner, she defeated Sabatini 6-3, 3-6, 6-1.

Now, on the men's side of the draw, the No. 1 ranking was at stake. Ivan Lendl currently No. 1 and Mats Wilander No. 2 battled in the finals in New York for over 4 1/2 hours. The longest match in U.S. open history.

Wilander, who won the French and the Australian opens was ousted early at Wimbledon, so a grand slam was impossible. On the other hand the No. 1 ranking of the world was at stake. Mats Wilander rose to the occassion, after being accused of not mentally capable to be No. 1 in the world.

Wilander ousted Lendl 6-4, 4-6, 6-3, 5-7, 6-4, in one of the best tennis matches ever played.

1988 is almost over, can Steffi Graf repeat her performance again and how long will Mats Wilander hold on to his new No. 1 ranking?

Field hockey team starts from scratch

By KACEY RAY

The best word to describe the Lady Lancer Field Hockey team during the 1988 season is young. The team does not have any seniors and seven varsity members from 1987 are missing, including Division Regional All-American Claye Conkwright and Division Academic All-American Traci Strickland. You would think that this season the team is rebuilding but Coach Sue Finnie says that "the team is not rebuilding but reloading." "We had goal setting and the team was talking about going undefeated."

"We've got to fill the holes with freshmen, and depth will be a problem especially on the frontline, says Finnie. "Fortunately, the frontline players are experienced enough that barring injury, the lack of depth should not hurt too much, concluded Finnie."

Finnie expects the mantle of team leadership to fall heavily on her junior tri-captains, Liz Annet, Diane Brown, and Laura Felch, all of Virginia Beach. The high scorers for the past two seasons Annet and Laura Goetz of Virginia Beach, return.

Junior Kim Howells of Horsham, PA, will stand in the goal cage for the third year. She was hampered by injuries in 1987, but she still posted five shutouts and a sparkling 1.05 goals-against average.

Sophomore Celeste Lloyd of Haddonfield, NJ, was a part-time starter during 1987. She is able to score from 30-40 yards out and did so twice last season. Lloyd and sophomore Judith Barnett of Charlottesville will be counted upon to shore up the defense.

A strong recruiting class is also expected to contribute. Newcomers Ellen Binswanger of Richmond, Lara Cini of Boothwyn, PA, Hollie Phelps of Virginia Beach, Carven Ports of Baltimore, MD, and Teri Riemondy of Falls Church, are expected to start.

The Field Hockey team is scheduled to play at William and Mary on September 14, 1988 and at the University of Richmond on September 15, 1988. The first home game is on Saturday, September 17, 1099 at 3:00 p.m. on Barlow Field.

Longwood clears big hurdle

Longwood's 12th ranked soccer team cleared its first big hurdle of the season Saturday with a 4-1 victory over North Carolina Wesleyan, the preseason number one rated Division III team in the country.

After an impressive weekend swing through North Carolina, the unbeaten Lancers will face three games this week. Longwood hosts Roanoke Wednesday at 3:30 and then plays Cal State (Pennsylvania) and Maryville in the Southside Virginia Doubleheader at Hampden-Sydney Saturday and Sunday.

Behind six goals from sophomore All-American Ray Jones (Smith's Parrish, Bermuda), Longwood handed North Carolina Wesleyan only its third home loss in four years Saturday 4-1 and blitzed out-manned Atlantic Christian 8-1 Sunday. Jones had three goals in each game and two assists against ACC.

Only Duke, North Carolina Greensboro and William & Mary have beaten the Bishops at home over the past three seasons, but Longwood was able to pull off the win as Jones got hot in the first half. The Lancer forward's three first half goals put Longwood up 3-1 at intermission and junior Mike Edge (Chester, England) added a fourth score in the second half.

Longwood out-shot N.C. Wesleyan 19-12 and got 10 saves from goalkeeper Steve Thompson (Dale City). Ed Regan (E. Brunswick, NJ), Bill Moore (Triangle) and Chris Helmus (Garden City, NY) had assists Saturday.

Sunday at North Carolina Wesleyan Jones added three more goals and two assists as Longwood battered Atlantic Christian 8-1. Also playing well for the Lancers were Kirk Rinehard (Yorktown) with a goal and two assists, Rich Yenere (Cherry Hill, NJ) and Helmus with a goal and an assist, Moore and Edge with a goal each, and John Barone (Neptune, NJ) and Regan with an assist each.

Longwood had 24 shots to four for the Bulldogs. Freshman keeper Chuck Loughry (Middletown, MD) went the distance in goal, allowing one score.

The Lancers will be favored to add three more victories this week. The Southside Virginia Doubleheader will match host Hampden-Sydney and Maryville at 12:00 Saturday while Longwood will play Cal State at 3:00. Sunday's schedule calls for the Tigers to play Cal State at 1:00 and the Lancers to face Maryville at 3:00.

Dr. John Atkinson Cunningham

Dr. John Atkinson Cunningham was born in Richmond, Virginia, the great-grandson of Peter Johnston, one of the original owners of Longwood House, located near the golf course. He was the only child and ". . . was very delicate in health and received most of his early education from a French governess" (Burrell 316). "Afterwards he attended private schools, but immediately before the breaking out of the . . . (Civil War), he was a pupil at New London Academy, Bedford County" (316).

"At the age of seventeen he entered the Confederate Army and served as a private to the end of that struggle. After the war he pursued his studies at the University of Virginia, where he graduated in chemistry, Latin, moral philosophy, natural philosophy, pure mathematics, and French. He afterwards received his Master's degree from the University of Nashville, and in 1896 Hampden-Sydney College gave him the honorary degree in LL.D." (316).

In 1874, Dr. Cunningham then began to teach at the University of Nashville, where he was married but soon lost his wife within the year. After leaving Tennessee around 1877 he moved to Richmond where he went into

Business Students In Command Of New System

By DENICE EIDSON

On Tuesday, September 13, at 1:25 p.m. Dr. Dorrill, the president of Longwood College, received the honors of cutting the ribbon to open the new computer center in Hiner. The micro computing installation lab attempts to make Longwood "one of the best small colleges exploiting knowledge of learning," says Doctor James Cross. Also present at the ribbon breaking ceremony was Dr. Jacques, Dean of the Business Department, who graced visitors with opening remarks about the benefits to the business department and the college as a whole. The ceremony provided students and faculty with an open house to "kick the tires and touch and feel the new equipment," quoted Dr. Cross. The nice turnout has everyone excited about the new micro computing lab.

An additional two labs were added to Coyner. This step provides technology to faculty and students as well. The computers are being used for teaching and learning. Hiner room B4 has provided twenty PC's, all networked to the control software library. A printer is shared between every two PC's. This instructional lab has a 386 technology. Longwood College has an objective to make use of the system "as easy as possible." The menu driver system will provide students who know nothing about computers to easily learn and work with the

ISP launches programs for the semester

By BURNELLA M. GILBERT

ISP, Longwood's International Studies Program, has launched this semester's series of programs with a "focus on Korea." Soeul Korea is the site of the summer, 1988 Olympics, which started on September 17, 1988. Korea is also a country which has grown to be a major economic power. There have already been two lectures in the series, one on September 13, which was entitled "A Survey of Korean History" and another on September 15, which was entitled "The Korean Economic Miracle." Both of these lectures were given by Dr. Daniel Metraux, Assistant Professor of History at Mary Baldwin College.

The next event sponsored by the International Studies Program will take place on September 21st. Dr. Allessandro Gentili of the British Institute of Florence will speak with interested students on the possibility of studying Italian in Florence. The next lecture in the Korean series is scheduled for September 26th in the Continuing Studies Conference Room from 7:30-8:30 p.m. This lecture is entitled "Korean Religion" and will be presented by Dr. John I. Goulde, chairman of the Department of Religion, Sweet Briar College.

On October 10, 1988 Mr. Mu Ping Pan, journalist from Beijing China will spend the day at Longwood College, ending his visit with dinner at the president's house. Dinner will be hosted by President and Mrs. Dorrill. October 11th will mark the beginning of "Focus on Korea" part II, with a lecture on Korean Education by Dr. Jung B. Ra, professor of Education at Longwood.

To conclude ISP's calendar of upcoming events, there will also be a lecture on Korea in November. Dr. Han K. Song, professor at Lynchburg College, will present "U.S. Korean Trade Relations." Also for those interested the Office of International Studies keeps an information file on study abroad programs in various countries.

All events sponsored by ISP will be announced in the Campus Bulletin and on posters and flyers placed on bulletin boards throughout the college. ISP will also be starting a monthly newsletter to keep faculty informed of upcoming events and developments. Any student who is interested in becoming a part of ISP or in obtaining information on study abroad programs is invited to come by the International Studies Office, located in 213 Grainger.

Mall Dedication: October 15th

By DENICE EIDSON

Both students and faculty are looking forward to Oktoberfest weekend as usual. Not only will there be the regular fun-filled events of the German event, but the college is celebrating its 150-year birthday as well. Longwood is using this weekend to dedicate the new Blackwell Plaza being built in the Grainger area.

"The mall will not be complete," says Rick Hurley, Vice President for Business and Legislative Affairs, "but we're going to go ahead and run the dedication since all the people are there. We'll take advantage of the ceremony of Oktoberfest." The mall is expected to be 90% complete at that point. This week the crews will be increased to speed up the process. At this point one can see the first signs of the walls going up. The mixed gravel and stone sidewalk, opposed to concrete, which will add a nice appearance, will be poured this week. The new addition will add a fountain, beautiful brick work, benches and trees, one of which will be dedicated to Dr. Healey and his wife.

The mall is not yet named; but over the course of the year the name, or "no name" will be discussed with the Board of Visitors. The "no name:" idea was suggested as a temporary situation by Dr. Healy. He feels the students should let the mall stand and have a social name emerge within the campus, thus a name will be dedicated at a later date.

The time capsule will be placed in the flower box presently standing. This is the most easily accessible location 50 years from now to get to. The date the capsule will be sealed and planted is still unknown. Possibly there will be a ceremony further into the school year for the tree dedication (the trees cannot be planted until frost), and the time capsule.

Longwood is very proud of its new addition. Help celebrate the occasion during Oktoberfest weekend (14th-16th).

business as a druggist. In that same year he accepted the job of principal at the Madison school in Richmond.

Ten years later he was called to succeed the outgoing President W.H. Ruffner at the Normal School of Farmville (now Longwood), thus becoming the school's second President. The new President was described as "a man of sound scholarship and varied experiences in teaching" (Holton 65).

The Cunningham administration carried on the work that the first President had started. According to Samuel Holten, former principal of the school, "the school was his life: to it he gave his time, his thought, and his power as a teacher. He was also an excellent administrator, and steady progress was made under his guidance" (Holten 66).

He served as Preaident until his death in 1898. "The ten years of Dr. Cunningham's Presidency . . . were years of steady and substantial growth. In his first year ninety-three students were enrolled in the Normal School Department; in his last there were two hundred and fifty" (Burrell 317).

Awards Presented

By CHET AHN

On Wednesday September 14, members of the H-SC and Longwood College Cadet Corps received individual awards for their accomplishments. The awards ceremony was attended by members of the faculty and student body. The president of Longwood College, Dr. Dorrill, was present to award R.O.T.C. scholarships to Chris Strack and Greg Bowman of Longwood. Dean Drew, of Hampden-Sydney College, awarded R.O.T.C. scholarships to H. Eckstein, D. Hopkins, W. Keenen, and S. Waskey of H-SC.

Lt. Colonel Sullivan, of University of Richmond was present to award the following: Distinguished Military Student Award to Tom Burgess, Chet Ahn, Rodney Butler, and Tim Hale: The Recondo Award to Tom Burgess, Jason Craft, Matt Goodrich, Jack Lynch, Phil Maas; The Honor Platoon Award to Tim Hale and James Taylor: The Enrollment Award to Rodney Butler.

In addition, Colonel Sullivan presented the merit of achievement award to Major Steven Nally and Staff Sgt. Shirley Davis for their outstanding duty performance while being assigned to Fort Bragg, N.C. this past summer.

The Rotunda would like to recognize all these individuals for their accomplishments.

included in the new system in Longwood's lab will continue to be built upon to provide additional opportunities and options. The menu includes Lotus, Basic and Graph in a box. Also included are Wordstar which gives an optional spell check. The Grammatic program is perfect for a term paper. Project Management can be made easier tutorials that will be taking place from time to time to orient one to the lab.

Any requests for software should be made to John Arehart, chair-person for the Academic users committee. This group screens and reviews all requests.

Longwood encourages students and faculty to take advantage of the newly provided opportunity. The micro computing lab is foreseen to be a big hit and is giving Longwood a chance to improve and grow.

Carver Ports Named Player Of The Week

In her first collegiate contest against William & Mary, freshman sweeper Carver Ports made her presence known with three defensive saves and 14 interception/tackles. Fro this achievement, Ports has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period September 11-18. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

"Carver is essential to this season's success," said coach Sue Finnie. "She is really a force in the sweeper position."

Ports' playing time was limited against Richmond Thursday because of a knee injury the freshman suffered in practice.

A product of Chesapeake High School in Pasadena, MD, Ports was coached by Ms. Jerry Raab. While at Chesapeake, she was named team MVP. She was also named to four all-star teams: Coaches' All-County (twice), the Capitol/Gazette's All-County squad, All-Metro, and the Arundel Sun's ASI-County team.

All students at Falwell's Liberty U tested for drugs

(CPS) – Liberty University, the Virginia college founded by television evangelist Jerry Falwell, will require all of its 6,000 students to submit urine samples for drug screening this fall.

Falwell, who serves as the school's chancellor, said school faculty and administrators – including himself – also will participate in the program.

"All of us have agreed to voluntary drug testing at random, and several of us at the top, myself included, will be drug testees," said Falwell, who also founded the Moral Majority conservative lobby.

Liberty's drug testing program is the broadest in the nation. No other school tests all students for drugs, although athletes who participate in National Collegiate Athletic Association events are required to undergo drug testing.

"I'm hopeful they (other colleges) will watch what we're doing and follow suit," Falwell said.

Central Florida Community College began random drug testing of all students who participate in extracurricular activities, including cheerleaders, musicians, actors and dancers.

"It's part of our responsibility," said Athletic Director Mike McGinnis, who oversees the program. "We want to make sure the students who represent the college are what they should be. We want the college represented properly."

Liberty students were notified this summer of the drug test requirement, and each has signed a waiver agreeing to submit a urine sample.

"We checked with thousands of young people and haven't received a complaint," Falwell said.

Tests will be given to about 200 students a week in a special bathroom designed to make it difficult to alter urine samples.

Students who test positive will be offered counseling and possibly a chance to redeem themselves. "While the school takes a very strong position against drugs," said Falwell spokesman Mark DeMoss, "we're not going to be unreasonable in our methods."

U.S. to cut clinic funds

(CPS) – Some campus health clinics may not be able to provide students with information about abortion soon, the U.S. Dept. of Health and Human Services effectively said last week.

HHS Secretary Otis R. Bowen announced he would now start invoking a policy, which was supposed to go into effect last March, that would stop paying federal funds to hospitals and clinics that distribute abortion information to patients.

Under the policy, such clinics "could well lose all their Title X funding," said HHS spokeswoman Lucy Eddinger at a press conference.

In response, campus health officials said losing the funding – which for some clinics amounts to $400,000 a year – would be "a disaster" and "devastating."

The American College Health Association refused to comment on the issue.

Planned Parenthood of America sued in March to keep HHS from invoking the rule, and federal courts in Colorado and Massachusetts eventually ruled clinics at least in those states would not have to abide by it.

The courts determined the rule violated the Family Planning Act and forced doctors to breach medical ethics by refusing to offer students certain kinds of medical help.

In July, however, a federal court in New York upheld the HHS ruling, and Reagan advisor Arthur Culvahouse recommended that HHS start using it everywhere but Colorado and Massachusetts.

The suggestion prompted Bowen's announcement the last week of August, Eddinger said.

Lottery Begins Today

After all the debates and headaches, Virginia takes a big step today launching its lame attempt at a lottery. Our lottery consists of a top prize of $5000 which will hopefully be raised to $10,000 soon. All tickets, sold at many businesses in Farmville, are all scratch (where no excitement is involved) and after all the hype of the new system dies down, the lottery will not be as big of a success as expected.

In order for a lottery to be truly successful it must have a game where one picks numbers and finds out the next day or week whether the picks were a success. So, if Virginia wants to gather enough revenues to make its lottery practical, it must go for the prizes that reach in the millions.

Let Longwood know what's on your mind. Write a Letter to the Editor, Box 1133.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Down With The Pageant

To the Editor:

It may seem very strange that a red-blooded American fellow would criticize a tradition that, to many, symbolizes his country: what the heck! I passionately write to complain about an institution that degrades not only women, but Americans of all (think about it) genders. I am referring to that wicked display of Clairol, the Miss America Pageant!

Yes, I am picking on the annual event which pits gown against gown, buttocks against buttocks, and pop song against classical violin. And yes, I have thought long and hard about voicing my opposition; thank God we live in a country where one can speak against his nation's beauty pageant! (I'm lucky they've done away with the Un-American Affairs Committee.) It's time for vehement protest . . .

Oddly, but not surprisingly, Miss America supposedly represents the creme de l'creme of young American womanhood. It would lead me to believe that an ideal woman is an overmade anorexic in a sequined evening gown. I've looked around, but much to my chagrin, most lovely women I've seen weigh more than one hundred pounds, so I have to count them out. Looking in the area of education, most ladies I know are majoring in something other than Dance, thus they too fall short of being within the elite. It breaks my heart to consider that if the aforementioned had only changed a few things in their lives, they might at this moment have won a life's supply of cosmetics. Do we sympathize or criticize?

No fur coat, no participation in a lip-synced production number, my god! these individuals have missed the adoration of their fashion conscious nation! Imagine their shame at not having perfectly pearly teeth or possessing a knack for achieving an even tan. What is to become of them? Are they bound for a life of families and station wagons? Oh, vengeful gods, what have they done to you?

COMMENTARY

The New American Hero

By ED MATRICARDI

The Democrats may have begun the 1988 Presidential Election suffering from what many called the Blur Factor, but they are entering the final leg of the election with a seemingly unbeatable team and a new American Hero. A new American Hero for a new American Post-Reagan Era. A hero who offers America a future radically different from her past. A hero who began his life as a leftest outcast, but now leads the progressive wing of the Democratic National Party. A hero whose positions, speech and color separated him from his fellow Democratic Candidates, and who capitalized on America's perennial support for the underdog. Though he lost the nomination to Mike Dukakis, Jesse Jackson is the New American Hero, whose ideas have moved his party and will soon swing the United States of America, towards the left and Socialism.

Mike Dukakis' bid to the Presidency is the Democrats ' pratical way to institute Jackson ideals of social spending and big Govt. The Democrats realize that no responsible American would vote for a candidate who is the "Anti-Christ" to the American way of life. A man who would have America turn into a welfare state where the few work for the masses and not for themselves or their families. The Democrats hope they can put one over on the American people and elect Mike Dukakis, a man who stands with Jackson in his continued efforts to destroy the American Dream and America's Productiveness. Though Mike Dukakis claims to be a product of the American Dream, his past actions, policies and future intentions, prove he owes no allegiance to it. Like Jesse Jackson, Mike Dukakis does not believe in a work ethic; he believes in a gift ethic. Along with the largest Tax Hike in Massachusetts. History, Michael Dukakis has turned a $200 million budget surplus into a $400 million budget deficit.

America certainly will enter a new American era with her new American Hero and a President Dukakis. An era not of capitalism, competition and production, but of stagnation and decline. Both Jackson and Dukakis argue need and they are right: Something must be done about the poor. Things like training and educating them to perform jobs and to make a living on their own, if possible. Not flooding funds that prove ineffective, ineffecient to men and women whose only right to it is their own inability to make it themselves. Ability is the root of capitalism and advancement. But Jackson and Dukakis reject this theory. Both see ability as a selfish evil which discriminates against the opportunity of the less able. The battle cry of opportunity for the poor and minorities has been the backbone of their complaints against the Reagan Administration, George Bush and the Republician Party. Opportunity: Well, that sounds fine and well, but the opportunity they offer is tantamount to taking by force from those who have to give to those who need. What they fail to realize is the disasterous consequences of a system that takes from those who work and give, to those who need. If one looks at history, the countries which practice this principle bankrupt themselves; for no nation is so rich that she can live indefinitely off her past production. And live off her past production is just what a country is forced to do when it accepts this creed, for the crops reward not the farmer but the parasite. A system which rewards those who do not work at the expense of those who do, forces the mover and the shaker to quit, for not only is it easier, but now more profitable not to think, not to work and not to produce.

Jackson and Dukakis would have a man's failure be the fault of everyone in society but that man. They offer a crutch, and consistent with human nature anyone who has the choice, will take the easy way out. This is America, not the Garden of Eden. We do not have an inexhaustable supply of funds, only opportunity; Which is out there, it just takes ambition and desire to find personal ability and use it.

Anything worth having is worth earning. Unfortunately most Americans have forgotten this: They want it given to them and this is why in November the Democrats will be successful in turning Americans against their heritage and their dream. America will elect Mike Dukakis to the Presidency and our new American Hero's ideals will run this nation. What America will not expect is the loss of productiveness, the stagnation, and the regression that will result in all American Institutions and all things that used to be defined as American.

Pageant

One of these days, the number of swooshing, eye-lined beauty queens will diminish, and dreadfully, there will be Personality Pageants. America will be forced to judge women on their smiles rather than their legs. Question is, how soon?

9th floor Curry works out

By JAN-MARIE JOHNSON

Curry's ninth floor led by their R. A. Pam Puckett, began doing aerobics at the start of the semester. It was started as an exercise program to help the girls avoid the dreaded "Freshman Fifteen".

Recently, Currys ninth floor was invited to help with the Oktoberfest celebration, by performing in the opening entertainment ceremonies. Their show is a mixture of upbeat music and fascinating workouts.

The girls have kept up with their routines and can be found every Sunday through Thursday nights beginning at 7:30 p.m. in Curry Room 3. All are welcomed to come join the fun and to catch the show at Oktoberfest '88.

History/Political Science Club will have a meeting at 7 p.m., Sept. 26. All interested students please attend in W. Ruffner Room 323.

Crop rally date set

By DONNA L. FERRIER

The CROP Committee met on September 13, 1988 and decided that the date for the Recruiters' Rally is Tuesday, September 20, 1988 at 7:30 p.m. at the basement of the Wesley Foundation. The Recruiters' Rally is a rally held for anyone who is interested in recruiting people to walk in the CROP Walk on October 16, 1988 at 2:00 p.m. at Jarman Auditorium.

In addition, Paulette Butler and Mike Pickral have just joined the CROP Committee as two additional Longwood College Representatives.

The committee urges all fraternities, sororities, and other organizations on campus to adopt CROP as a special project this year and to publicize CROP using flyers and posters. Each organization may also use its logo on the posters. For more information on how your organization can become involved in CROP, contact Allen Breckenridge, CROP Co-Coordinator, at the Episcopal Campus Ministry Center, 392-3860, or Donna Ferrier, Box 305, and join us on Tuesday night!

As these youngsters show, the fun "rolled on" at the Five County Fair held last week, Sept. 12 - Sept. 17.

EVENTS

Beginning on Tuesday, Oct 4, Longwood College's Office of Continuing Studies will offer both a Beginners and an Intermediate Guitar class in Wygal (across from Longwood's Lancer Gymnasium), Room 106. The class will be taught again by the Rev. Allen Breckenridge, Episcopal Campus Minister to both Longwood and Hampden-Sydney colleges. Students, faculty and staff, and community people, from 16 years old to senior citizens, are invited to attend the classes. There is a small fee of $35 for the nine week course. Classes will not meet during the week of Oct. 24-28, which is fall break at the colleges. Students will need to own or have access to a guitar, and there are a couple of recommended books for the courses which are available in the Longwood College bookstore.

The Beginner's class will cover a wide range of the basics, from learning the parts of the guitar and proper tuning, to basic chords, learning simple songs, and developing an effective practice system and style of playing for the future. A variety of music styles will be examined and students of a broad spectrum of musical interests will no doubt add to the learning process. If you want to begin to play and to get a good start on the right road with your guitar playing, this is the class for you! The class will meet from 7:00 p.m. until 8:00 p.m. each Tuesday evening.

The Intermediate class is for those persons who wish to progress beyond the basics and to get into more advanced methods and techniques of guitar playing. If you have a good knowledge of basic chords, flat-picking and fingering techniques, and basic song structures, then this is the next step in the process of guitar playing for you. Emphasis will be given to learning methods of altering chords, playing lead lines and improvisation, integrating melody with rythmn playing, understanding more advanced song structures, and learning a broad variety of new songs in styles from Jazz to Bluegrass to Rock and Blues. The class will meet from 8:15 p.m. until 9:15 on Tuesday evenings.

For more information about these classes and how to register for them, please call the Office of Continuing Studies at Longwood College, 392-9241 or 392-9256.

TKE's 3rd Annual Gurney Push

By VICKY OWLES

The county of Prince Edward, as well as the town of Farmville, have benifitted in recent years from the efforts of Greek organizations here at Longwood. The brothers of Tau Kappa Epsilon are sponsering the 3rd Annual Gurney Push for the United Way of Prince Edward County. Over the past two years they have raised over a thousand dollars each time they sponsered this event. According to Eric Sanders, philanthropy chairman, the fraternity has contributed over one third of the contributions for the United Way's total earnings for Prince Edward. Sanders stated, "I hope the community of Longwood College will support us in this effort to help the county." The Gurney Push will begin Saturday morning of Oktoberfest weekend and end at the finish of the parade. This year the goal they are hoping to achieve is $1500, so do your part and help out for this worthwhile event.

"The American players are better coached and have played against some of the top players in the world. In South Africa, we have difficulty getting competition because we are banned from most international events," says Sole. "It is frustrating because sportsmen are hurt due to politics."

Sole hopes her experience and ability will help bring more success to the Lady Lancers, who have won the last two Division II National Championships.

"The team has a difficult task ahead of it, so we're all pretty nervous," says Sole. "I wish the team huge success, because we want to keep the flag flying at Longwood."

If her first collegiate tournament is any indication, Sole should be a real boost for a Lady Lancer squad decimated by graduation. The freshman shot a 76-74-89-239 to tie for eighth place in the 12th Longwood Invitational. The leader of the tournament after two days, she had trouble getting her game going in the final round.

Lady Lancer coach Barbara Smith is delighted to have Sole on the Longwood squad.

"I believe Daphne will be one of our best players," said Smith. "It will take time for her to adjust to the courses and the style of play here, but she has what it takes to be an excellent college golfer."

The Western Province Ladies Golf Union's loss is Longwood's gain.

Longwood Imports South African Golfer

By MARK KIRK

Imagine giving up your job, leaving your family and friends, and selling most of your personal belongings in order to travel halfway around the world to attend college in a foreign country.

If you can comprehend this situation, then you should be able to understand what Longwood College golfer Daphne Sole has been up against. The 26-year-old freshman, formerly a resident of Cape Town, South Africa, gave up a job as a medical technologist and an honored spot on her province golf team to come to Longwood for the pursuit of a career in golf, medicine, or perhaps both.

Along with fellow freshman Angie Monro of Alberta, Canada, Sole ranks as the first foreign Lady Lancer golf recruit. A three-handicap golfer, she was only able to leave her native land for college in America thanks to several good breaks..

Her biggest boost came from Paul du Toit, a "friend from back home" who notified colleges of her golfing ability while on a tour of America last year. He heard of Longwood coach Barbara Smith while in Florida, phoned her, and was able to interest her in pursuing Sole. Eventually, Sole chose Longwood over Rollins College because of the offer of a full scholarship.

"Paul du Toit is the main reason that I'm here at Longwood," says Sole, whose accent reminds one of Crocodile Dundee. "There is no way that I could have come over to America and visited colleges on my own."

Period of Uncertainty

Despite Sole's desire to come to the United States, she still had to endure a long period of uncertainty about whether or not she would be allowed into the country. Her departure from South Africa was hampered by several minor technicalities.

"I also had a lot of trouble in securing a visa, which is hard to get in South Africa," Sole explained. "I had to go to the American Consulate four times before I was finally able to get one."

After finally being allowed to come to Longwood, Sole encountered another problem: getting adjusted to life away from home. She admits her first few days in Farmville were difficult, but she now feels more comfortable after better understanding the lifestyle.

"I had to make a lot of adjustments when I came here. There have been shocks here and there, but I'm slowly but surely becoming adjusted. I've had to learn how to fit in with other people, but I'm enjoying it a lot better now," Sole explained.

Now that she has begun to "fit in", the pre-med major should be better able to concentrate on the game she loves so dearly. The fact that she enjoys golf so much comes as no surprise when one realizes that her entire family plays the game (two of her cousins have spent time on the PGA Tour, as well).

"Actually, I didn't play much golf during my teen years because of other school sports. My family wanted me to play more team sports, which is good for that age," says Sole.

Once Sole began to play more, however, her golf game became something worth talking about. At the age of 17, she earned one of four spots on the Western Province golf team, becoming the first person under 18 to play for the province.

During Sole's career, she has chalked up ten state (province) victories, including the Southern Cape Championship in May with an 80-72-152. Sole considers that victory to be her finest.

"In that tournament, I beat Gilly Tebbutt (considered to be the top South African golfer) in a four-hole sudden death playoff to claim first place. I enjoyed that victory the most because it was my most recent win and it was my last tournament there. It was a nice sendoff," explained Sole.

Not So Nice

The sendoff from the Western Province Ladies Golf Union was not so nice. When union officials learned in April that Sole planned to leave South Africa to attend college in the United States, they deleted her from all future team events.

"I had been a member of the Western Province team for nine years, but they just gave me a kick in the face," she recalled. "It was quite upsetting for me.

"One day before we were to fly to Johannesburg for a tournament, they called and told me that since I was planning to leave, I had been replaced on the province team. They just gave me the golden handshake (i.e. – you're fired) and said, 'Thanks, mate!' "

A friend, Texas Christian golfer Barbara Pestana, informed Sole later that the best course would have been to wait to notify the union of her intentions until the day before her departure for the U.S.

Chance To Perform

Despite her years of experience with tough competition back home, Sole is pleased to have the chance to perform against top American players. She feels it will be a good opportunity to improve her game.

Bush and Dukakis Finally Face to Face

MICHAEL DUKAKIS

GEORGE BUSH

By MATT PETERMAN

After months of long distance verbal attacks, George Bush and Michael Dukakis finally got down to debating some twenty-five issues at Wake Forest University in Winston-Salem, N.C. Sunday night. Included in the paragraphs below is a summary of the many points of key issues in the 1988 campaign as discussed by the candidates.

Drugs

George Bush attributed the problem to the deteriation of values in the environment that we live in. Michael Dukakis agreed however saying that values begin at the top and the leaders there have a special responsibility to develop programs in the education and enforcement areas.

The Federal Deficit

Dukakis defined four areas in which he would bring down the federal deficit. 1) Cut certain weapons systems, 2) invest in economic growth, 3) bring interest rates down, and 4) collect back taxes. Bush advocated control over spending and outlined the following other points: 1) Have the economy grow at the rate of inflation, 2) permit the president to set the priorities on spending and 3) initiate a capital gains differential that will increase jobs, revenues, and risk taking.

AIDS

George Bush outlined the areas of research, education, and testing to insure a safe blood supply. Dukakis said

VASPA Excites Longwood Today

By J. R. REEVES

The Virginia Association of Student Personnel Administrators (VASPA) is hosting its state-wide annual conference here at Longwood College on September 27, 1988 starting with registration at 8:30 a.m. until close at 4:00 p.m. The conference will be in Lankford Student Union building.

According to Phyllis Mable, "We have put together an exciting program using the theme "Plug into Campus Politics," and we would very much like for you and your institution to join us."

Specific interest sessions have been planned for students who are active in the following areas: Student Government, Student Activities, Media, Greek Life, Honor/Judicial systems, and Residential life. Program topics include the following: Power and Affiliation, Responsible Leadership, Group Dynamics, Cultivating Advisers, Time Management, Dealing with AIDS, Establishing Community Service, Alcohol and Drug Issues, Greeks vs non-Greeks, Celebrating Diversity. There will also be roundtable discussions for Student Leaders with similar interests.

Dr. Robert Frazer

Gallery is a weekly column that will feature the many men and women that have worked in the past to build the college we all know as Longwood.

By MATT PETERMAN

Dr. Robert Frazer

Dr. Frazer was born in Virginia, the son of a fairly well to do family. "He was intended by his father for law" (Burrell 322). With this in mind he entered the University of Virginia and began to study law. His education was interrupted by the outbreak of the Civil War where he was called to duty.

During his period of combat he suffered disabling wounds that landed him in a hospital for several months. After his recovery "he returned to the University of Virginia in the fall of 1863, and took up the study of Law with Professor Minor (Burrell 322). "He was never satisfied with that step, preferring the profession of teaching to that of law. Later he took up teaching and the law was abandoned" (322).

Dr. Frazer taught for the next five to eight years until "in 1871 he bought the Fauquier Institute, a good boarding school for girls, at Warrenton" (322). It was during these years that he lobbied for better educational facilities in Virginia and had much interaction with J. L.

Lottery Fever Catches

By PATRICIA OGDEN

Within the first day of sales, Virginia sold 2 million of the 10 million tickets made for the game. Gene Schultz, the Regional Manager of the Virginia Lottery office in Farmville, stated that people were going "crazy" the first day. However on the second day sales slowed down, according to a local retailer, Par Bil's.

As the line in the background indicates people were eager to begin playing the Virginia state lottery the Monday before last. When the clock struck midnight this local Farmville resident was first with the purchase of ten tickets.

By early Wednesday afternoon, the regional office in Farmville had six claims for the $5,000 prize and 8 claims for the $1,000 prize. All winning lottery tickets must have a validation code in order to claim the prize. All winnings over $1,000 must be redeemed at the local regional office. At the office a lottery representative will print a check for the prize amount. There is no cash handled in these offices, which is protected by a 24-hour security system.

Sesqui Party Moved

By P. A. FAIRS

The Sesquicentennial Birthday Party/Semi-Formal Ball/Laser Show will be held in Lancer Hall instead of the Blackwell Dining Room complex.

The change to Lancer is necessary because of a September 14 engineering report that found the main floor of Blackwell to be unsafe for a dance of this size. The report confirmed, however, that Blackwell is safe for its normal use.

Sesquicentennial Chairman H. Donald Winkler was notified last Wednesday evening and began immediately to consider alternate sites. Mr. Winkler and the Sesquicentennial Steering Committee were surprised by the report since an earlier report they had requested (January 1988) indicated no problems and gave the committee a green light to proceed with plans to have the party in Blackwell.

"Thanks to the cooperation of the HPER department, the physical plant staff, the business affairs division, and the birthday party committee, Lancer Hall became a viable alternative," Mr. Winkler said. He added:

"With the party less than two weeks away, many technical, ventilation, and aesthetic problems will have to be solved quickly, but every effort will be made to do so and to put together a celebration worthy of the occasion . .

"Party chairperson Brenda Ferguson and her committee are being called upon to perform miracles, and I suspect that somehow, they will."

Mrs. Ferguson noted that "since Lancer gym is not air conditioned, party-goers may want to wear lightweight, dressy clothing."

In addition to the gym areas, some large classrooms will be set up with tables and chairs for socializing and for a break from the excitement in the gym. These rooms are air conditioned.

"Perhaps," Mr. Winkler said, "when we get to Oct. 1 we may discover that we'll have an even more enjoyable evening than we would have had in Blackwell . . . For a start, we'll be able to accommodate up to 100 more who earlier had been turned away because of the limited space in Blackwell."

Curry Thief Caught

By JAN-MARIE JOHNSON

How would you like to wake up and find a stranger staring you in the face? It could happen — and it did.

On Sunday, September 18 at approximately 7:00 a.m. on a predominantly female hall, a resident was awoken by an intruder in her suite.

The resident, who prefers to remain nameless, had dozed off in the foyer of her suite. She hadn't noticed that the door was unlocked and partially cracked open. The intruder slowly pushed the door open and made his way into the foyer. He then glanced around and spotted the resident sitting on the floor. The intruder turned back towards the door and left playing it up to be an accident. The resident then followed the intruder into the hall. She thought he looked suspicious and he matched the description given by campus police of a black male with a medium build. She then returned to her suite and called the police.

The police followed the intruder to the Lancer parking lot where he was apprehended. On his person, they found jewelry and wallets, among other things. The intruder was arrested and identified. The court date was set on Thursday, September 22.

Special thanks to "the resident" for giving me the information to complete this article.

Decline in Humanities

(CPS) — The number of college students majoring in the humanities has dropped dramatically in recent years while, ironically enough, Americans' interest in history, literature and other humanities has undergone a "remarkable blossoming," the National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH) said Sept. 12.

Between 1966 and 1986 the number of bachelor's degrees awarded increased by 88 percent, but the number of bachelor's degrees awarded in the humanities declined by 33 percent.

"Many students graduate without any overarching view of how the separate courses they have taken relate to one another," stated NEH chairman Lynne V. Cheney in "Humanities in America," a report on the state of American culture.

The 73-page report ordered by Congress said the number of foreign language majors was down 29 percent, English majors down 35 percent, philosophy majors down 35 percent and history majors down 43 percent from 1966 levels.

The conference is open to Longwood students, free, unless they wish to attend the luncheon. Space for the luncheon is limited and interested persons should contact Ricky Otey, President of the Student Government, for a reservation.

Students, professionals, and professional-students will attend from throughout Virginia, representing numerous colleges and universities. Programs and presentations will cover: student politics, leadership, multicultural experiences, Greeks, legal issues, student newspapers, Honor and Judicial Boards, Hall Councils, time management, sexual behavior, and Community Service learning.

Registration is being handled through Phyllis Mable's Office for Student Affairs just off the main lobby of Ruffner or On-Site at the Student Union on September 27. We will look for you there. Everyone is welcome! ! !

Longwood Ambassadors Want You

By JAMES E. BOSTON

Webster defines "ambassador" as the highest ranking representative appointed by one country or government to represent it in another." The Longwood Student Handbook defines "Longwood Ambassadors" as "a student volunteer public relations organization which assists the college in admissions, fundraising, and public relations activities. Students serve as hosts and hostesses at all official college events, conduct campus tours, and staff the annual alumni phonathon."

The Longwood Ambassadors was established in the fall of 1982 in a continuing effort to involve all groups interested in the advancement of Longwood College. The purpose of creating this organization was to enlist outstanding students at Longwood to promote the general welfare of the college.

Although the Ambassadors is totally a voluntary organization, it is highly prestigious and is a very beneficial activity of college life. It is not something for resumees. Members must give 100% of themselves and must place Ambassadors second only to academic pursuits. Last year alone, Ambassadors helped raise $194,799.40 cash through the annual fund. This involved some 12 weeks of telefund. They also gave tours just about every given school day as well as on weekends to prospective students. Besides this, they pulled off a very successful OOZEBALL tournament during Spring Weekend.

Sixty-five of Longwood's best students are selected to become Ambassadors. These students are expected to give of themselves for the benefit of others and to promote the traditions of Longwood College. A minimum GPA of a 2.4, at least two letters of recommendation from faculty members and completion of at least one semester of work at Longwood are required for consideration for admittance. Applications are now being accepted in the Office of Institutional Advancement on second floor East Ruffner.

FRAZER

M. Curry [discussed in second series of Gallery] and the Peabody Education Fund.

According to Blair Buck in The Development of Public Schools in Virginia ". . . the first direct expenditures for public education [in Virginia] were made through the financing work of . . . Dr. Frazer of Orange County, . . . of whom worked indefatigably in spreading the gospel of better schools at public meetings and at conferences organized by . . . [him] for that purpose" (92).

In 1882, Dr. Frazer being pressed persuasively by Dr. J. L. M. Curry, "accepted the Presidency of Judson Institute, at Marion, where he remained for five years, and had a phenomenal success" (322). Overwork at the Institute left him exhausted and in poor health, which prompted his resignation and a recuperation period of three years.

"In 1891 he was called to the Industrial Institute and College of Mississippi, at Columbus, to serve as its President. Here he remained for seven sessions, and made the school the pride of the State" (322).

According to Samuel Holten, former Principal of Farmville Training School, "Upon the death of the second President in 1897 [discussed in last week's Gallery], Dr. Robert Frazer was called to the presidency of the Normal School (now Longwood). It was said . . . that 'he brought to his new work a richly stored mind, a broad knowledge of life, and a varied and valuable experience in schools of many types. His four years' work was characterized by the same earnestness and zeal, the same conscientious devotion to his convictions of duty that he had displayed elsewhere, and the result, as before, was expansion and growth of a steady, stable kind'" (66).

"During Dr. Frazer's Administration, the school acquired the Richardson property across Spruce Street, and that street was closed at the school and made part of the campus" (Bradshaw 482).

According to Burrell: "When Dr. Frazer resigned the Presidency of the State Normal School [now Longwood] in 1902 in order to enter upon the duties of Field Agent of the Southern Educational Board, he left behind him many grateful memories of a courteous, cultured, sympathetic, Christian gentleman of earnest purpose and unbending principle, staunchly loyal to his lofty ideals of duty" (322).

Students Look For Clues To Building's Past

Last In Series Of 3

By KENT BOOTY

Students from Longwood's summer field school in Archeo made many trips to Buckingham Springs. Pictured above are students working around the sight.

The ruins of an outbuilding at Buckingham Springs Plantation tested the detective skills of Longwood College archeology students this summer.

Was the building a "bachelors quarters" for male guests at the once-popular hotel there? Was it a slave quarters? Was it a service building?

Students from Longwood's Summer Field School in Archeology made many trips to the site to do "testing and surveying," said Dr. James Jordan, who directs the field school. Gene and Bonnie Figy, the owners of Buckingham Springs — a mineral springs resort dating from the early 19th century that is now a bed and breakfast inn — had asked for their help in determining the building's use.

The building, which was 64 feet long and 19 feet wide, had two stories and eight rooms, said Jim Cooke, a student who is familiar with historic preservation. It was made of stone and brick and was stuccoed or plastered over, he said.

All that's left is most of one of the walls that extended across the width, rather than the length, of the building, and a smaller portion of one of the long walls that is connected to it. The larger wall separated one side of the house from the other side.

That wall has two fireplaces, one on each level, on both sides. Because the fireplaces are small, they were probably used for cooking and not for heating, noted Jordan.

Cooke said he thinks the main part of the building contained three bedrooms upstairs and three down, and there were two rooms on the other side that may have been used for a different purpose, such as socializing. Based on the interior plaster, which shows signs of horse hair on pig bristle, the structure probably was built between 1790 and 1810, he said.

Jordan and the students began their work with the idea that it housed male guests at Buckingham Springs. They had based that upon an account in the book Today and Yesterday in the Heart of Virginia, which says it was "devoted exclusively in the old days to the bachelors."

However, Mrs. Clyde Marks, a longtime resident of Buckingham Springs Plantation who today lives less than a mile away, said it was used by slaves, not bachelors.

"Mrs. Marks lived on the property for 35 years; her husband worked for the Flanagans (former owners) as supervisor of farming operations," Jordan said. "She said it was never called the 'bachelors quarters' — it was always called the slave quarters. She said it had six rooms, a fireplace on each end and a long porch on both sides.

"She said cattle were kept there and hay was stored inside. Mr. Flanagan was afraid the walls would fall down, so he knocked them down with dynamite."

Cooke said that Richard Couture, a Longwood history professor who is an authority on historic preservation, doubts it was ever a residence.

"Because Mrs. Marks doesn't remember any windows, Mr. Couture thinks it was never used for habitation," he said. "He thinks it was probably a service building, used for making candles or drying herbs or doing the laundry."

The foundations of the building are in a wooded area about 75 yards from the main house, which was built in 1810 as an "overflow cottage" for the original hotel. That hotel, which stood where the parking area is today, was built in 1800 and burned down in the 1840s.

The resort, called Buckingham White Sulphur Springs, was "one of the most popular hostels in Virginia," according to Today and Yesterday in the Heart of Virginia. The Figys, a retired couple from Hawaii, bought the 300-acre plantation in November, 1985, and did a major renovation of the house, whose condition had deteriorated over the years.

The inn features seven guest rooms (each with a private bathroom), 11 fireplaces, 16 rooms, a large ballroom on the second floor and a double veranda on the front. It's off Route 635, about three miles west of Curdsville.

Also this summer, students in the field school located the sulphur spring, one of three springs on the property. Water from the sulphur spring is still drinkable, according to Jordan.

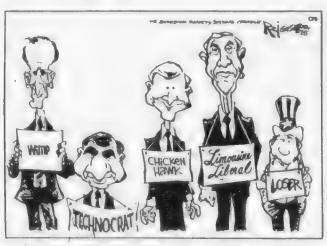
The Great American Enterprise Returns

This Thursday the Space Shuttle Discovery will take off again and with that the Space Program of the United States. It has been three years since the last orbiter Challenger attempted a journey into space but ended with an explosion and the loss of seven lives.



Now the big question before us is: Have we learned our lesson from the Challenger disaster? NASA Administrator James Fletcher assures us that we have. Hundreds of redesigned parts and better safety procedures have made for a better shuttle program though a more complicated one.

Those opposing the Shuttle program argue that it is much too expensive to pursue and argue in favor of an unmanned alternative. Maybe we are ahead of our time hoping to send men and women into space on a flawless and consistent basis. It is probably a better argument to say that we need a new method to get them there – a method less complicated, less costly, and more reliable.

In the meantime, NASA needs to establish clear cut goals to insure a successful future. Goals such as landing a man on the moon as was spelled out in the sixties. The next President will have to answer this question with increasing budgetary pressures weighing heavy on his decision. NASA needs leadership in the coming years to get programs such as the colonization of Mars and the moon and more practically a manned space station orbiting the Earth.

Let Longwood know what's on your mind. Write a Letter to the Editor, Box 1133.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To The Editor:

The Virginia State Board of Elections has announced that the Libertarian Party Presidential ticket of former U.S. Congressman Ron Paul for President and former Alaskan legislator Andre Marrou for Vice President will be on the ballot in Virginia this fall.

This was accomplished by the gathering of over 23,000 signatures of Virginia registered voters.

We would like to thank the people of Virginia who graciously took the time to sign our ballot access petitions and give all Virginians a real choice on November 8.

To the Editor:

If "politics" says golfer Daphine Sole, is "frustrating" for the sportsman, I can only begin to image what apartheid must be like to the majority of black South Africans. You know, the ones who can't even enter a golf course, let alone play on one. The ones forgotten when it comes time to pick dreams.

Still, welcome to America Daphine. I hope you get plenty of "competition" in you sport while at Longwood and I hope, also that you study hard. Not just books and magazines, our various foods and dating habits but the inter-relations of blacks and whites living and working and studying together all around us. And try to understand that this did not exist twenty-five (or perhaps even twenty) years ago. Try to understand that this will be your country in less time. Image! If you can, it will be the best lesson you ever could learn here.

GREEK AFFAIRS

Rush Numbers . . .

By CHET AHN

Well, Rush Week officially ended last week with fraternities giving out bids to upperclassmen. According to Charlie Warner, 33 upperclassmen males signed-up for RUSH. Out of these 33, only 29 were eligible because they had grades. These numbers might seem surprisingly low, but there are only an estimated 300 upperclassmen who are not Greeks on campus. Therefore, this percentage might be the norm, since not all male students want to go Greek. However, another reason for the low sign-up could have resulted from the five dollar rush fee that they had to pay to go through Rush. Hopefully, the percentage of guys rush will increase with freshmen being eligible to Rush next semester.

Crossword Contest Proves Challenging

By LISA JONES

The Finance & Economics Club of The School of Business & Economics, held its first contest of the semester last week. The Crossword Contest was not an easy one, for it required students to do some heavy thinking with a few questions requiring research.

The contest, which was sponsored by Total Image Hair & Body Salon, was open only to Business majors, received about 16 entries. Prizes were awarded to the first three correct entries drawn from all entries that were submitted by Dr. Jacques.

Prizes were as follows:

1st – $50 in cash plus Hair Styling Services (not to exceed $30)

2nd – $40 in cash plus 100 Minutes of Tanning (a $14 value)

3rd – $30 in cash plus Hair Care Products (not to exceed $15)

Winners who were announced Tuesday, September 30, 1988 are: 1st prize: Laurel Coffey; 2nd prize: Richard Harvey; 3rd prize: Massie Harriss.

Congratulations!

Drop-outs Less Likely

(CPS) — College students who hold down part-time jobs are less likely to drop out of school, the U.S. Department of Education has found.

"Work may motivate students to study harder, and the socialization associated with working may be beneficial for college persistence," study author Dennis Carroll wrote in a summary of the report's findings.

The new report was part of an ongoing department study — called "High School and Beyond" — of 30,000 students who were high school sophomores in 1980, and follows them through their educational careers.

Some 93 percent of the students who worked part-time during their first year in college returned for a second year, compared to 83 percent of the students who did not hold a job during their fresh-

Reach For The Summit

By LISA JONES

The Summit is a newsletter created soley by minority students, faculty and staff. This newsletter, which is published once a semester, provides a opportunity for minority students to express themselves and share their accomplishments with others. The first Summit was printed in 1982.

This years staff consist of: Johnail Arrington, Tamara Brown, Derwin Hayes, Charlene Hill, Darryl Johnson, Lisa Jones, Angela Lea, LaTonya Moore and Lavator Walker, with Mrs. Theresa A. Clark serving as the advisor.

Articles, poems and other news materials are now being accepted. Please submit material by Friday, October 14, 1988, 12:00 p.m. to Box 1108 or The Minority Affairs Office.

Camerata Singers To Perform

By DON TROTT

The Longwood College Music Program will be presenting the Camerata Singers in a program titled "A Concert of Twentieth Century American Choral Music" on October 13, 1988 at 8 p.m. in Wygal Hall. The program features a variety of literature from a mass movement to an opera chorus. The program includes: "Sing a New and Jubilant Song" by Claude T. Smith, "Sanctus" from Mass by Leonard Bernstein, two works by Randall Thompson, namely, "The Last Words of David" and "Choose Something Like a Star" from Frostiana, "Song of Democracy" by Howard Hanson and finally "Under the Willow Tree" from Vanessa by Samuel Barber and Gian Carlo Menotti. The thirty-five voiced Camerata Singers are conducted by Dr. Donald L. Trott, Director of Choral Activities at Longwood College. Dr. Trott is in his first year as choral director at Longwood and comes to Farmville after teaching for six years in Oklahoma. Accompanist for the Camerata Singers is Mrs. Nancy Sherman. The October 13 concert is free and open to the public.

Crop Rally Held

By DONNA L. FERRIER

A total of 40 CROP Walk recruiters turned out for the CROP Recruiters' Rally Tuesday September 20 at the Wesley Foundation. Two films about hunger were featured at the rally, "The Big Island" and "A Circle of the Heart," and Rev. Johnathan Barton, the Virginia Coordinator for Church World Services (CWS) spoke to the group about hunger and provided some interesting information and statistics.

CWS has made efforts to help the farmers in the Midwest during the drought, and has sponsored the CROP Walk. Rev. Barton urged us that "We can make a difference." If you want to be a walker, contact Donna Ferrier at Box 305, Allen Breckenridge at the Episcopal Campus Ministry Center, or look for a recruiter on campus if you know of any. Come on out on October 16, 1988 at 2:00 p.m. at Jarman Auditorium and help us make that difference!

Dukakis favors abortion but does not support the death penalty and Bush just the opposite.

Experience in Foreign Policy

Dukakis said that experience in foreign policy is a non issue. Citing values, strength, and the leadership as the most important criteria. Bush rebutted saying that experience is essential to deal with the countries of the world because they will be tough in their dealings with the United States so one must understand how to reply.

Bush would fully research and go forward with its development and when it is deployable, deploy it. Dukakis would continue research at a level of 1983.

Soviet Union

Bush feels that we must look at Prestroika and Glasnost and welcome it but be cautious at the same time. He continued saying that we must negotiate with them through strength and not initiate unilateral cuts hoping they will follow. The jury is still out on the system. Dukakis emphasized that we have many differences with the Soviet Union. With a strong nuclear deterrent and well maintained and trained conventional forces we can move forward on these differences.

Dance Company Reorganization

By AMY BAAR

The Longwood Company of Dancers held auditions August 29, 30, and 31. New members are Taddy Espigh, Michelle Arbogast, and Tracy Reed. Returning members include Stacey Noona, Donna Woolf, Lisa Crescentini, Amy Harrell, Lisa Ham, Amy Church, Sandi Dovel, Jill Hartt, and Amy Baar.

Nelson Neal is the residing director of Dance Company after Tammy Tipton-Nay resigned her position due to scheduling and interest conflicts. Mrs. Tipton-Nay does, however, continue to instruct a ballet class and a jazz class at Longwood. Neal has resumed his position as director with a spark of enthusiasm and control, and comments, "I have returned as Director of the Dance Company and I look forward to a productive year by the dancers in Oktoberfest and the Fall Concert". The dancers anticipate an interesting year by learning more about modern dance techniques from Neal as well as developing their own individual styles.

The Dance Company will have performances during Oktoberfest, in the Fall, and again in the Spring. Dr. Neal and Dance Company members hope the students will continue to support Dance Company by attending their performances.

SPORTS

Field Hockey Falls to Pfeiffer

The Longwood field hockey squad was edged 3-2 by Pfeiffer College on a rain-soaked field in Misenheimer, North Carolina Sunday afternoon. LC's record fell to 0-3 on the year.

The Lady Lancers have a chance to improve their record Saturday and Sunday when they host Duke and Appalachian State. The Duke contest is slated for 2:00 Saturday. The starting time for Sunday's game against ASU has not been announced.

Last Sunday, Longwood spotted Pfeiffer two goals in the first half, but climbed back into the contest in the second. Diane Brown scored first for Longwood on an assist from Liz Annet. Brown lofted Annet's feed into the highest part of the net with 19:02 left in the game. Celeste Lloyd knotted the score at 2 all when she knocked in a penalty shot.

Unfortunately for Longwood, Pfeiffer scored once more for the final margin of victory.

"You had to be a mucker to play well out there today, coach Sue Finnie commented, "and we're not muckers."

The Lady Lancers outshot Pfeiffer 35-19. Longwood goalkeeper Kim Howells notched 11 saves for a 78

Official of the Week

Congratulations to senior, Matt Armstrong, for being chosen Official of the Week. Matt has been an intramural referee for the past 3 years at Longwood. Besides working flag football games, he has had experience officiating softball and basketball, too. He is a physical education major and a member of Alpha Sigma Phi.

2-on-2 volleyball, women's bowling, men's flag football and co-ed weekend volleyball tournaments have come to a close. Congratulations to the following winners: 2-on-2 volleyball — Sandy Alford and Carol Campo and Charlie Parker and Danny White. Women's bowling — the Pinheads. Men's flag football — A league: colors B league: co-ed weekend volleyball — Digger's Nightmare.

3-on-3 basketball, women's flag football and men's bowling are now underway. Coming soon will be weekend co-ed flag football (entries due Sept. 29), arm wrestling (entries due Oct. 2), and weekend coed bowling (entries due Oct. 6).

Netters Drop Matches: Host Captains this Week

Longwood's women's tennis team will seek to bounce back after three losses last week when the Lady Lancers host Christopher-Newport Tuesday and Washington & Lee Thursday. Both matches begin at 3:30 on the Lancer Hall courts.

Last week Longwood fell to Randolph-Macon Woman's College 6-3 Wednesday, Meredith 8-1 Friday and Elon 9-0 Saturday. The latter two contests came on the road with the Lady Lancers missing number one Elizabeth Cho and number three Mary Lynn Lawman.

Grabbing wins for Longwood Wednesday against RMWC were freshman Roxanne Bucher, who beat Jasmin Jakada 7-5, 6-0; Cho and Lawman at number one doubles and Laura Vollrath and Linda Swe at number three doubles. Vollrath and Swe also won their match at Meredith, playing number two doubles.

Vollrath and Swe have been a bright spot for the 0-4 lady netters with a 3-1 mark in doubles for the fall.

Vollrath, Swe Top Netters of the Week

LINDA SWE

LAURA VOLLRATH

Juniors, Linda Swe and Laura Vollrath won two of three doubles matches last week for the Longwood women's tennis team and have been named Longwood College Players of the Week for the period September 18-25. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

Playing at both number two and three doubles, Swe and Vollrath won matches against Randolph-Macon Woman's College and Meredith last week. The junior duo have a 3-1 mark for the fall, best on the Lady Lancer squad.

"Swe and Vollrath have done an excellent job," said Longwood coach Angie Coppedge. "They were hoping to go unbeaten, but Elon handed them their first loss Saturday."

A graduate of First Colonial High School, Vollrath is in her second year on the Longwood squad. She is majoring in foreign language.

A native of St. Peters, Missouri, Swe began her athletic career at Longwood in volleyball, but when the sport was dropped she switched to tennis. The multi-talented Swe, who now calls Midlothian home, won several awards for her performance as a setter in volleyball at Francis Howell High School.

Novelist to Accept Dos Passos Prize

By P. A. FAIRS

Novelist Lee Smith, of Chapel Hill, NC, will come to Longwood College on Thursday, Oct. 6, to receive the John Dos Passos Prize for Literature.

The presentation ceremonies are set for 8 p.m. in Wygal Auditorium. Smith will receive the John Dos Passos medallion and a $1,000 cash award.

Smith also will read from her work. The public is invited to attend the ceremony and reading; there is no admission charge.

A native of the Grundy area of southwest Virginia, Smith is the author of seven novels, a collection of short stories, and stories published in several popular magazines.

Her most recent novels are Oral History (1983), Family Linen (1985), and Fair and Tender Ladies, released this month by G. P. Putnam's Sons. Her short story, "No One Will Ever Love You As Much," appears in the September 1988 issue of Redbook magazine.

Smith's earlier novels are The Last Day the Dogbushes Bloomed (1968), Something in the Wind (1971), Fancy Strut (1973-recently reissued in paperbook), and Black Mountain Breakdown (1980). Her short story collection is entitled Cakewalk (1980).

Critics have praised Smith's ability to be "satiric without being mean." She has been compared to William Faulkner, Carson McCullers, and Flannery O'Connor in recording the "particulars of life" and "the voices that tell her story ... with perfect mimicry."

In reviewing Family Linen for the Detroit News, Charles Dickinson wrote that Smith "invites the reader in and subtly intoxicates him with the chronicle of a family only slightly more bizarre than most." And John Ehle, writing for the New York Times Book Review, concluded that this story of four generations contains "a certain amount of disorder, but that is true of family closets and family linen everywhere."

When asked about the research that went into Oral History, Smith replied: "It wasn't really research — it's just the kind of thing I write down whenever I'm visiting my folks in Grundy. I decided to write the book, finally, in order to use all the material I've been collecting and the Appalachian songs and legends I'd been reading about."

Smith has won the O. Henry Award twice, the Sir Walter Raleigh Award, and the North Carolina Award for Literature.

She has been a member of the English faculty at North Carolina State University

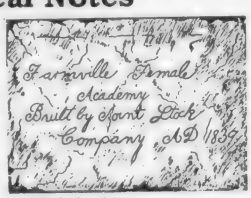
Come Out and Support the 'Walk

By DENICE EIDSON

On Sunday, October 9th at 1:00 p.m. the American Heart Association will attempt to raise money to help fight heart disease in the Farmville community. The one out of every two people who are affected by heart disease will be thankful for the Turkeywalk participants. The walk will take place at Roses in the Southgate Shopping Center continuing with a five mile course.

Donations obtained by the walkers, which are based on pledge per mile or overall contributions, will be put towards support of important research to further education of heart disease in the community. The distance you walk is up to you and your ability. To award participants for their effort, prizes will be given according to the amount of pledges collected. A long sleeve Turkeywalk t-shirt is rewarded for $50.00, a t-shirt, and turkey for $100.00, $250.00 receives a t-shirt, turkey and a warm-up suit, and finally $450.00 gets all of the above plus a AM/FM radio. Pre-collecting donations, or better yet flat pledges, will be beneficial in receiving the prize earlier.



The Wampler Longacre sponsored event encourages people of all ages to participate. Mr. Rick Hurley, who is President of the Prince Edward County American Heart Association as well as the Vice President for Business Affairs at Longwood College, "encourages any interested Longwood students to get involved or get in touch if you would like to help." The applications are available in the Business Affairs Office, which is located two doors down from Cashiering and Student Accounts in South Ruffner. Have fun while supporting a very important life or death matter.

Historical Notes

By CHERYL JEFFREY

The school that is now known as Longwood College has not always been referred to by that name. Farmville Female Seminary was founded in 1839. This is the institution that, after having a few name changes, is now referred to as Longwood College.

Farmville Female Seminary Association was incorporated on March 5, 1839. The incorporators were W. C. Flournoy, James E. Venable, Thomas Flournoy, William Wilson, George Daniel, Willis Blanton, and James B. Ely. These men issued 300 shares of stock at $100 each, in an effort to raise $30,000 to erect a building and buy necessary items for the seminary.

After buying one acre of land on High Street, the school building was completed in 1842. This original building is now part of Ruffner.

The first principal of the school was Solomon Lee. Courses offered were English, Latin, Greek, French, and piano. Tuition ranged from five to twenty dollars per course; and board was eight to ten dollars per month.

After Mr. Lee's term as principal, his brother, Reverend Lorenzo Lee became

BSU Plans Activities

By BETH A. LORD

The Farmville Area Baptist Student Union is well into a great semester with many exciting activities on the way.

Beginning on October 6, lunch will be provided the first and third Thursdays of each month by either area churches or the BSU itself. All those interested in the BSU are invited to meet at 12:45 p.m. at the Baptist Student Center located behind Stubbs.

Also, Bible studies and socials are planned for many Friday nights during the semester.

As always, students are welcome to attend the weekly BSU meetings held at 6:30 on Monday nights at the Center. Monday night features include speakers from on and off campus, games, music, skits, and special BSU projects.

For more information, contact Baptist Campus Minister Betsy Frost at 392-5733. And remember – you don't have to be a Baptist to attend!

Groups, individuals, and organizations interested in submitting articles to be included in the time capsule need to do so by October 15th. Contact Rick Hurley, V.P. for Business & Legislative Affairs.

Debate

each debate team a five minute opening statement to present the strengths of the presidential candidate they are supporting. Then the debaters will refute each other's arguments. There will also be an opportunity for the audience to question the debaters.

This format will allow the debaters a better opportunity to emphasize the strengths of their candidate and weaknesses of their opponent's candidate than the Presidential candidates had. Unlike last Sunday's debate between Bush and Dukakis, specific questions will not be posed by mediators but from the audience.

Both Dr. Stuart and Dr. Helms were formerly local chairmen of their respective parties here in Prince Edward County. Also, Dr. Helms in 1970 ran for Congress in the 4th Congressional District. Dr. Stuart will be arguing on behalf of Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis. And Dr. Helms will argue the positions of Republican candidate George Bush.

Each debate team will include students. Ed Matricardi III and Jean Taylor will be a part of Dr. Helms' team. Dr. Stuart's assistant is Ricky Otey, Student Government Association president.

All students and faculty are invited and encouraged to attend.

LIT Initiates at Symposium

By DONNA L. FERRIER

As of September 22, 1988, Lambda Iota Tau (LIT), the Honor Society for English and Modern Language majors, has a total of nine new members. Congratulations to Robin Burroughs, Beth Camillo, Michele Cornett, Jeff Dingeldein, Vicki Ellis, Burnella Gilbert, Michelle Hummer, Amy Roderer, and Kim Talley.

In order to become a member of Lambda Iota Tau, you must have completed four literature courses, you must have at least a 3.0 cumulative grade point average in all literature classes as well as at least a 2.8 cumulative grade point average overall. In addition, you must submit a paper (this can be a paper that's already been graded for a class) to Priscilla Ord, Lambda Iota Tau's Advisor.

Associate members of LIT include Gene Kerns, Laura Vollrath, Ashley Warren, and Noah Wood. LIT's next initiation ceremony is to be held on February 14, 1989.

Following the initiation ceremony, was a symposium featuring Mary Oliver, a Pulitzer Prize winning poet. Among the five books she's written are Twelve Moons, Dreamland, and American Primitive. American Primitive was the one that won her the 1984 Pulitzer Prize for poetry. Oliver was born in Ohio and now lives in Massachusetts. In her poetry, she talks about the world beyond ourselves, the world we cherish but doesn't cherish us, and she even poses the question "How do we live in this world?"

Cathy Gaughran pins new initiate of LIT.

Oliver then read from Twelve Moons and American Primitive. Many of these poems are based on actual experiences she's had. Her settings are frequently at Cape Cod, Massachusetts, such as the setting of "The Fish," based on her own fishing experiences. She also writes of her overseas experiences as in "Singapore." Following the reading was a reception during which she signed autographs.

A Focus On Korea

By BURNELLA M. GILBERT

ISP, the International Studies Program of Longwood is continuing its lecture series for the semester, which started with "A Focus on Korea" part I. On October 10, 1988 ISP will temporarily move its focus from Korea to the country of China. Mr. Mu Ping Pan, journalist of Beijing China, will host, starting at 12:00 p.m., an informal question-answer session on his country. Interested students are asked to proceed through the lunch line as usual and join Mr. Pan in the Virginia Room. On October 11th at 7:30 p.m. in the Continuing Studies Conference Room, 121 West Ruffner, "A Focus on Korea" part II will begin. Dr. Jung Ra, professor of Special Education and Social Work here at Longwood will speak on Korean Education. On October 27th from 7:30-8:30 p.m. Dr. Chong-Han Kim, professor of Political Science at the College of William and Mary will present "Korea in Search of Democracy." This lecture will also be held in the Continuing Studies Conference Room. On November 9th ISP will take an even closer look at China with a slide presentation by Longwood Professor of Philosophy, Dr. John Peale, who recently visited the country. The presentation will start at 7:30 p.m. and will be held in the Prince Edward Room, Blackwell Dining Hall. To end ISP's focus on Korea, on November 15th from 7:30-8:30 p.m. in the Virginia Room of the Dining Hall, Dr. Han K. Song, professor of Sociology and president of the Consortium for Asian Studies, Lynchburg College will speak on Korea's relations with the U.S. Refreshments will be served after each lecture.

The International Studies Program would like to thank everyone for good attendance at previous lectures and would like to encourage them to continue coming. Lectures are open to the general public at no cost.

ISP, along with Dr. Karen Armstrong, professor of the Department Anthropology, is also planning an international film program, the theme of which will be "The Impact of Modern Culture on Third World Culture." Again anyone who is interested in studying abroad should contact Michele Sims of the ISP office, Grainger 213. Information on international programs in a variety of subject areas is available.

Jefferson Association

By JEAN TAYLOR

On September 17th Longwood was represented by delegates at the Virginia Jefferson Association committee meeting at the Raddison Hotel in Lynchburg. The Jefferson Association is a non-partison organization geared toward inhancing the public's understanding of the constitution and constitutional issues trough debate and discussion.

After being briefed about the three issues for the evening, delegates were divided into three groups according to interest. The first issue was whether or not to give the line-item veto to the president and the legislative veto to the congress. The second subject was whether or not keep the Electoral college system or just adjust it so that it more closely reflects popular will. And, the last issue for the evening was how to increase the accountability of supreme court justices without destroying their independence to impartially interpret the law. Each group then divided into pro and con teams for each side of each issue and discussed their arguments for the next day.

On September 17th, all the delegates met at Thomas Jefferson's other home Poplar Forest near Lynchburg. After each debate, all delegates had the opportunity to ask questions and express opinions.

The Jefferson Association meeting was a statewide event. Other delegates came from Liberty University, Chesterfield, Chesapeake, Yorktown, Arlington and other parts of Virginia. The delegates from Longwood were: Dr. James Helms, Ed Matricardi III, Michael Witford, Jean Taylor, Jeff Poythress, Mark Ashley, and John Fleming.

The committee was so impressed by the Longwood delegates' performance that they want Longwood to receive a grant to host a Jefferson meeting here in the Spring.

Get Psyched

By VICKY OWLES

"GET PSYCHED!" This is the catchy new slogan heard by many members of this year's Psychology Club. This year the officers are John Parson, President; Tony Marquez, Vice President; Lynn Owen, Secretary; Gretchen Eby, Treasurer and Dr. David Stein, Advisor. The Psychology Club is sponsoring many events this year. Included is the 10th Annual Rat Race to be held Oktoberfest weekend. They are also planning a trip to the Virginia Psychological Convention in Va. Beach October 19th-23rd. Parson said, "We are looking forward to an informative and exciting year and we hope everyone will come out and join us." If you are interested in joining the Psychology Club, meetings are held every Wednesday night at 6:30 in the Red Room in Lankford. Dues are only $2.00 a semester and you do not have to be a psychology major to join. So come on out and "Get Psyched" with this year's members.

Older Students will be half of Campus Populations by 2000

(CPS) — Non-traditional students — those at least 25-years-old who often have families and jobs — will make up half of the nation's college population by the year 2000, a new report by the College Board says.

Those students, the board says, will need fewer services than students aged 18-to-25, but will bring as much revenue to colleges as younger students do.

The survey, conducted by the College Board's Office of Adult Learning Services (OALS), also found that more than six million adults study for college credit each year.

"We found that adults are serious students, and that they enroll in the mainstream of higher education," said OALS Director Carol B. Aslanian.

But as colleges become more dependent on older students, they've become more concerned about keeping them happy.

"Colleges know the population of new high school graduates will shrink 12 percent over the next five

College demographers have predicted for years that the shrinking numbers of new high school graduates would cause college enrollments to drop dramatically. The predicted enrollment plunge, however, has been offset by greater numbers of minorities, women and adults enrolling in colleges.
years and stay down for another 10 years," Aslanian said. "To maintain enrollments, many colleges must attract adults with jobs and babies, or with grandchildren and time to study. They need to know the demographics, behaviors and preferences of adult college students."

Although many college administrators believe non-traditional students only enroll in a few courses — and only produce a fraction of the revenue produced by younger students — it takes only two and a half adult students to equal the revenue produced by a traditional student.

In addition, the survey found older students require fewer services, such as organized social events and transportation.

Amnesty: Rock for the Crusuder

By MICHAEL O'KEEFFE

Tim Carrier, a University of Massachusetts student and a big fan of U2, made it a point to catch the band on a 1986 MTV telecast.

It turned out the group's performance was part of Amnesty International's "Conspiracy of Hope" tour, designed to introduce the human rights group to students just like Carrier.

And it worked. In what had to be one of the most successful mass political recruiting efforts in recent campus history, Carrier, like 30,000 other people, joined the organization, eventually founding a UMass chapter.

Nationwide, the 250 campus and high school Amnesty chapters grew to "more than 1,000," reported Peter Larson of the group's membership office.

"I don't even equate Amnesty with music anymore," Carrier, who is taking this term off to work as an intern with Amnesty International (AI), said. "Now all I equate it with is human rights."

Of course the main purpose of the group, whose efforts won the 1978 Nobel Prize, is to lobby governments worldwide to get them to respect human rights. It publicizes the cases of "prisoners of conscience" — or political prisoners — and works to end the death penalty.

And while a healthy handful of U.S. students always has been involved with the issue, few "nonpartisan" groups have ever been able to build campus support in as short a time as Amnesty International did in 1986.

And this month, despite having had a terrible time integrating all those new members two years ago, the group is actively recruiting students again.

This time it's called the "Human Rights NOW!" tour, and features Bruce Springsteen, Tracy Chapman, Sting, Peter Gabriel and Senegal's Youssou N'Dour.

"It's important to see the concerts — and our efforts to organize students — as one of the ways we're building a base of support for human rights," said Ellen Cull of Amnesty's Northeast office.

Building it that fast, however, can cause problems for a group.

Integrating such vast numbers of new members "strained our resources," confessed Jack Rendler, who helps coordinate AI's campus chapters, and, inevitably, brought in a lot of people who were fans of music, not human rights.

"I know Sting sings about it or something," one Indiana University student said when asked why she was attending a campus AI meeting.

That attitude, Amnesty officials say, was the source of their problems after the 1986 tour.

"The 'Conspiracy' tour," recalled Allen Hailey, a University of Oklahoma junior, "got more people involved, but some weren't getting the message," noting some saw it as this week's cause.

Added Loala Hironaka, whose University of California at Berkeley chapter grew from 200 to 500 members after the "Conspiracy" concerts: "What happened in 1986 is that you have a lot of people join up, but you don't have time to form them."

It was hard, Hironaka said, to educate the new members about Amnesty's strictly nonpartisan, independent stance.

"Amnesty is supposed to be nonpartisan, but students are sometimes used in partisan ways," she said. "You'd like to have . . . the students understand Amnesty's mandate."

Steve Kotkin, also of the Berkeley chapter, called it "a question of philosophy."

"Some are for a smaller, tight-knit group where all the members are informed and involved. Others want a broader organization. I'm partial to greater numbers myself. We can always educate people after they join up."

Kotkin's in the majority.

Unlike some other activist groups, Amnesty seems to believe that "the more the merrier," observed Roger Williams, a reporter for Foundation News, which covers charitable and volunteer organizations.

"The more people involved," Williams explained, "the greater the pressure they can bring to governments to respect human rights."

Recruiting all those warm bodies, moreover, has been "good for Amnesty," he said.

UMass student Carrier thought it's been especially good for the human rights is-

WOW!

The place to have been last Saturday night was Lancer Gym for Longwood's birthday party. The brilliant multi-colored laser show set the tone for the evening coupled with President Dorrill's remarks about the occasion.

The feeling of togetherness all present felt will perhaps be with them for the rest of their lives. Indeed a special night for Longwood but also for her students, faculty, staff, and administrators of past and present who have all worked to build a sound foundation for which we all celebrated.

Those at the party could but marvel at Longwood's rapid growth and unbroken prosperity, (from 1839 to 1989) for it has overtaken and outstripped many other institutions that tell their age in centuries.

Happy 150th Longwood.

Candidates to Debate

Tomorrow night in Omaha Nebraska the first debate between the Vice Presidential candidates Dan Quayle (R) and Lloyd Bentson (D) will take place.

Quayle has to refute the claims of the Democrats that he is not a credible candidate and prove to the American people that he not only qualified but ready to be a heartbeat away from the Presidency — a claim that he can accurately make whereas the Democrats V. P. choice in 1984, Geraldine Ferraro could not.

But she's not the question Lloyd Bentson is. Bentson will have to contrast Quayle to himself and in doing so show the American people that he is better suited to be a heartbeat away from the Presidency. Quayle must point out the many differences that Dukakis and Bentson have and make some points from there.

It is definitely Bentsen's debate to lose for the expectations of Quayle seem very low. Quayle to receive the first question and give the first closing statement will get his chance and Bentsen his to prove just how credible all the talk surrounding the two candidates is.

Let Longwood know what's on your mind. Write a Letter to the Editor, Box 1133.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor:

Given the history of less than warm, interracial realtions in Farmville, and also the fact that a large part of the local community is black, the decision to print Daphne Sole's interview was, in my opinion, a big judgemental error. The interview seemed to be perfectly ripe for controversy. I am sure Daphne would agree that such an interview couldn't have done wonders for anyone's popularity.

Nadeem A. Kizilbash

To The Editor:

Concerning Jim Hash's letter published in last week's issue:

I really hope that next time somebody wants to publicly vent his/her opinions, he/she can find a way to do it that is not at the personal expense of a fellow student. Don't you, as an editor, find anything wrong with publishing such letters?

Brett Wolmarans

Dear Mr. Hash,

After reading your letter last week I have wondered for a long time what your reasons were for such a shallow and superficial statement about a fellow student. From the interview that was printed in the Rotunda two weeks ago it was not possible to understand how Miss Sole felt about apartheid, simply because she was not asked this question. How did you jump to such conclusions? Can you read minds? I'm very happy for you. How would you feel if people considered you a racist because you are from Virginia? You said apartheid was a reality in the States twenty-five years ago, and then you urged Miss Sole to study "the inter-relations of blacks and whites living and working and studying together all around us." Well, I'd like to urge you to walk (maybe with Miss Sole) around Farmville and see how your paradisiac description of the States does not always correspond to reality. It will probably be the best lesson you will learn here at Longwood.

Luigi Agostino

To the Editor: In response to the letter on golfer Daphne Sole.

I don't believe that one has the right to sterotype every white South African as an Apartheid Supporter. Does Jim Hash know for a fact that Ms. Sole supports that aspect of her government; people who have taken the time to talk with her know she does not. Secondly, I also believe that one doesn't have the right to sterotype Ms. Sole as someone just here to read our books and magazines, eat our various foods, and experiment with our dating habits.

I do think, however, that we as Americans, with all of our various ethnic groups, should consider ourselves lucky that we are able to experience and learn from our different heritages. I also believe that we should consider ourselves fortunate to be able to offer all foreign exchange students (and they us) a way of viewing a different set of cultural values. I think we can learn just as many "lessons" from them as they can learn from us.

Unfortunatly, it is true that some Americans need to be less egocentric and open their eyes to a whole world full of diverse cultures and customs.

COMMENTARY

Questioning the Arms Race

By ROCCO TRICARICO

Lately there has been an issue which is being put on a back burner. The arms race is and will always be an important issue between superpowers. Too much money is being spent on nuclear weapons and others in the like. Now however the race is expanding further. Star Wars, an experimental defense shield is costing the United States a lot of money. My personal opinion is one in which this mindless expansion of war tools is absolutely unnecessary.

What is the "Arms Race?" The Arms Race is the battle between the superpowers, USA and USSR, to have the larger stock pile. Therefore, in effect, the larger being stronger and preventing their country from nuclear warfare.

So what does this Arms Race do to us? Let's just take a look around. Many Americans use this as some mindless form of power. They feel that having millions of tons of thermonuclear devices sitting in everyone's front yards makes us safe.

This is the kind of stupidity that should stop. It's turning the world into a sitting bomb waiting to go off. Is it really fair to other smaller countries that would have to live in a radioactive world? So what's the alternative? Many now feel the right thing to do rather than stock piling is to build a shield, called "Star Wars."

Star Wars is the American way of getting out of nuclear war. It works on the principle that when a long range missile reaches its peak, through laser armed satellites it may be shot down.

This sounds great except for a couple of problems: the system is not 100% effective and it cannot help out with short range missiles. Short range missiles granted can only fly 300 miles so central America has no problem. The real problem is this system eliminates about 9 out of every 10 missiles in the laboratory, that's with controlled conditions. The Soviet Union has enough missiles to "nuke over" the United States 6 times thoroughly. So in effect in this situation if the Soviets fired 6000 missiles at us 600 would get through.

Six hundred is a large number, large enough to really devastate the United States. So is this Star Wars and this Arms Race really healthy for our world? I feel that more time, money, and effort be put forth at a bargaining table, rather than a warhead assembly line. It makes more sense. Let's look at it this way, who wins a nuclear war, the power that devastates the other, or the power that has to live in a devastated world?

Sesquicentennial Blahs

By JIM LONG
and MARY Hill

The sound of jackhammers, the inconvenience of our new "mall", and the sight of men goofing off can mean only one thing . . . . Happy Birthday Longwood!

Longwood's new facial has been in the making for over a month now. Our $200,000 dollar mall will be all fine and dandy, that is when it's done, but right now it is just a mud pie that gets in the way.

If you live in the highrises you have to take the scenic tour around the block, or the obstacle course through it to get to the Rotunda. If you live in the Cunninghams it's not so bad but you still have to look at it.

Oktoberfest is but a few weeks away and the Mall dedication is drawing near. Sources say that 90% of the work should be completed by this time. Good Luck!

Another feature of the Sesquicentennial was the recent Symposium Series on the Future of Education. While most of the presentations were during class time a few of us got to Jarman (past all of THAT construction work) to see some of the series.

Those who did attend learned that their college resembled a "flower garden." Some students were shocked to find out that they were the "seeds" of the future, but after hearing it at least twice the metaphor implanted itself in the "fertile soil" of their brains.

Even though this column has been pessimestic, the Sesquicentennial Semi-Formal Ball promises to make up for everything else. The tickets were free, a particularly "UnLongwood-like" occurrence, as was the rate at which the tickets were obtained. Could it be that it was the Laser-Light Extravaganza that drew such an unusual crowd, or was it the Open Bar? We shall see.

As lucky as we are to be a part of the Sesquicentennial Celebration (and we REALLY are), perhaps we should leave a time capsule to warn the class of 2039 about the hazards they will face when the Bicentennial arrives.

I would ask Mr. Hash to think about this — How many Americans can even speak a second language fluently? Can you tell me how the hispanic world celebrates Christmas or even death? How much culture awarness do most Americans have? The disappointing answer is not much.

We in the United States have made great strides in ending racial prejudices, but we are far from that goal. It is sad that many Americans still rely on prejudicial adjectives to describe whole races of people. This bigotry is appalling. Until our country is free of people who sterotype and prejudge others, I don't think we have any rights to teach other cultures "lessons". After all, wouldn't we just be teaching hypocrisy?

"Most who follow the cause," he contended, "don't do it because it's a rock star thing. Those people get washed out after the concerts are over."

So the group is out recruiting again. This time — it also mounted lower-key concerts in the late seventies and early eighties — there are only U.S. three stops — Philadelphia, Los Angeles and Oakland — for the "Human Rights Now!" tour that will touch down in India, Europe, Japan, Africa, Latin America and perhaps even the Soviet Union before ending.

But at the same time, AI has designated the second week in October a U.S. campus activities week, complete with lectures and concerts to raise awareness of the issue.

"We'll have an Oklahoma Human Rights Now! concert with local bands," OU's Hailey promised.

Reporter Williams thinks another key to AI's success is that, once the students get to their local campus meeting, they get to choose from a cafeteria assortment of ways to end torture around the world.

"Young people need to realize the power they can have over the future and over their own destiny," Peter Gabriel told the Washington Post. "If you follow the line of the cynics on compassion fatigue, you end up with a world that doesn't care, that feels impotent, that is unable to voice its feelings or to have any influence over its own life, and that's very self-destructive."

Longwood: A Suitcase College

By JENNIFER A. MEELER

The prevalence of "suit case" students at our fine institution has become obvious to all. Many students merely show up during the school week for classes and socializing and then head back to the homestead for weekend enjoyment. Should these students be blamed for not staying? Is it the individual's fault that he finds the weekends boring, or the school's? For instance, many students complain that the school provides no interesting activities on the weekends and more importantly, Farmville, to quote one scholar, is "dead on weekends."

These are legitimate complaints: yes, not too many activities are planned on weekends; that is if you're not into movies, parties, and sports events. In response to the second point, Farmville is closed on Sunday except for various convenience stores and the like, however, it is open on Saturday. Besides, how much shopping do you usually do at home on Sunday?

Another very important reason to go home on the weekends is the presence of a "significant other" whom one has left behind. No attempt will even be made to disprove the logic of this one; however, could not the "significant other" visit Longwood? Such a visit would certainly make the college more interesting.

Furthermore, it is extremely important for one to stay at college as much as possible to avoid homesickness. If a student goes home every weekend to his parents, then he is not learning one of the most important lessons he came to college for: to learn how to live on his own and how to manage his time and finances, as well as household skills, such as doing the laundry and (horror!) cleaning the dorm room and dishes.

Also, by staying at Longwood on the weekends and becoming involved in the activities which occur, one develops an affection for his school and the "Longwood Spirit" of community and pride. Furthermore, as this is the institution's sesquicentennial year, many exciting activities, such as the Birthday Celebration, Oktoberfest, the Renaissance Dinners, Spring Weekend, and numerous others have been planned — and most of them will occur on the weekends. Don't miss out!

The Miracle Worker To Open October 5th

The story of Helen Keller, an author, speaker, ambassador of good will, and sponsor of deaf-blind people, will be the first production of the Longwood Players and the Department of Visual and Performing Arts, Speech and Theater Program. "The Miracle Worker" will open on Wednesday, October 5th and close on Saturday, October 8th in Jarman Auditorium with the curtain going up at 8:00 P.M.

Helen, who was left blind and deaf at the age of one, becomes wild, stubborn, and totally unmanageable. Her parents hire Annie Sullivan to teach Helen. Months pass and Annie does not succeed. Finally, in desperation she moves Helen away from her interfering family. After several weeks Helen does become obedient, but her family takes her back into their world of pity. At the water pump, the "miracle" occurs as Helen starts to understand that objects have names. Helen is transformed from willful ignorance to willingness to learn. The Keller family has lost a dependent tyrant and gained a girl whose dignity would bring light to the world.

On May 18, 1927 Helen Keller spoke at Longwood College. Dr. Jarman introduced her to a record-breaking audience. Her visit to Farmville was sponsored by the Lions Club.

Ms. Stephanie Feyne, LC guest director, comes from New York with a wealth of talent, energy, and expertise in working with deaf people. She is an actress, a director, and a "signer" or interpreter for the deaf. In addition to her job as a director, Ms. Feyne has taught classes entitled "Communication With the Deaf" and "Auditions."

Playing the role of Annie Sullivan, the miracle worker, is junior Amy Roderer. Helen is being portrayed by Alexandria Palamountain, a local junior high school student. Rounding out the cast are: Karen Whitely, Scott Koeinsburg, Rick Codding, Becky Tavener, John Devaney, Laura Trala, Missy Miller, Patty Davis, Teresa Kilner, Betsy Loop, Steve Gibbons, Kim Graves, Verne Williamson, Sheri Center and Wendi Dudly.

Mark Twain said the two most interesting people of the nineteenth century were Napoleon and Helen Keller.

Helen Keller became deaf and blind at the age of one due to a mysterious illness. At that time there were no successfully educated deaf-blind people in the world. This play details the struggle of those who loved her to try to protect her from the cruel world versus the determination of her teacher Annie Sullivan (who had been blind herself as a child) who was determined that Helen would not only obey, but think, feel, live and express herself as eloquently as any person of her era. She did.

James Gross is the technical director with Christine Geary serving as stage manager. Other persons working as crew chiefs are Reed Hoofnagle, Glen Gilmer, Norma Jeffer, Laura Trala, Sandra Clayton, Vere Williamson, Amy Copeland, Dee Schools, and James Locke. Mr. Moffatt Evans, assistant professor, is the designer with Mr. William Lynn, auditorium manager, serving as sound coordinator and Jerry Dagenhart, designer of costumes.

All Longwood students may attend the play free with their college ID. Faculty and staff may buy tickets for $2.00 at the door.

A Visit to the House

By BURNELLA M. GILBERT

ISH, Longwood's International Studies House, located on third floor Main Cunningham, is inhabited by a group of students with a strong interest in international studies and international affairs. ISH was founded during the summer of 1988 by Luigi Agostino, who also currently serves as R.A. for ISH, and Martha Sellers. Advisors to this organization include Dr. John Reynolds, who is also the director of Longwood's International Studies Program (ISP), Dr. Maria Silveira and programming committee advisors, Dr. Sue Saunders and Dr. Jim Crowl.

According to Luigi Agostino the purpose of this program is to make Longwood Students more internationally oriented and more aware of different cultures and to provide a forum for further discussion of international matters. Agostino says that he hopes the organization will help the students of Longwood in the area of "cultural growth and experience." He also hopes that it will make Longwood more competitive with other colleges and universities in the area of international studies.

The International Studies House will be sponsoring intellectual dinners, trips to various embassies in Washington, D.C. and trips to historical sites in Virginia. These trips will be advertised and will be open for participation to all students after ISH residents have been accommodated. ISH plans to have fund raisers in order to help reduce the cost of travel as well as other expenses. Says Dr. Reynolds of the diligent efforts of both Luigi Agostino and Martha Sellers, "student input like that of Luigi and Martha is what is needed in order for the International Studies Program to maintain an international focus."

ARA Mondays: Dining Hall Workers Needed

By KRISTIN L. HOSIER

The "Monday Blues", for some reason, seem to culminate all of life's little woes and present them to the student body on this one, special day of the week. Two things, in particular, can make anyone's bad Monday worse: 1) having spent all of one's money during the previous weekend, and 2) having one's patience tested by a frustrating meal in the dining hall. Recently, a friend of mine (who has chosen to remain anonymous), had such a Monday.

Waiting in line for clean trays or a fresh round of food isn't really so bad in itself; however, most people's patience has worn thin after not eating for five or six hours, and remember, it's Monday. After waiting almost ten minutes for their food, this person was brought a substitute for their original choice (and reason for having waited). Well, snags will happen, so they opted to make a nice, hearty salad to help compensate, and found no oil at the salad bar for dressing; again, this isn't really a big problem, unless prepared salad dressing in to one the equivalent of cruciferous homocide. In this case it was.

After returning to the table, the diner in quest thought some nice, hot soup sounded like a good alternative to the items not available, only to find no soup of the day. Calmly, they approached the beverage area, and found no ice, and no cups to drink from. Once my friend sat down to "eat". I noticed their nostrils begin to flare, and the lobes of their ears turn a little red, and I made the mistake of asking, "What's the matter?"

This stirred my curiosity as to why we experience days like this in the dining hall (not all of them Mondays, of course), and I approached Rick Johnson, Longwood's Director of ARA Dining Service on the matter. "We weren't assigned as many (work study) students this year as last year. Students make up over fifty percent of our total staff," responded Johnson. This year the dining halls are operating on approximately two thirds of the man power as in years past; it has been noted, too, that without the success of the new tray rule, operation would be virtually impossible. Lunch, in particular, is when more workers are needed for a couple of hours, simply because most students have classes around this time.

Longwood's ARA Dining Service, in conjunction with the Financial Aid Office, is looking for ANY students who would like to earn extra money and spend a few hours a week with their fellow students to help fill this void. A person doesn't need to be eligible for financial aid to qualify, and spending money earned can help to ease a case of the "Monday Blues". It's a great way to get to know people as well, and participate in social events, programs, and ARA-sponsored activities. Incentive is in abundance with these various events, along with the opportunity to earn "ARA Dollars" for work performed, which can be spent at the end of the year during the ARA Party and Auction on everything from clothing to VCRs. "We're trying to get across a message about working in the dining hall," said Johnson, not only with regard to the jobs this year being more specific and pleasant (now that much of the dish clean-up has been eliminated), but with the social and monetary opportunities as well.

To inquire about the positions open for workers and duties involved, please contact Mr. Don Robinson in Blackwell Dining Hall, during normal meal hours, Monday through Friday.

GEIST would like to congratulate its 1988 Klowns and Spirit Leaders:

Parris Blasts Dukakis' Stand on D.C. Statehood

(Springfield, VA) – Congressman Stan Parris (R-Virginia) blasted Democratic Presidential candidate Michael Dukakis today for his statement that he would "fight for statehood for the District of Columbia." Dukakis made the statement before a meeting of the Congressional Black Caucus recently.

Congressman Parris, the Vice-Chairman of the House District of Columbia Committee has been the leader in the fight against D.C. statehood.

"Not only is the current legislation before Congress unconstitutional," said Mr. Parris, "but its proponents have promised to impose a half billion dollar commuter tax on residents of Virginia and Maryland who commute into the District of Columbia to work."

The District government is currently barred from imposing a commuter tax on Virginia and Maryland residents under legislation establishing home rule for the District of Columbia. According to a constituent survey to Virginia's 8th District residents 90% of those people responding were opposed to D.C. statehood.

"The Dukakis statement is a condescending appeal to a special interest group despite the proposal's blatant disregard for the Constitution of the United States."

Mr. Parris contends that statehood for the District of Columbia requires a Constitutional amendment, since Article 1, Section 3 of the Constitution reserves to Congress the power to exercise exclusive legislation, in all cases whatsoever, over such District as may ". . . become the Seat of Government of the United States . . ." That power is perpetual unless revoked or modified through Constitutional Amendment.

The proposal also violates Article IV, Section 3 of the Constitution; the "equal footing" doctrine by which all states are required to enter the Union; and would require the repeal of the 23rd Amendment to the Constitution.

"Governor Dukakis has apparently forgotten that the District of Columbia is a Federal City and the capital for over 240 million Americans. In addition, D.C. statehood would make the Lorton Prison a permanent colony of the new state located entirely in Virginia. Today, there is another escaped murderer wandering around Virginia due to the District's incompe-

Schonauer In Top 10

Longwood freshmen Daphne Sole and Amy Schonauer placed in the top 10 Sunday at the 54-hole James Madison Invitational Tournament. The six-team event was held at the par-73, 5,898 yard Spotswood Country Club Course near Harrisonburg.

Sole shot 85-76-77-238 to tie for fourth place and Schonauer carded a 76-78-86-240 to tie for sixth place as Longwood shot a 327-330-329-986 for fourth place. Host James Madison easily took the title with a 322-312-320-954 as JMU's Donna Martz was individual winner at 78-76-73-227.

Methodist was second at 334-323-319-976, Penn State third at 328-333-324-985, Longwood fourth, Appalachian State fifth at 348-359-348-1055 and College of Charleston sixth at 377-376-380-1133.

Other Longwood scorers included: Ashley Warren 82-87-79-248 (15th place), Angie Monro 84-91-87-262 who (tied for 28th) and Sherry Evans 94-89-94-277 (34th).

Playing as individuals for Longwood were Beth Plecker 91-89-88-268 (32nd), Kim Poirier 96-93-90-279 (tied for 35th) and Laura Lyons 103-100-97-300 (40th).

Longwood winds up its fall season at the University of Kentucky Lady Kat Invitational October 14-16.

Thompson Player Of Week

Freshman goalkeeper Steve Thompson notched his third shutout of the season Sunday in Longwood's 0-0 tie with NAIA power South Carolina Spartanburg, and for his performance, Thompson has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period September 25-October 2. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

Thompson recorded eight saves in Sunday's game, and, with the support of his teammates, helped Longwood gain the tie to remain unbeaten at 9-0-1. A 6-0, 175-pounder, he had several saves which prevented sure-fire goals for the visiting Rifles.

"Steve turned in a great performance," said Lancer coach Rich Posipanko. "He has a knack for being in the right place at the right time."

A graduate of Gar-Field High School, Thompson has been a member of the Virginia State Team since 1984 and the regional Olympic development team since 1985. In football, he earned All-Area, All-Region, All-State and All-Metropolitan honors as a placekicker.

Booters Hold Their Own

Longwood's soccer team, ranked seventh in last week's ISAA-Gatorade Division II poll, remained unbeaten Sunday when a sterling defensive effort produced a 0-0 tie with NAIA power USC Spartanburg at First Avenue Field.

Now 9-0-1, Longwood got great play from freshman goalkeeper Steve Thompson and the entire team Sunday. The Lancers concentrated on blanking the Rifles and carried out the mission through regulation and two 10-minute overtimes.

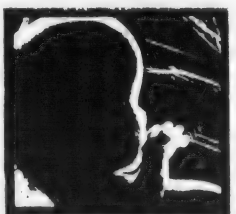
"We had a great effort on everybody's part today," coach Rich Posipanko told his team after the game. "We probably stole a tie and we could have stolen a win if a break or two had gone our way. I think you saw today that we can play with anybody in the country when we play tight defense.

"Spartanburg was more talented individually," said Posipanko later. "We were just trying to keep together, contain them and knock in a goal when we had the chance."

The Lancers played inspired team defense, blunting numerous onslaughts by the visitors from South Carolina. Out-shot by the Rifles 8-3, Longwood had several good scoring chances. Midfielder Chris Helmus had a clear shot at a header in the first overtime, but the ball sailed over the goal. Spartanburg's Scott Cherry covered Lancer ace Ray Jones like a blanket.

While Sunday's tie marked the first time that Longwood has been shut-out this season, it also marked the first time that Jones has been held without a goal or an assist since the 1987 season ended. The sophomore now has 12 goals and 11 assists for the year.

USC-Spartanburg, perhaps the most talented foe on Longwood's 1988 schedule, kept the pressure on the Lancers most of the day. The Rifles, 8-2-2 after Sunday's deadlock, had a 0-0 tie recently with Tampa, the third ranked team in Division II. Spartanburg's losses have come at the hands of Clemson and North Carolina.



Longwood next turns its attention to Eastern Division Virginia Intercollegiate Soccer Association foe Mary Washington, whom the Lancers visit Wednesday for a 3:30 game. Saturday will bring a contest at Eastern Division member Virginia Wesleyan at 2:00. Longwood hosts Hampden-Sydney next Tuesday at 4:00.

The Lancers, who ripped visiting Virginia Military 9-0 last Tuesday, also picked up a forfeit victory from Marymount. Longwood picked up the 1-0 win when Marymount coach Robert Van Hauser informed Posipanko that the Saints would not be making the trip to Farmville Saturday.

Longwood owned VMI from start to finish in Tuesday's contest. Up 4-0 at halftime, the Lancers got two goals from Nils McCarty in the first half and two from Kirk Rhinehart in the second half. Jones had a goal and two assists. Also scoring for Longwood were Helmus, Bill Moore, Kenny Lim and Rich Venere.

Lim's goal was perhaps the most unusual. The junior got credit for the score when a VMI booter mistakenly kicked the ball into his own goal, in an effort to boot the ball away.

Freshman goalkeeper Chuck Loughry notched the shutout and came up with several nice saves, but the Keydets weren't able to mount much of an attack for most the day. VMI dropped to 2-5-1 for the year.

Lady Lancers Bounce Back

It was the best of times; it was the worst of times for Longwood field hockey Saturday and Sunday. The best of times came in a satisfying 4-2 victory over Appalachian State Sunday. The worst of times was LC's 5-1 loss to 17th-ranked Duke Saturday.

After the weekend action, Longwood's record stands at 1-4. The Lady Lancers take the field twice this week: Wednesday against Loyola, and Friday versus Georgetown. Both contests begin at 4:00 on Barlow Field.

"We finally got the monkey off our backs," said coach Sue Finnie after the victory over ASU.

Laura Goetz scored first for the Lady Lancers at 6:50 left in the first half from a Diane Brown feed. Goetz scored again at the 21-second mark, with Liz Annet notching the assist. Annet opened second-half scoring from a Beanie Felch assist with 17:07 left. Felch and Annet teamed up again at the 6:04 mark with a Felch goal and an Annet assist.

"We played together, and we looked good," Finnie said. "We were getting the loose balls, and that usually means victory."

Longwood outshout ASU 26-20. Goalie Maria Dougherty, in her first start, notched 11 saves. She was aided by sweeper Carver Ports who had two defensive saves. Felch and Annet led Longwood in the tackles/interceptions category with ten and eight to their credit.

Finnie named Felch, Brown, Goetz, and Dougherty Players of the Game, commenting, "Beanie and Diane gave their whole heart to each game. The floodgates have finally opened for Laura; she has scored three goals in two games. Maria had a fine day out there today."

Longwood's youth showed against Duke. The Lady Lancers were outscored 5-1 in the first half. In the second, LC settled down and held the 17th-ranked Blue Devils to a scoreless tie behind freshman goalie Dougherty, who saw her first collegiate action in the second half.

Goetz scored from her own rebound with 3:21 left in the first half. Felch and Judith Barnett led the Lady Lancers in tackles/interceptions with 13. Celeste Lloyd and Hollie Phelps both had eight tackles/interceptions. Player of the Game honors went to Dougherty, who held Duke scoreless after coming in for second-half action.

Men's Golf Ties For Sixth Place

By RICHIE JONES

The Longwood men's golf team shot a 324-321-645 to finish in a tie for sixth place at the Hampton Invitational Golf Tournament last Monday and Tuesday at Deer Run Municipal golf course in Newport News.

Eleven teams vied for the title with Christopher Newport coming away with the victory. The Captains shot a 304-311-615 to defeat second place Newport News Apprentice by twelve strokes. The medalist was David Granham of Newport News Apprentice who shot 76-75-151.

Longwood's top finisher was Darrell Nichols who shot 83-76-159. Jeff Smiley shot 82-80-162, Scott Wiseman 84-78-162, Hank Kim 79-88-167, Robbie Hare 82-85-167 and Jason Taylor 94-95-189.

"Darrell played very well for us, and Hank's first day 79 was his best ever round in tournament play at Longwood." Lancer coach Steve Nelson commented. "Jeff and Scott also played pretty well.

"Darrell was even par going into the last five holes of the second round, but he went four over the rest of the way. He had a super round going until then."

The Lancers will be in action again Monday and Tuesday (October 3-4) when they travel to Buies Creek, N.C. for the Campbell University Tournament.

Hampton Invitational Team scores: Christopher-Newport 304-311-615, Newport News Apprentice 316-311-627, South Carolina State 317-315-632, Chowan 308-325-633, Virginia Wesleyan 327-321-638, Longwood 324-321-645, Lenoir C.C. 321-324-645, St. Augustine's 325-321-646, Randolph-Macon 327-325-652, Hampton 338-345-683, Tennessee State 343-346-689.

tence at the Lorton Reformatory – perhaps Dukakis doesn't care or would have furloughed him anyway."

"Virginia has been victimized by the mismanagement and incompetence of the District of Columbia government long enough," said the Virginia Congressman. "We in Virginia are forced to take their garbage, their prisoners and their sewage sludge. Mr. Dukakis apparently is insensitive to Virginia's concerns or is more worried about D.C.'s three electoral votes than he is about Virginia's twelve."

"Mr. Dukakis may be determined to turn Mayor Barry into Governor Barry," said the 8th District Congressman, "but he should not expect Virginia to help him do it this November."

Riding Team Returns

The Lancer riding team opened its season September 24 at William and Mary, finishing eighth overall. The young squad is expecting to do well this year. The overall outlook for the next few seasons looks very promising for the Lancer riders as well.

The Lancer riders were expecting a good showing in their competition at Goucher College in Towson, Maryland last Sunday.

The riders are once again being led by coach Mary Whitlock, now in her tenth year at Longwood. Returning Lancers are Jennifer Smith, last season's Most Valuable Player, Scott Flood, Kandi Klotz, Sharon Kaurmann, Shelley Malone, Kathy Sykes, Katherine Smith, and George Schulz.

The Lancers add eight newcomers to the 1988-89 squad. The new Lancer riders are Ashley Smith, Carey Seitz, Crystal Mitchell, Julie Miller, Stephanie Handley, Susan Conrad, Mary Shigo, and Holly Wagner.

At William and Mary, the ribbon winners were Seitz, Jennifer Smith (3rd, Open Flat and 4th, Open Jumping), Sykes (4th, Novice Flat), Conrad (4th, Intermediate Jumping), Mitchell (4th, Novice Jumping and 6th, Novice Flat), Malone (5th, Novice Flat), Miller (5th, Intermediate Flat and 6th, Intermediate Jumping), Ashley Smith (5th, Advanced Walk-Trot-Canter), Shultz (6th, Intermediate Flat), Klotz (6th, Novice Jumping), and Katherine Smith (6th, Advanced Walk-Trot-Canter).

Alcohol Awareness Week Declared

By STEVE WILSON

Farmville — Longwood President William Dorrill today officially proclaimed October 31-November 4, as "Alcohol Awareness Week." Student-run activities on the local campus, supported by faculty and administration, will follow the NATIONAL COLLEGIATE ALCOHOL AWARENESS WEEK (NCAAW) held October 16-21, 1988. Students nationwide are promoting alcohol education, development of student decision-making skills, and positive peer influence.

"'Alcohol Awareness Week' at Longwood initiates a year-round emphasis on alcohol education and recognition of the individual's ultimate responsibility for decisions regarding use or non-use of alcohol," said President Dorrill. "It is in the best interest of students, faculty, administrators and the community that such decision-making be responsible and well-informed. In addition, we want to encourage a partnership to prevent campus problems associated with alcohol misuse."

Longwood College won the Governor's Award for Excellence in Alcohol Education in both 1986-87 and 1987-88. There were over 65 colleges and universities throughout the state in competition for this Award. An Award ceremony, held by Governor Gerald L. Baliles at the governor's mansion, is set for October. Since its inception in 1986, Longwood College has, each year, won this Award.

Our local "Alcohol Awareness Week" will include various workshops, displays and activities across the Longwood campus all aimed at prevention through education and individual responsibility in connection with the use of alcohol.

Business Innovation Center Up and Ready

By P. A. FAIRS

The Longwood Business Innovation Center, founded in 1986, has opened its doors once again to students, faculty, and local business in the surrounding ten counties.

The Center welcomes a new Director, Gerald L. Hughes, Jr. Jerry has an extensive background in small business operations, and an extensive amount of experience as an entrepreneur. Jerry comes to Longwood from the University of West Virginia where he served as the Program Manager with the Small Business Development Center Division of the West Virginia Institute of Technology. He has 13 years business experience as an owner and manager, and 7 years as a college level instructor.

With the leadership of an experienced Deputy Director, Debbie Epperson and two returning interns, Tim Tabler and Tom Maroney, the Innovation Center has high expectations.

Accompanying the returning staff are six new interns: John Boatwright, Ricky Otey, Beth Morris, Anne Faison, Shirley Berry, and Jeff Norton.

The Center is geared for another exciting semester hoping to increase awareness and assistnace to businesses in the surrounding area. The Center is not only here for local businesses, but here for Longwood students and faculty, too. If you have an interesting idea about a future business, come in and talk to the LBIC staff. College campuses have been the birthplace for many business startups for many students and faculty. YOU too could become a Future Business Leader!!

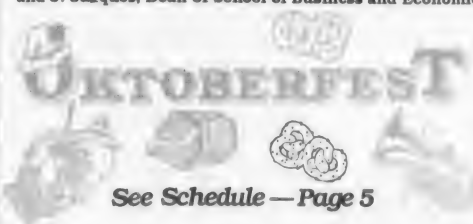
Historical Notes

By CHERYL JEFFREY



Prior to 1860, Longwood was known as Farmville Female Seminary. However, the name was changed to Farmville Female College on May 24, 1860. The first faculty of the college consisted of six members, which included their first president, Mr. LaMonte.

Enrollment was limited to thirty boarding students to give, "home air and influence." In the Annual Register of 1859 to 1860 it was stated, "The pupils boarding in this college, reside with the family of the President and are under his guardianship. In their evening studies they will

Challenge 1989: A Career Fair for the Class of '89

By BILL FROUDE

The Longwood College Office of Career Planning & Placement (OCPP) in conjunction with eight other Virginia colleges has developed an award winning career fair that provides seniors an opportunity to meet with representatives from over sixty (60) national and regional corporations and organizations. The Challenge Career Fair is an annual event and this year's program is shaping up to be one of the best ever. Therefore, it is highly recommended that seniors take advantage of this program.

Challenge 1989 will begin the evening of November 9 with a reception for the employers attending. The actual Fair will take place on Wednesday, November 10 at the Radisson Hotel in Lynchburg. The Fair is broken up into two sessions: one Wednesday morning and the other Wednesday afternoon. According to Niki Fallis, director of OCPP, most Longwood students will attend the Fair together on Wednesday morning.

Employers participating in Challenge 1989 are supplying information to OCPP so that students may learn about the opportunities available. You should make time to look this material over. If there is a company, or companies, with whom you wish to interview, you must submit a resume to OCPP for each company before Friday, October 14. OCPP will then send those resumes to the company representatives and they will in turn notify OCPP by November 9 as to whom they have selected to interview. It is important to remember, however, that not all companies participating in Challenge will be interviewing at the Fair. Some will simply be collecting resumes for their future needs. In any case, the Fair is a great way to make contacts.

Seniors wishing to participate in Challenge 1989 must complete the registration form and return it to the OCPP with the $5 registration fee by Friday, October 14. Registration forms are now available at the OCPP, 2nd Floor South Ruffner. In addition, students are required to attend resume writing and interviewing skills workshops. Schedules for these are listed in the Campus Bulletin and posted around campus. So far, over 100 Longwood seniors have signed up intending to participate in Challenge 1989. Don't be left out of this excellent opportunity . . . this program only happens once a year!

Artist Exhibits Work in 3 States

By P. A. FAIRS

Art works by Amie Oliver, a member of Longwood College's art faculty, have been selected for exhibits in three states.

Her "Paper Scissors Rock," a mixed media drawing, was selected for the annual drawing and painting show sponsored by the Batavia Society of Artists in Batavia, New York.

"Dialogue #2," a mixed media photograph, was chosen for the International Magic Silver Show at the University of Northern Iowa.

"Garden-Clubbing," a mixed media drawing, was selected for a juror's cash award in the Counterpoint 1988 exhibit at HCAF Gallery in Ingram, Texas.

Oliver is a graduate of Mississippi State University and holds the Master of Fine Arts degree from Bowling Green State University in Ohio. She came to Longwood in 1986.

Christian Concert Friday

By BETH A. LORD

The area campus ministers and the Inter-Religious Council are co-sponsoring a free Christian concert in conjunction with Oktoberfest weekend. The purpose of this is to offer a Christian alternative to other activities on campus.

The entertainment, provided by Bert Rait, a talented musician who plays the piano and both the 9-string and 12-string guitars, will begin at 7:00 p.m. on Friday, October 14th, at the Wesley Foundation.

Bert is a native of Aberdeen, Scotland, and was raised in a Baptist family. Since his commitment in the late seventies to serve Jesus Christ full-time, he has graduated from Southern Baptist Theological Seminary and has become an ordained Baptist minister. Bert has released two albums, "Change of Heart" and "Bert Rait Live". A third, "Sea of Love', is scheduled to be released and available at the concert.

Bert Rait is sure to provide an exciting and worshipful musical experience. Come on out and join the fun!

Delta Sigma Pi Takes Top Awards

By TOM FOSTER

Longwood College's chapter of Delta Sigma Pi professional business fraternity took the top awards again at the South Central Regional Meeting in Roanoke last weekend.

For the second consecutive year, Longwood's chapter was named "Most Outstanding Chapter" in the three-state region. They also were named to the national Chapter Efficiency Honor Roll, for the third time, for achieving the maximum of 100,000 points for professional and community service activities.

Mrs. C. Kristine Harbour, Chapter Advisor, received the "Regional Advisor of the Year" award and was presented a testimonial award of excellence during an awards luncheon held at the conference. At the Banquet and Rose Ball, Mrs. Harbour was surprised once again. Tears filled the room and exploded in a standing ovation as her letter of recommendation was read and the fraternity's Grand President announced that Mrs. Harbour had won the "National Advisor of the Year" award. Mrs. Harbour is an Accounting Professor in the Business Department and is well known throughout the fraternity as "MOM."

Longwood was represented at the regional Delta Sigma Pi meeting by a 32-member delegation, including current students, several alumni, and Mrs. Harbour.

"Our business program is now known internationally," said Tim Tabler, president of Longwood's chapter of Delta Sigma Pi, "and we intend to keep it going. We have enthusiastic members and a lot of new ideas this year."

The Longwood chapter currently has 30 strong and active members in their brotherhood and they strive together to reach their goals. Their success can also be attributed to the tremendous and faithful support of Dr. Jacques and the School of Business and Economics. Eleven of the business faculty members are brothers in Delta Sigma Pi.

The fraternity began in 1907 at New York University and has grown to well over 200 chapters nationwide. It began as a male fraternity and became co-ed in the mid 1970's. The Kappa Nu chapter at Longwood was chartered in April 1981 and has initiated over 170 students and faculty.

Amnesty in Farmville

By THOMAS ROBINSON

This year's Human Rights Now! tour of Amnesty International has a different goal to celebrate the successes of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights thus far and to continue the pressure on governments to carry the declaration goals to fulfillment.

December 10th is the 40th anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Amnesty International. Millions of signatures from around the world will be presented to the General Assembly on this anniversary. These signatures are proof that the people of the world support this document.

On Friday, October 14, a Human Rights Now! day will be held at Hampden-Sydney on the patio of Graham Hall. Several faculty members will be imprisoned, symbolic prisoners of conscience, and only student signatures can free them. These signatures will be added to the list being sent to the UN this December. There will also be a booth for Amnesty International at Oktoberfest.

Before World War II, a Central American country was able to get away with killing approximately 3000 peasants with the destruction of one village. Now, even the suffering of a single prisoner of conscience may be known by any countries. Amnesty International works. Find out about it this weekend!

Amnesty International Hampden-Sydney may be contacted at 223-7469 or Box 863, H-S, 23943.

Happiest Show in Town

By P.A. FAIRS

Pump Boys and Dinettes, described by Newsweek magazine as "the happiest show in town," will come to Longwood College's Jarman Auditorium on Wednesday, Oct. 19. Curtain time is 8 p.m.

The show, by a New York touring company, centers on the dreams, plans, and foibles of "gas station Joes" and "lunch counter Janes." The setting is the Double Cupp Diner and gas station on Highway 57, USA.

Nominated for a Tony Award as Best Broadway Musical of 1982, the show features a wonderful medley of music – country, rock, gospel, bluegrass, ballads, and blues – plus funny dialogue and energetic dancing.

The New York Times critic wrote: "Pump Boys and Dinettes is as refreshing as an ice cold beer after a bowl of five-alarm chili." The show ran at the Princess Theatre on Broadway for a year and a half and has since toured throughout the U.S. and in Europe. It has inspired an NBC television special, a CBS record album, and a hit single.

The show is part of Longwood's Series of the Performing Arts. General admission is $6.50; $5.50 for senior citizens over 65, youth under 18, and Longwood employees. Longwood students will be admitted free with college ID.

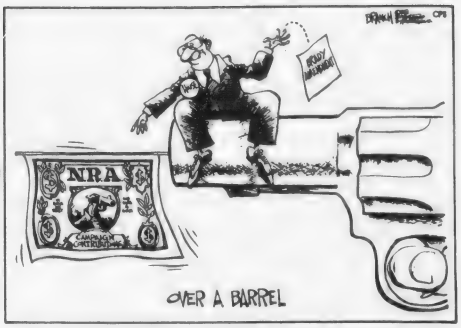
Managing the Critical Balance

There is no easy solution. It's a problem college students everywhere face. How does one handle all of one's responsibilities and still manage to have leisure time?

College life often involves schedules that are too time-consuming to allow for free time or sleep. But sacrificing leisure time altogether is not good for mental or physical efficiency.

College frequently falls short of the students' images of it as an institution of excellent opportunities for both career preparation and recreational activities. Students may or may not bring the disappointment on themselves depending on course load, extracurricular involvement and other responsibilities.

Instructors sometimes forget that their classes are filled with students who take a full load, work part-time or fulltime, and who are obligated to certain organizations. Assignments are often extensive, leaving even the best students with too little time to complete their studies. If and when studying is completed, barely enough time remains for sleep. A night on the town is out of the question.



A wise saying states, "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." This is especially true for the college population.

Using one's time wisely can help this situation tremendously. Organization is the key.

Maybe the best way to enjoy both academic and social achievement, without sacrificing rest, is to follow a working schedule or to establish a routine of daily activities.

Grades should take top priority, but they can be the major area of concentration without becoming the only area of concentration. Students and teachers alike need to consider the fact that a student's well-balanced life does not mix business with pleasure, but allows specific times for each.

With the help of understanding instructors, organization and quality study time, students can begin to enjoy college and win the war against exhaustion.

This is the last Rotunda for October. The next paper will come out Tuesday, November 1, 1988.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor:

The various zoning and expansion plans related to our exuberant Longwood College are of interest to all our beautiful town.

Some original thinking is called for to avoid problems that accompany any human endeavor.

A ever-growing need for parking space seems to be a primary concern for the college — especially with plans for new library to take over the main parking lot in a year or two — and no vacant space in view.

I would assume that planning, purchase, demolition and construction of a parking lot would involve several thousand dollars for each space, plus maintenance and loss of taxable property etc.

Since about 80% of the cars are owned by campus residents, why not offer a tuition subsidy of several hundred dollars to any student who will do without four wheels? The proposals of improved bus service offer some hope, and there are few places in Farmville out of range of any student who understand the value of foot-power and fresh air. Or else increase tuition for students with cars.

Which brings to mind the invisible but disastrous air-poisons from our American addiction to the auto, which should certainly comprise a working part of any higher education.

(After years with no car we will confess to having an old Chevy that usually comes to life only on Sunday morning.)

Big Step in Ending the Myth

The Brothers of Pi Kappa Phi took a major step this past week in ending the "Animal House Myth". The myth being that greek life steers you away from academics, community service, brotherhood, sisterhood, and leadership roles and pushes you towards sexual abuse, alcohol abuse, and misconduct. Under the leadership of president Brian Kava, the Pi Kapps received a video tape from their Nationals. This video, Will Kiems, "Demythologizing, Animal House", is a "53" minute video explaining why this myth is a misconception. The Pi Kapps hope to end this myth by showing the video tape to the greek community of Longwood College. Brian Kava stated, "Being Greek is much more than a Party to go to on every Friday or Saturday night...It is scholarship, leadership, campus involvement, athletics, community service and social events. We Greeks must work as one, to make the Greek system whole and united." The Pi Kapps hope that their efforts in making Longwood's Greek system the best it can be will not go undaunted!

Netters Close with Victory

Longwood sophomore Heather Leach and senior Lauri Labyak battled through near-darkness and won a tiebreaker in the deciding set, propelling the Lady Lancer tennis team to a 5-4 victory over Virginia Wesleyan in Norfolk Wednesday.

Ending the fall season on a positive note, Longwood got singles wins from Mary Lynn Lawman, Roxanne Boucher and Laura Vollrath, and a doubles win from Linda Swe and Vollrath to even the match at 4-4.

Leach and Labyak were involved in the final match of the day, and came out on top to give Longwood the win.

Notes

At that time, the school became sponsored by the Methodist Conference and was known as Farmville College. Until 1882 Reverend Paul Whitehead was in charge of the college. He then turned the college over to Miss Fannie Carter. Miss Carter ran it as a school for girls for two years.

Serious economic problems evolved in Prince Edward County in the 1880's. This was caused by low tobacco sales. The condition worsened to the point that it was not likely that a girls' school could be supported in Farmville. Therefore, town members decided to try to establish the college as a state normal school for teachers.

The establishment of the normal school marked the beginning of a new era in education at Longwood. This period will be covered in greater detail next week.

The Iron Worker, Autumn 1955, was the source of much of this information.

Longwood has many traditions, among them CHI is the most prevalent. As the college grows, CHI also innovates new ideas while keeping the old. Some of those approaches have been the tolling of the bells and turning the Joan of Arc statue. More recently . . . blue carnations in the dining hall, blue campus bulletins, raising of banners, Christmas decor balls, and the CHI dolls are evidence of CHI support. .

CHI of 1989 has created "CHI-KERCHIEFS" symbolizing the student body's efforts to maintain the SPIRIT OF LONGWOOD! This is shown by riddles published in the Rotunda which leads one to the location of a small banner that is printed with the CHI emblem.

Therefore, be on the lookout for any physical evidence as well as the spirit of CHI. CHI is watching you! !

Riders Gain Experience

BY MIKE McGRATH

The Lancer riding team traveled to Goucher College for their second show of the season October 2. The team faced tough competition at the show and finished ninth place overall.

The riding team was led by Jennifer Smith who placed 3rd (Open Flat) and 5th (Open Fences), Shelley Malone 3rd (Novice Fences) and 6th (Novice Flat), Scott Flood 3rd (Intermediate Fences) and 6th (Intermediate Flat), George Shultz 3rd (Intermediate Fences) and 4th (Intermediate Flat), Carey Seitz 4th (Novice Flat), Julie Miller 5th (Intermediate Flat), Ashley Smith 4th (Advanced Walk-Trot) and Sharon Kaufmann 5th (Advanced Walk-Trot-Canter).

The young riders are learning quickly and the experience that they are gaining at the intercollegiate level should pay off in the competitions to come.

Lloyd Named Player of Week

CELESTE LLOYD

The coach had difficulty choosing Players of the Game. "I can't make all these people Players of the Game!" Finnie finally settled on annet, Lloyd, Howells, and Cini.

"Liz is finally scoring. She is really one of the best left wings in the South, and I was glad to see the gates finally open for her. Celeste is a very consistent, steady player. The harder the competition, the harder she plays. Kim was really 'on' today. She is a strong goalie, and her clears today really helped out a lot. Lara is always at the right place at the right time. We've played her at three positions this season, and everytime I tell her to play a different one, she says, 'All right, coach,' and does a great job."

Longwood fell to Loyola (MD) Wednesday by a 2-1 margin in a very even contest. The Greyhounds eked out a victory when an apparent Annet goal was disallowed in the waning seconds of the contest. Longwood's Felch opened the day's scoring with 26:20 left in the first half on a Judith Barnett feed.

Coach Sue Finnie commented, "We played excellently the entire game. We had strong passes and good hits. You can see by the shots (29-28 in favor of Loyola) that it was a very even game. We beat them last year 2-1, and it seems the Loyola-Longwood series is developing into a big rivalry."

Howells posted 17 saves. Barnett led the Lady Lancers with 14 tackles/interceptions.

Finnie named Howells, Felch, and Lloyd Players of the Game, noting, "Kim gave a super effort out there today, stopping quite a few shots in succession. Beanie provided good leadership for our young team. Celeste is really one of our better players. She isn't flashy, and she doesn't appear in the statistics a lot. She is just always there."

Boulding Ranks Fourth

Longwood baseball coach Buddy Bolding ranks fourth among NCAA Division II coaches in winning percentage, according to figures compiled by Steve Weller, sports information director at the University of Southern Illinois-Edwardsville.

Bolding has compiled a record of 270-114-2 in 10 years for a winning percentage of 70.2. All 10 of his Longwood squads have had winning seasons. Ranking above him in winning percentage are: Florida Southern's Chuck Anderson (225-72, 78.0) Troy State's Chase Riddle (355-123-2, 74.2), and Jacksonville, Alabama's Rudy Abbott (577-231, 71.4).

The top two Division II coaches in total victories are John Scolinos of Cal Poly-Pomona (1,129 wins, 41 years) and Tommy Thomas of Valdosta State (758, 21 years).

Bolding led Longwood to a 33-12 mark in 1988, marking the fifth time the Lancers have won 30 or more games.

Waxing Poetics Attract 600

By JACK TYNCH, SCOTT MORRISON and JAN-MARIE JOHNSON

In the Spirit of Alcohol Awareness Week, over 600 students attended a concert of the Waxing Poetics, held last Friday on Stubbs Mall. The event was possible through the cooperation of the Longwood Greek system, who supplied the Human Resources and the Financing through a fund designated for Alcohol Awareness.

The Waxing Poetics consists of Sean Hennessy, Paul Tiers, Bill Shearin, and David Middleton.

The band has been together for five years and has put out a single and two albums. The single was released in 1985. "Hermitage", the first Lp, was recorded at Mitch Easter's Drive In Studio in Winston-Salem, North Carolina. The album comes across with an R.E.M. sound, but also carries its own original sound. R.E.M.'s bassist, Mike Mills, produced this first full length Lp for the Waxing Poetics. The second lp recorded by the Poetics in January, "Mahakin Moon," was recorded in Chapel Hill, North Carolina. It is a strong album musically as well as

Historical Notes

By CHERYL JEFFREY

During the 1860's, students at Farmville Female College followed a strict daily routine. The following is a routine described as "Daily Exercises" in the Annual College Register and Announcement of 1859 to 1860.

Family prayers with teachers and students are held one hour after the wake-up bell. Worship is held in the chapel at a designated time after breakfast. After worship, students go to recitation rooms. Each exercise to be held in these rooms is specified on a study card, which allows a student to know what they have to do during each hour.

There are six hours of study in a day. After this time, the students may go to their rooms, the parlors, or the library. After tea, the ladies spend an hour and a half in study hall. The study time is then ended with family prayers. Thirty minutes later, a silence bell announces that it is time for bed. This marks the end of a typical day at Farmville Female College.

ZETA's Present Gifts to College

Nelly Shearer (far left) and Sherry Tilley, two representatives of Zeta Tau Alpha, present a bronze marker and announce their plans to Dr. Donald Stuart, a Longwood Administrator; Diane Hocker, ZTA chapter president; and alumni director Nancy Shelton.

By STEVE WILSON

Zeta Tau Alpha, a national sorority founded at Longwood College, has strengthened its already close ties with the College.

The sorority announced recently that it will fund a display case for the ceremonial mace it gave Longwood 15 years ago, and it presented a bronze marker to the College that is the same as the markers it commissioned and placed on the graves of ZTA's founders recently.

Those actions are in recognition of Longwood's 150th anniversary and the sorority's 90th anniversary.

Sherry Tilley, ZTA's national president, of Boca Raton, Fla., and Nelly Shearer, from Memphis, of Crown Development Trust Fund, the sorority's foundation, visited the campus Oct. 14 to discuss their plans. Mrs. Tilley presented the marker and a letter indicating the sorority's plans to Dr. Donald Stuart, Longwood's vice president for academic affairs.

The display case will go in the library. It will house the 38-inch mace, designed in the form of a lily, that Zeta Tau Alpha gave Longwood in 1973 in commemoration of the sorority's diamond anniversary. The mace is carried by the faculty marshal at official College functions.

ZTA recently placed bronze markers on the graves of the sorority's nine founders. On the same day that Mrs. Tilley and Mrs. Shearer visited Longwood, they had gone to Charlotte Courthouse to so honor a founder's grave.

The last remaining founder, Ruby Leigh Orgain, died in a Richmond nursing home in 1984. All of the founders are buried in Virginia and North Carolina, said alumni director Nancy Shelton.

Each bronze marker resembles a medallion and bears the sorority crest and the inscription "Founder." The marker given to Longwood will go inside or on the display case.

Zeta Tau Alpha, one of four national sororities founded at Longwood, was established on Oct. 15, 1898. The other sororities founded at Longwood are Alpha Sigma Alpha, Kappa Delta, and Sigma Sigma Sigma.

Rangers Look'en Good

By J. R. REEVES

On October 21st and 22nd the the Longwood/Hampden-Sydney College Rangers (an elite group of cadets) participated in the Army ROTC Rangers Challenge at Fort A. P. Hill. The Longwood/-Hampden-Sydney Rangers were one of twenty-eight teams representing schools in the First ROTC Region.

The Ranger Challenge is an intercollegiate event which is a unique test of stamina, military skill and leadership ability and may well be the most demanding varsity sport on campus. In order to be selected for the Ranger Team, cadets had to learn how to rappel, construct rope bridges, train in rifle marksmanship, conduct orienteering at night and achieve the highest level of physical fitness.

The week-end turned out to be a success with all Rangers participating and qualifying in each event "Way to go Rangers!"

Winners Collect Prizes

By LARRY ROBERTSON

The Office of Student Services is once again sponsoring Longwood's Alcohol Awareness Week and has worked to enhance its award-winning alcohol education program. This year's slogan, "TRUST ME . . . I'M SOBER!", won Senior Ricky Stanfield a $50 cash award, and Freshman Penny Shumaker won $75 for designing the poster displayed campus wide.

In addition to all of the academic support services described above, the Learning Center houses several other important components. The Longwood Seminar, Research & Development, Disabled Student Services, Minority Affairs, a Pre-College Program and Developmental Services are all other services offered by the Learning Center.

In conclusion, the Learning Center is just one of the many way which Longwood has provided to stress the importance of academic excellence. Students, faculty and staff are all strongly encouraged to make great use of The Learning Center. The hours are 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., Monday through Friday with hopes of extending its hours into evenings and weekends soon.

If You Want It Changed Just Ask

By KRISTIN L. HOSIER

Are you BORED by the same old menu every month in the dining hall? Do you actually have memorized the days of the week you simply REFUSE to eat upstairs? If your answers are affirmative, get your culinary ideas ready, because ARA wants to hear them.

EVERYONE is welcome to submit suggestions, and if a particular idea has the support of fellow students, it has a good shot of materializing into a particular "specialty night," such as a Mexican Fiesta, Japanese Night, Beach Cookout Night, or anything students want to dream up. What's the advantage behind a "specialty night?" If student response is good for any one or several dishes, it can become a regular menu item! This has succeeded on many occasions with everything from the bread bar and bagels, to fajitas and Mexican cornbread; this year, however, the plan is to introduce these items by the week, rather than starting a new semester with one standard menu (changes included), and having to see the same repetitive entrees for sixteen weeks.

The next upcoming special event will be National Chowder Day on Tuesday, November 8th, during which the dining service will have on hand a wide spectrum of hearty, cold-weather soups, and freshly-baked breads.

Returning again this year will be Thanksgiving Dinner, served family-style, including a mouth-watering individual

Reagan may increase Education Spending

By TOM FOSTER

President Ronald Reagan's last federal education budget proposal — due out in January, 1989 — may be different from the previous seven if only because it may ask Congress to increase education funding, former U. S. Education Secretary William Bennett hinted Sept. 20, his last day on the job.

The president asked Congress to cut its funding for federal college programs — sometimes by as much as half — every January except during the election years of 1984 and 1988.

Congress has agreed only fitfully.

In all, federal education appropriations have gone up about 16 percent since 1981, but an inflation rate during the same period of 25 percent meant that, in real dollars, Washington is funnelling 9 percent less to schools and students than it did at the start of the Reagan era.

In press interviews on Sept. 20, Bennett suggested the administration would ask for a "slight increase" in funding — which could translate into more direct aid to colleges or students — in January.

While the next president probably would ignore the Reagan proposal, Bennett expected funding increases anyway.

"I'll bet you that the next administration, be it a Bush or Dukakis administration, will probably request a little more money, a small increase for '90, '91, '92," Bennett said on retiring.

Yet Bennett, who will write a book, start an education think tank and perhaps nurture some of the speculation that he might run for elective office in the future, didn't see Washington returning to the days of increasing college funding dramatically.

"I don't think you'll see a large increase from either candidate," he said.

"If you look at Dukakis's proposals now, whatever the merits, he's not talking about breaking the bank, (and) the vice president's indicated he would spend a little more money on education."

What's going on this week for AWW?

By J. R. REEVES

Alcohol Awareness Week begins Monday, October 31 with a Halloween Celebration at Lancer Cafe. Festivities begin at 7:00 p.m. with a Halloween Celebration and a costume party sponsored by Tau Kappa Epsilon. Awards will be presented to the three best costumes. At 7:30 p.m. Chip Franklin will add to the cafe party with his comedy routine "Tragically Hip." Free mocktails will be served to anyone wearing an Alcohol Awareness button.

Tuesday's highlights include the All-Greek Triathalon sponsored by Delta Sigma Phi at 3:00 p.m. on Stubbs Mall. Dr. Deborah Smith will follow with her presentation, "Risk-Taking Behaviors," at 4:00 p.m. in the R/W/G Rooms and again for RAs, PAs, Greeks, and the Honor and Judicial Boards at 6:30 p.m. in Wygal Auditorium. Also that evening, the Bulletin Board contest will come to an end with cash awards presented to the three best entries.

Wednesday will see Frazer Hall Council's Alcohol Awareness Walk. All are welcome to meet in Frazer Lobby at 6:00 p.m. for this annual event. Alpha Delta Pi has sponsored a "Mocktail challenge" from 8-9:30 p.m. in the R/W/G Rooms. S.U.N. has helped add to the events through presenting the World's Greatest Hypnotist, Edwin L. Baron. He will be performing at 9:00 p.m. in Lancer Cafe.

Events slated for Thursday are a presentation by Arthur Greene, ASAP Alcohol Education Consultant, and the V.A.R.Y. workshop. V.A.R.Y. (Values, Alcohol, Responsibility, and You) Workshop will begin at 7:00 p.m. in the Counseling Center Conference Room. See Joe McGill in Student Services for R.S.V.P.

Friday will be marked by a performance of the Washington Area Improvisational Teen Theater (W.A.I.T.T.) at 7:00 p.m. in Bedford Auditorium. This troupe will perform scenes and "rap" on alcohol, drugs, and sexuality.

Special recognition should also go to the B.A.C.C.H.U.S. for their presentation of the resource table and the work required in preparing for the tragic "Wrecked Car Display."

Tis the season to be Thinking

By BETTY BRYANT

Reservations are now being accepted for "A Christmas Dinner and Concert with Bells" at Longwood College.

The Yuletide celebration, a tradition at Longwood, is scheduled for Friday and Saturday evenings, December 2 and 3. The festive occasion will feature singing, handbell ringing, and feasting on prime rib of beef.

The evening will begin at 6:30 p.m. with a musical greeting in Longwood's Rotunda, followed by the dinner and concert in the dining room.

Performing the beautiful music of the Christmas season will be the Camerata Singers (37 voices) and Concert Choir (26 voices), directed by Dr. Donald L. Trott, and the Handbell Choir, directed by Dr. Paul S. Hesselink.

The concert program will include both sacred and secular music. Featured will be Daniel Pinkham's "Christmas Cantata," "The Blessed Son of God" by Vaughan Williams, "The Twelve Days of Christmas," and "A Carol Cantata" with narration.

Reservations for the dinner may be made in Longwood's Public Affairs Office, located on the second floor in East Ruffner. The cost of the dinner is $17.95 per person.

For more information on the Christmas Dinner, call 392-9371.

Artist of the Month Named

By P. A. FAIRS

Christopher S. Parks, of Mechanicsville, is Longwood College's Artist of the Month for October.

He received a $50 cash prize, and his award-winning work, a still life in pencil, is on exhibit in the Bedford Art Building.

Parks is a freshman at Longwood, majoring in graphic design. He plans to earn the B.F.A. degree from Longwood and then go on to graduate school.

A graduate of Lee Davis High School, Parks was a member of the National Art Honor Society. He attended the Governor's School for the Arts in the summer of 1986, and in summer 1987 he participated in the Sculpture Honors Workshop at Virginia Commonwealth University.

Parks has received scholarships from Longwood and from CRESTAR Bank. His art works have been exhibited at Radford University, VCU, the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts, and Willow Lawn Shopping Center in Richmond.

The Artist of the Month competition is open to all students enrolled in art classes at Longwood. The winner is chosen by members of the college's art faculty.

lyrically. Singles such as "Baby Jane" and "Ghost Writer" exemplify the strength this band has.

The Poetics, first lp sold around 20,000 copies, that is exceptional for a non-touring band. The Poetics frequently play at Rockitz on Broad Street in Richmond and other night clubs in the vicinity.

The event was a success in proving that people can have fun at a non-alcoholic event.

Ambassadors Fill Ranks

By SUSAN SMITH

The Longwood Ambassadors recently chose nineteen fresh faces to add to their ranks. All applicants that had completed one full semester at Longwood and that met the minimum GPA of 2.3 were interviewed by existing Ambassadors and their advisors. Membership is limited to sixty-five and approximately thirty-four people went through the interview process. The newest Ambassadors are: Tim Anderson, Brian Blackwell, Denise Braswell, Pat Childers, Pat Fairis, Danielle Feich, Kim Foote, Mary Frances Hanover, Derek Lily, Christine McKimens, Wendy Oehms, Carol Reeves, Maria Robbins, Amy Shinal, Beth Verley, Lavater Walker, Martine Washko, Kelly Weisenbeck, Steve Woodrum.

Congratulations and Welcome!

Professor Shortage in the Works

(CPS) – There aren't enough professors around to teach all the computer science, business and math courses students nationwide want to take, the American Council on Education (ACE) said Oct. 12.

"Faculty shortages are serious and likely to continue," said Elaine El-Khawas of the Washington, D.C.-based ACE, a trade group that represents college presidents from around the country.

"Colleges are facing a real crunch because the shortages are most severe in the areas where student interest is strong," she added.

In a survey, the ACE found that 60 percent of the nation's colleges say they can't find any qualified people to fill teaching vacancies in their computer science departments.

Forty-four percent of the schools said they can't find business professors to hire.

Two-year colleges reported having acute math professor shortages, El-Khawas said.

In late September, the National Center for Education Information (NCEI) claimed long-standing predictions that the nation's colleges would have as many as 100,000 vacant teaching positions by 1990 were not coming true, released a study showing that 1,000 1988 education grads were still looking for jobs.

"There is no teaching shortage," the NCEI's Emily Feistritzer concluded.

A huge chorus of other observers – including El-Khawas, who had yet to release her own survey of the situation – vehemently disagreed.

ACE's focus on colleges, anyway, suggested almost every campus in the nation is unable to hire enough professors in one field or another. Some 55 percent of the colleges also expect new faculty shortages to develop in foreign language, physical science and vocational-technical departments – which don't have vacancies now – within the next five years.

All United For CROP Walk

By DONNA L. FERRIER

On October 16, 1988, residents of the Farmville area as well as Longwood and Hampden-Sydney students united at Jarman auditorium for the 1988 CROP Walk.

Rev. Mark Ogren, CROP Co-coordinator, opened the CROP opening ceremony by thanking all the supporters of the CROP walk this year. Kylor Reed, CROP Co-treasurer, then joined Rev. Ogren in leading the group in a prayer for the hungry. The walkers then took off on their ten-kilometer parade through Farmville.

The money made from the CROP Walk will not only go to feeding the hungry overseas, but it will also help feed the hungry locally. For the problem of hunger doesn't only exist in Ethiopia or Africa. Rev. Johnathan Barton, Virginia Coordinator of Church World Services (CWS), who spoke to CROP recruiters earlier this year, said that Virginia alone has approximately 600,000 hungry people. In addition, it is still possible to work for minimum wage in this country and still be below the poverty level at the end of each year by $3,000. Also, as you read this article, there are 79,000 homes in Virginia without indoor plumbing. Oh, and one final note, Virginia is also the twelfth wealthiest state in the United States.

He also stated that one of the causes for not preventing hunger is the feeling among us as the other people that we can't do anything about it. He said that in one year this country went from "We Are The World" to "Hands Across America" (which later branched out to Hands Across Richmond, etc.) in hopes that we could help the hunger situation in some way. This is the reason that CWS has sponsored the CROP Walk, because we can make a difference!

Pi Kappa Phi fraternity works the Octoberfest booth to raise money for the handicapped.

By STEVE GMITRO

In 1976 Pi Kappa Phi Fraternity began its search for a national service project. The search led to sculptor/designer, Thomas Sayre. Unlike the traditional institutional setting, Mr. Sayre came up with the idea of a free and enriched environment for human growth.

In 1977 Pi Kappa Phi and Mr. Sayre installed the first indoor P.U.S.H. Unit in the Deaf/Blind Unit a Western Carolina Center in Morgantown, North Carolina, a state facility for the retarded. The unit offered audio, visual, and tactile stimuli to enhance the handicapped learning ability. After evaluating the Western Carolina Center Unit, Pi Kappa Phi adopted PUSH as its national project at its 1977 national convention in New Orleans.

Brother Chris Schotto of Pi Kappa Phi will be running in the Marine Corps Marathon, on November 6, for the severely handicapped. The race begins and ends at the Marine Corps War Memorial in Arlington, Virginia. The race is twenty-six miles, three hundred eighty-five yards and is a TAC certified course which passes through Arlington, Georgetown and the District of Columbia. The coarse winds through many of the area's attractions including the Capitol, the White House, the Jefferson and Lincoln Memorials, the Pentagon, the National Museums, and the Kennedy Center. The course is proudly nicknamed, "The Marathon of The Monuments."

"Running in a marathon is one of the most demanding tasks an athlete could ask for. I feel that there are many handicapped people in the United States who would do anything to be able to run. By running for the handicapped, I want them to know that there are people who care for them and are always willing to help them." – Chris Schotta

Sponsor Chris Schotto and Pi Kappa Phi is achieving the goal of aiding the severely handicapped. Please help give the handicapped a PUSH!

SPE Visits Nursing Home

On Friday, October 8, the members of Sigma Phi Epsilon visited the Elder Care nursing home. The occasion was a wonderful experience for the members of the home and for the members of SPE as well. It provided an opportunity for two different generations to interact, these people were overjoyed by the visit and were very willing to talk with and to share their past experiences with the younger generation.

According to one member of Sigma Phi Epsilon, "Some of these people feel that they have been abandoned by their families and are searching for a sense of belonging, I feel that our visits will help let them know that they are not forgotten, I look forward to visiting my new friends again", Jim Blankenbaker.

Congress, Messy Accounting, and the Deficit

Congress has once again demonstrated to the American taxpayer that it cannot restrain itself. The government took in revenues of $909 billion and Congress managed to spend 1.06 trillion — a deficit of $155.1 billion for '88, more than their self imposed target of $152.3 billion. They must feel that another ring in the big tree called our national debt is no problem.

The deficit is the main reason for the lack of accountability that exists in our government today. The Federal Government does not use the same method of accounting that it demands of publicly held companies — the accrual method using the cash-basis method instead.

Under the cash method, income is reported when it is received, and expenses are deducted when they are actually paid. With the accrual accounting, liabilities are recorded when they are incurred and assets when they are earned.

A switch to the accrual method would probably show that the national deficit of around $2 trillion is probably double or even triple that figure. This is the reason for Congress' reluctance to move from a sloppy system to efficient use of taxpayer money. Congress knows that if the real cost of government programs is known, higher taxes and less spending will be the result.

The fact of the matter is that we don't really know the facts surrounding Congressional spending and either does Congress. Without consistent and timely information Congress continues to misallocate today's resources and through the use of debt, tomorrow's. Thus, deferring the costs to future taxpayers who will have less to spend on their needs.

A combination of a new accounting system, spending cuts, and even a tax increase should begin to turn around the fiscal slide of the United States so we may free ourselves from our captures — foreign investors. Congressmen and women with the attitude that: "we don't have to plan" or "the problem will take care of itself in coming years" is a disgrace and their place in history will be equally disgraceful.

LETTERS

Dear Editor,

This letter is important for the members, pledges and future pledges of APO. I was considering pledging APO until I saw and heard some things that greatly disturbed me. Robert Taylor, the president of APO, has been harassing, through notes, two of its members (who are inactive now). APO stands for leadership friendship, and service, but the president is doing a poor job of upholding them. The notes he has been writing are unbelievable and no way for a college or even high school student to behave, especially the leader of an organization like APO. His behavior is totally uncalled for because no one has done anything to him to cause it and he knows it. It's sad that several members have gone inactive because of him and some pledges didn't pledge. I just think APO needs to be aware of his behavior and realize he's hurting people and APO. I'd like to see APO do something about this and if need be, let the inactive ones, especially the two who live across from him since they are really being teated unfairly, go before the advisors and brothers and tell them what has been going on.

COMMENTARY

The Day I Got Caught Cheating

The day I got caught cheating was the worst day of my life. It seemed I would never get over the embarrassment of being called out of taking an exam while all my fellow classmates knowingly whispered about me. As soon as that degrading situation was over, I soon encountered another. Do you know what it feels like to have to sit in front of the Honor Board and admit to being responsible for cheating? It's the most embarrassing situation ever. The reason I think it's so embarrassing is because Longwood gave me the opportunity to be an adult. Longwood trusted me. And, like a teenager being given the house for a weekend while his parents are out of town, I took unfair advantage of that trust. I cheated. I still can't believe I was that stupid and irresponsible.

Right now I am in the process of trying to regain the trust that I so carelessly threw away. It's going to be hard but I have to do it. I want to show everyone that I made a mistake and I'm willing to pay whatever it costs to make it up to my professors, my peers, and MYSELF.

The letter written by the person found responsible of cheating was not the only sanction given by the Honor Board. The Honor Board does not take cheating, or any offense, lightly. As the Honor System does try to educate all students, it seems only appropriate to educate those who violate the Honor Code as well as those who do not. The Honor Board feels that having this individual reflect on how the situation affected his/her personal honor, and also letting other students know would be education itself. What better way for students to determine how they would feel and the consequences to their character, than to allow them to read how it affected someone else.

A former chair of the Honor Board, Rudy Hall, once said, "Honor is a reflection of one's inner self." I challenge everyone to determine for themselves, how important your inner self is to you. Let your actions speak for themselves.

About Altering Your I.D.

By ROCCO TRICARICO

Around town, at D. T.'s, and on campus there have been some policy changes. It is clear to us who venture out on weekends, Tuesdays or Thursdays that College I.d.'s are not being accepted anymore for the purchase of alcohol. Lately, on campus, there has been an out-break of false identification charges; it seems that many students have found it easy to change their I.d.'s.

Sometimes students do things before they actually realize what they have done. Changing your College I.D. is against State Law as well as two sections of the Honor Code:

1) Altering of identification, and

2) Lying.

The problem is that many students don't understand that this is sufficient cause for a probation until graduation, along with many other restrictions. This in itself, other than the embarrassment, as a side-effect. If you are caught and put on probation this usually excludes you from running for many executive positions on campus, which dampens your ability to get involved in college.

When you really think about it, there is now no reason for altering your I.d.; nobody is accepting it, and the repercussions of the violation are too serious to ignore. Using the name of our college 'Longwood' to create authenticity for your false identification not only shames you but our college as well.

Why Do We Have an Electoral College?

By JANE SCHOLAST

Three times in U.S. history, the Presidential candidate who won the most votes of the people was not elected President. It happened in 1824, 1876, and 1888. Could it happen again?

Yes – in a close race. Americans do not directly elect the President or Vice President. Instead, when they vote for President, they actually are choosing electors who support that candidate. The candidate who wins the most popular votes usually gets all of that state's electoral votes.

Result: A candidate can win by a small margin in the states that have many electoral votes – and defeat the candidate who gets the most popular votes nationwide. The last time it happened was in 1888. President Grover Cleveland, a Democrat, beat his Republican opponent, Benjamin Harrison, by more than 100,000 votes. But Harrison got a majority of the electoral votes and so was elected President.

Why do we have this system? Why don't Americans vote directly for President? Our Presidential election system comes from the U.S. Constitution. Many delegates to the 1787 Constitutional Convention did not think the average person had the knowledge to vote wisely. Some wanted Congress or the state legislatures to make the choice.

Finally, James Wilson of Pennsylvania suggested an electoral College. States would choose electors to vote for President. Each state would have as many electors as it has Senators and Representatives in Congress. This satisfied delegates from small states, who wanted to make sure that all states had a voice in choosing the President.

Many proposals have been made to abolish the Electoral College. "Let the people directly elect the President," some people say. But most Americans would rather leave things as they are. The present system, they say, guarantees all states a voice in choosing our President.

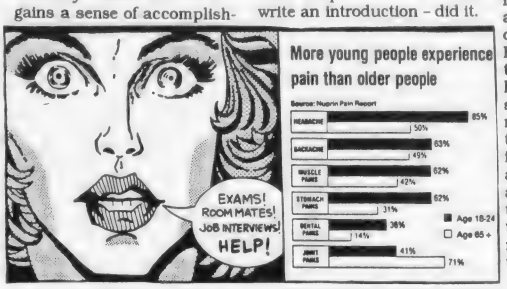
Making the grade without pressure and pain

By ROBERT J. KRIEGEL, PH.D.

Have you ever felt that you can't possibly read four chapters, study for that philosophy test, write that paper, make dinner and call your girlfriend all in one night? Then instead of doing all the things you know you should, do you just turn on the stereo and avoid them all? Yes? You're among the majority.



Procrastination occurs when you think you have too much to do or when you imagine something is going to be too difficult or distasteful.

The "can'ts" (I can't do all that . . .) overwhelm us so that we do nothing but procrastinate.

If you are like most college students today, you feel increasingly overwhelmed. In fact, the Nuprin Pain Report, the first national study on pain in America, documented that more people 18-24 suffer from stress and pain than any older age group.

A skier with the can'ts looks down a steep, icy slope and is paralyzed. "I can't ski this," he thinks.

The trick for the skier is to find a "can do" – a first turn he can make. Once he successfully completes the first turn he can look to the next and the next. Each time he successfully makes a turn he gains a sense of accomplishment and builds confidence in himself and his skiing ability.

The solution for the can'ts sounds pretty simple, and it is. Big projects are made up of lots of small, doable steps.

I developed the can'ts right after signing the contract for my first book: 65,000 words. I couldn't get started. I kept putting it off, overwhelmed by the size of the task, just like I used to do in college when I had a big paper to write.

Luckily I remembered my own advice: to look for a can do. I can write the outline – did it. I can write bullets for each chapter – did it. I can write an introduction – did it.

Ten months later the book was finished.

Overcome procrastination by remembering to turn the can'ts into can dos. Ask yourself, "What can I do now?" And be sure that the direction you're moving in leads to your ultimate goal.

Can do thinking and the positive actions that follow increase your confidence and composure and maximize your effectiveness. Pretty soon you're on a roll.

Longwood's 2nd Acceptance Of The Governor's Award

Joseph C. McGill, the Director of Student Services at the College, who is responsible for Alcohol Education efforts, declared there is still much to do. "This Award tells us that we are doing more than others in terms of raising awareness to the issues and starting a discussion of our problems and concerns. However, this Award does not tell us we have arrived. We have only begun in helping students address the relationship alcohol has in their lives. Longwood College is simply trying to be open and honest about what alcohol means to people in their everyday lives and what the choices, decisions, and responsibilities are in making those decisions."

McGill believes this Award is a great beginning in raising the larger questions in our society everyone must address, not only students. McGill said he thinks the Award came at the perfect time with Alcohol Awareness Week, 1988, coming at the end of the month. The Award lends perfect credibility to the fact that Longwood is not afraid to discuss the hard, tough, questions facing us all concerning alcohol use, misuse, and abuse, during the various programs and activities planned for October 31-November 4, 1988, said McGill. "We are attempting to use every possible means to reach out to students with alcohol awareness. We are planning contests, posters, buttons, comedy, drama, presentations, lectures, parties de-emphasizing alcohol, events without alcohol, every means available — all with students involved — to get the messages out.

Longwood College, for the second year in a row, accepted the Governor's Award for Excellence in Alcohol Education on October 5, 1988 in Richmond. Longwood has now received state-wide recognition for its efforts accomplished in 1986 and 1987. There were 65 Colleges and Universities in competition for the Governor's Award. Since the Governor started this program in 1985, Longwood College has been its winner.

"Students know they can have fun without alcohol. They do so in many ways every day without really thinking about it. There is such a heavy push in society to equate alcohol with fun, witness the T.V. commercials, that it has become a little like the "Emperor's clothes," we all just can't admit the fraud, yet. But the day will one day come, and when it does, fun will be fun and alcohol will be alcohol, and we will see for fewer problems as a result."

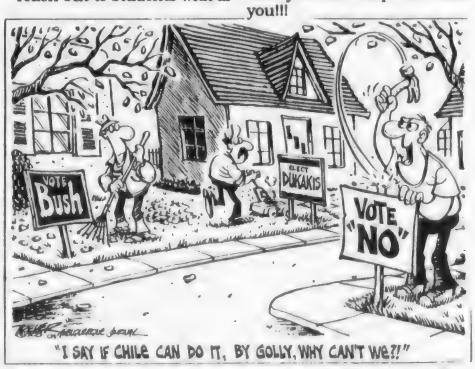
Aids: Knowing The Facts

By ANGELA KOUSSOGLOU

There are two things people don't deal well with – human sexuality and death. The tragic situation with AIDS is that it involves both (Chronicle of Higher Education).

On October 11, Pam Higgins, a Family Nurse Practitioner at the Longwood Student Health Department, held a lecture on AIDS. The lecture consisted of a film, AIDS – Changing The Rules, and an open discussion. AIDS is an issue that concerns and demands the attention of everyone and yet less than ten students attended the lecture. The facts need to be heard!



AIDS stands for Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome which is a breakdown of the body's defense system. The virus that causes AIDS is the Human Immunodeficiency Virus (HIV). HIV is a retrovirus that must live and reproduce inside human cells and does not survive long outside the body. When a person with HIV acquires certain opportunistic infections, he or she is then characterized as having AIDS. The most common type of opportunistic infections occurring with AIDS is Pneumocystis carinii, a form of pneumonia, and Kaposis Sarcoma, a rare form of cancer.

The biggest problem with AIDS is that no one thinks it will happen to him or her. People term AIDS as a disease of risk groups that effect, for instance, the gay community when in fact it is a disease of risk behaviors. AIDS is spread through intimate sexual contact, use of infected needles, and blood and blood product. AIDS is the #1 killer in women between the ages of 25-29. Of the 35,000 people diagnosed with AIDS, three times that many are infected with the virus. Fifty percent of the 35,000 diagnosed are dead. By 1991, a quarter-million people will have AIDS. That's more people than died in all of Vietnam. We need to protect ourselves.

According to the American College Health Association's Task Force on AIDS, the risk of AIDS can be reduced by: 1) Using condoms with a water-based lubricant during sex. Spermicides (contraceptive jellies, creams, or foam) containing nonoxynyl-9, which is a gel that kills the virus, may further increase protection when used along with a condom. 2) Avoiding any injury to body tissues during sex. 3) Not using intravenous drugs or sharing needles. 4) Avoiding the use of inhaled recreational drugs such as "poppers" which can weaken the immune system. 5) Not mixing alcohol or other drugs with sexual encounters; they may cloud your judgement and lead you to do things you wouldn't do with a clearer head – such as forgetting to use a condom.

Education on AIDS is available to the public. AIDS 101, a class dedicated to educating students on the cause and prevention of AIDS, is being used in high schools across the country. Many colleges are setting up lectures and seminars to keep the students informed on AIDS. On Jan. 31, 1989, Richard Kelling, Director of Student Health at U.Va., will give a lecture discussing a new AIDS research project and the possibility of

New Learning Center Added To Longwood

By LISA JONES

Sick of failing tests because sometimes you just do not understand a particular subject! Are you aware that there is a service that is free of charge to assist students right here on Longwood Campus?

A Learning Center has been created in the Graham Building for students, faculty and staff to provide support and feedback to the learning process through many integrated services. The Center, which is directed by Dr. Sarah Young, is composed of seven components. They are: Academic Support Services, the Longwood Seminar, Research & Program Development, Disabled Student Services, Minority Affairs, a Pre-College Program and Developmental Services.

The Academic Support Services component offers a wide range of programs of interest to students. This factor of the Center is composed of several units, Peer Tutoring, a Writing Lab, a Mathematics Lab, Study Skills Workshops, Self-Paced Materials, Academic & Cognitive Assessment, and Learning Strategy Counseling & Study Skills Training.

Peer Tutoring is offered free of charge to all Longwood students. This service is available in any course for which the Center can hire a qualified tutor. In order to request tutoring, students should stop by the office to fill out a request form. Faculty and staff may refer students to the office directly, by sending the office a referral form or by phoning Mr. Scott Lissner.

The Writing Lab which is headed by Carolyn DeWolfe will continue to offer individual tutoring in writing. Also available in this unit will be group as well as individual instruction in word processing.

The Mathematics Lab offers tutoring and self-paced materials. These services were previously offered through the Math Department.

Study Skills Workshops will also be available. Each semester The Center will offer scheduled workshops in selected study skills topics such as time management, note taking and text readings. In addition to the regular scheduling of workshops, the Learning Center will work with faculty, staff and student groups to develop tailored workshops in specific disciplines, courses or assignments.

The Center is also in the process of establishing a library of resource materials for students and tutors. The materials will be available for student use in The Center. The Center is accepting recommendations of extra examination copies, required texts and other supplemental materials. In addition to student recommendations, The Center will be happy to accept donations of extra exam copies, required texts and other supplemental materials.

Also available is Academic & Cognitive Assessment. This unit has diagnostic and skills test, which are for identification of academic difficulties and learning disabilities. Testing is provided free of charge to individual students. Results are confidential and will be used in working with the student to help devise strategies for academic improvement at Longwood.

The final unit of Academic Support Services is Learning Strategy Counseling and Study Skills Training. This service works on an individual or small group basis. The Center will provide intensive instruction in learning strategies and study skills.

anonymous AIDS testing of college students. It will be in the Red, White, and Green room at 1:00. Longwood has taken the prevention of AIDS one step further. According to Charlie Warner who is "Head of Greek Affairs" at Longwood, cigarette machines selling condomns instead of cigarettes will be set up on campus possibly as early as next semester.

You need to educate yourself about AIDS and practice the methods that reduce the risk of AIDS. After all, if you don't protect yourself, who will?

Florida Student Sues to get her MBA

A University of Central Florida student who failed an economics test twice is suing UCF to get her master's degree in business administration or, if not that, her $5,000 tuition back.

"After paying my dues and having a good average, I feel abused," said Nora Roth, who adds she got good grades in all her other courses. "I really don't want their money. I just want what I earned, which is a master's degree."

But UCF College of Business Dean Clifford Eubanks said the test Roth failed — it requires students to review all the material that they have learned in finance, management, marketing and economics — is common at many colleges across the country.

Roth passed the first three parts of the test but failed the economics section. She hired a tutor, crammed for another semester and took the test again. She failed it.

She alleges the test is unfair because each of the business school's economics professors hold different theories, and place emphasis on different facets within the subject. Her test was not prepared by a professor she studied with, and included unfamiliar material, her suit contends.

If similar previous cases are any indication, Roth faces an uphill battle.

Courts have been reluctant to second-guess professors' decisions. "In matters of scholarship, the school authorities are uniquely qualified by training and experience to judge the qualifications of a student," one court ruled in a 1965 case, Connolly v. University of Vermont.

In 1978, a judge dismissed a suit by a University of Colorado history doctorate candidate who argued that a professor gave him a failing grade on a test because he was prejudiced against him.

And in 1984, a federal appeals court upheld the dismissal of a lawsuit by a former Medical College of Ohio student, who said the school violated his civil rights by expelling him.

In 1985, moreover, the U. S. Supreme Court upheld the University of Michigan's 1981 dismissal of a student who failed a national examination needed to get into the final two years of medical school. The student argued UM had unconstitutionally deprived him of the right to stay in school.

Most of Central Florida's MBA candidates are part-time students who spend up to five years earning their degrees. A comprehensive test ensures that students retain what they learn, Eubanks said.

It is not uncommon of students to fail the test several times before they pass, Eubanks added, and Roth is permitted to take it again.

Rubin Named Player of the Week

Sophomore back Mitch Rubin helped Longwood score a 4-0 victory over Christopher-Newport Saturday and, for his performance, Rubin has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period of October 23-30. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood College sports information office.

A two-year starter, Rubin has been a key player in Longwood's 14-2-1 season. As a team, the Lancers have shut out seven foes, and Rubin has been one of the team's top defenders.

"Mitch has had a great year for us," says coach Rich Postpanko. "He's really been taking control. "Saturday, some of his teammates weren't having great days, but he kept things together. Christopher-Newport had most of their top players on offense. They kept the pressure on us, but we got the shutout."

A graduate of East Brunswick High School, Rubin earned numerous honors in soccer and played basketball as well. He was a team captain and Most Valuable Player in soccer.

Hockey Falls

By ROXIE LOCKWOOD

In a field the consistency of "chocolate pudding," according to coach Sue Finnie, the Longwood field hockey squad continued its hard-luck season at the hands of Davis and Elkins, falling 2-0 Saturday.

Longwood's record now dips to 3-7-1 as it ends the season this week against High Point College in High Point, NC, Wednesday, and Towson State in Towson, MD, Friday.

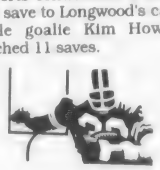
"It was really an unplayable field," explained Finnie, "and if we hadn't driven five hours to get there, we would have turned around and gone home."

After a lackluster first half, Longwood racked up a large statistical advantage over the host squad. LC outshot D&E 18-7 in the second half and had 11 corners to D&E's 1, but the Lady Lancers "could not buy a goal."

Longwood's best scoring opportunities were negated by officiating and the poor playing conditions. Two goals were called back, and on a stroke, Carver Ports lost her footing and was unable to make a solid connection with the ball.

Finnie named three Players of the Game.

"Beanie Feich has given two good performances in back-to-back games, first against Wake Forest and now against D&E. Lara Cini has made very few mistakes all season, and has given us a good game every time out. Carver did a very good job. She was our entire defense."



Ports contributed a defensive save to Longwood's cause while goalie Kim Howells notched 11 saves.

Gymnastics Exhibition; Friday at 8

By SHARON ANDERSON

The 1988-89 Longwood gymnastics squad will be performing an exhibition Friday night at 8 in Lancer Hall. As well as a preview of the season ahead, the performance introduced Lady Lancers and give spectators an opportunity to observe new stunts and routines the gymnasts are preparing.

In addition to performing competition skills, the squad has put together a fun show including a group tumbling routine. Another added treat for gymnastic fans will be a "surprise" performance by a famous gymnast who will remain nameless.

Although competition doesn't actually start until next semester, coach Ruth Budd says, "Gymnastics is a year round sport; our team members are always practicing to keep in shape and learn new stunts."

This year Longwood has five veterans and seven newcomers. Lynda Chenoweth one of Longwood's best all-arounds last year, is the most experienced gymnast and the only senior. Chenoweth was Longwood's best all-around performer during her freshman and sophomore years.

Amy Spiers returns as the team's only junior. Her strongest events are beam and floor exercise. Sophomore Natalie Taylor, also an all-around competitor, holds two of last season's high scores, one being vault, the other floor exercise. Sophomore all-around competitor Terri Dore will bolster the team, especially in beam and bar events.

"The veterans are looking good and the team will lean on them heavily for solid scoring this season," Budd says.

Unfortunately, Cindy Shelton, Longwood's best all-around last year, will be sidelined most of the season because of a knee injury she suffered during a dismount off the bars. She underwent arthroscopic surgery last week and hopes to be back in action by March. Cindy set two school records last year (beam with a 9.05 and best all-around at 35.45).

"This is a major blow to the team," said Budd. "We hope Cindy will be able to make it back to compete in March, but it's hard to say what her chances are."

A majority of the squad this year are newcomers. The strongest all-around freshman is Angie Sullivan.

"Sullivan will be a lot of help for the team in the bar competition, traditionally a weak area for Longwood," Budd said.

Other freshman are Dani Baber, Cheryl Cole, Julie Hall and Caity Silva.

Freshman Ayme Curlee and Dana Deans have made the squad as well. They are returning to competition after several years away from gymnastics.

The Lady Lancers have a tough schedule ahead of them. They will be keeping in tradition by competing mostly against Division I teams. After an intersquad meet December 1, Longwood opens the regular season January 20, hosting Maryland Baltimore County.

Preview of Lancer Cagers on Sunday

Longwood will unveil its 1988-89 edition of Lancer basketball Sunday at 2 when a Swedish touring team visits Lancer Hall for an exhibition contest.

Sunday's game will provide a preview of a Longwood team which opens its regular season November 18-19 in the sixth Par-Bil's Tip-Off Tournament. St. Paul's, North Carolina Greensboro and SUNY-Buffalo round out the Par-Bil's tournament field.

Hopes are high for this year's Longwood men's team. The entire Lancer squad, which finished 19-10 last season, returns intact. Coach Cal Luther will be able to choose from six returning starters. Junior Kevin Jefferson, a 6-5 forward, returns after missing second semester last year. He averaged 23.7 points in the first 11 games.

The other five returning starters, who helped Longwood win a co-regular season championship in the Mason-Dixon Conference, are, at the guards: 5-10 senior Bobby Dobson and 6-3 junior Dale Shavers; at the forwards: 6-6 sophomore Greg Holloway and 6-4 senior Darryl Rutley and, at center, 6-8 junior Doug Poppe.

Longwood's reserves from last season are also back. Guards Robert Pierce, Joe Lowe, and Tony Good, and forwards Keith Latimer and Spencer Smith provide experienced depth. Newcomers include 6-5 red-shirt freshman Chris Mullins, 6-7 freshman Shaun Bromley and guard Mike Selby.

Pizza Hut Sponsors Meet the Lancers

For Sunday's exhibition contest "Farmville Day" will be held with special ticket prices in effect. All youngsters, 12 and under, will be admitted free when accompanied by a ticket-purchasing adult. Adults will be admitted for $1 and non-Longwood students will have to pay only 50 cents.

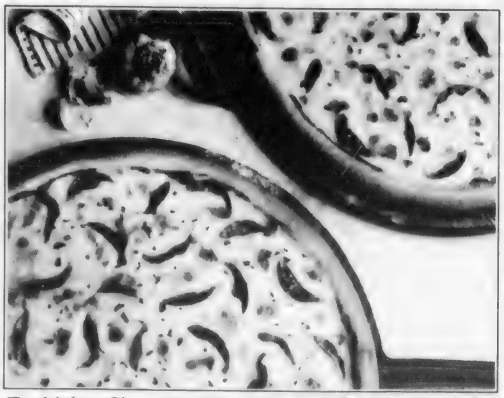
NCAA Bid Possible for Lancer Soccer

Longwood's eighth ranked soccer team stands on the verge of earning its first bid to the NCAA Division II Tournament, if the Lancers can defeat Averett Wednesday and 16th-ranked North Carolina Greensboro at home Saturday.

"Nothing is definite yet, but we should have a real good chance of getting a bid if we win these last two regular season games," said Longwood coach Rich Posipanko, who is a member of the NCAA II South Region selection committee. "UNC Greensboro has a fine team. I think we can win Saturday's game if we play well, but we'll be short on manpower."

Now 14-2-1, Longwood is already missing three players to injuries. Senior midfielder Chris Helmus will also miss Saturday's game because of a family commitment. Posipanko says he may start junior Kenny Lim in Helmus's place.

Saturday's game is shaping up as the most important regular season tilt in Lancer soccer history, since a possible NCAA bid is on the line. UNCG, 12-7-0, has lost only to Division I or ranked Division II teams. The Spartans dropped a 4-2 decision to North Carolina Wednesday and beat Davis & Elkins 6-0 Saturday.



Funk Has a Goal and Assist

Sophomore Rodney Funk had a goal and an assist to lead Longwood's 4-0 win over the Captains. The victory sewed up second place in the Virginia Intercollegiate Soccer Association Eastern Division and a berth in the State Tournament. Longwood will likely play Western Division champ Randolph-Macon in the first round November 9 in Ashland.

Also scoring for the Lancers Saturday were Nils McCarty, Ed Regan and Ray Jones. Picking up assists were Bill Moore, Rich Venere and Jeff Bogushefsky.

Nation Chooses Continuity Over Change

Keeps George In Washington And Mike In Boston

PRESIDENT-ELECT GEORGE BUSH

By MATT PETERMAN

It was a rough campaign and a big victory for George Bush and Dan Quayle, beating the Dukakis/Bentson ticket 54% to 46% respectively.

Bush comes to the White House with an unclear mandate — most people choosing him for his experience and a reluctance to break the status quo of economic prosperity.

"He will be our president and we will work with him," Dukakis said speaking to his supporters in Boston Tuesday night. "Our nation faces major challenges . . . and we must work together."

Though the Bush victory was substantial, his coat-tails were almost non-existent. The Democrats gained two seats in the House and the Senate, which would seem to point to a rocky road ahead for the policies of Bush Administration

Bush will have 70 days in which to organize his administration before he is sworn in as the 41st President on January 20th. Bush would like to see this time as a period of healing. Many Democrats were left angry over the bitter and negative campaign that has taken place.

Also, Democrats are now trying to evaluate why they keep losing at the national level. Most see the problem as consistently nominating candidates that are too librel in a country that is shifting toward the center.

That aside, many experts believe Bush is a man of great compromise and feel as though he will not be as confrontational with Congress as Reagan was.

According to the Richmond Times Dispatch yesterday: "Bush's victory confirmed the Republican Party as the dominant force in presidential

Study Abroad Now

By BURNELLA GILBERT

Plans for study abroad opportunities for Longwood students are well underway. Longwood plans to continue for the sixth year its very successful summer study abroad program with the University of Toulouse. Toulouse is located in southwestern France on the banks of the Garonne, one of France's major rivers. The University of Toulouse, with an approximate student body of 10,000, houses a school of social sciences with a comprehensive foreign language program for studies in the humanities and also for business purposes. It also houses a famous school of business and of law. Toulouse has many nearby famous sites of cultural attraction, with one of the most famous being the medieval walled city of Carcassone. This program is tentatively scheduled for June 18 - July 17, 1989, a time when the weather in Toulouse is warm, sunny and very pleasant for touring.

Also through the efforts of Dr. Maria Silveira students can spend the spring semester of 1989 at the University of the Andes in Merida, Venezuela. The cost of the program, which lasts from January 18 - May 1 is $2999 for Virginia residents and $3892 for non-Virginia residents.

Students may study in India (Rishikesh-Himalayas) and receive credit for 5 courses through the University of Virginia. Information

Longwood Election 1988

By SEBASTIAN VOLCKER

On November 17 and 18, 1988 the Longwood Students will be called to elect the leaders of 1989. The SGA (Student Government Association) hopes that the Campus will show the same participation the Freshman Class showed earlier this year by having the highest number of voters ever for a freshman election, in recent Longwood history. Bradley Pomp was elected President of the Freshman Class, Kendal Ascher Vice President, Allen Freeman Treasurer and Vanessa Eades Secretary. This class already showed it's dynamics by setting up a good money making booth this Oktoberfest and by choosing as their advisor the very qualified Director of Student Services Mr. Joseph C. McGill.

This year many positions are open, the opportunity is there for all the Longwood students to run for an office in the major student organizations: the entire SGA board, the Student Union, the Honor Board, the Judicial Board with it's 22 open seats, the Minority Affairs and I.M. Rec (Intramurals and recreation). All one needs to do, is to pick up a petition in Lankford's information office, fill it in and return it before the 10th of November at the very same Information office. If you have questions just flip open the Student Handbook on page 61 and discover the various offices available. If you need more information ask your friends, your professors, the students in office (there is a group picture of the SGA board and the organization representatives in the Handbook). On the 10th there will be an interest meeting for the Judicial Board and the Honor Board, the time will be posted soon. If you decide you still find it to difficult to run, don't forget at least to vote on the 17th and 18th of this month and elect your friends and/or the most qualified people for the various jobs.

Just as there was a strict daily routine in the 1860's, there was also a strict set of rules made by the president.

Students were told to provide their own umbrellas, walking shoes, towels, table napkins, napkin ring, fork and spoon. Parents should not have given their children a large amount of pocket money or expensive gifts. There was a simple style of dress to be followed during school.

Parents had to inform the president of their visits. If the student's home was near the school, it was not advisable for them to visit home more than once in three months. This was because students who visited home less often, usually did better in school. Wednesdays and Saturdays from four to five p.m. was the best time to receive calls from gentlemen. Those men who the president did not know, would not be allowed to visit unless there was an authorized letter of introduction. Letters and packages for the students were to be sent to the president. No packages of food were allowed, except under special circumstances. The president suggested that the parents submit an early application, because the number of boarding rooms was limited. If there were no rooms available, some students were allowed to live with families near the college.

Students were required to follow these rules in order to continue there education at this college.

Students Cure Computer Viruses

(CPS) — Some good student detective work found and eliminated some potentially lethal computer "viruses" at two campuses last week.

At Baylor University, an unnamed student reported finding the "Scores" virus — which, like most such programs, reproduces itself until it wrecks data and operating systems — in three campus computer systems.

At the University of Colorado, student Greg Youngs found that about 85 campus Macintoshes were infected with another type of virus, and then eliminated the virus before telling CU's Computing and Network Services office about it, the Campus Press reported.

The CU virus was unusual if only because most such destructive programs are for IBM and IBM-compatible computers, Northwestern University Prof. John Norstad said.

"There have been 40 viruses discovered this year in the IBM community, and only three in the Apple community," he said.

The Scores virus at Baylor also has infected computers at the universities of Michigan, Florida and Texas this term, Norstad said.

Scores got to Baylor, it turns out, when Baylor student Ahmad Jilani got a computer disk in the mail from his brother, who attends Cornell University. Neither Jilani nor his brother knew the disk was infected, Jilani says.

Baylor officials and CU's Youngs used new virus detection programs to debug the computers. Many of the debugging programs, Norstad said, "are only three or four months old."

Photographs on Exhibit

By J. R. REEVES

Photographs by Daniel Elsbrook, of Cincinnati, Ohio, are on exhibit in Longwood College's Showcase Gallery through Nov. 18.

The show, entitled "Cadence Black and White," includes photographs taken with a 35 mm. Leica camera and two "vignetted" images from a plastic Argus camera. For the vignettes, he used a high contrast panchromatic film to compensate for the low contrast characteristics of the Argus lens.

The public is invited to view his photographs displayed in the first floor hallway of the Bedford Building at Longwood.

New Interior Design Concentration

By BETH A. LORD

An interior design concentration is in the making in the Art Department. Included in the program are eight foundation courses and nine concentration courses covering various aspects from the history of furniture and interiors to the planning and design of houses, business buildings, and public edifices such as schools, community centers, and hospitals. Also required is the Senior Interior Design Synthesis, which may be completed in one of three ways. A student may choose to do an independent study, work in the Interior Design Studio and take classes, or participate in an internship.

Dr. John Burke, Longwood's newest addition to the Department of Visual and Performing Arts, has been instrumental in establishing the concentration. Burke received his undergraduate degree from the University of California at Berkley, a Master of Architecture from MIT, and a Master of Urban Design and Planning from Harvard. He earned his doctorate at USIU. Burke has worked in London, Paris, Brussels, and Holland. He had his own firm in San Diego and has taught at Columbia University in New York, among others. Burke has written numerous architectual criticisms and recently published a book entitled Louisiana Architecture of Development.

For more information about the interior design concentration, contact Dr. John Burke or consult your 1988-89 catalog.

APO Trick or Treats

By DONNA L. FERRIER

On Monday, October 31, 1988, the brothers of Alpha Phi Omega (APO), The National Service Fraternity, donned their disguises and proceeded to trick-or-treat around Farmville. But the brothers weren't looking for candy like most trick-or-treaters! For they went knocking on the doors of Farmville residents attempting to collect money to benefit UNICEF. And as it turns out, the brothers raised $45.65 for this worthy cause.

Alpha Phi Omega is the world's largest fraternity, and it dedicates a portion of its service to community activities. APO also serves the campus, the fraternity itself, and the nation. The trick-or-treat for UNICEF is only one of the service activities APO does. Other upcoming events include a bloodmobile on November 30, 1988 from 12-7 p.m. in Lankford, and Faculty Follies (the money made will be donated to a worthy cause) which will take place in the spring.

Dancers Will Give Concert

By P. A. FAIRS

The Longwood College Company of Dancers will present a concert on Thursday and Friday evenings, Nov. 10 and 11, at 7:30 in the Lancer Hall Dance Studio.

The program will feature modern, jazz, and ballet styles of dance, plus a character dance about people at a train station in a large city, all choreographed by student members of the Company.

Also featured will be "Contrasts," choreographed by Dr. Nelson Neal and danced by the entire Company. This dance was performed in 1986 in Finland while Dr. Neal was visiting the University of Jyvaskyla.

The Company of Dancers, directed by Dr. Neal, provides an opportunity for advanced dance students to further develop their skills and talents through work in technique, composition, and performance. Members are chosen by audition.

The public is invited to attend the dance performances; there is no admission charge.

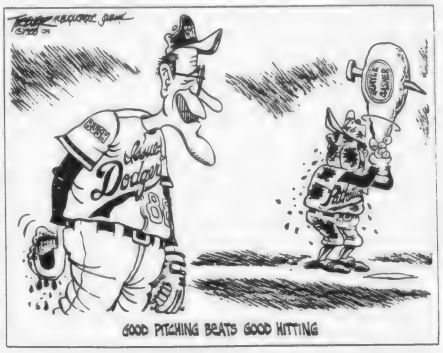
Supporting Our New President



Many historians say that there is one basic belief which all Americans have shared throughout the nation's history. It is the belief that they are taking part in a great, unique, still-developing experiment: the creation of freer, more just society.

Economic policies, social progress, foreign affairs, and national security remain important issues for all of us. Decisions must be made wisely for the consequences will affect people in all parts of the world for years to come.

This is why it is essential that the United States unite behind President-Elect Bush. Had the outcome been different the same would have been true for a President-Elect Dukakis.

Neither man really addressed the important issues facing this country during their campaigns. It could be said and rightly so that elections today are based on image, not substance. We as a nation must rise above party-lines and support the President, for this country is in deep trouble.

Why are we in trouble? The defecit, drugs, and a declining standard of living just to name a few. We face a world that includes rapid changes and we must work to insure that these changes reflect progress for our nation and for all people.

Let Longwood know what's on your mind. Write a Letter to the Editor, Box 1133.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

APO Fires Back

Dear Editor,

In response to the letter regarding Alpha Phi Omega in last week's Rotunda:

We the Brothers and Pledges of Alpha Phi Omega are very disturbed about the negative attention our fraternity has received. We wish to make it quite clear that all Brothers (active and inactive) are encouraged and given many opportunities to voice their opinions in all meetings and gatherings.

We feel that it is unfortunate that personal matters were unnecessarily associated with our fraternity. Robert Taylor has, and will continue, to provide excellent leadership in our fraternity.

We are confident that this incident will in no way effect our continuing mission to promote leadership, friendship and service to the Longwood College Campus.

The Brothers and Pledges of Alpha Phi Omega

Dear Editor,

I write in response to the letters found in last weeks Rotunda concerning APO and Robert Taylor. My aim is not to criticize the writer for surely he or she is entitled to his own opinion and felt the need to make it known. However, I feel that person does owe APO an apology.

The letter made the active members of APO sound like an ignorant group of students who are blindly mislead by an irresponsible executive. I don't feel Robert would be president if he was not doing his job sufficiently within the group. There is such a thing as impeachment. Nor, do I think that APO should be held liable for what one of its members does in his/her spare time or outside the organization.

As for the writer, of that letter, name withheld, I'd hate to think that you did not pledge APO because of Robert. I would hope that if you wanted in the organization for the organization and its ideals, that you would not have let one person keep you from joining. Also, if you feel that strongly against Robert why didn't you pledge in order to try and correct what you saw as being wrong. You probably could've helped APO more from voicing your feelings within the organization rather than from the outside. I think its obvious though that your friendship with the two former APO members that you mentioned swayed your decision just as much as your feelings for Robert Taylor did. For these reasons, I don't think you should hold him responsible for you not pledging.

The initial cause for last weeks letter, the writing on the door, was a personal problem between Robert and the two girls — former APO members. It in no way should've involved APO. Its fine to criticize another student if you have due cause, but to ridicule an organizations president in a public paper only makes the

A Little Background on The President Elect

By EDMUND A. MATRICARDI III

Last Tuesday, Americans chose George Bush to become the 41st President of the United States. Most people know that he has been Ronald Reagan's loyal vice-president for the last eight years and has helped lead America back into a position of strength and leadership; but what did George Bush do before 1980? What qualifications and experience does this man really have?

George Bush was born the son of Connecticut Senator, Prescott Bush. After high school, George went straight into the navy and proceeded to become the youngest fighter pilot in naval history. While flying during World War II in the South Pacific, Bush's plane was shot down. He was the only crew member to survive.

After the war, George went home and attended college at Yale. George was very active in school with a high average. He was a member of several organizations including Skull and Bones, which was the most prestigious society on campus and consisted of 10 of the most revered seniors.

From Yale, George left the nest and traveled south to Texas to make a try at the oil business. Although he most assuredly could have lived a more comfortable existence in Connecticut and succeeded his father in the Senate, Bush took a chance. With his name, his reputation and his career on the line, Bush began a job with another oil company, gained experience, and soon ventured off into self-employment. Bush's oil company survived many setbacks through George's hard work and dedication. But soon he tired of the oil business and decided to run for a seat in the House of Representatives. He won easily and established himself as a strong Republican and a spokesman for the White House. In 1970, Bush left the House in an ambitious attempt for a hotly contested Senate seat. Bush campaigned hard and took the loss to now Democratic vice-presidential nominee Lloyd Bentson hard, but the Republican party was not about to leave their man in the cold. For the next six years, Bush held many influential appointed positions including U.S. Ambassador to the U.N., Republican National Committee chairman, Director of the Central Intelligence Agency, and was the Ambassador to China during the historic opening of Democratic relations with now semi-friendly Communist China.

Bush's life has been a story of ups and downs, but he has always remained on top. Rather than giving up after his business almost collapsed and after the devastating defeat in 1970, Bush has always looked forward; shaken off disappointment; and done better. Bush has experience in leadership and possessing that more than qualifies him to lead America into a post-Reagan era. From the skies of the South Pacific, to the frontiers of Texas and onto the politics of Washington, George Bush has fought an uphill battle for America.

whole organization look bad. It seems to me that APO became the victim following the letter and I feel the organization deserves an apology.

politics and reflected the country's general satisfaction with the results of eight years of Republican government under President Reagan.

In campaigning to succeed Reagan, Bush had promised no major departures, but he had also suggested that he might do some things differently, promising to create a "kinder, gentler nation" and affirming a strong commitment to the environment.

But if these promises heartened political moderates, the campaign Bush ran was hailed by conservatives, since the vice president — once thought of as being at the center of his party — cast the contest with Dukakis as an ideological referendum."

Though voter turnout remains somewhat low many agree that the fact the election is over is a big relief.

The Ironic Fact About The Youth Vote

By JEAN TAYLOR

The results from Tuesday's election is known and for millions of Americans especially 18 to 21 years olds, the right of voting was ignored.

It's ironic that few people vote in the U.S., since over our nations brief history suffrage has been one of the most desperately sought after priviledges. Three amendments and several federal laws have been passed to protect and increase voting.

In 1971 congress did young people an honor by proposing the twenty-sixth amendment. After it was ratified by the states, America had high hopes that its youth would appreciate and exercise the right that it had been extended. That hope was shattered in the 1972 election with an extremely low youth turnout.

For this election the media and both political parties have done a great deal to get people to vote. Everyone from Ronald Reagan to Run DMC has been seen on television giving words of encouragement.

Low voter turnout is usually attributed to apathy. A lot of people don't care who wins in elections or feel that the choices of candidates is so dismal that voting is not worth the effort. It's true some candidates running for office do little to inspire and sometimes even sould alike but that's when it's up to the voter to make the distinction.

Making an intelligent choice between candidates doesn't mean voting for the one with the best 30 second sound bite on television, it means having an understanding of the major issues then voting for the candidate that you think will have best effect on those issues based on his ideology, competence, and past performance.

Given that government effects every aspect of our lives, not voting is not caring about one's future. And for young adults such as ourselves here at Longwood pursuing careers, our futures are all we have.

Date Rape Safety

By CAROLINE MANKE

On Thursday, October 27th at 7:00 p.m. in Jarman auditorium there was a Date Rape Safety program sponsored by Student Services and the greeks.

One the panel of the program were: Mr. Richard Blanton, Commonwealth Attorney from Cumberland County; Dr. Bonnie Bronson of the Longwood Counseling Service; Lt. Herbert Nichols of the Richmond Police Department; and Miss Page Anderson, a senior at VCU.

Lt. Nichols first assured us that "we are not here tonight to distill any fear in you people; we are here to create more awareness and make you more alert". He then went on to tell us some very disturbing statistics: last year there were 15,037 rapes in the United States, which is one rape every 5 hours, 46 minutes, and 23 seconds; in the past six months there have been 92 rapes in Richmond alone; of all rapes, 60% of the victims know the rapist. These are scary figures. However, it was stated during the course of the evening that there were no reported date rapes at Longwood last year.

Mr. Blanton was the next to speak. He told us that date rape is a "prosecutor's nightmare". In most cases, the man says the woman consented while the woman insists that she was forced. "The elements must be proven beyond a doubt", Blanton said. This makes these cases hard to handle.

Dr. Bronson again assured us: "I don't want to instill panic in Longwood College, but first I want there to be an awareness". She encouraged not only the victims of date rape to find counsel, but those close to the victim, as well. Bronson said that date rape is not just a problem for women, the victims, but for others close to the victim, including men. Rape of any kind is a devastating experience. She also emphasized the importance of seeking counsel even if the victim does not report the rape to the police.

Miss Anderson then spoke briefly about having dealt with friends who had been date raped. She encouraged victims to at least seek help from friends if not a therapist and/or the police.

For the last hour or so the audience was free to ask questions and discuss the issue at hand. Audience participation was good and became very heated at some points.

Rape, date or otherwise is a terrible thing. Do not walk around thinking it could never happen to you. It could. This year at Longwood there is a self-defense class on 3rd floor Wheeler Monday-Wednesday at 8:00 p.m. Also, thanks to the guys on 1st floor Tabb, there is a 24 hour escort service. Take advantage of these services. Don't be a victim.

Dear Longwood College Student:

Your last opportunity to have your picture made for the yearbook is Thursday, November 10 from 10:00 a.m.-6:00 p.m.

Please be sure to come so you can be included in your yearbook. There is no cost to have your picture in the yearbook, but prepaid portrait packages are available.

All packages are fully guaranteed. If you are not satisfied, your money will be refunded. Please make your checks payable to Max Ward-Delmar Studios.

"One Life to Live" is Doing Campus Search

(CPS) — Hoping to ingratiate itself to some of its most avid viewers, the "One Life To Live" tv show is looking for a college campus on which to do some on-location production.

The ABC "daytime drama" has placed ads in 50 college papers asking students to write and explain why their campus "would be the perfect location" for several episodes featuring "Fraternity Row," the program's "soap within a soap."

While just choosing a campus might have been a more conventional way to select a location, "this was a way to increase college enthusiasm for the show," said Jason Bondeross, the show's spokesman. "There was already a large college audience and this was a way to get them more excited about the program. It was fun."

"We're very open. The campus has to be in the United States, but it can be big or small, rural or urban," said Bondeross.

ABC's research indicates "many" of "One Life To Live's" viewers are college students, Bondeross says.

The unusual approach to finding a campus site for the show, he added, is "a wonderful opportunity to make contact with the college audience."

ABC would use the campus setting to portray the career of a young "actress," following her from modeling assignments to tv commercials to her role in the fictional "Fraternity Row."

"Fraternity Row" also provides viewers with a "behind-the-scenes look at daytime television," Bondeross explains.

And it also gives campuses a good chance to advertise themselves.

"From the numb college presidents, dea ces and individual stud who have called in," Bondeross says, "it's been a very effective ad."

When the opportunity arises, colleges do compete fiercely to get their names and even buildings included in movies and tv shows. A number of schools campaigned in 1987 to host "A Different World," the Cosby Show spinoff that takes place on a campus.

Spellman College in Atlanta eventually won the chance, but, although many of the set designs are based on real rooms at Spellman, the show's producers ultimately decided not to use footage of the campus itself.

Challenges is a Good Word

By KATHY L. MYERS

Challenges. That's the main thing that "Patrick Henry" has presented to both the actors and technical people at Longwood. "Patrick Henry" is an original musical by Dr. Patton Lockwood, a theatre professor at Longwood, with music by Ralph Mohr, an assistant professor of music at Longwood. The problems that are encountered with an original script are unlike the common problems normally encountered with a well known script. The people putting "Patrick Henry" together have nothing to go by but the script and the director's visions and ideas.

The musical "Patrick Henry" takes place between 1754 and 1799. Therefore, everything in the show has to convey the colonial period. Most of the colonial costumes are being constructed by two ladies in nearby Prospect, while other costume pieces, such as handkerchiefs and accessories/decorations are being prepared by the costume crew at Longwood.

As designer of the show, Mr. Moffatt Evans has a challenge of deciphering the script to design a set and a lighting plot that fulfill the needs of the play. Colonial period furniture, such as a chair of the Speaker of the House of Burgesses and a Roundabout Chair for Patrick Henry have to be constructed. The lighting design has to work with the design of the set to make the scenes effective. With a live orchestra on stage in the wings, the set has also been designed to reflect the sound out to the audience.

Perhaps challenge is what educational theatre is all about. Unlike professional theatre, educational theatre gives the students and the faculty opportunities to take risks, to try new things that may not work and to experiment. The theatre department is wagering that "Patrick Henry" will be another of Longwood's successes.

"Patrick Henry" will be performed in Jarman Auditorium on November 16, 17, 18, and 19 at 8:00 p.m. Longwood College students free with I.D.

SPE Donates $500

By STEVE WILSON

On Friday, October 28th the brothers of Sigma Phi Epsilon Fraternity made a donation in excess of $500.00 worth of canned goods to the Prince Edward County Department of Social Services to distribute to needy families in our community as they see fit. Mrs. Roma Morris, representative of the Farmville Social Services stated, "We deeply appreciated the donation, it will be a great resource for us to distribute throughout our needy community."

Sigma Phi Epsilon would like to thank brother Don Mathews for his assistance in this worthwhile service project.

on the possibility of studying in Japan and in Florence, Italy is also available in the ISP office. For those interested in traveling abroad but cannot spend an entire semester abroad, Longwood is offering a trip to Finland during spring break, March 3 - 13. The cost of this trip is $925.00, including transportation. Dr. Nelson Neal, Lancer Dance Studio, may be contracted for further information.

On November 9, 1988 Longwood's Dr. John Peale will deliver another lecture on China. A lecture on U.S. Korean relations is scheduled for November 15, with Dr. Han K. Song, professor of Lynchburg College and president of the Virginia Consortium for Asian Studies. Also in late November a slide show on the Himalayas will be presented.

Anyone interested in any of the study abroad programs or anyone who would like further information on any of ISP's programs is asked to please stop by the ISP office, Grainger, 213. All are welcome.

SPORTS

Jones is the Key

Despite being known as a top-notch offensive player, Jones feels no extra pressure to produce. In fact, he feels it makes him play at a higher level.

As the Virginia Intercollegiate Soccer Association Tournament approaches, the Longwood Lancers will be looking to continue performing in the manner which earned them a 15-3-1 regular season record.

One of the main reasons for that success has been the play of sophomore forward Ray Jones. A candidate for Division II All-America honors for the second year in a row, Jones has used a quick 1988 start as a springboard to become the Lancers high scorer with 60 points.

This comes as no suprise to those people who watch him perform. Constantly looking for ways to score or set up goals, Jones has become known as a threat to put the ball into the opponent's net at any time.

After scoring 29 goals as a freshman, he has knocked in 21 this season. His career total of 50 is just one behind the Lancer record of 51 set by Gus Leal. Equally adept at setting up his teammates, Jones is the career leader in assists with 28.

While Jones is considered to be a major offensive threat for Longwood, he was not expected to provide much "punch" when playing back in Bermuda. Jones says he played against players who had more skill and experience than he had.

"It was easier to play, because I didn't have to provide everything. Plus, I was taught how to play while on the field."

Jones, who began playing soccer at age 10, eventually became accustomed to playing Bermuda's number one sport and landed a spot on the country's National Youth Team, an honor he considers to be his finest. Soon afterward, he learned about Longwood College.

"A friend of mine knew one of the Longwood players at the time (Jeff Robinson), and their fathers talked to each other. They told me about Longwood, and I became interested in playing here," explained Jones, who was named All-American, All-VISA, and All-South Atlantic Region as a freshman.

Now that Jones is firmly inplanted at Longwood, he is able to look toward future possibilities with the Lancers. The possibility that he is comtemplating currently is that of winning the VISA State Tournament, which begins Thursday when Longwood faces Randolph-Macon.

"We need to take each game in the tournament as a normal game, and stay composed", said Jones. "The mid-season loss to Mary Washington will definitely motivate us, because if we beat Randolph-Macon on Thursday, then we might play MWC again. We can't afford to look past Randolph-Macon, however."

If Ray Jones has anything to do with it, the Lancers should have a big say in who wins the VISA tournament, as well as others in the future.

Loss to Spartans: Loses NCAA Bid

Longwood could have virtually wrapped up its first trip to the NCAA II Soccer Tournament Saturday, but came up short as visiting UNC Greensboro took a 5-0 win at First Avenue Field. With their NCAA hopes apparently dashed, the 15-3-1 Lancers can concentrate on the Virginia Intercollegiate Soccer Association Playoffs.

Longwood, the second place team in the VISA Eastern Division, plays at Western champ Randolph-Macon Thursday at 2:30 in the state semi-finals. Eastern winner Mary Washington hosts Shenandoah, Western runner-up, in the other VISA Playoff contest. Winners of the two games will play for the state title Wednesday, November 16.

VISA champ in 1982, 1984 and 1986, the Lancers hope they'll win the title once again in the even-numbered year of 1988.

Saturday, eighth ranked Longwood entertained the 16th rated Spartans, 12-7 coming in against a tough schedule. UNCG took advantage of Lancer defensive miscues to score two goals and take a 2-0 edge at the half. With Longwood playing a man down in the second period, the Spartans knocked in three more scores to hand LC its worst defeat since 1983.

The last team to score five goals against Longwood was William & Mary in 1983, also a 5-0 contest.

Freshman forward Ed Regan was the Lancer booter ejected against UNCG. Regan, Longwood's second leading scorer, will miss the Randolph-Macon contest also after drawing a red card.

A disappointed Longwood coach Rich Posipanko said the Spartans took it to his squad Saturday, but he felt the outcome could have been much closer.

"They beat us soundly, but take away our two first half mistakes and Regan's ejection and the game could have been close. It's frustrating to come so near to an NCAA bid, but we have to get back up for the VISA now."

GET THE COMPETITIVE EDGE

Proctor Named Player of the Week

Sophomore grappler Ted Proctor won all three of his matches and first place at 150 pounds in the VMI preseason tournament Sunday and, for his performance, Proctor has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period of October 30 - November 6. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood College sports information office.

Proctor, one of three Lancers to win a title at VMI, captured his weight class with 15-0, 14-7 and 6-4 decisions.

"Ted turned in an outstanding performance against tough competition," said coach Steve Nelson.

One of the top veterans on this year's Lancer squad, Proctor had a 20-11-1 record last year, while winning the state title and finishing second in the regional tournament. In the College Division State Tournament, Proctor was named Most Outstanding Wrestler. He also notched a title and two second place finishes in regular season tournaments.

A graduate of Osbourn High School, Proctor should be set for a standout sophomore season.

"Catching Sight of Longwood from atop the Sesquicentennial Mount"

VOL. NO. 68 NO. 9 | NOVEMBER 21, 1988 | FARMVILLE, VA.

Board of Visitors Have Full Agenda

By P.A. FAIRS

The policy making body of Longwood College, The Board of Visitors, met earlier this month. In the following paragraph is a summary of information and actions taken by the Board.

Information:

1. Evelyn Coleman, secretary to the president and the Board, will be retiring as of Dec. 16. President Dorrill praised her for her "loyalty, devotion, and fine service to the College." Mrs. Coleman has worked at Longwood since August, 1948. She has served under eight presidents.

2. The Mall Project should be completed by Dec. 15.

3. New roofs are scheduled soon for the hi-rise residence halls and Lancer Hall.

4. The Craft House will be renovated and become the "home" for the Admissions Office.

5. Final working drawings for the Library will be submitted to the State next week. Construction should be underway in February.

6. An architect is being secured for the pre-planning phase of the new Student Housing project.

7. Applications for the position of Vice President for Advancement are being reviewed.

8. The first draft of the Strategic Plan is expected to

Landmark Bell Will Be Displayed

By KENT BOOTY

The Longwood College bell, a landmark that governed the lives of students for perhaps as long as a century, will be put on permanent display during the college's 150th anniversary in 1989.

The bell — the object of late-night pranks by many students — is being restored. It had been practically "lost" in the basement of Graham Building since being taken down from the roof of Ruffner Hall in 1976, about 15 years after it was last rung officially by the college.

For generations of Longwood students, the bell awakened them in the morning, rang for classes and meals, and signaled the end of the day. It was enclosed in a cupola on the roof of South Ruffner, near its junction with East Ruffner.

"Some friends told me that people in town did their housekeeping by that bell," said Jane Andrews, a Longwood alumna who works in the alumni office. "They practically lived by that bell."

The bell measures 36

Off Campus Housing Sparks Controversy

By MATT PETERMAN

Last Thursday a group of angry Farmville residents told their town council that some off campus students were conducting themselves in a manner deemed unlawful. Isolated cases included yard urination, use of pyrotechnic devices, use of bottle rockets, drunkenness, profanity, and the breaking of windows.

As a result of the complaining residents, the Farmville town council unanimously voted to begin enforcing a law uncovered by Prince Edward Commonwealth attorney William Watkins.

According to The Farmville Herald: "The specific section states that it "shall be unlawful for any person to allow, suffer, or permit in any house or upon any premises owned or occupied by himself any profane, obscene or vulgar language or conduct; any fighting, quarreling or affray; or any loud or unusual noises to the disturbance of the quiet and good order of the town."

Breaking that law carries a fine of up to $1000 or up to

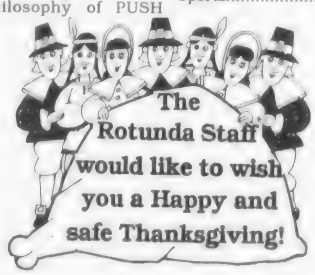
Career Night In Business Was Evening Well Spent

By DENISE CLAYTON

On Monday, November 7, the Office of Career Planning and Placement and Delta Sigma Pi sponsored another Career Night in Business. The program started with a general session with two keynote speakers. Alumnus Duke Rollins (1982 graduate) gave advice in preparing for the workplace and Warren Green, Regional Services Manager for the Virginia Department of Economic Development spoke on economic development and entrepreneurship. The speakers were followed by two breakout sessions where students could hear more about individual concentrations of interest offered here at Longwood.



Duke Rollins gave students the philosophy of PUSH which means Produce a Product, Understand what you are producing, Support what is produced and have fun in the workplace. After following this philosophy, one becomes a PUSHER and can expect financial benefits and reward oneself.

Warren Green explained the process for starting entrepreneurships and the advantages and disadvantages of one. Before jumping in, one must research what kind of

More Colleges Requiring Foreign Languages

(CPS) – It's easier than it used to be to get into college without having any foreign language credits, but most colleges now make it harder to graduate without taking some.

In a survey of campus language requirements, the American Council on Education (ACE) has found that one in 12 colleges has increased foreign language graduation requirements during the last five years.

But less than 5 percent of the nation's community colleges, which emphasize preparing their students to get jobs, require entering students to know a foreign language. One in eight requires that students take a foreign language before graduating.

The authors of the ACE's study, called "International Studies for Undergraduates, 1987," were encouraged to find that 75 percent of the U.S.'s four-year campuses make foreign language courses graduation requirements.

"Enrollments in foreign language classes are increasing, at a time when enrollments in general are only holding steady," said Richard Brod of the Modern Language Association (MLA), apparently unaware that scores of campuses have had to cope with surprise enrollment increases this fall.

Interest in foreign language study has had its ups and downs.

Brod explained that language requirements were more common before World War II. "There was a loosening in the 1950s and 60s. Then there was a revival."

A 1987 MLA study found more than a million students were enrolled in language courses other than English for the first time in 14 years.

Brod attributes the increase to world trade pressures. Chinese and Japanese language courses – which have obvious economic benefits to budding business people – have enjoyed the biggest leaps in popularity. MLA figures showed 23,454 college students studying Japanese in 1986, up 45.4 percent from 16,127 students in 1983.

The number of students taking Chinese went up 28.2 percent in the same time period, from 13,178 students in 1986 to 16,891, the MLA found.

Spanish and French remained the most popular languages with high school students, the MLA report determined.

In a 1987 report, however, the Education Commission of the States found that no state requires a foreign language for high school graduation.

Poetry By Waters

By DONNA L. FERRIER

On Thursday, November 3, 1988, at 7:30 p.m. poet Michael Waters appeared in Wygal Auditorium to read his poetry.

Waters, a New York native in his late thirties, has written five poetry books. He has taught at the University of Nottingham in England, and he is now writer in residence at Sweet Briar College.

Waters read several humorous poems from his new book, The Burden Lifters, which kept the audience laughing. His poetry is largely autobiographical, containing settings in New York where he was raised, and also containing some of his early experiences. His poems entitled "Horse," "Lipstick," and "The Conversion of St. Paul," which is based on his experience in a school play, were among the most popular poems of the evening from the audience's point of view.

Many of his other poems are set in overseas countries where the poet has been. His next book, entitled Bountiful, will contain some of his poems, which are set in Thailand, such as "Ticks," "Leeches," and "Scorpions." Waters told the audience that these three poems are very similar, and his new book will contain more of such similar poems, such as "Lace," and "Humming Birds."

A reception in the Haga Room followed the reading where Waters signed autographs in his poetry books which were sold at the reception.

be completed later this month.

9. The Virginia Commission on the University of the 21st Century will hold a hearing at Longwood on Dec. 9 in Wygal from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

10. The RFP process and contract award for the new telephone system and communication switch project will be completed by the end of the year.

11. The Rector announced that the Master Plan Advisory Committee, re-named the Longwood College Community Advisory Committee, has been reconstituted and that the membership includes: Dr. Wyndham B. Blanton, Jr., chair, Mrs. Vera Allen, James Ghee, Louis W. Freeman, Jr., Richard V. Hurley, Gerald J. Spates, Hunter Watson, Beatrice White, and Joanne G. Wright.

Actions:

The Board approved the President's recommendations:

1. To give authority to the College to initiate, working with the Attorney General's office, condemnation proceedings to acquire the property situated on the corner of Pine and Franklin streets. This is a house located in the area of the proposed parking lot for students. The house has been unoccupied for a number of years. The parking lot, in its final working drawing phase, will be bounded by Main, Hooper, Franklin, and Pine streets. Construction is expected to begin and be completed this Spring.

2. That individual full- and part-time faculty salaries and stipends which fall within Board-approved ranges be submitted to the Board for information only, and that salary and stipend recommendations outside the range, as well as recommendations for appointment, promotion, and tenure, shall be submitted for action.

3. That the Quarterly Report of the College's revenues and expenditures be approved as presented, and that, in the future, these reports will be presented, not for action, but as items of information.

4. To approve the Administrative and Professional Faculty Compensation Plan. The Plan, which covers T&R administrators and T&R professional faculty, is required by the State. Among other things, the Plan notes that "salaries for specific positions will be offered based upon salaries for similar positions in institutions which have the same or similar characteristics as Longwood College," and that all persons appointed to these positions shall be ineligible for tenure, except already-tenured teaching faculty who are selected to fill vacancies.

5. To approve the Internal Audit Plan, the revisions to the Internal Audit Charter, and the policy regarding the reporting of fraud to the Internal Auditor.

6. To give the president or his/her designee the authority to "write-off" accounts which have been in a delinquent status for two years and have been returned to the College as uncollectable by a collecting agency or the office of the Attorney General.

7. To revise the fee schedule for students enrolled for one to six credits in off-campus courses in South Boston and Halifax (eliminating the $20 Comprehensive Fee) and for the establishment of a $1,700 fee for students spending a semester in the Venezuela program. The fee would support the promotion and administration of the program.

8. That two budget amendment requests be approved for further consideration by the State's Department of Planning and Budget. These requests are $1,225,000 for library equipment and $91,282 to cover benefits for 13 positions converted from part-time to full-time.

9. That the new "Residence Hall Design Principles" be approved as presented. Basically, this means that the design of the new residence hall would be compatible with nearby halls (Cox/Wheeler/Stubbs).

The Board passed a resolution extending to former Board member Bertram R. Schewel "our deepest affection and our heartfelt appreciation for his contributions to the College and his many actions and achievements for the common good."

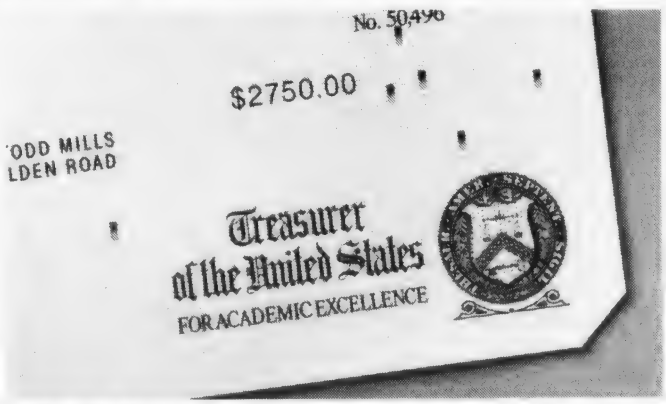
The Board deferred action (until Dec. 9) on a statement of policies governing the admission of undergraduate students. Such a statement is required by the Council of Higher Education.

The next meeting of the Board will be at Longwood on Dec. 9.

The placing of the fountain on Wednesday, brought the mall project one step closer to completion. The entire project is expected to be finished Dec. 15th.

Erwin is Artist of the Month

By P.A. FAIRS



Paula Erwin, of Cumberland, has been named Artist of the Month for November at Longwood College.

Her winning work is still life in pencil that she describes as "a study of shadows." Ms. Erwin received a $50 cash award, and her work is on display in the Bedford Art Building.

A 1988 graduate of Cumberland High School, Ms. Erwin is a freshman at Longwood, majoring in interior design. She took art classes for three years at Cumberland and also had one year of independent study in art. She

Thanksgiving

With the approach of Thanksgiving, a person begins to think of home, roasted turkey with all the trimmings, and a break from studies. For some of us, however, Thanksgiving also means it is time to finish up the projects, the term papers, or anything else the teachers decide on at the "last minute." Also there are exams to start worrying over. How many of us, though, really buckle down to study when we know we are at home, free from our class to class, homework and paper filled schedules? Probably not many.

Whatever happened to the old fashioned Thanksgivings we had when we were kids? You remember – grandmother's house, a big turkey, cranberry sauce, your favorite pie, and all your aunts, uncles, and cousins? Sure you do! Everyone was happy to see you, to find out how you were doing in school, and to tell a few tales of what Thanksgiving was like when they were "your age." Life was easier then, wasn't it? Today, it seems, the only time the family gets together for the turkey and the talk is between the football bowl games or at halftime!

We all say we are thankful for our health, for our friends, and for our family. But do we really mean what we say or do we just say it once or twice a year (Thanksgiving and Christmas) to please others? In this rapid paced world we live in today, it is hard to know exactly what we mean. The simple joys of life are lost – joys like those of Thanksgiving because Mom doesn't want a house full of people or she just doesn't want to do all of the cooking herself.

Thanksgiving – or any holiday that brings the family together for that matter – should not be this way. While it is true that college life does somewhat alter past traditions of a homework free break, try not to let that be the only thing you do while you are at home. Take the time to enjoy yourself and your family. And instead of having Thanksgiving once a year, why not give thanks every day?

Let Longwood know what's on your mind. Write a Letter to the Editor, Box 1133.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Right or Privilege?

Dear Editor:

I am writing in elaboration of Jean Taylor's article "The Ironic Facts About the Youth Vote" in last week's Rotunda. In speaking with friends about the presidential election, I asked if they each had voted – all but one responded that they had. The lone non-voter stated that she did not have an interest in voting. I began to think about her answer, and I asked why she had chosen to come to Longwood. She answered with some less-than-intelligent comment about not knowing were to go to school, near to her hometown.

I would like publically to inform this girl, and others who feel the same, that choosing a college to attend has a purpose, just as voting does. People go to school to further their education and ensure stability in their future. Going hand-in-hand with stabilizing or having some type of control of one's future is voting, especially for the President.

Voting in the United States is not a right, it is a privilege, one that young people should exercise more often. To quote Miss Taylor, "Given that government effects every aspect of our lives, not voting is not caring about one's future. And for young adults such as ourselves here at Longwood pursuing careers, our futures are all we have." I agree whole-heartedly with this statement, and I want to know why many students are attending a college of their choice – supported by the government – to better their futures, yet they do not want to choose the people in the government?

To the Editor:

Response to the October 27 program on "Acquaintance Rape" in Jarman Auditorium was incredible; 500 people attended.

There is no question that awareness of the issue was increased and that discussion has been stimulated.

I wish to thank all of the persons involved with making the program a success: the students who worked hard to produce the skits, the theater department for setting up the sound system, Panhellenic Council for acting as ushers, Greek Affairs for assisting with publicity and housing for guests. I appreciate also all of the Seminar Leaders, Faculty and staff who supported the program. I wish to applaud the students who responded in such great numbers to show concern and interest in this college/community issue.

COMMENTARY

Off Campus Housing

12 months in jail, or both.

Town police have been enforcing an ordinance forbidding loud music, but were unaware they had sharper teeth. "This is much better," Chief Otto Overton said.

The basic facts as could be extracted from The Farmville Herald are below:

Town council has discussed the problems students renting houses poses to other residents. They have contemplated an apartment licensing ordinance and will most likely pass one in the future.

While council has felt that the best bet may be to go after landlords, many of whom live out-of-town and out-of-state, local attorney Robert Bruce told them Thursday that "the person leasing it is the one you can nail."

In addition to turning toward town police, councilman and residents are looking for cooperation from Longwood. The college in many ways has greater leverage with its students and can enforce things in ways the town cannot.

Longwood president Dr. William Dorrill said Tuesday he wished citizens had come to the college with their problems before going to town council.

Dorrill said "communication is a two-way street. I want to be cooperative but it takes two to tango."

Dorrill said the college wants "to cooperate to the fullest extent of our control."

When asked what controls the college could exert, he said, "I'm not entirely sure, but apparently the town wasn't entirely sure either."

One resident's concern that Longwood not think it's being attacked by town residents is important. The town is a community made up of different parts. Longwood is an important part of that community. So are residents who live around the campus.

But when any large number of people are brought together there will be some who take their responsibility of citizenship less seriously than others. This is no less true when those people are college students.

Another resident told council he expects full cooperation from the college in addressing citizen concerns. He and Overton were to meet with LC vice-president for business affairs Rick Hurley Tuesday afternoon.

Campus reaction to Wednesday's Farmville Herald's reporting of the event received mostly criticism. "Woodley editorialized the whole thing," said senior Steve Wilson. Another student who wished not to be identified commented that: "The ... [article] was a sensational attempt to try to arouse hype over the issue."

Administrators contacted had no comment on the issue.

Why Dukakis Lost

BY TOM FOSTER

George Bush earned his victory over Michael Dukakis by a skillful campaign waged with military precision.

Dukakis, ahead early in the campaign by 30 points, failed to seize the initiative. He disappeared from the battlefield to tour the countryside.

Dukakis failed to concentrate on his opponent's weak points. Had he done so early, he might have chosen the battleground and gained a clear advantage. His hesitation let Bush choose when and where he would mount his attacks.

By challenging every facet of the Reagan-Bush record, Dukakis wasted limited resources without securing a single important objective. In contrast, Bush hit again and again at small weaknesses in the Dukakis record.

The Dukakis forces failed to maneuver quickly as opportunities presented themselves or attacks were mounted against the candidate.

Bush brilliantly used the element of surprise, raiding Boston harbor and appearing again with Boston police, while the Dukakis forces were predictable – an easy target.

The surprise attacks succeeded in part because the Dukakis forces had not identified their own weak points, nor designed an effective defense. Dukakis failed to attack first on the issue of crime, and when attacked, he retreated. His inaction permitted Bush to drive the attack home with renewed force.

The Dukakis approach was too complex, spread too thinly, with too little clear direction. Because he failed to simplify his campaign, he left himself vulnerable to a simple and clear campaign against him.

Final victory requires unity, but a disorganized campaign and Jesse Jackson's virtual disappearance from the campaign, doomed the Dukakis effort.

During the next four years, our new President must protect the nation and lead it in an endless series of challenges. His success in the 1988 campaign proves him worthy of that role. If the American people unify behind him, they will assure his success in the battles to come.

Bell

inches in diameter and probably weighs between 1,000 and 1,500 pounds.

Had it not been for the interest of a Longwood carpenter, the bell might never have seen the light of day again.

Jim Blake, a member of the physical plant staff, was concerned that the bell might eventually disappear if nothing was done. "In July, 1986, he told me, 'I know you're interested in old things. There's an old bell I'd like to show you,'" said Dr. James Jordan, professor of anthropology and Director of Longwood Archeology Field School.

Dr. Jordan examined the bell, did some preliminary documentary reassessment on it and consulted some experts on bells at Colonial Williamsburg. He presented a proposal to then Longwood President Janet Greenwood and discussed the bell with the Historical Reflections Committee, a subcommittee of Longwood's Sesquicentennial Committee. The idea gradually evolved of putting the bell on display.

The earliest reference to a bell that Dr. Jordan found is in an 1859 brochure for Longwood, then called the Farmville Female College. "One hour after the rising bell, the boarders assemble with the teachers in the parlor for family prayers," it said.

The 1902 issue of The Virginian, Longwood's yearbook, contains the passage, "When the big bell rings, the girls come trooping in. . ." In the college's financial records for 1903-04, there are four entries for "repairs and improvements" to the "school bell."

"Whether the 'rising bell', the 'big bell' and the 'school bell' are the same bell, we cannot be sure," said Dr. Jordan. "I'll bet money they're all the same, but we don't have any way to prove that."

Over the years, the bell proved irresistible to student pranksters.

"One night, a classmate and I tied the clapper with ironing board covers and towels so it wouldn't ring," said Dr. Nancy Andrews, a member of the Class of 1959 who is on the physical education faculty. "Everybody was late for class the next day."

The next night, after they said we couldn't do anything to prevent it from ringing, we went up there again. We tied fishing wire to the clapper and extended it until we got it into a (dorm) room. We rang the bell all night long. People in town were calling the college and saying, 'Stop ringing that darn bell.'"

Nancy Shelton, a member of the Class of 1968, recalled that students would paint the bell red or green, depending on their class year. About half of the bell contains a fading coat of red paint.

"Sometimes students would tie the clapper with a rope and throw it over a roofline so they could ring it from their rooms, like in Tabb," Mrs. Shelton said. "I remember it ringing at 2 a.m. sometimes."

The college probably quit using the bell in 1960 or 1961. Dr. Andrews remembers it being used as late as 1959, and Dr. Mary Heintz, a retired administrator and faculty member, said it was no longer rung when she arrived in 1962.

In 1962, acting president Fred Wygal announced that painting the bell was prohibited. A letter to the editor in The Rotunda, the student newspaper, protested the revoking of the "cherished tradition" of painting it with class colors. A corresponding editorial denied this was a tradition and pointed out the dangers of climbing up in the roof.

Safety considerations finally prompted the bell's removal, Dr. Heintz said.

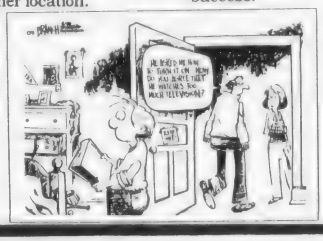
A photo in a 1972 issue of The Rotunda shows the newly elected freshman class president climbing up on a scaffold to ring the bell. Apparently, it was a tradition for the officers of student organizations to ring the bell, said Dr. Jordan.

"College bells regulated the residential rather than the academic life of their institution and the spread of clocks and watches made most of this ringing obsolete," according to the book Bells and Man, by Percival Price.

A bell at Oxford University in England still rings 101 times (the one-time size of the student body) at 9 every evening, a 441-year-old custom that reminds students they have to be inside the campus walls, the book said. "Of course, nowadays nobody heeds it but everybody likes to hear it."

At the University of Georgia, where Dr. Jordan was once a graduate student, it was a tradition for freshmen to ring a campus bell all night long the evening before football games with rival Georgia Tech, he said.

The bell's new role will be that of a "museum artifact," Dr. Jordan said, adding that it would have been inappropriate to return it to its former location.



Business

product is to be produced, will it sell and the technical know how to produce and sell and the quality among other considerations. Some advantages are being your own boss, direct contact with customers, personal satisfaction and financial satisfaction among the disadvantages of long hours and flexible income. The key point Mr. Green stated was that success comes from attitude including discipline, the need to achieve and personality.

After presentations from Mr. Rollings and Mr. Green, students could attend two of five breakout sessions. The speakers were Mr. Jim Branscome, Treasurer of the Virginia United Methodist Conference for Accounting, Mr. David Whithus, Vice-President and Manager of Sovran Bank of Crewe, Va. for finace, Ms. Maryilyn Spence, Labor Relations Sepcialist for the Department of the Nancy from Virginia Beach, Va. for management, Mr. David Deutsch, VPI Director of marketing for Marketing Strategies, Inc. from Richmond, Va. and Dr. James Cross, Vice President for Longwood College, for Management Information Systems.

The Office of Career Planning and Placement and Delta Sigma Pi would like to thank everyone who participated and attended Career Night in Business and made it a success.

EVENTS

Longwood College will be forming its first forensic team, and will be in its first competition on Saturday, December 3rd. Lynchburg College, Liberty University, Randolph-Macon for Women, Sweet Briar and Longwood College have formed the Central Virginia Forensic League, in order to start forensic competition among them. With the exception of Liberty University, all of the other schools will be initiating its first attempts in forensics.

The first tournament will be held at Longwood College on Saturday, December 3rd and will last from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m. Each school will be eligible to place a total of 12 students in competition in the events of impromptu speaking, persuasive speaking, informational speaking, after dinner speaking, prose reading, and duo dramatic interpretation.

Any interested students may contact Dr. Nancy Haga, Speech and Theatre Program, Jarman Auditorium. Please see her, call her, or sign up on the door. A LC student does not have to have had previous experience in a forensic program on the high school level to be eligible. For this first tournament, students must sign up before Wednesday, November 16th.

Another one day tournament will be held in January, February, and March. A student may participate in one or in all of them. If you can not work the December Tournament in your schedule, perhaps you would be interested in one of the other dates. Hopefully, the team will be able to compete in a regional meet at George Mason University in March. At this meet students would be eligible to qualify for a national tournament to be held later in the spring.

Introduction to Journalism

Careers, Careers, Careers!!! How many times have you asked yourself, "What will I do after I graduate?"

Hopefully this question and many more were answered Tuesday, November 8, 1988 at the 5th Annual Minority Career Fair held at the Omni Hotel in Charlottesville, Virginia. Over 130 companies were represented giving students from all parts of Virginia an opportunity to meet their representatives. A. H. Robins Company, Allstate, AT & T, Bell Atlantic Telephone, the C.I.A., General Electric, Dow Industries, Pepsi Cola, IBM, Sears and Sovran Bank were among the many companies represented by individuals who could answer any question.

Attending this event were juniors and seniors along with one freshman. Students were encouraged to look extremeley professional and to bring a resume'. The Office of Career Planning and Placement was very pleased with the representation from the students of Longwood. "I think students took a real good advantage. Students were well prepared and presented themselves well," stated Bill Froude, the Assistant Director of the Office of Career Planning and Placement. Most students were very pleased with The Fair also, as stated by Fontellia Browder, "I had a very nice time and am glad that I decided to attend The Minority Career Fair."

The Choral Music Ensembles at Longwood College have an open seat for you! If you have an interest in singing, no matter what your level of ability, there is an ensemble available for your participation. If you are interested in auditioning for the Camerata Singers (MWF 11:30-12:20) or the Lancer Edition (MWF 8:30-9:20), contact Dr. Donald Trott in Wygal Hall or call 392-9368. If you are interested in joining the Concert Choir (MW 4:30-5:20), simply pre-register and plan on attending the first rehearsal in January. There is no audition required for entry into the Concert Choir. All three ensembles meet the General Education requirement. Make choral music a part of your education at Longwood College.

The Richmond Renaissance Singers to Perform Tonight

By P. A. FAIRS

The Richmond Renaissance Singers will give their annual Advent-Christmas Concert, entitled "Christmas Music Through the Ages," on Monday evening, Nov. 21, at 8 o'clock in the Wygal Recital Hall at Longwood College.

The concert program features music and readings on: the Prophecies, the Annunciation, the Visitation of the Blessed Virgin Mary, the Birth of the Christ Child, the Adoration of the Animals and the Shepherds, the Adoration of the Magi and the Childhood of Jesus. Music from the 13th to the 20th centuries is included.

The concert and the reception following it are open to the public free of charge.

The Richmond Renaissance Singers is a group of nine singers under the direction of Grant Hellmers. Members of the ensemble are: Gale Spriggs and Mary Susan Ladd, sopranos; Laura Candler-White and Suzanne Darling, altos; Gene Harris and Steven Linas, tenors; Michael Simpson, countertenor; and Bryan Mitchell and Bruce Stevens, basses. The reader for the Christmas Concert is Celia Pendleton.

The ensemble, now in its eighth season, performs at various locations in Richmond, Petersburg, Charlottesville, and other places. Their Christmas program is recorded and telecast each year by Channel 23 (P.B.S.).

Members of the ensembles also are involved in the Richmond musical community as singers, choir directors, and organists in church and school music programs.

The Richmond Renaissance Singrs will present the next concert on the Chamber Music Series tonight.

The Christmas Concert at Longwood is part of the Chamber Music Series, with funding provided by the Longwood Arts Council.

The Chamber Music Series is sponsored by the Music Program of the Department of Visual and Performing Arts, with funding provided by the Longwood College Arts Council.

Mike Edge Named Player of the Week

By JOHN SMITH

Junior back Mike Edge had a pair of standout performances for the Lancer soccer team last week in the VISA Playoffs, and for his play, Edge has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period November 6-13. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood College sports information office.

Edge was cited by coach Rich Posipanko for his play in a 0-0 tie with Randolph-Macon Thursday in the Virginia Intercollegiate Soccer Association semi-finals and Sunday in a 3-0 loss to Mary Washington in the VISA Championship game. Longwood, ranked 17th in the final Division II poll, ended the year with a 15-4-2 record, tying the school standard for wins in a season.

"Mike played very sound defense in both games," said the coach. "In our last five contests he has helped push up the offense also. He has been a key man in the middle."

Edge was also one of five Lancers to convert a penalty kick Thursday as Longwood advanced to the VISA finals 5-4 in a shootout with the Yellow Jackets.

MIKE EDGE

A native of Chester, England, Edge graduated from Pascack Hills High School in Woodcliff Lake, New Jersey. His family now resides in Mississauge, Ontario Canada.

One of Longwood's top scorers this season, Edge accumulated eight goals and one assist while playing back. He now has 20 goals and six assists for his career. A chemistry major, Edge was named All-Eastern Division and All-State each of his first two seasons. He was an All-South Region choice in 1986.

Lancer Riders Fourth

By MIKE McGRATH

The Longwood Riding Team traveled to the University of Maryland November 6 to face tough competition. The Lancers met the challenge and finished a strong fourth place out of ten teams.

If the Lancers could had gained just three more points they would have brought home a third place finish. The Lancer riders were happy with their fourth place finish, considering that coach Mary Whitlock was unable to make the trip. With each competition the team finishes stronger. The riders are looking forward to their next show hosted by RMWC and Lynchburg November 19.

At the University of Maryland ribbon winners were Katherine Smith 1st in Advanced Walk-Trot-Canter, Jennifer Smith 2nd in Open Flat and 5th in Open Fences, Crystal Mitchell 2nd in Novice Flat and 6th in Novice Fences, Kandi Klotz 3rd in Novice Fences and 4th in Novice Flat, Shelley Malone 3rd in Novice Fences and 5th in Novice Flat, Scott Flood 5th Intermediate Flat and 4th Intermediate Fences, and Stephanie Handley 4th Intermediate Flat and 4th Intermediate Fences.

Also: Ashley Smith 4th in Advanced Walk-Trot, Sharon Kaufmann 4th Advanced Walk-Trot-Canter, Carey Seitz 5th Intermediate Flat and 6th Novice Fences, Holly Wagner 5th in Walk-Trot-Canter, and Julie Miller 6th in Intermediate Flat.

Chemistry Student Presents Research

By P. A. FAIRS

Thomas Pettus wore shorts and T-shirts to his job last summer, but he wasn't at the beach or golf course.

Pettus, who is a junior chemistry major at Longwood College, worked 10 to 14 hours a day all summer in a Virginia Tech chemistry lab, doing graduate level research under the direction of Dr. Tomas Hudlicky, a leading natural product chemist.

Dr. Maurice Maxwell, associate professor of chemistry at Longwood, helped Pettus arrange his research assistant position. Part of Longwood's chemistry program is "to encourage and assist our students in finding professional placements during summer vacations," Dr. Maxwell said.

On Nov. 9, Pettus had the opportunity to present a paper on his research at the regional American Chemical Society meeting in Atlanta. Dr. Maxwell, Dr. Hudlicky and graduate students working for him also presented research findings.

TOM PETTUS

"They told me I'd know for sure about going into chemistry after I worked in a demanding lab like Hudlicky's, that I'd either love it or hate it

President-Elect Hudson Inaugurates Tomorrow

By J. R. REEVES

E. Andrew Hudson will take the oath of office as the next SGA President of the Longwood Student Government on Wednesday evening at a special SGA dinner. Hudson isn't, however, waiting to be sworn in to start to work for Longwood. He has already held meetings with campus officials to discuss plans for Longwood's future.

"I will encourage the members of the SGA Senate to set realistic goals for the upcoming year. Our top priority will be to continue to work for the students," Hudson stated. He feels the college community is ready to move forward and to work together. "All the people I've talked with have been very willing to unite and work for the good of the college. We must move quickly to insure a smooth and organized transition. We don't want to lose any steam."

SGA President-elect Hudson accepts the gavel from outgoing President Ricky Otey.

Hudson won the presidency during the November election which had the largest voter turnout in recent history. He has served during the past year as Resident Life chair and served as public relations director during Ricky Otey's first term. "I've known and worked closely with Ricky for two years. I hope I've learned something about how to bring people together and how to get results."

Otey says his tenure as president has been very rewarding. "It was and is a great time to be a leader at

Eight Lose Their Lives on Highways

RICHMOND – The Virginia State Police said today that preliminary reports indicate eight persons lost their lives on the state's highways during this year's Thanksgiving Day holiday period compared to 17 during a similar period last year. Deaths which occur within 30 days as a result of a motor vehicle crash during the holiday period will add to the total.

Of the eight fatalities reported, State Police say three occurred in alcohol-related crashes. One of the eight was a pedestrian and only two of the other seven were using safety belts.

Colonel R.L. Suthard, State Police Superintendent, noted that the weather could have been a major factor in the fewer deaths recorded this year. "It's extremely difficult to be specific when determining why highway fatalities over any given period fluctuate one year to the next," he said, "but when it rains or snows, we generally have more crashes but fewer fatalities. Apparently, motorists are driving at slower speeds and, therefore, the crashes are not as severe."

Participating in Operation CARE, a national program to reduce crashes over major holiday programs, State Police assisted 2,579 stranded or otherwise distressed motorists during the holiday. Troopers also issued 3,656 summons for speeding, 1,390 for exceeding the 65-mile per hour speed limit. Total arrests for 5,621 also included 676 for reckless driving, 157 driving drunk, 200 for safety belt violations and 932 for other hazardous violations.

The Time Is Right To Sell

By AMY BAAR

Although the college student is extremely busy during exams, this is also a hectic time for the Longwood College Bookstore.

Exam week is when the Bookstore has its major book buy back. The books are bought back at one-half of its list price. The bookstore then resells the book at three-fourths its list price. These standards are followed only if the book is to be used the next semester.

A reminder to the student: no books will be bought back during the book rush at the beginning of the semester. The buy back is a great way to get rid of your books at a fair price.

Campus-wide Christmas Service

By BETH LORD

Everyone is invited to the second annual Campus Candlelight Christmas Service of Lessons and Carols to be held at the Farmville United Methodist Church at 10:30 p.m. on Friday, December 9. The service will be led by Students of Longwood and Hampden-Sydney and should be an exciting and uplifting experience. Last year 135 people attended. This event is sponsored by the Longwood Campus Ministers in cooperation with the Inter-Religious Council.

The Baptist Student Union would also like to wish everyone a great break and a joyous Christmas season.

APO Initiates

By DONNA L. FERRIER

On November 11, 1988, Alpha Phi Omega, the National Service Fraternity, proudly initiated seven new members.

Congratulations to Diane Colson, Kim Harris, Kim Jones, Rene Klamans, Kalli Lucas, Shelley Malone, and Kim Seivers. Throughout their pledge period, these new members have exemplified Alpha Phi Omega's cardinal principles — Leadership, Friendship, and Service.

After the initiation ceremony, the brothers and initiates at dinner together in French Lounge, where Pledgemaster Suzanne Johnson presented awards to the new members for outstanding achievements during their pledge periods. The awards were presented as follows: Diane Colson - Most Service Hours; Kim Harris - Highest Pledge Quiz Average; Kim Jones - Most Dependable; Lisa Jones - Best Pledgebook; Rene Klamans - Most Enthusiastic; Kalli Lucas - Best Leadership; Shelley Malone - Most Optimistic; Kim Seivers - Most Improved Leadership.

Congratulations to all of APO's new members!

Psych Club Raquetball Tournament

By STEVE WILSON

On Saturday, November 19, the Psychology club sponsored the first ever raquetball tournament here at Longwood. The tournament took place in the newly remodeled French Gym. Eighteen participants took their best shots in this all day event.

Trophies were awarded to the first, second and third place winners in both the men's and women's division.

Dr. Robert Berry, business professor here at Longwood, was the first place winner in the men's division. He was also the only faculty member to enter the contest. Second place went to Gary Insley and the third place winner was Jimmy Bates.

In the women's division trophies were given to Laurie McKean; first place, Libby Pletcher; second place and Linda Swee; third place.

John Parson, president and coordinator for the event said, "We would like to thank everyone who participated in the tourney and we are looking forward to a larger tournament next year."

Two students put themselves to the test at the first annual Psychology Club Raquetball Tournament.

"No kidding! I don't know why we even have the Honor Code. No one abides by it anyway."

How many times have you heard this conversation before? Many I'm sure. Well, no matter how much people bitch about the Honor Code to their friends, most students feel that Longwood does need the Honor Code. This point was proven last year when the members of the Honor Board agreed to resign their positions if the student body decided to toss out the Honor Code. A vote was taken and out of 1300 voters, a mere 43 wanted to do away with the Honor Code. Majority rules . . . Honor Code stays!

Honor Board Chair Person, Patrice Landers, claims "If Longwood threw out the Honor System, the publicity would reach other schools, and more importantly, [reach] possible future employers. No one hires a person with a degree that isn't worth the paper it's written on. Without an Honor System, that degree could have been acquired through stealing, lying, and cheating."

This past week, Nov. 28-Dec. 2, was Honor Awareness Week. Members of the Honor Board set up daily lectures that talked about different aspects of the Honor System such as "How to Avoid Plagiarism" and "Codes of Ethics For Professional". One of the most interesting lectures consisted of an open forum to discuss the recommended change of the "third phrase" of the Pledge of Honor. The part of the pledge that says, "I have neither given nor received help on this work nor am I aware of any infraction of the Honor Code," could be changed to, "I have neither given nor received help on this work and should I become aware of an infraction of the Honor Code I will report it to the Honor Board." A vote, held on Dec. 2, will confirm whether or not the Honor Pledge will change and the result should be published in this same issue of The Rotunda.

Remember that the Honor System protects us. As Rudy Hull puts it, "Honor is a Reflection of One's Inner Self." I say we make sure that reflection isn't shattered!

Longwood. I think we've added a lot of credibility to our organization. We have a long list of tangible accomplishments to boast about, but the real success has been in our ability to move forward without alienating anyone."

When asked what he thought of his successor, Otey replied, "I think Drew has the potential to be a great president. He's got good people to work with, a good environment to work in, and the best people in the world to work for. I think he'll do super."

Hudson closed the discussion by appealing to the students, "The students will be the ones that make the organization successful. My job is to work for you in any way I can. If there is anything you think I should know, please tell me!!"

That's the attitude it takes to be president.

by August," Pettus said. "August came, and I was still hanging in there."

He was involved in an intricate 12-step synthesis of the natural product Zeylena.

"Zeylena comes from the roots of a mushroom," Pettus said. "Its structural relation to cyclohexeneoxides, compounds known to have biological activity with medical applications, generated Dr. Hudlicky's interest in its total synthesis."

According to Pettus, "the most important aspect of this work was to discover and develop new techniques while synthesizing Zeylena. These chemical processes may be useful to chemists working with other systems. That's why we presented our work in Atlanta."

At Longwood, Pettus is continuing his investigation of Zeylena as an independent study project under Dr. Maxwell's direction.

He also works with Dr. Maxwell as an editor of Synthetic Pathways, which is "a collection of structural abstracts representing the most important organic chemistry found in the monthly research journals," Pettus said.

Honor Awareness Week Mixed Results

By PATRICE LANDERS
Chairman of Honor Board

Friday, December 2 was the last day of Honor Awareness Week. A student vote was taken to determine if the Pledge of Honor would change from its current reading to "I have neither given nor received help on this work, and should I become aware of any infraction I will report it to the Honor Board."

Last semester a committee was formed to deal with the issue of the third phrase. The committee decided to recommend the phrase in order to strengthen the Pledge of Honor. As stated now, the Pledge of Honor has remained unchanged since the formation of the Honor System.

The student vote on Friday resulted in a majority of students voting to keep the current Pledge of Honor. Some students felt very strongly to keep with tradition while others felt as it states now covers all issues concerned.

So, the Pledge of Honor does not change, but may remain a topic for discussion.

Any suggestions, comments or concerns may be sent to Box 1153.

Sgt. Rhodes Speaks On Crime

By BRUCE GANTT

On Tuesday night the Colonnades Hall Council sponsored a discussion on vandalism, security and rape. Sgt. Rhodes from campus police was on hand to give crime prevention tips and discuss rape crisis services. Colonnades residents were given a brief self defense demonstration and were given a pamplet on Select Virginia law and a fact sheet for sexual assault victims. Sgt. Rhodes pointed out that most crime on campus is simple theft that happens because students don't lock their doors. Faculty members have also been victims of theft because many of them do not lock their offices or leave valuables unattended. He also mentioned many intruders gain entrance to buildings because of students propping doors open after they have been locked by campus police. This has been one of the biggest security problems on the campus. If students see other problems with security in their buildings, or have ideas on how to improve it, they should talk to their R. A. or R.E.C. Information about crime prevention can be attained from campus police as well as a video tape on date rape. In the meantime play it safe and lock your doors. Or else you might end up seeing one of these cards, or worse.

Thanks For The Memories

BY RICKY L. OTEY

I want to take this time to say thank you to all the people of the Longwood Community that have made serving as SGA President so rewarding. There is no way I can express how grateful I am to all of you. All of you, the Board of Visitors, the college President, the Administrators, the students and faculty have been very open and willing to work together.

Have we accomplished anything? That's not for me to answer. I can say that I've seen this college on the move. I've seen us move from a position of separation and division to a position of cooperation and unity. Our goal wasn't to change the world. Our goal was simply to make things a little better for those that shall come after us.

If there is any observation to make about students of Longwood it would be that for some reason you don't think you're as good as other students in Virginia. I've seen and worked with students from other schools and I know we're good. WE'RE VERY GOOD. Don't sell yourself short. Whatever you want in life, Longwood can supply you with that opportunity as much as any college. It's the effort you put forth that makes the difference.

I think Drew Hudson will make us an excellent SGA President. He will, however, only be as good as you make him. We must support him, encourage him and challenge him. There'll be times when he'll be questioned from ever side. He'll not know which question is more important than the other. There'll be questions with no easy clear cut answer. Be patient and understanding with him. It's a tough job. Sometimes, it really does seem like it's you against the world and the world is far ahead. In those times, he needs our encouragement. He is our leader.

As for me, I've given you the very best that I could. I haven't always been right or wrong, but I have always cared. I've worked for you, struggled for you, fought for you, cried for you and prayed for you. My work and energy wasn't for this physical structure we call Longwood. My work and love is for you, the real Longwood. THE STUDENTS.

Thanks for everything and God bless all of you.

Teaching Positions Offered

By BURNELLA GILBERT

On Thursday, December 1, 1988, after having received a two day orientation to Chesapeake Public Schools and to the city of Chesapeake, 6 of Longwood's seniors were offered teaching positions in Chesapeake. From the Department of English, Philosophy and Languages English Major, Kim Talley and Modern Language Major, Burnella Gilbert were offered job contracts. Early Education Majors, Carolyn Espigh, Kelly Insley, Danita Hale and Joy Shelton were also offered contracts.

These students were offered teaching positions through Chesapeake's Early Career Commitment Program. This program, founded in 1984, represents an effort by Chesapeake to maintain instructional excellence through early identification and employment of the "cream of the crop" in its rapidly progressing school system and city. (Students selected for this program possess at least a 3.0 grade point average and were among those identified by their professors as having the greatest potential for success). One of the most important benefits for the students selected is assurance of jobs after graduation.

Alpha Sig's Renovate Chapter Room

By AMY BAAR

The Alpha Sigma Phi Fraternity has been in the process of remodeling their chapter room located on first floor Frazer.

Previously, the chapter room belonged to the Alpha Chi Rho Fraternity. When the AXP's moved to the basement of Main Cunningham, the Alpha Sig's moved into the chapter room. The same carpet had been in the chapter room for as long as any of the Alpha Sig brothers could remember. For anyone who has ever been to a fraternity party, the age of a carpet cannot be overlooked. In fact, the first major improvement to the chapter room was to tear up the carpet and install a black and white checkered tile floor. This change by itself greatly improved the attractiveness of the room.

Other improvements include: patching the leaky roof, painting walls and ceilings, installing black venetian blinds, painting the molding black, getting new doors and painting the Alpha Sigma Phi emblem on them, and replacing old radiators. Also, the DJ booth will be painted, and a new stereo system will be installed.

Another major improvement that the brothers are requesting is an expansion of the chapter room. Although the expansion has not yet been approved, the brothers are enthusiastic about improving their chapter room in every way possible. The Fraternity is hoping to finish the remodeling before Christmas Break.

TKE's: Passing the Buck

By VICKY OWLES

On December 1, the brothers of Tau Kappa Epsilon presented the United Way of Prince Edward County with a check for $1,800.

The check was presented by the president of Tau Kappa Epsilon, John Winston and Philanthropy chairman, Eric Sanders. The president of the United Way of Prince Edward County, Tom Baynham accepted the check along with Frances Huddleston.

The TKE's raised this money on Oktoberfest weekend with their Third Annual Gurney Push. The gurney push began at 5:00 that Saturday morning and ended at the beginning of the parade. All of the brothers and associate members helped out in this event.

Through the generous contributions from the residents of Farmville and the college students the United Way will be able to distribute the money to the volunteer fire departments, DAY, the Boy Scouts, and people in Farmville who need assistance.

Historical Notes
Longwood During The Civil War

By CHERYL JEFFREY

"Harper's Weekly Magazine," July 10, 1909, contains an article written by Mrs. Lynn Williamson. She gives her account as Minnie Harrison, a thirteen year old student at Farmville Female College. When the armies of General Lee and General Grant marched through Farmville, there were eighty students at the college. Although it was not expected that the war would move in that direction, some of the last days of the war were in Farmville. The Battle of Sayler's Creek was on April 6th, 1865. The armies were then retreating toward the college. At that time, college operations came to a halt. The students watched starving southern soldiers pass by the school that night. A few soldiers stopped briefly to talk to students who were friends or relatives.

When the girls heard of Lee's surrender, they realized that they were also in an endangering condition. There was not enough food or money to provide for them.

Grant soon came to the aid of the students. He sent an officer to the college to give the orders that each student was allowed to return home without a fee for transportation. Within a few minutes, many of the girls were riding home on a wagon train.

The period after the Civil War created even more instability at the college. Finally in 1873, the college was purchased by the Methodists.

Math Students Win Contest

By DAN HAULK

Eleven students were honored recently for winning prizes in the fourth annual Mathematics Contest, sponsored by the Mathematics and Computer Science department.

In level II — calculus and above — first prize went to Allen Fountain, second prize to Kim Walker and third prize to Kay Gulding. Lori Lambert and Sharon Bryant also were prize winners.

In level I - below calculus — first prize went to Robin Anderson, second prize to Robin Kline and third prize to Kimberly Townsend. Kimberly Keatts and Cherie Rabern were prize winners, and Becky Meeks was a special prize winner.

Prizes include certificates, plaques and, for those who place in the top three, cash awards ranging from $25 to $75. The awards were presented Nov. 10.

Dr. Jean Noone, Dr. Kouok Law and Dr. John Arehart are involved in the contest.

'Librel' Takes Top Senate Post

Last Tuesday Senate Democrats elevated Sen. George Mitchell of Maine to the prominent position of Senate Majority Leader. The prediction that a liberal Northeasterner could not be elected to the post after the Dukakis defeat proved false.

Democrats sent a strong signal that they wanted a fresh face, expressing relief that the untelegenic and peevish Sen. Robert Byrd (WVA), who has held the post since 1976 kindly did not run again. Had he done so, he would have most probably been defeated.

Mitchell, 56, is expected to rally behind the concerns of his fellow Democratic Senators. How will this affect the Senate's relationship with the President-Elect George Bush? Though it would seem that this liberal majority leader would hamper the efforts of the Bush Administration — the effect is quite opposite.

President-Elect Bush, who is leaning more moderate than conservative should be able to put most of his legislation through with Mitchell at the helm, conservative Democrats are seen likely to break ranks with their party and support many issues praised by Republicans.

Senior Reflects On Longwood

Editor,

As a senior who is approaching graduation quite soon, I am spending a lot of time reflecting back over my years at Longwood.

For the most part, it has been a very positive experience for me. I am NOT the same person I was when I came here. I have attained quite a bit of knowledge from my classroom work and studies, but more than anything I have learned a great deal about myself and people.

Longwood has a wonderful academic program, but above this is its excellent student

Patrick Henry Wrongfully Depicted

To the Editor:

After viewing Lockwood's play, Patrick Henry A Musical, I felt pushed out of my devotion and closeness to Patrick Henry and to historical accuracy to try to set a few things straight.

I realize the play is an historical and fictional account of Henry's life, but I am afraid viewers will take it as gospel (which usually happens). This idea was strengthened when I heard a girl behind me at the play say, "I'm glad I saw the play because I didn't know that much about Patrick Henry's life. Well I will attest to her she still hasn't.

Santa Claus presides over the Christmas parade from his snow covered chimney.

This is an invitation to education majors, both elementary and secondary levels. Kappa Delta Pi will be inducting new members into this Honor Society in December, 1987.

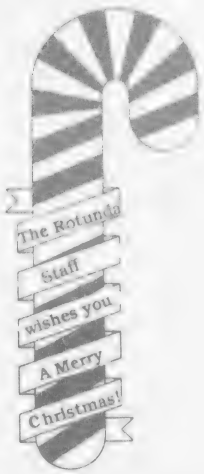
Membership is open to sophomores, juniors, and seniors who will have completed 50 credit hours by the end of this semester. You must have an overall G.P.A. of 3.0 to be accepted.

Support your profession and join your fellow educators in the commitment to excellence in education. For further information contact Rebekah Ferguson, Kim Keatts, Lauri Labyak, or Dr. Simmons. There will be an interest meeting on November 28, 1988 at 12:30 in the Library Science Room of Lancaster Library.

If you are planning to return for the spring semester, but your roommate is not, you too need to contact the Housing Office by Friday, December 9, 1988, so that arrangements can be made for a new roommate.

You will have three options to choose from:

A) Have the Housing Office assign you a new student.



B) Have a current student move in with you.

C) Move to another room.

All room changes must be completed (including proper check-out) before leaving for Christmas break. Failure to do so or failure to notify the Housing Office before moving will result in a $50 fine levied against the damage deposit.

If a vacancy exists in your room after 5:00 p.m. on Friday, December 9, 1988, the Housing Office reserves the right to assign a student to that space.

Exams Are Coming!

By AMY BAAR

Exams are approaching us quickly and while some students are joyous at the prospect of Christmas vacation or a December Graduation, for most it may create havoc in the average Longwood student.

There is no doubt that exam time is a stressful period in a student's life. As repeated by Dr. Heineman, and quoted from Dr. Boyer, "Exams are a time to pull the student up and look at their roots." The student, however, may not be ready to have his parts inspected, and instead of merely being "pulled up" may feel as though he's being pulled and pushed and turned inside out!

For the procrastinating student, exams are terrifying. Terrifying because there is still half a semester of work to do before he can take the exam. This is the case where the five papers are all researched, written, and typed the day before the last day of class. Even the student who has stayed on top of things throughout the entire semester faces the turmoil of restudying notes from day one.

Basically, every student has found an effective way to study. If not, they won't be here much longer. So . . . study for those exams! But, don't get so riled up that you can't concentrate. Some helpful hints are: Find somewhere comfortable to study – but not too comfortable. A bed is a great excuse to fall asleep! Also, take a short break every hour. Usually 10 to 15 minutes is enough time. Get away from your study spot. Walk to Par Bil's or go chat with a friend. Again, stay away from that bed. If you are studying in the dorm room, let roommates know what type of atmosphere you need and respect their need to study. Plan study breaks with your roommates so you can be on the same schedule.

Nebraska Students Boo Governor

(CPS) – University of Nebraska-Lincoln students shouldn't have booed two of the state's leading politicians, but student government officers shouldn't have apologized for it either, UNL dissidents have complained.

The students last week objected after apologies were sent to Nebraska Governor Kay Orr and Chancellor Martin Massengale, who had been booed when they were introduced as part of halftime activities during the Nebraska vs. Oklahoma State University game on October 15.

At an open forum, students and a few campus officers criticized the Association of Students of University of Nebraska (ASUN) for sending the letters without asking for student input first.

"There is no reason for you guys to say you represent the student body when you don't ask the students," charged Gifford Holmguist, a sophomore in industrial engineering.

But ASUN politicians have been "beating their heads against a brick wall" to get students to participate in any event, much less the decision to send an apology, student Vice President Kim Beavers replied.

The booing apparently reflected disappointment with Massengale's decision not to let cable TV sports channel ESPN telecast the homecoming game.

Telecasting the game would have meant moving the kickoff to 6 p.m. to permit ESPN to broadcast the game in the East in prime time, explained campus spokesman Bob Bruce.

He reports the decision was not popular, especially off campus.

"We'd had a committee working since last April on homecoming activities. We felt it would be unfair to those people to reschedule or condense events, so we said no to the telecast," said Bruce.

He believed the incident was "over and done," especially since Orr won a standing ovation at a student banquet last week and no one "said boo" when Massengale refused to let ESPN televise a Nov. 12 home game against the University of Colorado.

"There is some feeling among colleges and that some schools are too willing to move games for the convenience of the TV networks," Bruce maintained. "Whenever you move a game you affect not only the kickoff, but other activities: pre-game luncheons, alumni activities. There are a great many logistical shifts."

ASUN senators did not retract the letters of apology in spite of the criticism they got for sending them.

Rising Drinking Problem

(CPS) - Student drinking problems seem to be getting worse, despite tough new anti-alcohol measures adopted on many campuses, college student affairs administrators from around the country say.

About 35 percent of the administrators at 330 campuses nationwide said they now deal with more alcohol-related problems than in the past, the College Alcohol Survey conducted by two professors found.

The survey, taken every three years by Prof. Angelo Gadaleto of West Chester University in Pennsylvania and Prof. David S. Anderson of George Mason University in Virginia, also found that almost seven of 10 campuses now have some sort of "new-student orientation" program about alcohol abuse. In 1979, none did.

Only about eight percent of the campuses allowed campus groups to advertise drinking as the primary focus of an event, down from 49 percent in 1979.

Nevertheless, 48 percent of the administrators reported dealing with more cases of students "drinking in uncontrolled situations," and 38 percent observed increases in "abusive drinking" at their schools. Fifty-eight percent had more cases in which students had used fake identifications to buy alcohol before they were 21 years of age.

Being only 45 minutes shy of turning 21, moreover, might qualify as a problem.

Police, for instance, arrested University of New Haven junior Michael Luetjen at 11:15 p.m., Nov. 5 as he drank at a restaurant just 45 minutes before he celebrated his 21st birthday.

Luetjen was arrested when police were making a routine check of the restaurant.

"It's like being in the wrong place at the wrong time," Luetjen said the next day. "I told them, 'I'm going to be 21 in a few minutes.' But I guess 45 minutes is 45 minutes in the eyes of the law."

Letters to the Editor Continued

Dear Editor,

In reviewing the Desk Service Evaluation Forms filled out by the residents of Curry Hall, we have noticed that our services are often unappreciated and that many requests are being made of us that are not our responsibility.

For example, the desk staff persons are NOT responsible for locking and unlocking the front doors. The Night Hosts are responsible for letting people into the building until 2 a.m. on weekdays and 4 a.m. on weekends. It is the responsibility of Campus Police to lock the doors at night and let people into the building after 2 or 4 a.m. It is also the responsibility of Campus Police to unlock the front doors in the morning. Also, as far as security goes in Curry – We can only keep an eye on the lobby to see who goes in and out of the building and the Night Hosts can only make sure that the Campus Police have properly locked the doors and that the windows are closed.

For those people who believe that the office should be open 24 hours a day, we have but one question: Like normal students that we are, we have classes, studying, and free time, so how are we supposed to get any sleep if we are up all night sitting the desk, too? (For $4.35/hr. no less). Once again we will say that the building is in the hands of Campus Police during the hours that the desk is closed.

We also are not at liberty to give out individual room phone numbers, nor do we have access to them. The only numbers we have are those found in the phone book. We also try to deliver all messages when at all possible even if it has to be delivered by a roommate or friend. At LEAST we deliver them. The snide remarks and profanity we receive over the intercom system are enough, in some cases to make clear messages practically impossible.

In some cases we may seem rude or uncaring about such matters as Loaner Keys. We would appreciate it if residents would understand and respect the fact that if we give keys out without an I.D., we run the risk of losing our jobs.

In closing, we would like to say that we DO know how to take constructive criticism, but the majority of comments we received were not constructive criticism, but remarks about situations which we are not responsible for.

Lastly, to the person who was trying to call an ambulance from the front desk, we would like to say this: Our office phone is not like your personal phone. In order to call out you must dial 9, NOT 0. So, next time, go to a pay phone and DIAL 911! (You don't even need a quarter) the most colorful men in our history and his life was filled with real drama and climatic situations which could have caught the attention of any audience without having to deveate so much from the facts. As one of my disappointed friends who saw the play stated, "I don't believe Henry would be pleased if he were alive to see the play." Neither do I. Hopefully the play will make people want to read about the "Son of Thunder" and make him your hero as he is mine.

development program. Students are allowed to be thrown into involvement and in the process learn a very important factor in life; how to deal with people. I have learned so much about people's ideas, values, backgrounds and beliefs. I've learned about their hometowns, their friends, their parents, but most of all about how people are people. They might have different backgrounds and beliefs, but that is what makes them special. So much can be learned from sharing their experiences.

The one thing about Longwood that has disturbed me are those Greeks who isolate themselves to their fraternities and sororities. No, this is NOT another letter attacking Greeks! I myself am an initiated and active greek. I love my greek life. It is very dear to me, but it is only a portion of my life. I have life beyond the three letters that I wear on my chest. I have just as many friends outside of my greek life as in it. I feel that it is very important that I do. I am also very active in campus life. I receive a great deal of satisfaction from all the things I am involved with at Longwood. Greek life is only one. I see so often frowns made at the mentioning of a particular fraternity or sorority as a whole. I hear comments made all the time about the reputation of a certain fraternity or sorority. PLEASE! Let's all start looking at people for the individuals they are. I feel so sorry for those Greeks who have spent four years at Longwood and have only attained and shared with a small isolated greek group. They have surely missed so much! What really scares me is the fact that those people, who frown upon others who are not a member of their elitist organization, will soon be in the real world; a world that doesn't know what fraternity or sorority you belonged to in college. I feel that so many will be lost without their Greek letters and what they denote as far as status.

Well, so much for my reflections. Yes, I do relize that many Greeks do involve themselves outside of their Greek life. Afterall, our current and past honor board chairs are greek. We have

Lady Lancers Post First Win

By ROXIE LOCKWOOD

The Longwood women's basketball team took a three-game swing through South Carolina last weekend, participating in the Wofford Tournament Friday and Saturday after facing Converse College Thursday.

Longwood was unable to defend its 1987 Wofford Tournament title but took out its frustrations on an outmanned Central Wesleyan club 54-37 in the consolation game Saturday. Longwood fell to Belmont Abbey 67-64 Friday to land in the consolation round. Thursday, the Lady Lancers received an unkind welcome to South Carolina from Converse, which won 80-71. Longwood's record stands at 1-4.

The outcome of the game against Central Wesleyan was never much in doubt. The Lady Lancers dominated the contest, scoring 15 points before CWC ever got on the scoreboard. Sophomore forward Carmille Barnette scored six of those 15 to give Longwood a lead it never relinquished. Every Lady Warrior comeback attempt was foiled by the Lady Lancers, who stole 24 balls on the night.

Barnette, named All-Tournament for the second straight year, led the Lady Lancers with 17 points, 11 rebounds and eight steals. Senior captain Sandy Rawdon chipped in ten boards and six steals.

LC's loss to Belmont Abbey came in heart-breaking fashion. With ten seconds left, Longwood was up 64-63 when Janet Taylor canned a crucial basket and two free throws to sink Longwood's hopes of repeating as Wofford Tournament champions Angee Middleton led the Lady Lancers with 18 points. Barnette and Ann Callaham added 14 and 12 points to Longwood's tally. Rawdon and Salene Green were both double-figure rebounders with 15 and 10 to their credit.

In Thursday's loss Longwood took the lead from Converse at the 8:44 mark on a Rawdon field goal. The score see-sawed for the next minute. Barnette scored at 7:36 to put the Lady Lancers on top, 59-58. Rawdon brought Longwood back within two at 6:27, but that was the beginning of the end for the Lady Lancers. LC could not find the range for four crucial minutes while the All-Stars reeled off ten points.

Barnette, in her first action of the year, led Longwood with 23 points and 13 rebounds. Rawdon also scored 23 points and brought down 12 rebounds.

Dale Shavers, who scored 27 points in Friday's win over Concordia, hit just two field goals, but both came at the point in the second half when Longwood went ahead to stay. Dobson and Lowe combined for 9 points, 5 assists, 4 steals and just 4 turnovers. Second Half Buries Clippers.

Friday night, Longwood managed just a 52-49 lead over Concordia at halftime. A 13-4 run at the start of the second half gave Longwood a 65-53 lead as LC buried the Clippers. Shavers scored eight points in the surge. For the game the 6-3 junior hit 10 of 12 shots from the floor and 7-10 free throws while pulling down a team high 9 rebounds. Rutley had 21 points and 7 rebounds while Jefferson added 16 points and 7 boards.

Center Doug Poppe had 10 points and eight rebounds as the Lancers took honors on the boards by 56-38. In all 11 players scored for Longwood.

Greg Holloway came off the bench for 9 and Chris Mullins scored 7 in four minutes on the court.

Rutley Shoots for 1,000 Points

Rutley is just 11 points short of becoming the sixth Longwood cager to top 1,000 points. The 6-4 forward now had 989 points heading into Monday night's home game with Ferrum. He is currently averaging 13.5 ppg.

Jefferson is scoring 19.3 ppg. and is joined in double figures by Poppe at 11.6 and Shavers at 11.3. Poppe is hitting an outstanding 85.2 percent of his free throws (23-27). Jefferson and Holloway are the team's top rebounders at 5.9 per game.

Lancers Beat West Chester

Longwood solved the mystery of how to slow down West Chester point guard Ricky Hicks and the result was a hard-earned 64-58 victory over the Rams in the final game of the two-day Central Virginia basketball doubleheader Saturday night in Lancer Hall.

Longwood, 6-2 heading into a Monday night date with Ferrum, emerged as the lone two-game winner in the doubleheader after scoring a first round knockout of Concordia (NY) 114-76. West Chester, behind Hicks' 15 points, 11 assists and 3 steals, beat talented Randolph-Macon 79-75 in Friday's first contest. The Jackets bounced back to thrash Concordia 101-60 Saturday.

After watching Hicks dismantle Randolph-Macon with slashing drives and pinpoint passes, Longwood head coach Cal Luther and assistant Ernest Neal decided to come up with a plan to stop the sophomore whiz when the Lancers faced the Rams Saturday night.

Lancer guards Bobby Dobson and Joe Lowe and their teammates executed the plan to perfection. Harried and cut off all night, Hicks managed just 6 points and 5 assists while committing 6 turnovers. Longwood also avoided sending the 5-7 guard to the line, where he canned 7 of 8 Friday night. He was 0-1 at the line Saturday.

Contain Him

"We tried to contain Hicks and keep him on the perimeter," said Luther. "He does a great job of penetrating and making things happen. We kept him from taking it inside the defense. Joe (Lowe) and Bobby (Dobson) played super in defensing him."

Longwood used a man and zone trap as its main weapons against the Rams. So effective was the Lancer defense that West Chester went nearly seven minutes without scoring a point at a key stage of the second half. John Traywick scored at 13:07 to knot the game at 43-43, but the Rams didn't score again until 6:47 remained and by that time the Lancers had a 51-43 edge.

"I thought we played very well, but particularly defensively," said Luther. "We had to play well to beat a fine West Chester team. We kept them off-balance some by changing defenses. On one series there at the end, they did a good job of reversing the ball and got the shot they wanted. Then Doug Poppe came out of nowhere to block it."

Longwood got exceptional performances from all seven cagers who saw action in the game. Poppe and Kevin Jefferson scored 17 points each and senior Darryl Rutley scored 15, including three 3-point field goals in the first half.

Intramurals

This semester's events are finally coming to a close. Although basketball and soccer still continues, men's volleyball was won by the "Nut Busters", and the swim relays were won by the "Boinkers."

The last two officials of the week are: Freshman, Alfred Imperato and junior, Danny Dail. Alfred is a physics major from Rochester, New York. He enjoys windsurfing. Danny is a physical education major from Portsmouth, Virginia. He enjoys soccer, baseball, fishing and hunting.

Here's a recap of the season. This semester there were over 200 teams and almost 1700 participants in the intramural program, vs. last year's totals of almost 150 teams and close to 1200 participants.

The racquetball courts have been used extensively. Six ragrets have been replaced this semester. Busiest hours have been from 4 p.m. until closing.

The walk program is still continuing. There are approximately 40 walkers, some of whom have walked up to 200 miles since September.

The aerobic fitness programs will continue through exams.

Coming up in January: Women's Ping Pong, Men and Women's Foul Shooting and Innertube Water Polo.

Mason Named Player of the Week

Sophomore Tim Mason, who won all three of his matches last week for the Longwood wrestling team, has been named Longwood College Player of the Week for the period November 27-December 4. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood sports information office.

In the Davidson College Duals, Mason beat Hosea Hampton of Wilkes 11-3, Greg Wall of Davidson 9-3 and Andy Kerns of The Citadel 12-7.

"Tim had an excellent week on the mat," said coach Steve Nelson. "He performed well at Davidson against tough competition. He has improved a lot since last year."

Mason, now 6-3 overall this season, is unbeaten in dual match competition at 4-0. He was 12-20-2 last season.

A graduate of Courtland High in Fredericksburg, Mason finished with honors. A physical education major at Longwood, he plans to teach and coach wrestling.

WINTER PLAYER OF THE WEEK AWARD WINNERS

November 13-20, Greg Holloway – Men's Basketball; November 20-27, Kevin Jefferson – Men's Basketball; November 27-December 4, Tim Mason – Wrestling.

Four Booters On All-South Atlantic Team

Longwood's soccer team, which had a 15-4-2 record and 17th place national ranking in Division II, has landed four players on the All-South Region team, announced last week and voted by NCAA II and NAIA coaches in Virginia and West Virginia.

Repeat choices for the Lancers include junior John Barone, named for the third straight year, and All-American forward Ray Jones, chosen for the second year. Longwood freshman goalkeeper Steve Thompson and junior Mike Edge were also chosen to the 11-man team.

Barone, Edge, Jones and Thompson had previously been named to the Virginia Intercollegiate Soccer Association and VISA All-Eastern Division team which were announced recently.

Barone, a Lancer co-captain, had four assists and two goals, while Edge recorded eight goals and one assist. Jones had another banner year before suffering a knee injury at the end of the season. The sophomore accumulated 21 goals and 18 assists in leading.

Thompson had a goals-against-average of 1.06 and five shutouts in his rookie year.

The complete All-South Atlantic Region team is listed below.

1988
ALL-SOUTH ATLANTIC

Goalkeeper: Steve Thompson – Longwood

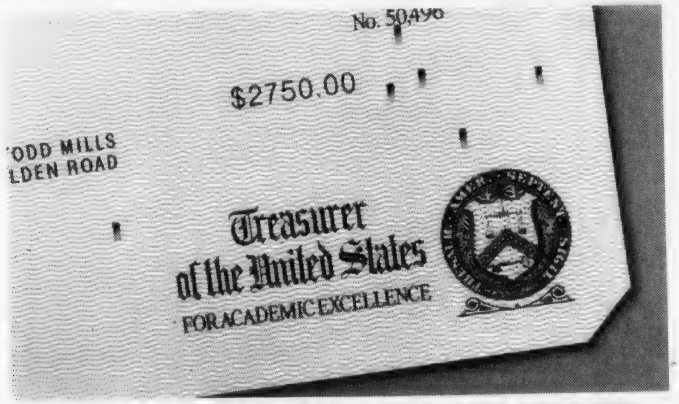
Backs: Lionel Heaven – Charleston, Mike Edge – Longwood, Lester Parris – West Virginia Wesleyan

Midfielders: John Davies – Alderson-Broaddus, Torgen Gustafson – West Virginia Wesleyan, John Barone – Longwood

Forwards: Ray Jones – Longwood, Paul Young – West Virginia Wesleyan, Phil O'Hare – Charleston, Frank Alphonso – Alderson-Broaddus

Alison Walek has been perfect from the line so far this year, shooting ten of ten.

Grapplers Beat Davidson



Longwood's wrestling team won one of three matches in the Davidson College Duals last weekend in North Carolina, beating the host Wildcats 46-0, but falling to The Citadel 20-14 and Wilkes (PA) Community College 23-9.

Coach Steve Nelson's squad will take a 1-3 record into a three-team match at George Mason Tuesday. Longwood will face GMU and Gallaudet, starting at 5:30 in its final first quarter action.

"We were very competitive last weekend," said Nelson, who is pleased with the hustle and determination of his young team. "If just a few close matches had gone the other way, we could have gotten three wins."

It was strictly no contest Friday when Longwood faced host Davidson. Lancer winners were Kevin Haller at 118 by forfeit, Elon Kelley at 126 by a technical fall 18-3, Joe McDaniel at 134 by 4-1, Mark Harris at 142 by 14-2, Andy Mautner by forfeit, Ted Proctor at 158 by 11-4, Kevin McSherry at 167 by pin, Tim Mason at 177 by 9-3, Brent Newell at 190 by 6-5 and Doug Hartley at heavyweight by pin.

Bush Takes Oath; Becomes 41st President

"A new breeze is blowing"

By MATT PETERMAN

While many Longwood students attended their 11:30 classes on Friday, George Herbert Walker Bush became the 41st president of the United States. Taking the oath of office with hand upon a family Bible and the Bible that George Washington first used in his inauguration 200 years ago.

After a brief tribute to former President Ronald Reagan, Bush's inaugural speech began. The speech contained more sweeping generalities than specifics which is the norm for inaugural addresses.

Bush said " . . . a new breeze is blowing, and a world refreshed by freedom seems reborn; for in a man's heart, if not in fact, the day of the dictator is over, the totalitarian era is over, its old ideas blown away like leaves from an ancient lifeless tree."

"I take as my guide the hope of a saint," said Bush. "In crucial things, unity; in important things, diversity; in all things, generosity. America today, is a proud, free nation, decent and civil, a place we cannot but love."

However, "my friends, we are not the sum of our possessions. They are not the measure of our lives. In our hearts, we know what matters. We cannot hope only to leave our children a bigger car, a bigger bank account. We must hope to give them a

Phyllis Mable Recovering Well

By BETH A. LORD

While the rest of us were anxiously awaiting Christmas Break, Phyllis Mable, Longwood's Vice President of Student Affairs, had a painful and frightening accident. On Sunday, December 11, she fell on her bathroom floor and broke her leg in several places. After a hospital stay in Richmond, Ms. Mable is recuperating and trying to become a little more active each day. Her fracture is also healing nicely. She will be working at home and coming into her office only occasionally for 4 to 6 weeks. Students are invited and encouraged to visit or bring their college business to Ms. Mable's home at 702 High Street, two houses above the Alumni House.

Dr. Jacques Stepping Down As Dean

By STEPHAINE NEELY

After serving Longwood College for six years as the Dean of the School of Business and Economics, Dr. Wilfred J. Jacques, Jr. is retiring to return to the classroom. He wants to return to the teaching environment because "it offers a great challenge and opportunity and I enjoy it." He also believes that there comes a time for and change and newness and he has certainly contributed to the changes in the growth and development of the Business and Economics Department.

Dr. Jacques came to Longwood as Associate Professor and the Head of the department having been chosen through a national search in the academic year of 1983-84 with a wide variety of professional experience in teaching administration, business, and law. He taught high school students in Georgia, established careers in legal and corporation work and served as professor at several colleges throughout the county prior to coming to Longwood. When he arrived at Longwood, he brought an optimism that has seen a number of goals come to their fruition to bring Longwood's Business Department first rate status.

Dr. Jacques takes pride in the advances that have been made in the School of Business and Economics as he believes change to be a vital factor in the growth and improvement of any institution. One of the major changes the department has seen since his arrival in 1983 is a re-

Longwood Celebrates Inaugural

By J. R. REEVES

Hearing about all the inaugural events going on in Washington, one must not overlook the many happenings at Longwood that celebrated the inauguration of George Bush.

A gathering of 30 spirited students in the French T. V. Lounge eargerly awaited the inauguration of President George Bush around noon. The party was sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega and Colonnades Hall Council, and was the first of many private and public parties that would take place later that day.

One student who attended the event said, "I skipped class to be here, but I figure this happens only once every four years."

The President of College Republicans, Mike Whitford, also in attendance asked of the inauguration said: "We were very happy to have George Bush inaugurated to continue the positive policies of the conservative revolution started by President Reagan, and we are looking forward to another ... eight years."

Another big celebration was the Alpha Chi Rho (AXP) party in which the inaugural was used as the theme of

Nine Fatalities Mark 1989

Richmond — The Virginia State Police reported today that preliminary statistics indicate nine persons lost their lives on Virginia's highways during the New Year's holiday period from 6 p.m. Friday, December 30 through midnight, Monday, January 2 compared to 12 for a similar period last year.

Two pedestrians were among the fatalities; of the seven motorists killed, only one was wearing a safety restraint. Three of the crashes involved alcohol.

Tenative figures also indicate that there were 41 more fatalities in 1988 (1,063) compared to 1987 (1,022).

Check Out The OCPP Series

The Longwood Office of Career Planning & Placement in conjunction with Counseling Services is planning a series of programs that will assist students in deciding a major.

Research has shown that many students in college are unsure of which academic area to concentrate. Some make choices knowing very little about the major or the options available. In addition, many students make decisions about their lives (ie. choosing a major) without taking a good look at themselves.

Longwood Enters Forensics

Longwood College entered its first forensic team in competition this past weekend. In addition this team won the sweepstakes for the tournament, finishing with twenty-four points. In second place was Randolph-Macon Woman's College, of Lynchburg, with Lynchburg College in third place.

Gene Kerns, a junior from Richmond, and Andy Bryan, a senior from Cumberland, are the co-captains of the team. For this first tournament they served as coordinators of running the meet.

Finishing in first place in prose interpretation was Karen Cunningham, of Longwood; second place, Susan Reid, of Randolph-Macon; and third place, Ginny Silveira, of Longwood.

Longwood College swept all three awards in after-dinner speaking with Michael Coleman, first; Anne Chilton, second; and Cindy DeWitt, of Farmville, third. The duo-interpretation event was won by Longwood students Ric Codding and Katy Newman, with James Gross and Reed Hoofnagle in second place.

In Impromptu Speaking, Chantel Sheales, of Randolph-Macon, captured first place with Longwood's William Gilliam in second, and David Richards, third. Fran Carelton, of Powhatan, placed Longwood first in Informative Speaking with Julie Kernodle, of Farmville, in third place. In Persuavice Speaking, Lisa Mountcasel, of Farmville, took second place followed by Tammy Christmas, both Longwood students.

Other trophy winners from Longwood College were Bill Curie, Harry Vogel, Tammy Estes, Siobhan Miller and Jeff Dingledien assisted with the arrangements for the meet.

Dr. William Dorrill, a forensic team participate in college, made the presentations at the award ceremony, praising each of the contestants for their efforts.

The Longwood team was under the direction of Dr. Nancy Haga, Speech and Theatre Program; Diane Casker, the coach of Randolph-Macon team; and Janice Rice and Ellen Hay, coaches of the Lynchburg College teams. Other teams in the newly formed Central Virginia Speech League are Liberty University and Sweet Briar College. Plans are underway to expand this newly formed league to include other community colleges, four year colleges and universities.

The next tournament will be held in January at Lynchburg College, February at Randolph-Macon, and March at George Mason University, in Fairfax. These schools have also become members of the American Forensic League.

Who's Who At Longwood

Some 35 Longwood students have been selected to the 1989 edition of Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges.

Selection is based on academic achievement, community service, leadership in extracurricular activities, and potential for continued success.

They are: Laura Bentti, James Boston, Dawn Breathwaite, Diane Brown, Andrew Bryan II, Kelley Coggsdale, Deborah Cwetna, Paul Dembowski, Erin Duffy, Kristin Dupree, Melissa Gibbs, Burnella Gilbert, Timothy Hale, Charlene Hill, James Kinzel, Joyce Lamond, Patrice Landers, Carla Lockhart, Thomas Maroney III, Jennifer McInnis, Tracy McPherson, Ronda Morgan, Ricky Otey, Michelle Pointer, Julia Polvent, Norman Robertson, James Sanders, Martha Sellers, Anne Smith, Ricky Stanfield, Timothy Tabler, Toni Taylor, Laura Trala, Dana Wheeler and Dana Wilcox.

These students join an elite group of students selected from more than 1,400 institutions in all 50 states, the District of Columbia, and served foreign countries. They were notified of their selection in late November.

Wanted: Orientation Leaders

By Larry Robertson

As we all know, the transition to college life is a difficult one, but Longwood has created an extremely successful program to help newcomers adapt. This program consists of preview, August Orientation, and the Longwood Seminar. For the last two years, Preview has allowed both students and parents to learn more about life at Longwood. Preview '89 will take place June 27, through July 7, and students will receive additional orientation starting August 26 and lasting through the beginning of classes.

Over the last few years, it has become more apparent that the Orientation Leader is one of the most valuable and important parts of the freshman experience. The selection for the available position will take place in February, but now is the time to consider applying for one of the thirty positions. Applications are available in the Lankford Student Union Information Office, the Student Development Office in French 106, and your R.E.C.'s office.

The selection will be based upon the student's application, recommendation from a faculty or staff member, and an interview with former Orientation Leaders and Student Development Educator MaryKaye Benton. A minimum GPA of 2.2, the completion of at least two full semesters at Longwood, and availability for July and August sessions as well as training sessions during the spi ng semester are also ma idatory. Orientation Leaders would also be unable to enroll in the first full session of summer school (June 19-July 14).

Ask former Orientation Leaders and they will say there is no experience that can be more rewarding or enjoyable. Orientation Leaders will also receive a $300 salary, room and partial board during Preview '89, and the opportunity to move into the residence halls early in fall 1989. More important is the fact that the position offers a chance to meet new friends and gain recognition as a student leader.

The orientation staff encourages every student to consider applying for the position. If you have any questions, call MaryKaye Benton in the Student Development Office (106 French — 392-9298), and remember "U 2 can help newcomers Rattle and Hum!"

structuring of a professional curriculum with two new areas of emphasis: Management and Information Systems and Economics. Also, the location of the department moved from scattered classrooms on several floors of West and East Ruffner and Granger buildings to the Hiner building. Dr. Jacques says of this accomplishment, "Gaining the physical proximity from moving into the Hiner building resulted in a closer, cohesive working relationship between faculty and students." He is also pleased with the Governor's announcement in January of 1989 that Longwood Business Innovation Center and James Madison University have been chosen to start a Department of Economic Development Small Business Development Centers in Virginia with government funding. He also has seen a tremendous growth and stability of Delta Sigma Pi, the business fraternity of which he became an honorary brother in December, 1988.

The fraternity has received recognition as the most improved chapter in the nation. A final major achievement which Dr. Jacques believes has brought the department benefits is the designation of the School of Business and Economics as a part of a campus-wide reorganization in 1987; when he also became desintated as Dean of the School. Also during 1987, at the announcement of his first graduating class, he received the Maria Bristow Starke Award for leadership and excellence in teaching and professional activities, the highest faculty award of Longwood.

Dr. Jacques finds satisfaction in motivating students to be involved in campus activities and seeing students take leadership roles. He is proud of the past three consecutive S.G.A. presidents, the editor of The Rotunda, and the president of the Ambassadors as they are all business majors. Dr. Jacques encourages all students to participate in campus wide clubs and organizations with enthusiasm.

In the future, Dr. Jacques anticipates more success for the business department and perceives more change, growth, and improvement after his retirement. The faculty has already organized a search process to look for a qualified individual as his replacement. He expresses the hope that Hiner will be renovated completely and that Coyner and Hiner buildings will be joined by a tower between them to provide immediate access to both buildings and better handicapped access; both of these goals are already in the planning stage.

Dr. Jacques plans to take an administrative leave on June 30 through the fall semester of 1989 and to come back fresh and ready to start teaching again in the new decade of 1990.

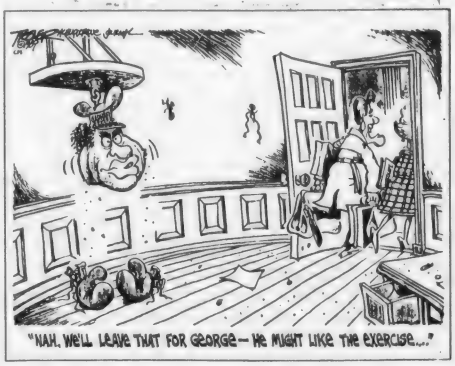
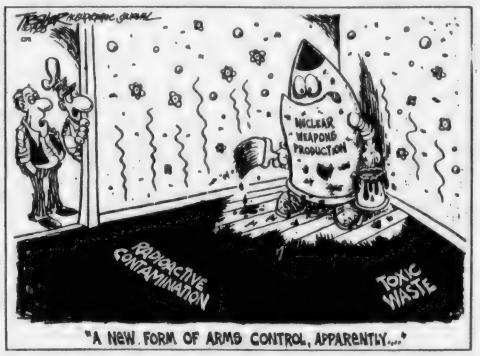
Preparing The U. S. For Economic War

As President Bush's honeymoon begins and Congress waits for the next couple of months for him to set his foreign policy agenda, the world is not that patient.

This once powerful creditor nation has lost much of its influence and will continue to slide in the world if we don't come to the realization that our foreign policy must be intertwined with economics.



President Bush must start by demonstrating, at home and abroad, that he is seizing control of the U.S. budget and reducing deficits as well as making economic relationships with our allies a top priority.



This nation, for starters, needs continued economic growth and less dependance on foreign capital, else, foreign competition and exploitation has a potential to flex its economic muscle and leave us in the powerless position of bending to the wishes of foreign powers.

To keep this dismal scenario from taking permanent root in our nation, Bush must push his National Security Advisor, Brent Scowcroft, and his Secretary of State, James Baker III into a good working relationship and define each of their roles. This is where a coherent strategy for the nation can be ironed out and act as a powerful force against the worldwide battering of The United States economically.

If the world knows that we are serious about solving our economic problems which are in fact intertwined with the world, we can once again reassert U.S. leadership in the global economy and thus diminish a serious economic threat to this nation.

Let Longwood know what's on your mind. Write a Letter to the Editor, Box 1133.

COMMENTARY

George Bush's Honeymoon

By Dennis Williams

Every new president is said to have a short period of time when he can get just about anything he wants. Some say it lasts about 100 days.

Well, the traditional honeymoon runs a little closer to a week, and comments around Washington suggest that tradition is about to be restored to the White House.

The popular phrase in the Congress is that they are willing to meet the President half way. That's the sort of comment one expects to hear after a trial separation rather than a blissful marriage ceremony.

We shouldn't expect too much from this honeymoon.

America's voters have given us another shotgun wedding, with no dowry. The couple starts out deeply in debt and with several million dependents crying for food, housing, medical care, and safety from the evils of the world and the neighborhood.

Still, barring a disaster, this forced marriage will last at least four years. Most folks are predicting a stormy relationship with lots of problems and few solutions.

So what else is new?

Despite some rich older relatives, lots of old folks are struggling to get by, their health is going down hill and the bills for repairs keep going up.

The house isn't big enough for all the relatives, some of whom are sleeping in the garage while others are out on the street. The kids are skipping school, and those who stay in school aren't learning much anyway.

We owe everyone we know, and we have to keep borrowing $500 million a day just to make ends meet.

Our rich uncles say we can take a little more money from each of the relatives in taxes or we can stop giving money to others or we can cut the pay of the several million servants we have working around the place.

Still, while some relatives have a pocketful of money, most aren't much better off than George and his Congress.

So all this friendly advice doesn't sound likely to make most people happy.

Shucks, folks. Surely someone around here has a better idea. America is the home of inventions and inventors, the country that breaks new ground and finds better ways of doing things.

We're sitting around jawing about tough times while even the Russians are trying to figure out a new way of doing things. They're flying space stations for months on end and we're just talking about space stations.

I don't think most of us like seeing poor folks lying around in the street, especially in the winter. We don't see much sense in people being hungry in a land filled with food. We want our babies to be lively and healthy and we want our children to learn everything they need to know to do well

Check Out The OCPP Series

SERIES is designed to assist students in taking the necessary steps to make a wise decision in choosing an academic area for study, and ultimately a career. Since the series is sequential, participants should plan to attend all four programs. However, if this is impossible, students should attend at least the first and fourth programs.

The first program will provide an overview of the process involved in choosing a major. The second program will focus on self-awareness. An interest survey will be administered that may help students to understand more about their interests. During the third program, participants will break up into smaller groups to discuss the results of the survey and its implication in choosing a major. Finally, the series will culminate with the L.C. MAJORS FAIR. At the Fair, representatives from Longwood's academic departments (faculty/students) will be available to informally discuss majors and academic requirements.

The OCPP staff hopes students take advantage of this opportunity to learn about the many exciting options available. It cannot be guaranteed that participants will have a major chosen by the end of the series, but it can be promised that those students will be in a much better position to make the decision in the future.

Below is a listing of the date and time for each program. Please come by OCPP by January 25 if you intend to participate in all or part of the series. OCPP is located on 2nd Floor South Ruffner and the phone is 392-9254.

PROGRAM #1 – AN OVERVIEW: The process in selecting a major and resources available (offered twice).

•Monday, Jan. 30, 7-8 p.m., OCPP

•Tuesday, Jan. 31, 7-8 p.m., OCPP

PROGRAM #2 – WHO AM I? Complete the Harrington-O'Shea Interest Survey and participate in exercises to answer the above question.

•Monday, Feb. 6, 7-8 p.m., OCPP

PROGRAM #3 – INTERPRET INTEREST SURVEY: Find out how to use the information about self in choosing a major.

•Monday, Feb. 13, 7-8 p.m., OCPP

PROGRAM #4 – THE L.C. MAJORS FAIR: Representatives from Longwood's academic departments will be available to discuss majors and requirements.

•Monday, Feb. 20, 7-9 p.m., Gold Room, Lankford in the world.

Both the President and the Congress may be new to this marriage, but this isn't their first time living with someone else. If they want it to work, they should make it easy for each other. They should see each other's good points and make the best of it.

Gosh, America is an awfully nice place to honeymoon, and now the match has been made, why not get some fun out of it.

Longwood Series of the Performing Arts will present the Washington D.C. Contemporary Dance Company on Thursday, January 26 at 8 p.m. in Jarman Auditorium. Students free with I.D.

D. C. Dance Theater Will Perform

The Washington, D.C. Contemporary Dance Theater will give a concert on Thursday evening, January 26, at 8 o'clock in Longwood College's Jarman Auditorium.

The professional 10-member company presents unique contemporary dance that is a blend of modern, jazz, and Afro-Caribbean styles. Critics have praised the dancers for their "physical daring, volcanic energy, visual excitement, and extroverted performing style."

Managing director Irene Jarosewich says the company strives for "full performance effect, with exciting lighting, lots of custumes, and exuberant choreography." Their repertoire includes the work of many choreographers and ranges from lyrical and lighthearted pieces to dramatic "dance theater" works.

Founded in 1984 by Miya Kisaka, the company draws its culturally and racially diverse members from the D.C. area. "The troupe has made its presence felt all over town," writes Alan Kelegsman, of the Washington Post. In addition to performances, the company gives lecture-demonstrations, workshops and summer programs for the city's youth.

The company tours throughout the U.S. and has made several trips abroad, representing Washington at art festivals in Jordan, Thailand, and the Dominican Republic.

"...D.C. Contemporary Dance Theater transcended all colours and barriers ... no audience could fail to respond to the pounding rhythms of the music or the visual excitement of the dancers ..."

— Jerusalem Star, Amman Jordan

dc CONTEMPORARY DANCE THEATER

"... the company burst onto the stage in a blaze of electrifying energy. Moving their spines with fluidity, turning their bodies speedily and filling space with high kicks and strong balances, they looked sensational."

— Cleveland Plain Dealer

"The D.C. Contemporary Dance Theater is on the fast track. Not quite two years old, the company made its Kennedy Center debut Monday night, packing the Terrace Theater with a vocally appreciative audience. Not even a handful of Washington-based dance companies could make a similar claim."

— Washington Post

"The D.C. contemporary Dance Theater fairly blew the lid off The Dance Place Saturday night, performing to an overflow crowd that registered its approval in megadecibels ... DCCDT seems to reach toward new levels of limberness, physical daring and volcanic energy. And the company's fireworks set off the fans ..."

— Washington Post

"Intensity is also a trademark of Miya Hisaka's D.C. Contemporary Dance Theater, a troupe that fuses modern, jazz and African idioms into a distinctive blend."

Governor Recognizes Innovation Center

By BOB KENT

Governor Gerald Baliles selected the Longwood Business Innovation Center as one of the first two Small Business Development Centers in the state. The governor said "The purpose of these centers is to help create private sector jobs by providing direct management counseling to individual small businesses in their respective areas." JMU was the other school selected by the Governor.

The center will officially begin operation by February 1, although the services provided by the center are available at the present time. The LBIC is staffed by Jerry Hughes, Executive Director, Debbie Epperson, Deputy Director, and Student Interns; Shirly Berry, John Boatwright, Jim Brown, Anne Faison, Greg Lewis, Tracy Moore, Beth Morris, Jeff Norton, and Ricky Otey.

sense of what it means to be a loyal friend, a loving parent, a citizen who leaves his home, his neighborhood and town better than he found it."

"My friends, we have work to do. There are the homeless, lost and roaming, they are the children that have nothing, no love, no normalcy. There are those who cannot free themselves of enslavement to whatever addiction – drugs, welfare, demoralization that rules the slums. There is crime to be conquered, the rough crimes of the streets."

Bush knocked the old thinking that in order to solve these problems all one had to do is throw "public money" at them. "And in any case, our funds are low. We have a deficit to bring down."

"We will make hard choices, looking at what we have and perhaps allocating it differently."

"And I am speaking of a new engagement in the lives of others, a new activism, hands on, involved – that gets the job done." "I have spoken of "a thousand points of light" – all of the community organizations that are spread like stars throughout the nation, doing good."

"We need a new engagement, too, between the executive and Congress." Bush cited Vietnam as the catalyst that brought the parties to distrust each other and the end to a once bipartisan nation. ". . . the final lesson of Vietnam is that no great nation can long afford to be sundered by a memory."

"A new breeze is blowing, and the old bipartisanship must be made new again." To facilitate this with the Democratically controlled Congress Bush said, "I am putting out my hand to you, Mr. Speaker," turning to Rep. Jim Wright of Texas, leader of the House of Representatives. "I am putting out my hand to you, Mr. Majority Leader," he said turning toward Sen. George Mitchell of Maine.

"The American people await action. They didn't send us here to bicker. They asked us to rise above the merely partisan."

"To the world we offer a new engagement." "There are today Americans who are held against their will in foreign lands, and the Americans that are unaccounted for." "Assistance will be shown here, and will long be remembered. Good will begets good will. Good faith can be a spiral that moves endlessly on."

"While keeping our alliances and friendships around the world strong, ever strong, we will continue our new closeness with the Soviet Union consistent with our security and with progress."

Bush reserved his toughest remarks on the subject of drugs. ". . . When the first cocaine was smuggled in on a ship, it may as well have been a deadly bacteria, so much has it hurt the body, the soul of our country. And there is much to be done and said, but take my word for it: this scourge will stop."

In the conclusion of Bush's speech he said, "I do not mistrust the future; I do not fear what is ahead. For our problems are large, but our heart is larger."

"A new breeze blows, a page turns, the story unfolds – and so today a chapter begins: a small and stately story of unity, diversity, generosity – shared, and written, together."

Montana And Rice Too Much For Bengals

By STEVE EVANS

On January 22, 1989, the 23rd Superbowl of the NFL was played at the recently built Joe Robby Stadium in Miami, Florida. This spectacular game featured the AFC champs, the Cincinnati Bengals (14-4) against the AFC champs, the San Fransico 49ers (12-6).

Earlier this week, the media hype was centered around Icky Woods and his touchdown shuffle and the possibility of Bill Walsh's retirement. Uncertain of Walsh's future, the 49ers said they don't care as much as everyone thought they should. Their reasoning; he won't really be leaving the organization, just stepping down as the coach.

Regardless of their reasoning San Fransico drew first blood. A 41 yard field goal by Mike Cofer. However the game started with a sour note, the Bengals nose tackle, a key player to Cincinnati's defense, left the game with a broken leg. Steve Wallace, on offensive linemen of the 49ers, also left the game but with a fractured ankle.

San Fransico's next drive was kept alive by a spectacular one handed catch by Jerry Rice that set up another field goal attempt. Kofer however hooked it wide left and missed yet another field goal.

After packing San Fransico deep in their territory, Cincinnati got the ball back near midfield and converted a 34 yard field goal by Jim Breech with less than a minute to go in the half to tie the game, 3-3. This was the first time in 23 superbowls that there was a tie at halftime. There was no Icky Woods touchdown shuffle in the first half or the entire game for that fact.

The next half started with Cincinnati converting another field goal and taken the lead 6-3. After holding the 49ers again Cincinnati got the ball back again but this time there were different results. Boomer Estason threw an interception deep in their own territory and this time kicker Mike Kofer made a 32 yard field goal to tie the game again. Kick returner Stanford Jennings of the Bengals then took matters into his own hands and ran the kick off 93 yards for the games first touchdown.

Joe Montana then hooked up with all pro-wide receiver Jerry Rice for a touchdown and tieing the game once again. The 49ers stopped the next Bengals offense attack and tried to convert a 49 yard field goal. Kofer missed another as he hit it with plenty of distance, but it sailed to the right of the goal posts. Another blown opportunity for San Fransico.

Cincinnati then mustered enough offense for Jim Breech to nail another field goal to make it 16-13. Less than 3 minutes in the game and over 80 yards to travel, Joe Montana engineered a typical 49ers drive with percise passing and spectacular catches from Jerry Rice and Roger Craig. This historic drive ended with a pass from Montana to Taylor for the winning score.

This could be the best Superbowl ever played. Jerry Rice, the Most Valuable Player of the game, finished with 11 catches, 215 yards and 1 touchdown, setting a Superbowl record for catches and yardage. Overall the 49ers played a spectacular game and established themselves as the team of the 1980's.

Longwood's Top Wrestlers

Sophomore Ted Proctor (Manassas) and freshman Joe McDaniel (Falls Church) helped Longwood win its second straight Washington & Lee Tournament Saturday, and for their performance, Proctor and McDaniel have been named Longwood College Players of the Week for the period January 15-22. Player of the Week is chosen by the Longwood Sports Information Office.

Proctor, now 15-5 for the year, won all three of his matches to take the title at 158 pounds in the Washington & Lee event. He won by scores of 15-3, 12-7 and 18-1. The sophomore, a graduate of Osbourn High School, was 20-11-1 last season and was named the Most Outstanding Wrestler in the Virginia College Division State Tournament.

McDaniel, 11-7-1, won 9-4 and 10-2 decisions before losing in the finals in overtime to take second place at 134 pounds. The freshman is a graduate of Falls Church High School. He was a two-time District champ and sixth in the state during his prep career.

WINTER PLAYER OF THE WEEK AWARD WINNERS

November 13-20, Greg Holloway, Men's Basketball

November 20-27, Kevin Jefferson, Men's Basketball

November 27-December 4, Tim Mason, Wrestling

January 1-8, Doug Poppe, Men's Basketball

January 15-22, Ted Proctor, Joe McDaniel, Wrestling

Wrestlers Win Tournament

Coming off its second straight victory in the Washington & Lee Tournament last Saturday, Longwood's wrestling team will return home for its first competition of the new year Saturday, hosting the Lancer Duals.

Slated to take part in the Lancer Duals are Pembroke State, Virginia State, Norfolk State, George Washington, Ferrum, Newport News Apprentice, Chowan and the host Lancers. Action begins at 9 Saturday morning and Longwood is slated to start competition at 10:30.

Sophomore Ted Proctor moved his season record to 15-5 and took the title at 158 pounds as Longwood won the Washington & Lee title for the second year in a row. Four other Lancers finished second in their weight classes. The Lancers totaled 70 points to out-distance second place Gettysburg 54.5. Other team scores were: Furman 46, Gardner-Webb 40, Washington & Lee 39, Newport News 36.75, York 35.5, Johns Hopkins 21.5 and Davidson 7.5.

Proctor won decisions by scores of 15-3, 12-7, and 18-1. It was his second tournament win of the season. Longwood runner-ups included Chris Bock, 1-1 at 126, Joe McDaniel, 2-1 at 134, Andy Mautner, 2-1 at 150 and Doug Hartley, 2-1 at 190. Tim Mason went 3-1 for third place at 167 pounds, while Kevin Haller, at 118, and Mark Harris, at 142, went 2-2 and got fourth places.

Lancer coach Steve Nelson called Bock's showing "the surprise of the tournament."

"Bock's performance was a real boost for us," said the coach. "He got a bye in the first round and won his second match 16-6 over Conti of Furman who was seeded second. He lost 14-7 in the finals, but wrestled well."

The coach also praised McDaniel and Kevin West, who went 1-2 at 177 and did not place.

"McDaniel did a super job. He won 9-4 and 10-2 decisions and was ahead in the finals 4-2 until Marty Fajerman of Furman came back to tie him at 4-4. Fajerman won the overtime 7-0. West won his first match in overtime, lost his second match in overtime on criteria and was beaten 2-0 in his last match. He wrestled well.

"Everyone we took won at least one match," said Nelson. "I was very pleased with our performance."

Gymnastics Team Falls

By JIM LONG

The Longwood gymnastics team lost at home on Friday to the University of Maryland Baltimore County, in a close match that wasn't decided until the very end. Longwood's next match is at home this Thursday against Division I Towson State.

In Thursday's meet against Towson State, one of the top gymnastics teams of the east coast, Budd says the team shouldn't feel intimidated. "I feel that if we concentrate on our team score, we should do well," she said.

Lady Lancers Win Again

By ROXIE LOCKWOOD

The Longwood women's basketball team extended its first winning streak of the year to two games with a defeat of Bennett College, 67-28, in Greensboro, NC. Thursday night's win brings LC's record to 4-9, 3-2 since break.

Longwood will be looking to extend the streak to three against Randolph-Macon in a Wednesday night contest, slated for 7:30 in Lancer Hall. The Lady Lancers conclude the week Saturday evening at Navy.

LC scored nine quick points before Bennett got on the board. And that was the ball game.

"It was nice to get two wins in a row," said coach Shirley Duncan. "I was pleased with our intensity, especially in the second half.

"I was also pleased that all our players got quality playing time. The experience will help us in the future."

Ann Callaham led LC with 14 points. Her six assists are a career high. Carmille Barnette and Salene Green were also in double figures with 12 and ten points. Green was the leading rebounder with nine.

For the season, four Lady Lancers are averaging in double figures. Barnette leads LC with 16.6 ppg. Angee Middleton averages 11.0; Callaham 10.3; Sandy Rawdon 10.0.

Rawdon is the leading rebounder with 8.6 per game. Callaham doles out 3.1 assists each game. Middleton is the leading thief with 3.3 steals per game.

Influenza Plagues Longwood Community

By PAM HIGGINS, Asst. Director of Student Health Service

Influenza appears to have reached the Longwood Community. Visits to the Student Health Service have doubled this week for students experiencing may symptoms of viral illness. Influenza is a respiratory infection that occurs in epidemics, most often during the winter months. Several kinds of viruses are responsible for this illness. Influenza is highly contagious, which is why it tends to occur in epidemics.

The most common initial symptom is headache, usually across the forehead. Headache is often accompanied by pain behind the eyes that worsen when the eyes are moved up or to the side. Early in the course of the illness, muscles ache and you may feel weak. Fever is often present, usually ranging from 100 to 103°, but higher in some cases. Fever generally subsides over 2-3 days but may last as long as a week, even in uncomplicated cases. Cough, usually dry and hacking, sneezing, runny nose, sore throat, itching eyes, and chest pain may be present from the beginning of the illness, but more commonly appear as the early symptoms begin to subside. Uncomplicated illness lasts from 7 days to 3 weeks.

Treatment usually consists of relieving symptoms by 1)humidifying the air to make it easier to breathe and to cough up sputum from your lungs, 2) increasing rest, 3) and managing fever (remember, during the flu season not to use aspirin or products containing aspirin because of the Reyes Syndrome). Your health care provider can diagnose this infection, suggest ways to treat your symptoms, and be alert for complications. Because influenza is caused by a virus, antibiotics are ineffective, except when there is also a bacterial infection present. You should notify your health care provider if you develop any of the following symptoms: extreme shortness of breath, fever over 102°, frothy, blood-tinged phlegm, earache, sudden deterioration in your condition after a period of

The bash of '89 took Longwood by storm. Midwinters, sponsored by Student Union, Greek Council, and entire Greek body brought over 500 students to Lankford's Red, White, Green, and Gold Rooms this past Saturday night.

An All-Greek happy hour put the party in full swing from 8:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. in order to congratulate all new women pledges. The semi-final ball then opened its doors to all students at 9:30 p.m. Hors d'oeuvres and drinks were served in the R, W, and G Rooms while progressive bands rocked the Gold Room.

Longwood To Receive $2 Million Phone System

By STEPHANIE NEELY

Longwood is stepping up in the world of telecommunications. In cooperation with Centel of Virginia, Longwood will be undertaking the biggest Centel project for a Virginia college or university. This project is a result of an approved contract between the Board of Visitors and Centel to install a new phone system which will provide offices and residence hall rooms access to mainframe computers, phones with specialized features, and lower long distance rates.

In mid-February of this year, the first phase of this campus-wide "integrated-voice-data-image" phone system will begin and the first group to try it out will be faculty and staff. Approximately 2,000 phones with digital touch-tone dials will be installed at first; however, the system will have the capacity to include up to 5,000 of these new phones. All employees will have computer terminals hooked up to their phones; the majority of the faculty will use a single-line phone with nine features while administrators, secretaries, and receptionists will receive a more complex multi-line phone with the possibility of up to twenty-four additional features.

The students should get a taste of the new system by the fall semester of 1990 when every residence hall room will have a new phone and payment for the use of the phone will be included in room and board fee. Some opportunities the new system will offer students having microcomputers is access to the college's mainframe and library computer, doing computer-related homework and bibliographic research, and communicating with other students who have computers all from a residence hall room. Each student will be issued a personal account number for long-distance calling which must be keyed in to be connected; this may help eliminate billing errors. Also rates should be cheaper because the college will use four long distance carriers. (MCI, Sprint, Allnet, and AT&T.)

The system will be operated by a central computerized switch called the SL-7, which records all calls and chooses the cheapest carrier for particular area codes on long distance calls. Longwood will only accept the system if the SL-7 does not fail to operate within a 30-day trial period and a one-year warranty after acceptance is included in the

Farmville Top Gun Changes Hours

Langley AFB, VA — New hours of operation for the Farmville Military Operating Area in central Virginia will take effect on Feb. 1, 1989. Currently, military aviators are permitted to train in the airspace from sunrise to 9:30 a.m. and between 4 and 5 p.m. The new hours will be 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. and 4 to 5 p.m. The change has been approved by the Federal Aviation Administration and has been coordinated with other users of the airspace.

Area residents will notice a later morning start time for the flying. Additionally, pilots will avoid early morning bad weather, bird activity, and extreme sun angles; all of which are safety considerations. Overall, the same number of training flights will be conducted in the area, but the noise will be less concentrated.

New Geisters

Geist, Longwood's Honorary Leadership Fraternity would like to announce it's 14 new members for 1989. They are: Mary Frances Hanover — President, Beth Camillo — Vice-President, Larry Robertson — Secretary, Penny Drumheller — Treasurer, Greg Bowman, Kris Ensmann, Rob Essington, Jr., Gene Kerns, Janel Logan, Missy Miller, Patrice Murane, Amy Shinal, Frances St. John, Heather Yeatts.

Geist's primary responsibilities for the new year are the Spring Bloodmobile, March 28-29, and Oktoberfest, October 7. Congratulations and good luck in the coming year. — GEIST 1988, Nancy Shelton, Sponsor, Candy Dowdy, Sponsor.

LAVA Has Big Plans For 1989

By DINA SCHIANO

Nineteen eighty nine, has gotten off to a great start at Longwood, and so has LAVA.

The new officers for 1989 are: Chair; Dina Schiano, Publicity Chair; Stephanie King, Investigation Chair; Karl Singer, and Secretary; Theresa Pfluger.

LAVA has made some big plans in their never ending quest to keep Longwood looking beautiful. Adopt-a-Dorm is the newest program, designed to keep Longwood's residence halls at their best. The program has not been completed, so those interested in helping, keep your ears open for further information.

On Wednesday, January 18, Sebastian Volker, founder of LAVA, Dina Schiano, and David Rettig, LAVA's advisor, traveled to Richmond to receive an award from the Keep Virginia Beautiful and Virginia Division of Litter Control and Recycling.

Some fundraising activities are coming up for LAVA, including a Bowl-A-Thon, and the Chili cook off during Spring weekend. There are also plans to host the Cafe.

If anyone is interested in becoming a member of LAVA, or just interested in what LAVA, is all about, there will be an interest meeting on February 6, at 9:00 in Lankford's conference room 2. Refreshments will be served.

SSPC Needs Volunteers

By BETH LORD

The Southside Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals is looking for volunteers. This is an organization that takes in unwanted animals. Located on Route 360 in Meherrin, the SPCA is only a 25 minute drive from Longwood. Because it is a non-profit organization operating solely on the fundraising efforts of its members and donations from caring individuals, there are many ways students are needed and encouraged to help.

Volunteers are needed to give love and attention to the animals, help with office work, place and maintain donation canisters, and assist with various fund-raising efforts. Newspapers are needed for bedding. Donations of any kind of pet food, toys, collars, leashes, and other pet supplies will be greatly appreciated. Also needed are supplies for the SPCA's Hospital Room, such as cotton balls, Q-tips, alcohol, hydrogen peroxide, towels, blankets, and sheets. Office supplies, such as paper, pens, index cards, envelopes, and stamps, will be welcome donations.

The SPCA is open seven days a week from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. and there truly is something for everyone. Take a little time to show that you care about unfortunate animals. For directions and more information, contact Pam Rhodes at 392-7587 or Candy Schmidt, the SPCA's Executive Director, at 736-9595. Visitors are always welcome.

Artist ot the Month Susan Hilton

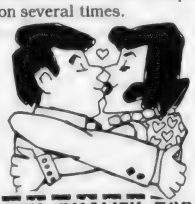
Susan Hilton, of Chesterfield County, is January's Artist of the Month at Longwood College.

Her winning work, entitled "Forms in Clay," is a series of three graphic art spreads for a how-to book on techniques with clay pottery. Ms. Hilton received a $50 cash award, and her work is on display in the Bedford Art Building at Longwood.

The clay vessels and mask that are shown in Ms. Hilton's work were created by Randall Edmonson, a member of Longwood's art faculty, and Jana Neilson, another student. "My special thanks go to them," Ms. Hilton said.

A senior at Longwood, Ms. Hilton is working toward the B.F.A. degree in art with a concentration in graphic design. She hopes to begin her career with a graphic arts firm in Richmond.

She is a member and publicity chairperson for Geist, Longwood's top leadership fraternity. She also is a member of Art Works Inc. (student art club) and the student advisory committee to the Department of Visual and Performing Arts.



Her parents are Gerald and Shirley Hilton, of Chesterfield County.

The Artist of the Month competition is open to all Longwood students who are enrolled in art classes. The winner is selected by a committee of art faculty. Ms. Hilton has won the competition several times.

LIT Accepting Applications

The Eta Theta Chapter of Lambda Iota Tau, an honor society for students of literature, is currently accepting applications for membership. In order to be eligible for membership, a student must be a junior or senior English or modern language major and posses a 3.0 average in their major and a 2.8 cummulative average. The student also must have completed four literature courses.

Membership applications are available in the department office. Completed applications, along with a student copy of the transcript and a paper written by the student, should be submitted to Miss Priscilla A. Ord, the chapter Moderator. Prospective members are encouraged to contact Miss Ord or Melissa Gibbs, chapter president, for further details. The chapter plans to initiate new members on February 14th at 6:45 p.m., preceeding the poetry reading by Dave Smith.

Summer Job? Think Taxes

If you are going to get a job this summer, the Internal Revenue Service urges you to take a few minutes to think about taxes.

There are many factors which can affect your taxes for the year.

Can you be claimed as a dependent by someone else? If you can, whether or not someone else actually claims you, you will not be able to claim your personal exemption when you file your tax return.

Do you have investment income, such as interest on savings accounts? If you can be claimed as a dependant by someone else, that investment income will probably be taxed if your total income is over $500. You will be able to claim a standard deduction only against your earned income, such as wages.

Do you receive a scholarship or fellowship grant, or will you receive such a grant by the end of the year? A part of that grant may have to be included on your tax return.

Each of these factors should be considered when you fill out your Form W-4, "Employee's Withholding Allowance Certificate," for your summer job. If that job is the only income you have for the year, you may qualify to be exempt from income tax withholding. But, if you do have investment income, or a taxable scholarship or fellowship, you will need to consider those other incomes. How much income tax you need to have withheld so you will not owe extra taxes at the end of the year will depend on total income.

Form W-4 is available from employers or from IRS by calling 1-800-424-3676.

SGA Meets For 3rd Time

By J. R. REEVES

Having held its third Senate meeting for this semester, Longwood's Student Government Association is well on its way to providing Longwood students dynamic leadership.

Under the leadership of Drew Hudson, newly elected SGA President, the Senate has started making big plans for Longwood's student body.

Some plans include co-sponsoring an "Ell" Concert with the community service group DAY (Domestic Assistance for You). DAY is a non-profit, tax-exempt organization that serves the seven-county area. Last year it is estimated that DAY helped over 750 families and several students. SGA President Drew Hudson stated, "The Ell Concert is the ideal opportunity for students to exemplify their community service. SGA will be calling on many organizations and we are looking forward to a lot of positive response. This is a great way to help Farmville and surrounding counties."

The concert date will be announced this week and SGA members will soon be soliciting students' support.

Longwood's SGA is also sponsoring 13 students to "dive into leadership at the IV Leadership Conference."

Earlier in January Tonya Moore brought up a concert on the proper recognition of Martin Luther King, Jr. Day. After elaborating her points with Hudson, they have formed a committee to study the feasibility of having the day, or a segment of it, off in remembrance of King.

After recent meetings with President Dorrill and Vice-President for Academic Affairs Don Stuart, Hudson reported that "both administrators were very receptive to the ideas." There is a lot of looking into it, but they both share my attitude that any student concern is worth listening to and working with.

SGA also co-sponsored a Leadership Conference for Hall Council Saturday, Jan. 21. The conference was directed by Ken Rockensis.

A "credit for leadership" committee has been launched and is headed up by Senate member Rob Essington. The committee intends to make the issue of student leaders getting compensated for their devotion and hard work.

The SGA has also reactivated the Dabney S. Lancaster Scholarship and will be forming a committee to re-evaluate the criteria and rules concerning SAF. Both of these issues will be publicized in the near future in The Rotunda.

SGA meets every Thursday at 6:30 in Lankford's Conference Room I. All Senate meetings are open to the public and students are encouraged to play an active role in SGA's weekly meeting.

Want To Be An RA? Interest meetings Feb. 6, 7, 9, Curry Room 3 6:00 - 7:00 p.m.

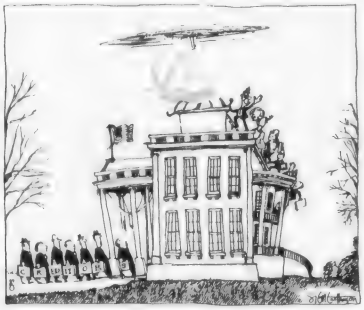
Senior Challenge



Seniors, you will be alumni in 96 days. Sometime in those 96 days you will have the opportunity to participate in the Senior Challenge, an excellent program established to bring about the Class of 1989 Scholarship Fund.

You will be asked to make a commitment to the fund such as $150 in 5 years. This will be your class gift to Longwood and it is important that every senior participate in some way no matter how small.

Every dollar that is pledged today will build momentum for a better Longwood College tomorrow, as well as give you a unique way to contribute to your school as alumni.

So when you are asked, give generously.

Let Longwood know what's on your mind. Write a Letter to the Editor, Box 1133.

Probation Has Heightened My Awareness

Editor, The Rotunda:

As part of my probation, I was required to fulfill an educational assignment by writing a letter to the editor on what probation means to me. Probation, as a form of punishment, really makes one watch his step. A student really becomes aware of the rules used in the student handbook, even though he or she should already be aware of those rules.

No one really stops to think about what it is like to be on probation until he or she is put on it. For a student to go before the Judicial Board or Honor Board, while he is already on probation, could result in that student being suspended. I could not imagine the humiliation of being suspended for a semester, much less the consequences I would have to bear after telling my parents.

As a warning to other students, I would like to suggest a thorough reading of the rules of conduct that are published in the student handbook. Probation could really put a damper on a student's college years.

Thanks To Delta Sigma Theta

To, The Editor,

I'm writing on behalf of the board of the Farmville Area Community Emergency Service (F.A.C.E.S.), to thank the members of Delta Sigma Theta for their tremendous help at the food pantry last Friday. We have something of a problem getting food from our second-floor site to clients' cars. When a single person, often a woman, gets three or four heavy bags of groceries, getting them down one story and one or two blocks over to her car can be quite a challenge, unless we have volunteers to help carry the food. Fortunately, last Friday the Deltas arrived to solve that problem for us efficiently and cheerfully.

When one provides this kind of help, one makes a real contribution to the community, especially, in this case, to some of its less affluent members. I want you to know that all of us at F.A.C.E.S. (Farmville Area Community Emergency Services) are grateful, and we hope that other sororities and fraternities will follow your lead.

Victory Without War: What College Students Can Do

By RICHARD NIXON

Chances are good that Mikhail Gorbachev will still be in power in the Soviet Union when today's college students reach their fortieth birthdays. If his economic reforms succeed as Deng Xiaopeng's have in China, his influence could be profound enough to influence the course of history into the twenty-second century.

To most college students, if domestic politics are a fairly remote phenomenon, foreign affairs are an almost hopeless abstraction. Usually our campuses have paid attention only when there was something to be against. Awareness has been equated with opposition, as in Vietnam and South Africa. Otherwise students are content to focus on their studies and their other preparations for the working world.

In the years between now and the next century America will fall hopelessly behind the Soviet Union if the creative power of our young people is consumed in the purely selfish pursuit of financial gain and social status. If the United States is to survive in the twenty-first century and fulfill its destiny as what Lincoln called the last, best hope of the earth, it will only be because the generation now in college rose to the challenge.

If Gorbachev's "new thinking" is successful it will be because he managed to refocus the energies of the Soviet Union from expansion of its empire abroad to reform of its economy at home. He knows that the problems he faces will require at least a generation to solve. He needs a generation of peace – or to put it more precisely, a generation without war.

While he pursues his goal we could do two things. We could sigh with relief and turn to our own narrow interests and pleasures, taking advantage of the reduction in international tensions by reducing our role on the world stage. This is the counsel of the new negativists, who can be found not only in our great universities but also in the news media, big business, and politics. The platform of the new negativists is the new isolationism. Unlike the old isolationists of the 1950s, the new isolationists oppose not only American involvement abroad but also defense programs at home. Obsessed with the twin fears of another Vietnam and of nuclear war, their knee-jerk response to a crisis is to turn it over to the United Nations – which in effect means to do nothing.

If we go down that road, when Gorbachev's new, stronger Soviet Union stands astride the next century the old America will be no match for it. Instead, we must anticipate the challenge of Gorbachev's new thinking by building a new America – an America newly confident of its military and economic powers and also of its spiritual appeal.

If we have only twenty years before a reinvigorated Soviet Union turns its sights to renewed expansion, we have no time to lose. We must think and act boldly. We must restore the credibility of the U.S. strategic deterrent and also bolster our conventional forces in key theaters. We should help those who are fighting to prevent a community victory, as in Angola, and those who are trying to overturn a communist victory, as in Afghanistan and Nicaragua.

Military power is only half the equation. We must take advantage of Moscow's flagging economic strength by improving our own competitive position around the world. We should work to improve living conditions in the Third World to undercut the political appeal of communist slogans. We should make it clear that even if there were no communist threat in the developing world we would devote our efforts to reducing its pervasive poverty, disease, and injustice.

At the same time we must reaffirm our guiding values at home by finding new ways to enable all our citizens to share fully in America's success. We must solve the problems of the urban underclass, the homeless, and the poor. We must rectify the inequalities from which blacks and other minorities suffer.

This agenda for America's political leaders in the next twenty years cannot be fulfilled without the support of America's leadership class-in-training those who are now getting the best educations and who will undertake careers in the upper echelons of business, the media, and the government. Since Vietnam the leadership class has undermined the United States in foreign policy by questioning its motives and its principles. Its obsessive skepticism is one reason the new negativists argue that we have lost both the will to lead and the faith in ourselves that would enable us to lead.

To restore that faith we must look to our roots. Two centuries ago our newly-born nation caught the imagination of the world not because of its wealth or power, for it was poor and weak, but because of its ideas. We need to restore faith in our ideals, in our destiny, and in ourselves. War produces unity in a common purpose and stretches man to his ultimate. We should reach for the same unity in peacetime. The total effort required to fight a war must be mobilized to build a better peace. The next generation of America's best-educated young people is the indispensable element in this effort.

Earth Day 1990

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Leaders of the nation's largest environmental organizations have united to launch a cooperative effort with college students, business, labor, farmers, urban groups, and others to organize an international Earth Day in April, 1990.

Organizers plan to involve more than 100 million participants in countries around the world. "We expect Earth Day 1990 to be the largest demonstration in human history," said Denis Hayes, chairman of the event.

"We hope that Earth Day 1990 will rekindle the spirit that launched the original Earth Day, and will spur people everywhere to work even harder to build a sustainable society," said Jay D. Hair, president of the National Wildlife Federation.

The U.S. environmental groups joining together in this effort have a total of more than seven million members. Participating groups include the National Wildlife Federation, the Natural Resources Defense Council, the Environmental Defense Fund, the National Audubon Society, the Sierra Club, the Sierra Club Legal Defense Fund, the Wilderness Society, the Environmental Policy Institute, Environmental Action, the Izaak Walton League of America, the National Parks and Conservation Association, Friends of the Earth, Renew America, and the Earth Island Institute.

"To successfully resolve the Earth's environmental crises, America's youth must be armed with both knowledge and understanding of the natural world around them," said Jack Lorenz, executive director of the Izaak Walton League.

Hayes, who will chair the coordinating group, was also the national coordinator of the original Earth Day in 1970. That event, which was confined to the United States, had more than twenty million participants and is widely credited as marking the birth of the modern environmental movement.

One striking difference between the 1990 event and its 1970 predecessor is the intent to link key organizers around the world in a state-of-the-art computer network. Organizers hope that the event will lead to a much higher degree of communication and cooperation among environmentalists around the world.

Earth Day 1990 will be headquartered in San Francisco and Washington, D. C. Its interim address is: Box AA Stanford University California 94305.

The Mysterious Hole

By ROB CHAPMAN

There's a mystery at "Ingleside." No, not a murder, or a theft or any sort of hideous crime.

It's simply a hole in the ground.

But how can a hole be a mystery?

It can in this case because it's located in the basement of the 190-year-old Ingleside home in Rice.

Why is it there? Who put it there? What purpose does it serve? These are all questions that even the most inquiring minds might want answered. But where can one go to get answers for questions like these? A detective perhaps. But, with a 190 year old home, the trail would have long been cold.

A lawyer to research the legal documents might find some clue. But records from the 1800's often prove scanty at best.

This leads us back to the hole itself. Longwood College Anthropology professor James Jordan is an expert in such matters. Jordan, in an effort to find the answers to these questions, set out with a group of senior archeology students armed with a list of possibilities, shovels, brushes, and picks on an investigative expedition.
